PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY A COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS FOR THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.....H. N. McTYEIRE, EDITOR.

VOLUME VI....NUMBER 8.
WHOLE NUMBER 268.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY MORNING, MARCH 29, 1856.

$2 A YEAR IN ADVANCE.
OFFICE 26 CAMP ST

From the Nashville Christian Advocate.

POWELL ON APOSTOLIC SUCCESSION.

Mr. Editor—I see that some one has assailed Mr. Powell's "logic" in his work on Church Government, in your issue of the 31st ult. In this assault upon the character of one of our standard Methodist text books is reiterated an assertion that "there is no historic evidence whatever of successive ministerial ordinations from the inspired apostles." How unfortunate that Mr. Powell could not have known both, before he wrote his book that the question of Succession is at an end," and that it is no longer debatable! Will not Mr. Doggott, or some other of Mr. Powell's talented endorsers, apologize for him by alleging, as they may with truth, that this question was not quite ended when he wrote his book on Succession; or at least that Mr. Powell was as ignorant of the fact as he is alleged to have been of the science of logic?

Our Bench of Bishops, who have selected Mr. Powell's treatise on Succession as a text book for our under-graduates, and those reviewers and editors who have endorsed this work, may, perhaps, not find it very difficult to vindicate Mr. Powell's logic; but who would be able to vindicate his moral honesty as a writer, if the following charge be supported by facts?

It has been charged by Rev. F. S. Mines, once a Presbyterian, more recently an Episcopalian, and now no more, and is published to the world by the "General Protestant Episcopal Sunday School Union," that Mr. Powell has been guilty of gross perversion and garbled quotations from Ignatius, in his book on Apostolic Succession. Can this charge, involving the veracity of a Wesleyan minister, and implicating the historical reliableness of a work published under the patronage of, and duly and officially accredited by, our Church, be true? Surely not. I have not a copy of Archbishop Wake's translation of "The Apostolic Fathers," or at present of Mr. Powell's book on Succession; and I offer this publication that those who have the means may repel, if untrue, these foul aspersions. My own remarks are only intended as explanatory, and are founded on the assumption that the representations of Mr. Mines, respecting what is contained in Ignatius, are true. My historical authorities are Mosheim; his translator, Murdock, and others equally reliable. Whoever undertakes the easy task of vindicating Mr. Powell against the charge of your correspondent, may at the same time vindicate him from this charge, which is of a far graver character, and which the friends of Methodism may reasonably hope will turn out to be groundless calumny.

Ignatius, who may have seen and conversed with the inspired apostles, and who was the chief minister at Antioch, in Asia, suffered martyrdom in the theatre at Rome, in the reign of the Emperor Trajan, being devoured by wild beasts, some time between A. D. 107 and 116. It is said that while this venerable minister of religion was on his way bound in chains, from Antioch to Rome, he wrote seven epistles—four from Smyrna and three from Troas—and ten other epistles besides are ascribed to this apostolic father, which the learned world unite in regarding as barefaced forgeries. Most Protestants and Romanists regard the first mentioned seven epistles as genuine; and an English translation of these (Ignatius was a Greek) was published by Archbishop Wake, in his genuine letters of the "Apostolic Fathers." From this English translation Mr. Powell professes to quote. His first two quotations are from the Epistle to the Magnesians:

THE GENUINE IGNATIUS.	AS QUOTED BY MR. POWELL.
"I Seeing, then, that I have been thought worthy to see you by Damas, your godly and excellent Bishop, and by your worthy Presbyters, Bassus and Apollonius, and by my fellow-servant, Sotion, the deacon, in whom I rejoice, because he is subject to his bishop, as unto the grace of God, and to the presbytery, as to the law of Jesus Christ."	"I. The deacon is subject to the presbyters, as to the law of Jesus Christ."

It is said that the Magnesian Church had sent their Bishop, Damas, two presbyters—Bassus and Apollonius, and one deacon—Sotio, to meet Ignatius at Smyrna, in custody of his guards and in chains, on his way to Rome to be executed, that they might congratulate him, as did other official delegates, on his near prospect of "a martyr's crown." In his letter to them in response he mentions the names and the distinct ministerial orders of their delegatee—bishop, presbyters, deacon. Elsewhere in the same epistle Ignatius uses this expressive and unmistakable language: "Your most worthy bishop, and the well-worn spiritual crown of your presbytery, and your godly deacons." Who but Mr. Powell or Lord King would ever have thought of finding evidence against three, in favor of two ministerial grades, in such a document as this?

But we have another "quotation," as he calls it, from the epistle:

THE GENUINE IGNATIUS.	AS QUOTED BY MR. POWELL.
"I. Study to do all things to a divine concord, your bishop presiding in the place of God, and your presbytery in the place of the council of the apostles; and your deacons, who are most dear to me, being intrusted with the ministry of Jesus Christ.	"II. The presbytery preside in the place of the council of the apostles."

Here we have distinct mention again made of bishops, presbyters and deacons, in the very sentences quoted from—yes, quoted from, but not quoted by—a writer who undertakes to prove by such testimony that "anciently bishop and presbytery denoted the same order of ministers." The complete sentence establishes such a proposition about as fully as that other language of Ignatius in this same epistle establishes it, wherein he exhorts the Magnesians "not to despise the youth of their bishop, and to submit themselves to him, yet not to him, but to the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Bishop of us all." They had several Presbyters. Two are mentioned by name; yet he does not say bishops and them, but bishops and him. Was each of these presbyters, thus early in the second century, a bishop? How convincing this evidence to the contrary!

The next quotation noticed is from the letter to the Trallians, said to have been written about the same time, and from the same place:

THE GENUINE IGNATIUS.	AS QUOTED BY MR. POWELL.
"II. Do nothing without your bishop, even as ye are wont; also be ye subject to your presbytery, as to the apostles of Jesus Christ, our hope. In like manner, let all reverence the deacons."	"III. Be ye subject to your presbyters as to the apostles of Jesus Christ our hope."

Ignatius still mentions three distinct classes or grades of church functionaries, in this as in the following, from the same epistle:

THE GENUINE IGNATIUS.	AS QUOTED BY MR. POWELL.
"IV. Let all reverence the deacons as Jesus Christ; and the bishop as the Father; and the presbyters as the Sanhedrim of God and college of the apostles. Without these there is no Church."	"IV. Let all reverence the presbyters as the Sanhedrim of God, and college of apostles."

The last garbled quotation charged is from the letter to Smyrna, said to have been written from Troas, after he had left the former place:

THE GENUINE IGNATIUS.	AS QUOTED BY MR. POWELL.
"V. See that ye follow your bishop, as Jesus Christ followed the Father; and presbytery as the apostles; and reverence the deacons, as the command of God. Let no one do anything of what belongs to the Church separately from your bishop."	"V. See that ye follow the presbyters, as the apostles."

Mr. Powell is not charged with having quoted words not found in these epistles, but with deceptiously suppressing a part of the truth, and thus fraudulently leading his readers into error. I have given you the charge and specifications. Can any of Mr. Powell's endorsers deny the charge as specified? For the credit of our authorized publications, I hope they may be able to do so successfully.

As for the authority of these Ignatian epistles in settling the constitutional ecclesiastical question respecting one, two, or three grades in the Christian ministry, it is, in my humble judgment, not worth a copper either way; and I may hereafter furnish you with my reasons for so judging. It is, however, a matter of interest to every lover of truth to know whether Mr. Powell has practiced a disgraceful deception, or has been foully slandered.

J. W. Allen.

Athens, Ala., Feb. 8, 1856.

The foregoing has been submitted to me by the writer for insertion in the Advocate, with any observations I might think proper to make. Truly, I do not see any necessity to make any observations on so plain a case—plain, that is, with Mr. Powell's book open before me. A glance at his remarks on Ignatius will show that he has not garbled his epistles, except in the old sense of the word, "to examine precisely, sift nearly, look narrowly, search curiously, into." In that sense it must be confessed he has garbled the Ignatian epistles, and sundry other successional documents. Mr. Powell does not cite Ignatius to prove that there were but two orders in the ministry in the Primitive Church; had he done this, he would have been obnoxious to the charge of garbling in the worst sense of the term. He cites those epistles to show that even they, with all their prelatic assumptions, do not make bishops, but presbyters, the successors of the apostles—a nut that breaks the teeth of all the High Churchmen who attempt to crack it. Mr. Powell does not ignore the third order of the Ignatius epistles, he calls attention to it, to show that there is internal evidence of the spuriousness of the epistles, as a holy martyr like Ignatius would scarcely be guilty of the absurdity, not to say blasphemy, of putting the bishop in the place of God; it is bad enough to invest him with apostolic powers. The Ignatine apotheosis is High Churchism with a witness. But as the only defence that Mr. Powell needs is an ungarbled quotation from his book, I subjoin the following paragraphs, from pages 104-108 of the new and beautiful edition recently issued by Stevenson & Owen.

Thos. O. Summers.

Ignatius comes next. Dr. Cave places him A. D. 101. He is the greatest authority of High Churchmen. Cardinal Baronius also considers Ignatius' epistles to be one of the bulwarks of the doctrines of the popedom. Some care will be necessary in examining his writings. I merely mention, though I do not stand upon it, that many profound scholars seriously doubt the genuineness of the epistles which go under his name. I shall only bring one reason before the reader, though many might be added. It is this: That, viewing the character of Ignatius in an ordinary light as a witness, and an eminent martyr for the truth, several parts of these epistles are a powerful reflection on the soundness of his judgment, if not on the goodness of his heart. Such weak, silly rant and rhodomontado is found running through them as makes a Christian half ashamed to own it as coming from so eminent a martyr. Those who contend for the authority of these epistles seem to me to prefer the credit of their scheme of episcopacy to the character of Ignatius himself. It is probable the epistles were greatly corrupted by some high advocates of priestly power and authority. Some parts of the epistles, first published under his name, have been acknowled heretical, and have been rejected by the most learned men of the Church of England, "They labored not only," says Archbishop Wake, "under many impertinences unbecoming the character of that great man, but were fraught with many things that were altogether fabulous. Nay, if we may credit Archbishop Usher, had some passages in them that tended to corrupt the very faith of Christ, in one of the most considerable points."—(Abp. Wake's Prel. Disc., Sec. 17.) Many of the best continental divines, as Calvin, Salmasius, Blondel, Albertinus and Daille, reject the whole. "The whole question," says Mosheim, "relating to the epistles of Ignatius in general, seems to me to labor under much obscurity, and to be embarrassed with many difficulties."—(Mosheim's Eccl. Hist., Cent. 1, Part II., Chap. ii., Sec. 20.) And even Archbishop Usher, whom High Churchmen must allow to be a competent and unexceptionable witness, having mentioned the opinion of Salmatius that all the twelve epistles are either counterfeits, or certainly corrupted by interpolations in many places, adds, "To which judgment I willingly subscribe, having certain proofs that six of them are counterfeits, and that the remaining six are corrupted by interpolations in very many places."—(Usheri Dis., p. 136; and see p. 13 Ed. Oxon, 4to., 1644.) However, we will grant them to be genuine.

Now two points will be sufficient to settle with Ignatius. The first is, that whatever he makes of bishops, he yet makes presbyters as high as we can desire for our argument. He says, the deacon "is subject to the presbyters as to the law of Jesus Christ;" "the presbyters preside in the place of the council of the apostles."—Epistle to the Magnesians. "Be ye subject to your presbyters as to the apostles of Jesus Christ our hope."—Epistle to the Smyrnians. "Let all reverence the presbyters as the Sanhedrim of God and college of apostles."—Same Ep. "Being subject to your bishops as to the command of God; and so likewise to the presbytery."—Ibid. "See that ye follow—the presbyters as the apostles."—Ep. to the Trallians. All the above passages are from Archbishop Wake's translation. If Ignatius' authority is worth anything, it proves presbyters to be in the place of the apostles. This is surely enough for the most rigid Presbyterian.

The second point is, "Let no man do anything of what belongs to the Church separately from the bishops. Let that eucharist be looked upon as well established which is either offered by the bishop, or by him to whom the bishop has given his consent. Wheresoever the bishop shall appear, there let the people also be; as where Jesus Christ is, there is the catholic church. It is not lawful, without the bishop, neither to baptize nor to celebrate the holy communion; but whatsoever he shall approve of, that is also pleasing unto God; that so whatever is done, may be sure and well done. He that does anything without his knowledge, ministers unto the devil."—Ep. ad Smyrna, Sec. 8. There is no stronger passage in favor of High Church Episcopacy in his Epistles than this. The term translated "lawful" frequently means "permitted," as by custom or courtesy. So Acts, xxi., 37, "May I speak unto thee?" Acts, ii., 29, "Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you." Hence it does not necessarily mean Divine law, but only what is matter of custom or courtesy. The expression, "Let no man do anything of what belongs to the Church separate from the bishop," simply signifies that where a superintendent had been appointed for the sake of order, that order was to be kept. Very right. So say all churches where a superintendency has been established, though making no pretensions to divine right for it. To suppose the passage to mean that a presbyter absolutely bad not power, by divine right, to baptize, to celebrate the holy communion, nor to do anything that belongs to the Church, except the bishop bade him, is absurd, and is confuted by Ignatius himself; for he says, "The presbyters are in the place of the apostles." Surely men that are the "Sanhedrim of God, and the college of the apostles" have Divine authority to baptize, &c., when occasion should require it, whether the bishop bade them or not. Indeed, fifty places might be quoted from councils, and better writers than the author of these epistles, where this mode of expression means nothing but human arrangement. We find bishops themselves forbid by a council to do certain things without the archbishop. See the Council of Antioch, (90 Bishops,) A. D. 341, Can. 9. Is the order of archbishops, then, by Divine right also? These advocates will not say so. "No bishop was to be elected or ordained," says Bingham, "without their (the metropolitans') consent and approbation; otherwise the canons pronounced both the election and the ordination null."—Binghem, B. II., Chap. xvi., Sec. 12. What will our High Churchmen make of this, a matter determined by the authority of hundreds of bishops in council? Will they say it has divine right? Then numbers of the English bishops' ordinations are null ab initio, for they frequently were not ordained by their metropolitan, nor with his consent. Nay, it will destroy Archbishop Parker's ordination, upon which all the ordinations of the present bishops and clergy of the Church of England depend. For the canons require a metropolitan to be ordained by his patriarch, or at least by all the bishops of his province. Now Parker was ordained by neither, but against the consent of the first, and only by three or four, if any, of the last, many of the rest being opposed to his ordination.

Even bishops were not allowed to do anything of importance without the presbyters. Bishop Overall himself affirms this, in his letters to Grotius.—Epistolæ Prostantium Virorum, p. 460, Ed. Secund. "Notum est antiquitus, nihil majoris momenti episcopum sine concilio sui presbyterii fecisse—It is a known matter that anciently the bishop did nothing of moment without his council of presbyters." So Cyprian apologises for ordaining only a subdeacon without the presbyters and deacons.—Epistle 24.

But Ignatius says, "Whatever the bishops shall approve of, that is also pleasing to God." Now it is clear that he makes the power or authority of the bishop in restraining and permitting equal. Whatever he could prohibit the presbyters from doing, he could equally appoint and approve of their doing the same thing. He could restrain them from baptizing, or he could appoint them to baptize. His authority in both respects was equal. Apply this to ordaining ministers. Suppose he could restrain presbyters from ordaining, he could equally appoint them to ordain ministers; and their performance of this duty "would be pleasing to God." Then presbyters, as presbyters, have as much inherent power to ordain as they have to baptize. They have, therefore, from the principles of Ignatius, power and authority to ordain ministers, confirm, &c., as much as bishops have. The only difference was, that for the honor of the bishop, and by ecclesiastical arrangement, they were not to do these things without the permission of the bishop.

Hence, then, even Ignatius says nothing to prove High Church Episcopacy of Divine right; but the contrary, that "that presbytere are in the place of the apostles," "the college of the apostles," "the Sanhedrim of God." Stillingfleet says, "In all those thirty-five testimonies produced out of Ignatius' Epistles for Episcopacy, I can meet with but one which is brought to prove the least semblance of an institution of Christ for Episcopacy; and if I am not much deceived, the sense of that place is clearly mistaken, too."—Iren. 309. The bishop, as superintendent, for the sake of order, had, by ecclesiastical arrangement, the oversight of all, and the authority to regulate the administration of the Church. So have the Lutheran superintendents; so have the Wesleyan Methodist superintendents; but they and all other ministers of that Church are equal by Divine right! So were all the ministers in Ignatius' time.

Polycarp was cotemporary with Ignatius. There is extant an epistle under his name, having much greater marks of genuineness and purity than any of those under the name of Ignatius. Indeed, there appears no reasonable ground of objection against it. He commences by saying, "Polycarp and the presbytors that are with him, to the Church of God, which is at Philippi." He exhorts them to be "subject to the presbytere and deacons, as unto God and Christ." He never once mentions such a word as bishop from the commencement to the conclusion. How different this from the Episcopal mania of the pseudo-Ignatius! How different, too, from what would be the style of modern Episcopalians! Would a modern bishop write to the church or diocese of another bishop, and yet never mention such a term as bishop? No such thing. This proves, along with a thousand other things of same character, which, for brevity's sake, we omit, that modern Episcopacy, leaving out of the question Divine right, has no resemblance to the government of the Church in the days of Clement and Polycarp.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

GARBLING OF IGNATIUS' EPISTLES.

I hope that you will republish in your paper the article headed "Powell on Apostolic Succession," contained in the Nashville Advocate of the 28th February. The article is a long one for a newspaper, but I trust its length will not deter any one from reading it.

I have reason to believe that the charge preferred against Mr. Powell by Rev. F. S. Mines has been very generally circulated—at least I have repeatedly heard of it in various localities; but I was not before aware that it was on the catalogue of publications of "The General Protestant Episcopal Sunday School Union." Is this their adopted plan for meeting the facts and arguments contained in Powell's work? It is certainly easier to prefer the charge than to answer his arguments.

All must admit that it would have been a very ungentlemanly and dishonorable act on the part of Mr. Powell, if he had garbled the epistles of Ignatius to prove that there were but two orders in the ministry in the primitive church. What, then, shall we say of his accuser, who, has so grossly misrepresented him? Again, is it not plainly the duty of those who have published and circulated this charge, as publicly to retract it, and at once suppress the work, or at least expunge the slanderous charge? Most assuredly this would be the course between individuals. And shall Christian Churches, in their Church publications, do less? I trust not.

J. E. N.

Latest-Indian News from Florida.—More Barbarous Murders. From an extra of the Ethical Companion, dated Ocala, March 12, we extract the following:

Since our regular number has been worked off and distributed, we have been informed by Colonel Paine, who has just arrived from the South, that while he was stopping at the house of Lieut. Williams, on the Withlacoochee, on Sunday evening last, that gentleman, in company with another, returned from the post at Capt. Reddick's, bringing the following thrilling report:

News had just arrived at that post of an attack, by the Indians, on the settlers on the Alafia, about thirty miles east of Tampa. Four men, one woman and three children were killed and scalped, their houses were burnt, and all the outrages and barbarities that savages could invent, were committed.

The Indians who made this attack are supposed to be the ones who made the attack near Manatee, mentioned in this week's paper. Most of the men at this settlement, it would seem, had volunteered to protect their more exposed neighbors, believing their own families comparatively safe.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION OF NEGROES.

NUMBER THREE.

A very considerable proportion of our large planters are non-residents for at least a very considerable portion of the year, and the care of their negroes depends on overseers, who of course exercise a very important influence on the character and conduct of those who are thus placed under their care. And this is particularly true in those cases where the owners are not only non-residents on their plantations, but reside in distant States, and perhaps only visit their plantations once a year, and sometimes, perhaps not so often as that; and this class of owners is not small. There are scores of such non-residents, whose plantations are scattered throughout the Southwest, and many of these are the plantations containing the largest number of slaves. In all such cases the resident manager exerts an almost uncontrolled power in the management of the plantation police. The negroes are almost entirely under their control; and in such cases whether Christian ministers shall have access to the negro, depends much more entirely on the overseer than on the owner himself. Yet even where the owner resides in the State, his residence is frequently remote from his plantations, and his visits to them only occasional. Consequently, in all such cases, as well as in those above named, the controlling influence is, to a great extent, with the overseer. This being the case, of how much consequence is it that the overseers be men of the proper stamp. No planter will deny that it is important that the overseer be a good planter, that he understand the art of preparing his land well, of pitching and cultivating the crop judiciously, or that he should be a skillful governor of negroes—one who will exercise proper economy in the management of the provisions and stock of the farm. Thus far, perhaps, most of the planters will agree with me; but let me ask, is this all about which a planter should inquire when he is about to commit an hundred immortal beings to the care of his employee? Is it enough that you get one who will take as good care of your negroes and work them as hard as he does your cattle? Is there nothing more to be sought for? Suppose the man's qualifications fill up the bill as above noticed, are no questions to be asked as to his moral character? Does he occasionally get drunk? Is he a profane swearer? Is he a man of violent, uncontrolled temper? Is he a reckless violater of the Holy Sabbath, who will vex liberty, and use the hours of holy time in perfecting certain jobs for which he has not found time during the week—thus compelling your negroes to violate God's day, and meanly grudging them the rest of the holy day which God himself hath provided for the weary and toil worn? Is he a man of licentious habits? In short, is he a man whose character and habits promise to improve or to deteriorate the morals of your slaves? Is he a man who has at least the fear of God before his eyes? All these are grave points of inquiry, which, it would seem to me, demand a serious consideration. A reckless, profane, irreligious man, should not be placed in such an important position, for it will generally be proved true that he who fears not God will be rarely true to the interests of man.

But how often do planters commit the entire management of their plantations and slaves to men who neither fear God nor regard man; and whose sole recommendation is, that they know how to make good crops! This is certainly one important qualification, but if standing alone or in connection with many very important disqualifications, it ought not in the estimation of a master who fears God to be decisive. I have known many instances in which an ungodly overseer, who hated the gospel, contrived to thwart the favorable intentions of the planter in reference to the religious instruction of his slaves. And it gives me great pleasure to say that in not a few instances the overseers have been our most devoted friends, and through their influence the Christian missionary has often been invited to minister to the slaves on many of the large plantations. Sometimes, indeed, they fail in their kind efforts in this regard. I heard not long since of a very wealthy planter in the Southwest, who resided in Virginia or North Carolina. His manager was desirous of having the negroes preached to, and offered to bear half the expense if the proprietor would meet the other half. To this the owner of so many broad acres demurred—probably could not afford to give to his negroes the preaching of the gospel at a small cost, and yet this same man could afford to spend two hundred dollars on a single wine party! Will such men never awake to the full realization of the solemn fact that whether they will or not they have to meet these fearful responsibilities at the bar of one who will deal out impartial judgment to all, master, overseer and slave, without reference to cotton bags, sugar hogsheads or rice barrels!

To sum up all that we have to say on this point, let me say, bear in mind that while it is proper and necessary for planters to employ as overseers men who are skillful in managing their interests, this is not all that is necessary; and as there is nothing in the character of a good overseer which is incompatible with a sound and saving Christianity, so there is nothing in thorough, deep-toned Christianity which hinders a man from being a first rate overseer, but very much to qualify him for the better discharge of his duties. And even should he not make quite so heavy crops, it is probable that the better condition of the negroes, physically and morally, who are under the care of such an overseer, would in the end make it greatly to the interest of the planter to have his people under the care of such men.

It is very possible that some slaveholders take up the notion that fear is the only feeling by which the negro can be controlled. This is, we think, a very great mistake. That this is one of the elements in his character to which appeal is to be had, is true; but it is not the only one. The negro is a man, and it were wise to take for granted that there are other important elements of character to which reference must be had in governing him. He has the ordinary affections of human nature, and it will be found necessary, in governing him, to take them all into the account; and he acts unwisely who attempts to secure obedience by appealing to any one of them singly. Hence the gospel of God, contemplating master and slave, in their mutual relations to each other and to God, affords the only safe rule for the conduct of both parties, and fixes the relations and duties of both as terminating directly in responsibility to God himself as the mutual Lord and Governor of both. Those, therefore, whether masters or slaves, who ignore the existence or authority of the New Testament teachings on this subject, act unwisely and bring trouble on themselves—trouble here and hereafter. Therefore, let masters consider their responsibilities and duties in the premises, and in the fear of God set themselves to the performance of them with a hearty good will; and then let them seek such overseers as will be likely to help, and not to hinder them, in their great work.

We now approach another branch of this subject, and one which will require some special consideration. We have spoken hitherto of the duties of masters in the premises, we now come to consider the duty of the Church; and as we approach this point we feel increasingly the burthen of the subject.

That in so vast and complicated a work as that which we are now considering the Church cannot be neutral, will at once be obvious. The extent of the obligations of Christian masters which we have been considering does not lessen, but rather increases the responsibilities of the Church. Many Christian masters, and many who do not profess religion, are partially awake to their duties, and are willing to have their slaves instructed in religion, but either they have not the ability, the time, or the disposition to attempt it themselves. In either case it is perfectly natural they should look to the Church and its ministers for direction and aid in this work; and the Church should be prompt to respond wisely and efficiently to this appeal. She should use all her influence to enter and occupy every open field, as well as to extend the area of missionary effort among the negroes. But how can this be done most effectually! 1st.—Let the people in every neighborhood see that in building houses of worship there is sufficient accommodation for the blacks; a little care and a moderate additional expense will provide comfortable and ample accommodation for all the blacks in the neighborhood. Let the preacher see to it that this matter is wisely, earnestly, perseveringly urged upon the people. You cannot expect that your servants will attend church if they see that no provision is made for their accommodation. In the next place, let proper efforts be made to induce their attendance at the house of God, and let the preachers carefully attend to their instruction, both at church and when they meet them at their masters' homes. As you have opportunity, talk with them about their souls. "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand." You can never estimate the immense results for good of a kindly word of exhortation and advice given by the pastor to the slaves with whom he may come in contact. The fruit may not immediately appear, yet it does not follow that it is not doing good. You have thereby very likely secured the confidence and love of the servant thus addressed, and through him your reputation for kindness and an interest in the blacks will be extended through the plantation and the neighborhood, and your way be thereby prepared for extensive usefulness among them. In the intercourse of life it will be found that civility and kindness of manner are best with all classes, and emphatically so with reference to the negro.

James O. Andrew.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

ALABAMA CORRESPONDENCE.

Summerfield, March 12, 1856.

Dear Advocate—Your good-natured editor very kindly and politely requested, when we last met, to hear from me occasionally. Now I am not fond of writing for newspapers—however much I love to read them—because it happens to me to be wholly taken up with other pursuits. But when a great public need stares everybody in the face, how can everybody keep silent? Hundreds of teachers and others see and feel at this moment the great demand for a female college. What I have to say upon this subject, therefore, will, I trust, be but the utterance of widely prevailing opinions.

An article in your columns recently, signed "suggestion," seems to me to be for the most part quite truthful. The description of a "polished young lady" of the present day, though in the main a just criticism, is, perhaps, rather overdrawn. At the close of a paragraph on the present system of female colleges, the writer says, "Let us pull down this shanty! Let us scrape away the earth and lay the foundation anew." Now if he means by that that he would have us do away with any of the existing institutions, I could not subscribe to the wish. I would rather say, let all the schools now in operation be encouraged and sustained, but let their position and office be distinctly defined and thoroughly understood; so that they may not, by seeming to answer a purpose which they cannot answer, stand in the way of the establishment of an entirely new order of institutions.

That the condition of society at present urgently calls for a higher grade of female schools than exist, is a proposition to which, by your permission, I will devote a few articles in your paper. As this communication is preliminary, I will occupy the remainder of it with a few items relative to Summerfield and the Centenary Institute.

Few villages are more pleasant and healthful than Summerfield. Many are larger and many are more thrifty, though it has greatly improved within three years in the number and beauty of its residences. The inhabitants are quite harmonious and united. The Methodists are so largely in the majority as to render sectarian strife almost an unheard of thing among us.

We were all more than satisfied with the appointment of Brother O. R. Blue as our pastor. He labored with us a few weeks, much to our edification, and a call came from Talladega to go and serve as agent for our educational interests in that section. The Church here, judging the case to be an urgent one, gave its consent, though not until Bishop Andrew had signified his willingness to occupy the pulpit in Bro. Blue's absence. It is now more than a month since he left, and in the meantime the venerable bishop has been setting an example to his younger brethren in the ministry that is worthy of all imitation. He not only feeds the flock on Sunday and Sunday night, but he cares for it all the week. He attends and leads the prayer meetings and class meetings, and by his presence and wise counsels upon these occasions not only keeps alive, but increases the zeal of the Church. His Sabbath ministrations, taking the form of a series of sermons upon the various relations of life, are exceedingly interesting and instructive. On the whole, I think that "pure and undefiled religion" never stood firmly at so high a point in the Church at Summerfield as now.

As to Centenary Institute, the facts are not less cheering. The number of pupils has not been so great at the same period of the session for many years as it is now. The faculty comprises seven men and several ladies, all working together harmoniously. The buildings of the Female Department (in which three of the teachers, with their families, and most of the young ladies from abroad now board) have been so greatly enlarged and improved that they not only are very pleasant and commodious within, but present a noble and imposing appearance without. The real condition of the school, in all its departments, was never so healthy and vigorous. Its friends are full of confidence. By the by, a system of weekly lectures often published in catalogues and then wholly neglected, is here rigidly carried into practice. The interest of these lectures is not a little augmented by the attendance of many of the citizens as well as the students, so that the chapel of the "Female College" (a very large room) is generally well nigh full. In addition to this, the faculty of the Male Department have made arrangements for a series of bimonthly lectures, with various gentlemen in different parts of the State. The first of these was delivered a few days since, by our young brother, Abernathy, of the Alabama Conference. His lecture was a production of decided merit. The taste and skill and the mature philosophy which characterized it seemed almost beyond his years. It is hoped that those who follow him will be equally successful.

Marion.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Christian Advocate.

Terms: $2 50 per annum, in advance.

NEW ORLEANS:

SATURDAY, MARCH 29, 1856.

HARPER, for March, we have through McGinnis, 36 Camp street.

PETERSON'S MAGAZINE, for March, has been furnished our table by Morgan near the Post Office.

HOME CIRCLE.—This, to us and our household, is the best of the monthlies—best of them all. We shall continue to take pleasure in forwarding the names of new subscribers, without commission.

M'LLE RACHEL.—This exquisite lady, (save the mark!) who is the mother of several children without ever having been married, has returned to Europe with her retainers, managers, &c., acknowledging losses to the amount of $60,000. America destroyed the profits of the Russian tour. For once our people ought to be credited with good sense and moral taste.

DR. JOHN M. TAYLOR died on the 25th of February, on his plantation, in Madison parish, La. A friend promises, at an early date, an obituary notice of this worthy man.

THE QUARTERLIES.—The London Quarterly, for January; The Edinburg Quarterly, for January; Blackwood's Magazine, for March.—These substantial republications of English periodicals, by L. Scott & Co., New York, are on our table. They are as heavy as books and as readable as newspapers. Often single articles, in each, are worth the subscription. The Westminster, too, is along. See the terms in our advertising columns.

SUMTER COUNTY, ALA.—REV. J. E. Newman writes of the prospects of the Southern University: "I think the agent will get $10,000 in this county. He takes notes as he goes—better than the old paper subscription plan. I think this county and Greene will swell the present subscription up to $200,000. Is it unreasonable to ask the rest of the Conference to give $100,000 more?"

A GOOD THING.—A printed plan of the appointments for preaching on the Waterproof and St. Joseph Circuit, Louisiana Conference, Rev. H. J. Harp, pastor, has been shown us. The appointment of local preachers with the itinerant, at each chapel, are laid down. Thus each of several chapels has Sabbath service. A copy of this neatly printed slip is sent to each family in the bounds of the wide circuit. At the bottom is this notice, the only thing needed to perfect it. "Rev. Mr. Harp will act as agent for the New Orleans Christian Advocate, the Home Circle, (a monthly Magazine,) and the Southern Methodist Quarterly Review."

Funeral of a Howard.

The remains of Virgil Boullemet, Esq., late President of the Howard Association, were interred at Odd Fellows' Rest last Sabbath, with imposing ceremonies. He died a month or two since in Cuba, whither he had gone for health.

No military or political interest contributed to this occasion. The great distinction of the deceased was in his Samaritan character.

At a private residence the usual ceremonies were performed; after which the mournful cortege proceeded to Odd Fellows' Rest, where the funeral ceremonies of the order were performed, in a very impressive manner, by Rev. Mr. Guttenheim, of the Synagogue.

It is a singular fact and striking coincidence, publicly remarked at his funeral, that Mr. Boullemet, like the great founder of the Howard Association, whose life his own so well imitated, and of whom he was a worthy disciple, died in a foreign land, and had his grave bedewed by the tears of strangers and lit by their prayers. It is notable, also, that like Howard, he served in his benevolent mission just nineteen years. Howard died and is buried in the Crimea.

Another suggestive circumstance was mentioned, which shows that moral courage and generous humanity is a guard against disease. Fear freezes the veins. Selfishness is no refuge from epidemics. During the nineteen years of the organization of the association—it was organized in 1837—no active member had ever died before the present case. Some members have never had the yellow fever, and none can get acclimated to cholera; but only those who have resigned or gone out of the list of active members have ever before been taken away. It would seem as though a kind Providence desired to reward, by special favors and length of days, those endowed with so noble a humanitarianism and so great a power of self-abnegation.

Mr. Cassidy, who went to Cuba for the remains, was very kindly received and treated by every one; and it was the first instance in which permission was ever given to disinter a body from thence. Every facility was shown, both by the Government and by individuals whose services were called into requisition.

A Conference Faculty.

An Improvement—Examining Committees—The Plan at Fault—Theological Seminary Proposed—On Wheels—Faculty Ditto—A Valuable Diploma.

The Minutes of the last Louisiana Conference contain an item new and noteworthy, under the old caption, "Committees of Examination." We hesitate not to pronounce it an improvement.

The construction of committees to examine junior members of Conference of the first, second, third and fourth years, is frequently and not unjustly found fault with. Now and then the announcement falls wholly—is overlooked; or, certain committee-men do not know what they have been appointed to, whether to examine the class of first, second, third or fourth year, or whether appointed at all. The name was heard as the bishop read it out, for something. There is a vague impression. The certainty and thoroughness of the examinations on the course of study through which candidates are required to pass, is lessened, and the "course" becomes, so far, a dead letter.

Again: The committees are generally reconstructed every year. Candidates may know more about the text book than members of committee. The latter, to say the best that can be said, are rusty. They are not experts at conducting an examination—lack of practice or familiarity with the text, or both. This drudgery over, they may not be appointed on that or any other committee for years; and therefore they do not set about remedying their deficiencies.

The results of such examinations—loose, shambling, indecisive—often do injustice to the candidate, and always make an impression on him unfavorable to earnestness in the educational requirements of Conference.

We have heard of persons being put on committees, of acknowledged unfitness, but for the reason that they might become acquainted with the course of study. This is jesting with the whole matter, and prostrates it. It is worth inquiring, how they got into full Conference standing and the highest orders, without learning the studies prescribed. But now they are in, some less expensive plan for teaching them would be as well.

Standing committees are preferable to uncertain and varying ones, and this coming up to the work unprepared.

Is not the method under consideration better?—to classify the course of study by affinities of subjects, and not by years. The minutes before us show:

1. "Committee on English Literature."

This committee is expected to be a fixture, if the Bishop will accept the recommendation of Conference. It examines the class of the first year on Grammar, Elocution and Essay; the class of the second year on continuation of same and General History; the class of the third year on Rhetoric and Sermon; the class of the fourth year on Logic and Sermon. Their task is concluded. On these subjects they draw up report.

2. "Committee on Doctrinal and Controversial Theology."

Takes class of first year through first volume of Wesley's Sermons, Fletcher's Appeal and Watson's Conversations.

Class of second year through second volume of Wesley's Sermons, &c., &c.,

3. "Committee on Ecclesiastical History and Church Government."

This committee has to do more or less with each of the four classes. To it is assigned Discipline, Church History, Controversial and Polemic Divinity generally.

It is evident that this is subdivision of labor with all its benefits. As in a college, one of the faculty does not devote himself to Freshmen, another to Sophomores; but one is a Professor of English Literature, another of Mathematics—and these branches they pursue through every grade and class; so here is a Conference Faculty.

Among other benefits of this apportionment would be suggestion as to the text books most suitable, under each department, to make it well furnished and well arranged. Books are in the stereotyped catalogue that might be superceded by their betters, and will be, when analysis is directed to it. The line of defence is here incomplete, while there it is overdone and out of proportion to what is needed.

When these committees become well known and ripe in their office, by practice and exclusive study—no more an annual sham, a mere nominis umbra, candidates, knowing that examinations are not to be a hit and miss, a skip and jump business, will prepare for them. The educating function of the itinerancy will then assume dignity and importance. One or two days before the meeting of Conference seriously devoted to examining and preparing reports, the ground ploughed, cross-ploughed and harrowed, would do away with the hurried and superficial style now too prevalent.

It is no more doubted a man may learn while preaching as well as preach while learning. Now suppose the course of study well attended to, as it is; or, what is better, overhauled and amended. Suppose this "Conference Faculty well up to the work; and with the prestige which learning and professional fidelity would soon give them. What have we? A Theological Seminary on wheels! Faculty and pupils on horseback! Librarian in saddlebags!

Make up a faculty of six or eight such men as any of our Conferences could furnish, subject them to the responsibilities and demands of their position; let the system be fairly worked, and the diploma of this faculty would be at a premium. The preacher who, while in the regular work, had studied the "course" and received a diploma with the signature of this faculty, and the concurring vote of the Conference, would stand at palpable and acknowledged advantage before the cloistered student of Andover or Princeton or Alexandria, whose technical sheepskin was illuminated more pretentionely. The Conference diploma would be a better technical guarantee of having learned what a preacher ought to know, and of fitness for the duties of the pastor's and evangelist's office.

BISHOP PIERCE AT NEWARK, N. J.

From the Southern Christian Advocate we clip the Bishop's account of his catholic labors.—EN.

MR. EDITOR—As an apology to you for intermitting my notes of Western Travel, let me say that for three weeks I have been upon the wing, trying to meet my engagements for dedication services in Georgia, New Jersey and Alabama. Thanks to steam and railroads, and my capability to live and work without sleep or rest, I was able to meet each appointment.

The invitation to be present and to assist in the dedication at Newark has awakened no little inquiry. "What does it mean?" say some. And others ask, "Is it a sign of reaction among our Northern brethren on the question which divided the Church?" I shall give no answer to these interrogatories—indulge in no speculations, but will state the facts as they occurred.

The application to me was made first by letter, and then in person by Rev. Mr. Cox, pastor of the church. I was assured that it was the wish of all concerned, and that the Northern Bishops who were to be present approved the call. The arguments used were, the magnificence of the enterprise—no building to compare with it, as to church architecture, in British or American Methodism—the large amount of money to be raised, and the avowed belief that my presence and labors would help to soften the asperities of the old controversy—to restore confidence and promote brotherly love. I went in the same spirit with which I would go to Charleston, or Mobile, or Savannah. Nowhere did I ever meet a more cordial greeting or share a more generous hospitality. Bishops, preachers and people, all alike, were kind. I do not mean formally polite, but Christianly courteous. Our intercourse was free, unrestrained, heart-warm. The religious services were spiritual, lively, refreshing and profitable. Bishop Simpson I never heard before, but would like to hear again. Lucid in arrangement, simple in style, strong in thought, impassioned in manner, he is an effective preacher. A brother quaintly remarked to me, that when the Bishop only cried out of one eye, he could hold up pretty well, but when he cried out of both "I break down—can resist no longer." In the days of other years Bishop Janes circulated in the South as the Secretary of the American Bible Society. The memory of his labors is yet a precious odor in the Church. He is still the same amiable meek-spirited man; and I may add, the same chaste, earnest, impressive preacher. His sermon was admirable. I suppose between fifty and one hundred preachers of the New York York and New Jersey Conferences were present. Among the rest the venerable Dr. Bangs, now in his 79th year. This father in Israel is withered in form but fresh in complexion, enjoys fine health, and loves Methodism, South and North. His welcome touched me, and his gratification at seeing a Southern brother among them all, mingling in the services of the sanctuary, would have remunerated me for all the fatigue of the journey. Everything was pleasant, cordial, satisfactory.

For a description of the church I refer you to the National Magazine. The cost of lot and building was $65,000. To relieve the enterprise of all encumbrance, it was necessary to raise $24,000, during the dedicatory services. On Friday, the day of dedication, almost one-half was secured. My Episcopal brethren, both having other engagements, left; and so I had the Sabbath, morning, noon and night, to myself. Work, work, work, you know, is my motto for a preacher. It is a panacea for all ills, well nigh, of which my brethren are accustomed to complain. On this day (the Sabbath) the other $13,000 were raised. Nobly done, that! A magnificent example. I expect to make capital of it, many a time, in the pulpit and on the platform. Among the Newark Methodists are some princely men. I speak not of their fortune, but of their spirit. The congregation is not wealthy, but they are enlightened, pious, liberal. Every man does something; many do their best. They have not resolved their religion into economy and accumulation in business and trade, but into industry and Scriptural disbursement. The best lamb in the flock belongs to God. The richest member in the Church gives the most in amount, but the poorest equals him in principle. The Lord bless the people and occupy the temple they have reared for his glory.

I am glad I made this visit. If the people fared as well as I did, it was a saving operation to both parties. May Methodism, both North and South, live forever.

G. F. PIERCE.

To be thankful for what we have, and to be hopeful for what we have not, is the best and happiest way of carrying on commerce with the court of heaven.

For the N. O Christian Advocate.

TOBACCONISING LADIES.

Mr. Editor—I have been very much interested and pleased in reading the articles on "Tobacconising" in the last numbers of the Advocate. They are evidently addressed to gentlemen in general and to ministers in particular. But I imagine that the cap would fit some of the ladies equally as well, for (would you believe it?) some of them are guilty of as heinous a crime as chewing or smoking—viz., "dipping." And that, too, among the professedly pious. Indeed, it has become quite fashionable in these fast times to take a "dip" occasionally. For the special benefit of the uninitiated, I will give a short description of the modus operandi in dipping, having frequently been a disgusted witness of the same.

Sister ——— has just returned from the church. Dinner is waiting. After a brief preparation she seats herself at the table, and partakes of the inviting viands with a relish. Presently, when dinner is over, she goes to her drawer, takes out a huge bottle labelled "Superior Scotch" or "Best Maccaboy," and a little stick chewed into a broom or brush at one end. She then seats herself in her easy chair, or throws herself on the lounge, with the brush in one hand and the beautiful bottle in the other; dips the brush in the snuff, gives it a graceful motion to and fro to insure a brushful, draws it forth heavily laden with the precious stuff, puts it in her mouth, and exquisitely enjoys its intoxicating influence. In this delightful employment she whiles away many a precious moment. Let me ask if this is doing "all to the glory of God?" Putting aside the evil effects resulting therefrom, and these are many, I appeal to all ladies of refinement, and to members of the Church especially, if this habit is a whit better than chewing or smoking, that that "pious lady" was so indignant at? Perhaps if you had followed her to her room, you might have seen her take a "dip."

I do not wish to be understood as advocating the practice of chewing and smoking, or of taking the gentlemen's part. Far be it from me to do that, even for the ministers, "all of whom I esteem very highly, in love, for their work's sake." Tobacco, in any shape or form, is very offensive to me, and more particularly so when I see one of my own sex using it.

Paul tells us to "pray without ceasing," and "in everything give thanks." Sister ———, let me solemnly ask if you—can you give thanks while dipping? "It preserves my teeth." Ah! is that what you use it for? Charcoal will preserve them more effectually than snuff; and more, it makes them look pearly and purifies the breath; whereas snuff creates nausea and makes your teeth yellow and your breath offensive. "You would die with the toothache if you didn't dip." O no, may be you wouldn't, now! "Do try" some other remedy for your teeth. I am sure there are many others far more simple and efficacious. And if you can't cure it, a dentist can. I would much rather undergo the operation of having a tooth extracted than to dip snuff, any time.

In conclusion, I would briefly say, with St. Paul, "Hold fast that which is good," and "Abstain from all appearance of evil," and may the "God of peace sanctify you wholly."

EUNICE.

BIBLE LORE IN MISSOURI.

A correspondent of the St. Louis Republican, writing from Jefferson City, gives an amusing description of a trial which recently came off at that place, in which all the counsel engaged ranked high at the Missouri bar. Although lawyers were never considered remarkable for their erudition in the Scriptures, urgee the editor of the Republican, yet such unpardonable neglect of the holy book as the counsel in this case exhibited, calls for prompt action on the part of the American Bible Society, or greater Sunday School facilities. Here is the letter:

"A few days since, I was serving as a juror in a case of slander. Three of our most prominent lawyers were engaged—one for the plaintiff, the others for the defendant. The counsel attempted to impeach the veracity of one of the witnesses, an old man named Mayhew. They failed entirely; and when the counsel for the plaintiff came to sum up the evidence, he said: 'Gentlemen of the jury, the counsel on the opposite side have endeavored to impeach the veracity and destroy the character of the witnesses, and particularly of my old friend Mayhew. I must confess, gentlemen, I trembled for my old friend when the senior counsel for the defendant, with his stern countenance, demanded of the old man whether he had not told a different story to his neighbors, and introduced Mr. Harris to prove it. But, gentlemen, he failed, utterly failed; and my old friend Mayhew came out unscathed. Yes, gentlemen, like Daniel of old, out of the lion's den, without a hair of his head having been singed.'

This excited the risibles of those familiar with the authority quoted; but some very broad grins were seen when the senior counsel for defendant arose, and remarked to his hearers, 'That his friend, the counsel for the plaintiff, had not quoted correctly the passage from the higher law; that he had read and heard much of Daniel, but that was the first time he had ever heard of his being in a lion's den.'

All was silence, however, compared with the roar when the junior counsel made his reply. In alluding to the remarks of plaintiff's counsel, he said: 'My worthy friend on the other side is not quite as familiar with the volumes of the higher law as he is with those of Chitty and Blackstone, or he would not have attempted to release his friend Mayhew from the lion's den without having a hair of his head singed.' Unlike my senior, I have heard of Daniel being in the lion's den, but until to-day I never heard that his roaring majesty made use of fire. My worthy friend has, I suppose, mixed up the escape of Daniel from the lion's den with the passage of Nebuchadnezzar through the fiery furnace, who had not a hair singed.'

One good effect has resulted from this trial. Many who were present, and others who have since heard of the above, have been conning their Bibles; and, as an instance, I will mention that I went into the post office after the trial, where I found two old gray headed codgers busily engaged in hunting up the places referring to the passage of Shadrach Meshech and Abednego through the furnace and the escape of Daniel from the lion's den When I entered they were about to give up the search in despair, one of them saying that he thought it was not in the Bible; that they had thumbed from first Genesis to last Jeremiah, and could find no such names.

Some of these gentlemen would no doubt be as good commentators of the higher law as many of those ministers who pretend to find their authority for the use of Sharpe's rifles.

Should these limbs of the law again attempt to explore unknown regions, I shall wish, as did the writer of John Gilpin's story,

"May I be there to see."

Notices of New Books.

SELECT LONDON LECTURES.—Edited by D. W. Clark, D. D. 1856: Cinn.

The Book Agents, Swormstedt & Poe, have put this fresh and excellent book on our table. It comprises some of the more valuable lectures delivered before the Young Men's Christian Association in Exeter Hall, from 1847 to 1855. They are twelve. Among them: Mohamedanism, by W. Arthur; Man and his Masters, by J. B. Gough; Music, in its Relations to Religion, by Dr. Cumming.

From J. C. Morgan's rich book mart, near the Post Office, we have the following:

INDIA, by Mrs. Southworth, elegantly bound, Peterson, of Philadelphia, publisher.

LINWOOD, a work that derives melancholy interest as being the last of the authoress of the Scrap Bag, Mrs. Lee Hentz, who lately died in Florida.

FIVE HUNDRED MISTAKES CORRECTED.—A Grammar of Composition.

Of these plain and useful books, from D. Burgess & Co., New York, we have before spoken in commendation.

A PRACTICAL SYSTEM OF BOOK-KEEPING, by Single and Double Entry. By Mayhew. D. Burgess & Co., 1855.

It would help every establishment to have correct accounts kept. A small and cheap volume, calculated to give the principles of this needful art, ought to be circulated.

The lawyer, parson, doctor, planter, teacher, boy, man, woman, all will be better for acquaintance with the system.

All these books may be had of Morgan.

B. M. Norman, 14 Camp street, has laid on our table two handsomely bound volumes.

WOLFSDEN.—By J. B. Phillips & Sampson, Boston: 1856.

EDITH HALE.—By Thrace Talmon. Phillips & Sampson, Boston: 1856.

Both village stories, by new hands.

H. D. McGinnis, 36 Camp street, supplies us with the last issues of Harper & Bros., fresh and valuable:

THE ILIAD OF HOMER.—Literally translated, with Explanatory Notes. By Theodore A. Buckley. New York, Harper & Bros.

Those who may wish to study the epic of Homer in all its strength and significancy, must still abide by the original. If too old, too busy, too far gone in any way, they will get here no mean introduction in this translation, not in a paraphrastic poetry, but very literal prose.

PAPAL SIGHTS AND PAPAL PRINCIPLES, Seen through American Spectacles.—By Jas. Jackson Jarvis. New York, Harper & Bros.

The author of "Parisian Sights" goes on seeing to Italy. He is minute in gossip, and gossips cleverly—sometimes seriously. Fasts and feasts are served up, relishably. Illustrations are well executed and numerous.

HISTORY OF HERNANDO CORTEZ.—By John S. C. Abbott. New York, Harper & Bros.

The little volume in which Mr. Abbott sums up the history of the expedition of Cortes is curious and interesting, and combines the attractiveness of Cooper with the value of Prescott. It is beautifully printed and adorned with a great many illustrations.

THE WONDERS OF SCIENCE; or Young Humphrey Davy.—Written for boys. By Henry Mayhew. New York, Harper & Bros.

A more useful book could hardly have been written, as showing how much has been accomplished by study and exertion, even when the advantages were very small. It speaks of the early exertions of Humphrey Davy, a man who, by the pursuit of his own inventions, made himself a great name and did a vast deal of good in the world. The work is well printed and largely illustrated.

THE OLD DOMINION; or The Southampton Massacre.—A novel. By G. P. R. James, Esq. New York, Harper & Bros.

Another from the gentleman of the solitary horsemanship.

DEGREES CONFERRED.—Sixty-four students in the Medical Department of the Louisiana University received diplomas and the degree of M. D. on last Saturday. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Hunt, whose congratulatory speech on the occasion was impressive. Dr. Castellanos delivered the valedictory of the graduates in an appropriate manner.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONF.

Brethren—Do you understand that I want to get every one of you enlisted in the cause for which I am agent this year?

I think you ought all of you to become colporteurs. You can accomplish more good in your circuits, missions or stations by so doing. Is it not your duty "to see that each society is supplied with religious books?" Something like that was in the Discipline when I was a circuit preacher. I don't think the publishers have left it out since our last session.

The circulation of a hundred dollars worth of books, religious in their character and tendency, will secure to the Church and to the cause of piety an influence that will tell upon the happy destinies of precious souls, and the well-being and good order of society, as well as upon your support.

Some preachers refuse to sell and distribute books in their works for fear of curtailing the small contributions that might be made for their support. Deliberately, I say, such do not deserve a support. I should feel ashamed of such a preacher, and trust there is not such a man in the Mississippi Conference. For it is a great mistake. Is your charge poor, in the common acceptation of that term? And do you fear the people will not give as liberally as they ought? Preach them a missionary sermon and take a collection. This will relieve them—they will become more elastic and liberal in their feelings and views. Preach a sermon on Sunday Schools and take up another collection for books to start a school with, and send us the money at Vicksburg. They will feel so much better, that you can sell $25 to $50 or $100 worth of books to them. And I'll venture to say, that instead of curtailing what you would have received from them, you will get two dollars for every one they give for the books over and above what you would have received. This is no fiction. I speak or write what I know to be the truth. It is to your pecuniary interest to engage in this work; the interests of society and of the Church demand that it shall be done. How any man, professing to be moved by the Holy Ghost to preach Christ and to battle against error, vice and sin, can offer little excuses for not circulating a religious literature, while the country is being flooded with novels and sickening trash, is more than I can comprehend.

Some fourteen of the members of Conference and three local preachers have received books and tracts. This is doing something; but it is not half what ought to be done. Are there not fifty or more of you that ought to send your orders at once for books?

While I write a plain proposition, will you read it carefully and then act?

It is: That I will furnish you with good books and tracts, that you do the best you can in selling to those who will buy, and giving to the poor, and then have the privilege of returning to me as so much stock what may be on hand at the end of the year, and are not sold or injured; that you shall have 30 per cent. on all you sell, and have the privilege of giving away one-fourth as much as you sell; that you report to me monthly how much sold, how much given away, how much on hand, how much collected for the society.

What do you think of that proposition? Do you accede to it? Then let me hear from you soon. Large supply of books on hand in Vicksburg, and more coming.

Probably it would be better, generally, to mention some of the works which you know are wanted, and let me select an assortment, giving a variety.

Again, you can get a number of the works, half or more, from me at 20 to 40 per cent. less than the catalogue prices. That, I think, is an inducement.

Now, brethren, what will you do? I leave it with you.

Can you recommend to me any local ministers, active, energetic, prompt, who are willing to engage in this work, or lay brethren?

Yours, in the work,

H. H. MONTGOMERY, Agent.

N. B.—Will not the preachers of the Louisiana Conference send to Vicksburg—those opposite and near the river, especially?

VICKSBURG, March 14. H. H. M.

DECEASE OF A MILLIONAIRE.—Mr. John D. Murrell, a native of Lynchburg, Va., and for the past twenty-seven years a sojourner in our city, died at the St. Charles Hotel, on Sunday morning, the 23d inst., aged sixty years. Commencing life in the humble vocation of clerk, and, on arriving at manhood, coming into the possession of a small competency, he embarked in the dry goods business in his native town. By perseverance, industry and frugality, he obtained a great start, and removing to Louisiana, he accumulated wealth to the amount of one million and a half of dollars, though it is believed by many the amount will approximate $2,000,000. In his department and intercourse with the community he was unpretending and unostentatious, pursuing the even tenor of his way. The pomp, glitter and show of the world had no attractions for him. He never was married. No will nor documents have been found denoting what disposition he made of his property, and it is presumed it will go to his heirs direct, who are a brother, residing in Arkansas, another brother residing near Jackson, Miss., a sister and two children of a deceased brother in Virginia.

His property consists of plantations in this State; valuable real estate in the city; bank stock; a large amount of bills receivable; and cash.

Anxiety is beginning to be felt for the safety of the ship Benjamin Adams, which sailed on the 5th of January from Boston for Mobile with a cargo of ice, and has not been heard of since.

The ship Potomac, from New York, for Australia, was abandoned at sea, Jan. 13th. The captain and eleven men reached the coast of Brazil, but the mate, with five men, who were in another boat, had not been heard of.

THE GIPSIES.

Since the time when George Borrow, author of "Bible in Spain," and many other works of a more limited immortality, published his singular book entitled the "Zincalee," embodying the result of his researches among the Gipsy tribe of Spain, in the fastnesses of the Pyrenees and Alpuxarras, and in the crowded pities of Madrid, Barcelona and elsewhere, very little has been written or said concerning this strange tribe of people. They are a sort of middle age myth transplanted to the hard actualities of the present; a fiction realized; a romance of fact. Claiming an Egyptian and Arabic nationality prior to the times of Christ; possessing a strange kind of clannishness, but nevertheless cohesive nationality; with an honor as bright as burnished steel between themselves, but are, nevertheless, vagabonds, thieves, cheats; the disowned and dispersed denizens of the world, whose hand is against every man, and whom every man's hand is raised against.

During the middle ages the Gipseys were, for a long time, slowly working their way westward through Austria, Germany, France and Spain, until finally they strayed over into England. Some of them have latterly appeared in our own country and camped at Hoboken, near New York, where they drove a flourishing business in fortune-telling, stealing and jockeying; for no educated horseman has a quicker eye for good points in an animal, nor one-half so many resources for concealing those which are bad, as an Egyptian who sucks in rascality with his mother's milk, and is taught little else than how to procure money by the means of knavery which deserve, but just escape, jail and parish prison. Indeed, in order to become proficients and graduates in knavery, they have a course of actual education, rough and uncouth as it is, admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is taught.

With regard to this strange people, whose secrets are known to none outside their own order; who have queens clothed in rags, and not unwilling to lie or steal; priests, competent to mock all religions, revered, for some unknown cause, by their own communicants, and whose creed is so close as to put the hard-shell baptist in the ranks of liberality; new revelations have lately been made, as interesting as they are novel. The field explored was the Danubian principalities, opened to inquisition by the existing war; and the result of the researches we very briefly append, are not less curious ethnologically than philosophically.

The Gipsey population of the provinces to which we have referred, is estimated at about three hundred thousand—their roving habits preventing any accurate census statistics—and, in character, they are not unlike their brethren, the Gitanos of Spain. Politically democrats of the open air and great adventurers; religiously, outward conformists to the faith of the nations among whom they live; but cherishing at the same time a mysterious belief of their own—never divulged nor even comprehended in its outlines. Those who are acquainted with them, assert that they have a political organization and king; though who he is, or where he lives, or what his powers may be, are unknown by any. They are as marked a people in their physiognomy and physical conformation as any that are known, and love to live in the open air, under the stars. Their language is a queer corruption of everything ever talked, and cannot be learned with as much facility as the Chinese, which has some thousands of characters in its alphabet. The root is supposed to be Sanscrit, with a borrowing from every other language or used, anciently or recently; accommodating itself to the countries where they reside: in Turkey, have the Turkish termination; in Spain, the Spanish suffix, everywhere, the same generic character.

Their religion passes comprehension. It certainly has nothing to do with morals; for they steal, murder and cheat with a provoking negation of all recognised rules of virtue. Some deem them sun worshippers, and there are not wanting grounds on which to rest such an opinion.

With regard to their origin, there is no doubt of their being Asiatics—resembling, even now, their castes of Hindostan—and it is supposed that they were driven from the banks of the Oxus by Timour about 1400, and entered Europe by three different channels—by Spain via Africa; by the northern shore of the Euxine, and, towards the Danube, by way of Anatolia and Roumelia. They spread over Europe like a great wave. In 1417 they appeared in Moldavia, and in a few months reached Germany and the Baltic shores; thence, in one year, into Switzerland, pretending to have been driven from Lower Egypt by the Saracens, and compelled to wander. As soon as their true character developed itself they were presented with unrelenting bitterness, driven out of Switzerland by decree of governments, and as thieves, liars and blasphemous idolaters.

At present it is estimated that there are at 2,000,000 Gipsies in Europe. In 1442 there were 14,000 in Switzerland alone. They were expelled from France, Spain, Denmark and Germany, at the peril of their lives, but nevertheless continued to linger about their old haunts. By Henry VIII and Elizabeth they were persecuted in England, then protected in Scotland, when, at one time, they numbered 100,000. In the time of Walter Scott, however, who makes frequent reference to them, there were not over 500 Gipsies in all Scotland. In Wallachia and Moldavia, the Gipsies are held as slaves, the number of a quarter of a million, and were from thieving and begging by good budgets of plenty of work. They are the gold washers of the country, and have even gone so far as the Ural mountains to pursue their researches. Another class of Gipsies catch young bears among the Carpathian mountains, teach them various tricks and take them around to exhibit through all the countries of Europe; wherefore they are called Ursari or bear leaders. Another class, more civilized and industrious than the rest, manufacture wooden utensils—cups, plates and spoons—and also labor as smiths. They are the most prosperous of all.

The last class of all, and the lowest even in the estimation, are the vagabonds—the simon-pure species—who pursue no trade, have no calling, but live by beggary, larceny and small villainies. This is the class that filch eggs and chickens, appropriate a week's washing, tell fortunes and sleep under hedges. It is the one that is best known, and the one which Borrow seems to have fallen in with; whose jargon defies every philological rule and all grammatical construction, and is culled among themselves romany, nothing more nor less than a scientific arrangement and classification of all the jargon invented since the confusion of tongues. The women of this class are frequently very beautiful, with large black eyes, regular features, swelling breasts, and as clean ankles as a full-blooded racer. This form of government is partially royal, partially democratic, and partially patriarchal. They have judges and subordinate officers, and the punishment of death is sometimes executed upon recusants.

The class of Gipsies called Vutrussi have fixed dwellings, and are more like Russian serfs than slaves or freemen. They are chiefly household servants in Bayard families, and are altogether more domestic and servile than those denizens of the open air on good adventure to whom we have already alluded. Some of them are farmers on a small scale, and many have trades; but the majority are held in vassalage, and given the cut direct by those who prefer to sing the songs of the "Jolly Beggars," as penned by Burns:

"With the ready trick and fable,
Round we wander all the day;
And at night, in barn or stable,
Hug our doxies on the hay.

"Life is all a varlorum,
We regard not how it goes;
Let them cant about decorum,
Who have characters to lose.

"Here's to budgets, bags and wallets!
Here's to all the wandering trains!
Here's our ragged brats and callets!
One and all cry out, Amen."

With these facts, concerning a class of people with regard to whom little is known, we drop the subject, fervently hoping that they may never be led to migrate into our section of country—where little toleration would be shown their habits of lawlessness and usages of theft.

LOSS OF STEAMER FINANCIER No. 2.—The steamer W. N. Sherman arrived yesterday from Red river, having on board the officers of the steamer Financier No. 2. Her clerk informs us that on Saturday last, at 1½ o'clock, P. M., she struck a snag when two miles above Haley's cut-off, in Red river, and sunk in 3 feet water. The boats and papers were saved. The boat and cargo are a total loss; no lives lost. The boat was insured for $5,500.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

MR. EDITOR—As some of the members of the Alabama Conference were indebted to Bro. Wells, it would be doing a favor to insert this notice in the Advocate. Letters of administration on the estate of Rev. J. W. Wells were granted to the undersigned by the Judge of Probate of Tuscaloosa county, on the 26th February.

All persons having claims against said estate are hereby notified to present the same within the time prescribed by law, or they will be barred; and those indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment, and save cost.

E. T. MARTIN, Adminis'r.

TALLADEGA INSTITUTE.—In the published reports of the Alabama Conference for last year, it is stated $5,000 were gotten for the Talladega Institute. It should have been $5,000 in notes, $3,250 conditional subscription and otherwise—making $8,250 which I considered available.

J. S. LANE, Agent for 1855.

DEMOPOLIS DISTRICT—Second Quarter:
March 29 and 30, Demopolis.
April 5 and 6, McKinley and Bethlehem.
April 12 and 13, Lower Peach Tree.
April 19 and 20, Butler.
April 26 and 27, Union Town.
May 3 and 4, Union Town Circuit.
May 10 and 11, Dayton.
May 17 and 18, Chootaw.
May 24 and 25, Spinghill.
May 31 and June 1, Linden.
June 7 and 8, Gaston and Gaston Col'd Miss.
June 14 and 15, Dayton Colored Mission.

2t JAS. A. HEARD, P. E.

☞ In the minutes of the Alabama Conference some of the Deacons of the fourth year are classed with those of the third year, a note of explanation by the Secretary stating the reason. The names marked are those of several who were prepared for examination, but arrived too late to meet the committee. It was understood that at the next Conference, if they were prepared on the studies of the two years, they would be advanced with their class. Let all, therefore, be prepared accordingly.

Spring Hill, Ala. J. B. COTTRELL.

Charleston and Nashville Advocates please copy. 2t

WANTED—A situation as teacher by a young man prepared to teach Latin, Greek, and the higher mathematics. Satisfactory references given. Apply to Prof. W. H. N. Magruder, President of Collegiate Institute, at Baton Rouge, La. m22 tf

MARRIAGES.

In Gainsville, Ala., on the 10th March, by Rev. T. P. Crymes, Rev. JOHN M. HITT, of Greene county, to Miss MARY A. SUBEMAN, of Gainsville, Ala.

DEATHS.

THE REV. J. W. WELLS.

The following preamble and resolutions, in memory of Rev. James W. Wells, were unanimously adopted by a rising vote of the First Quarterly Meeting Conference for Tuscaloosa Circuit, held at Centre Church on the 3d day of February, 1856:

WHEREAS, In the providence of God, our beloved pastor, Rev. JAMES W. WELLS, has been removed from us to his reward in heaven, just as he was entering upon his ministerial labors among us for the present year. Therefore—

Resolved, We, the members of the Quarterly Meeting Conference for Tuscaloosa Circuit, assembled in Conference capacity, do lament the loss to us and our Circuit of our much esteemed, loved and worthy Brother Wells.

Resolved, That we bow with reverence to the mysterious providence of God, who has removed from amongst us our beloved pastor, to be laid in the cold grave, there to remain until the general resurrection when he shall again be reanimated into life eternal, at the right hand of God.

Resolved, That while we do mourn his loss to us as a friend and pastor, we sorrow not as those who have no hope; for we are satisfied, from his holy and devoted life as a minister of the New Testament, that our loss is his eternal gain.

Resolved, that we most cordially offer our sympathies to the bereaved widow and tender orphan of our deceased brother, and we would point them to the Friend of the widow and orphan for consolation—to Him who has promised he will never leave nor forsake them.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Quarterly Conference, and that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased, and that the New Orleans Christian Advocate be requested to publish the same.

A. S. HAMILTON, Sec'y.

Tuscaloosa county, March 8, 1856.

At the Quarterly Conference held for Harpersville Circuit, Alabama Conference, at Good Hope, March 8, 1856, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to call from the walks of men to the realities of eternity our beloved brother and friend, M. J. HORTON, lately deceased. The Quarterly Conference, in respect to his memory, adopt the following resolutions:

1. That we submit with humility and obedience to this dispensation of an all-wise and merciful Providence.

2. That in the death of Brother Horton we have lost a valuable leader and steward in our church.

3. That we condole with the family and friends of the deceased in this heavy and sad bereavement.

4. That we bear testimony to the distant friends and acquaintances of the deceased that the religion which he professed in life fully sustained him in death.

5. That these proceedings be furnished the family of the deceased, be published in the Advocate, and spread upon the records of this circuit.

CHARLES STREDER, P. E.

J. M. MCCLANAHAN, Secretary.

Centenary Institute----Female Dep't.

SUMMERFIELD, ALABAMA.

Rev. A. H. MITCHELL, D. D. President and Professor of Mental and Moral Sciences.
Rev. B. F. LARRABEE, M. A., Professor of Mathematics and Aaron.
W. C. L. RICHARDSON, M. A., Professor of the Natural Sciences.
J. F. GLEYSEN, Professor of Music and Modern Languages.
Mrs. L. P. LARRABEE, Teacher of Music.
Mrs. M. A. GLEYSEN, Teacher of Drawing, Painting, etc
Mrs. M. COLEMAN, Teacher of Preparatory Class.
Mrs. M. A. CEARISE, Matron.

The graduating exercises a take place on the first Wednesday in July. The examination commences on the previous Friday.

March 29, 1856. m29 3m.

In Gibson county, Mississippi, on the 11th inst., a man named Cribbs was shot, and instantly killed by his son, who fled and had not been arrested at last accounts. The parties were drunk at the time of the occurrence.

Donald McKay, the great ship-builder, has requested Mrs. Barrow to sit for a photograph, in the costume worn at the Boston Theatre, in which she delivered a portion of Longfellow's beautiful poem, that it may be taken as a model for the figure head of the new ship Minnehaha, which he is building.

THE CURRENT WEEK.

Like a bright fire which, when lit for the first period, burns slowly with much crackling and discomfort; then blazes up in great pyrotechnical glory; then emits heat and warmth and comfort from its glowing bosom; the year increases towards its perihelium and period of perfection. Now the whole manufactory of nature has drawn forth its most cunning medicaments; its most potent juices and alembics; is doing a gigantic carpentry upon the oak; is painting more softly than Correggio upon the green sward and tinting the heavens like Titian or Paul Farnese. We are standing a week's remove from our last halt, older by so many days; better or worse; wiser or as stupid as then.

Monday, March 24. St. Irenæus, of Sirmium, A. D., 301; St. Simon, an infant martyr, and St. William, of Norwich. The chrysopleaum oppositifolium, or golden saxifrage, dedicated to St. Irenæus, is the plant.

In 1580, the first bombs ever used were thrown upon the town of Wachtendonck, in Guelderland. The invention is commonly attributed to Cuelen, Bishop of Munster. In 1720, Daniel Whithy, a learned commentator on the New Testament, died. He was born at Rushden, in Northamptonshire, in 1638, and was eminent for ability and honesty.

Tuesday, March 25. The Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary. St. Cammin, Abbot, A. D. 653. The marigold, calendula officinalis, dedicated to the event.

The Roman Catholic festival of the Annunciation is commonly called Lady Day, in England, which is an abridgement of the old phrase "Our Lady's Day." This is a gaudy day in the Romish Church, and Hail Mary! resounds in all the masses. The ceremonies that attend it are numerous and highly impressive.

In England, the day is more immediately remembered as the first quarter-day in the year.

In 1838, parochial charity schools were established for the education of the children of poor persons in London and its vicinity.

In 1809, Anna Seward, the friend of Dr. Darwin and authoress of a life of him, died in the Bishop's palace, at Litchfield. She was a poetess of some ease and nicility.

In 1846, General Taylor having reached Point Isabel, a harbor on the Texas coast nearest the mouth of the Rio Grande, proceeded with a portion of his stores to a position opposite Matamoras, where he entrenched himself and constructed a fort which he called Fort Brown, after its intended commander.

Wednesday, March 26. St. Ludger, Bishop of Munster, 809; St. Braulio, Bishop of Saragossa, 646. The lurid henbane—hyoscyamus scopolia—is the plant dedicated to the latter saint.

The renowned inhabitants of Nieuw-Amsterdame, now New-York, provoked by the grunting and thrift of their Connecticut neighbors, determined to exterminate them—or, at least, so far destroy their influence with the Indians that they could not enjoy so great a monopoly as before in the trade of peltry. Irving describes them assembling, at this time, full of ire, patriotism, beer and avariciousness, determined to root out their opponents. The celebrated leader was prevented from marching, or riding, by the tenbreeches he wore, and the whole motley army, after imitating the English King, who,

——"with twice three thousand men,
Marched up the hill, and then—returned to their good vrows, their beer, pipes and tobacco.
Marched down again"——

In 1829, the waters of the Bay of Fundy, which rise to an enormous height at every full tide, rose nearly one hundred feet, and overflowed the whole adjacent country, destroying a considerable amount of property.

Thursday, March 27.—St. John of Egypt, a hermit, 394, and St. Rupert, or Ruder, Bishop of Saltzbourg, are the Saints, and the sweet-scented jonquil, dedicated to the former, is the flower.

St. John was a wonderful saint, and every way the equal of those Eastern anchorites, sung by Southey He walled himself up at the top of a rock, where he remained from the fortieth to the ninetieth year of his age, and, says Butler, "drew the admiration of the whole world on him by the lustre of his miracles and the fame of his predictions."

In 1801, the peace of Amiens, between France and England, was signed in France—which ranks as highly among treaties as Fontenoy and Waterloo do among battles. By it the peace of Europe was temporarily re-established, and the nations so long wasted, with war had a space to recruit.

Friday, March 28.—Three martyrs, Priscus, Malchus and Alexander, 250; St. Sixtus, 3d; and St. Gontram, a king and confessor. The doronicum plantagineum, dedicated to Priscus, is the flower.

In 1380, on this day, gunpowder was first used in Europe by the Venetians against the Genoese. The Germans give the discovery to Berthold Schwartz, but Roger Bacon, who died in 1278, certainly knew concerning it.

In 1754, there was a famous guerilla fight among some of the mountain-fastnesses of Spain—in which a celebrated matador, named Juan, who had been searched for by the alguazils everywhere, was taken captive, condemned and executed. His band was unlike that of Robin Hood and Little John, of Sherwood Forest, in that it added murder to robbery and intimidated the peasantry rather than aided them. Juan had been a spy in the Carlist service before establishing his own wild monarchy.

In 1801, Sir Ralph Abercrombie died in Egypt. He received his death wound on the 21st, during his memorable victory over the French, at Alexandria.

In 1802, Pallas, a new planet, was discovered by Dr. Olbas, of Bremen, in Germany.

Saturday, March 29—Sts. Jonas and Eustachius, St. Gundleus and St. Mark, are the day's patrons—The Oxslip, dedicated to St. Eustachius; and the fametery to St. Jonas, are put down in the Floral Directory.

In 1815, Raymond Lulle, the most celebrated chemist and alchemist of his period, was stoned to death by the natives of Mauritania, whither he had gone on a mission at the age of eighty. He had his attention directed to chemistry by the power of love. The old chronicle says: "A lady, very handsome, with whom he was in love, refused to marry him. One day when he renewed his solicitations, she shewed her bosom inflamed with a cancer. Lulie departed, resolved to conquer both the cancer and the lady. He had the good fortune to cure and marry her. After her death he attached himself to the church.

In 1461, the conflict of the York and Lancaster factions was decided by a battle near York. It commenced in a snow-storm, was contested until the afternoon, and ended in favor of York. Thirty-eight thousand men were left dead on the field, of whom twenty-eight were Lancastrians.

Sunday, March 30.—St. John Climachus, St. Zozimas, St. Regulus, Rough Caramena, dedicated to the former, and the lesser daffodil, dedicated to St. Zozimus, are the plants of the day.

St. John Climachus was cavernel as a hermit in a rock near Mount Sinai, until he was seventy-five. One of the citizens of an adjoining place approached, wishing to become a saint, too. St. John kept him standing at the door eight years, on probation. It is related of St. Alcin, that he once listened to a woman who had committed so dread a sin that she dared only hint at it verbally. So she wrote it down and gave it him. St. John died, and the woman dreaded lest her paper should fall into less conscientious hands. She accordingly besieged him with prayers to come forth and tell what he had done with the previous paper. St. John had no rest, and at last came forth with a bishop on each side of him, and shew the woman the paper on which she had written with her writhg marked out, and in its place was plainly written, "all thy sins are forgiven, and put away by the prayer of St. John, thy servant."

RED RIVER ITEMS.—The Shreveport Gazette, of the 22d, states that the roads in that section are almost impassable from mud and water. The river was at a stand, and had fallen above Fulton. The Gazette says:

It is distressing to hear of the condition of planters. Many have planted their corn, but it is believed that they will have to do all their work over again. Those who are not so forward, with their crops are better off, as they have saved labor and grain.

The same paper publishes the particulars of the suicide of Dr. Wm. Beach, who poisoned himself on Wednesday last. He purchased a vial of morphine in Shreveport, went to a cabin some distance out on the line of the railroad, and swallowed a large quantity of the poison, dying soon afterwards. It was supposed that his intellect had been affected by dissipation.

Magnetic Telegraph.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

BY THE NATIONAL LINE.

NEW YORK, March 24.—Straight State Flour, $7 75; Ohio, $7 81; Southern Flour, $8 to $8 12; Mess Pork, $15 00; Whisky, 29c.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Flour State, $6 87½ to $7 25; Ohio, $7 31; Southern, $7 68; Mess Pork, $15 75; Lard, 10c; Whisky, 28½c.

Cincinnati Markets.

CINCINNATI, March 21. Flour, $5 60 to $5 75; Mess Pork, $14; Whisky, 20c.

CINCINNATI, March 25.—Flour, $5 75 to $6 00; Whisky, 19½ to 20c; Molasses, 42c; Sugar, 8½ to 8¾c; Coffee, 12½ to 13c.

River Intelligence.

LOUISVILLE, March 24.—The river is rising, with six feet three inches in the Canal. The weather is clear but very windy.

VICKSBURG, March 24. The T. C. Twichell passed down at 9 o'clock this morning, and the Southern Belle at 3 P. M.

Kansas Meeting.

Pursuant to a call upon those "friendly to the Southern Colonization of Kansas," a meeting was held on the 25th inst., in the St. Charles Hotel.

Hon. Isaac E. Morse was called to the chair and V. H. Ivy, Esq., appointed Secretary.

The Chairman briefly explained the objects of the meeting to sustain the rights and interests of the South in Kansas against the encroachments of the North, and to consult upon the propriety of organizing a Kansas Aid Society in this city and State.

Mr. J. D. B. DeBow then offered the following preamble and resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, the people of Kansas Territory have organized a government favorable to the institution of slavery, which is now threatened by combinations among the abolitionists of the North and the Northwest—be it therefore

1. Resolved, That our citizens have the right to emigrate to and reside in Kansas or any other Federal Territory, and to take with them such property as is recognized by the Constitution of this State and of the United States.

2. Resolved, That the slave institution is one of the political constituencies of this Confederacy, and an element under the sovereignty of each slave State, and that any attempt to destroy it, either by the constant and through the legitimate action of those who have its legal control, is alike moral and political treachery to the system of this Union.

3. Resolved, Therefore, that we of these resolved truths, that it is criminal and unjust in a people, surrounded by emigration from all parts of the world, to go to Kansas, with a false and fraudulent purpose of becoming inhabitants thereof, etc.

4. Resolved, That while we do not claim that either the State, or any subordinate official authority, or any armed military organization, should as such interfere in the domestic affairs of Kansas, we shall voluntarily, as private individuals, furnish all necessary facilities within our lawful spheres of action, which may be needed by or useful to those of our fellow citizens who are proper persons and may desire to emigrate to Kansas, with or without property.

5. Resolved, That there be appointed by this meeting, a permanent Executive Committee, consisting of nine persons, with power to add to number of keeping up its numbers, one five of whom shall be a quorum;—of making by-laws and regulations, and of appointing its appropriate officers, and that said committee be requested to open subscription lists in New Orleans and invite them from the several parishes, and appropriate such amounts as may be contributed in aid of legitimate emigrants from our own or other slaveholding States, seeking residence in Kansas, with the powers of the city, of the amount received and the manner of its disposal.

6. Resolved, That similar Associations be recommended throughout the State.

The Chairman, by consent of the meeting, deferred for the present the appointment of the Executive Committee provided for in the resolutions, and Gen. Felix Houston offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Kansas Pioneer, edited by C. E. Hazard, at Kickapoo City, K. T., and published at $2 per annum, has nobly defended the cause of the South and of the Constitution in that Territory, and deserves the hearty support and encouragement of the Southern people.

On motion, the Chairman, Secretary and Messrs. Mertens and DeBow, were appointed on the Executive Committee, and the meeting then adjourned.

LATER FROM MEXICO AND TEXAS.

LATER FROM MEXICO.—The steamship Texas, Capt. Forbes, from Vera Cruz, 22d, arrived at a late hour Tuesday night.

We have received by her a file of Vera Cruz papers up to the 21st, but nothing from the capital.

The operations attending the revolution do not appear to be very active. In a leading article, lamenting the misfortunes that have befallen the country from anarchy and faction, El Veracruzano states that the result of the campaign against the rebels had thus far been satisfactory, and that Puebla had probably, by that time, fallen into the hands of the President, an event which was expected to bring about an immediate peace. A letter, however, of a later date (17th) from Huamantla, states that Haro y Tamariz still held possession of Puebla, but that he was completely hemmed in, his supplies cut off and his men greatly suffering from want of water. A steady fire of artillery upon the plaza and the town was kept up during the day and at intervals through the night. The Government forces were constantly being reinforced from the neighboring country. It was also said that Haro had made propositions to treat, but they were returned as inadmissible.

President Comonfort has issued a decree creating Board of Directors and a charter for a railroad from Vera Cruz to the city of Mexico, via the plains of Apam and Puebla.

We find nothing further of note in the papers before us.

FROM TEXAS.—The steamship Perseverance, Capt. Shephard, arrived last night from Galveston.

The Houston Telegraph states that the Railroad is now completed six miles from the city, and the cars are making trips.

At the last term of the District Court in New Braunsfels, three persons were convicted of murder in the second degree and sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary for nine years each. These persons, strange and shocking to relate—a woman, her daughter and son-in-law—were charged with killing the husband, father, and father-in-law. The testimony was mainly circumstantial, but of the most convincing character.

The Central Texan states that a gentleman named Isaac Pipkin died at the residence of James Bennett, five miles from Anderson, on the 11th inst., of exposure to cold and wet. He was on his way to a new home he had purchased on the Brazos, and is supposed to have a brother living in New Orleans. He left a considerable amount of property, which will be taken care of until called for by some one entitled to receive it.

We learn from the San Antonio Herald of the 15th, that a lieutenant and twenty dragoons from Fort Mason, had a fight a few days ago on the Guadaloupe with a party of Indians. They killed three, wounded several and captured all their effects together with several horses. Among the plunder were found a large number of papers, among which was a note for £1,000 sterling, a deed for three hundred and twenty acres of land, with $1,000 paid thereon, dated in February last, and a blank book containing the owner's name, and the date of his leaving a town on the Mississippi.

FROM KANSAS.—The St. Louis Democrat of the 18th publishes the proceedings of the free-soil Legislature of Kansas on the 8th inst., from which we extract the following:

The House adjourned until four o'clock, A. M., at which time the joint convention was called to order by the President of the Senate. The roll was called and fifty-six members responded as their names were called. On the first ballot A. H. Reeder received 38 votes—a majority of all the votes cast—was declared elected to the U. S. Senate, from the State of Kansas. The other eighteen votes were divided between Lane, Parrott, Schuyler and others. On motion of Mr. Adams, Andrew H. Reeder was declared elected by the unanimous consent of the convention. On the second ballot James H. Lane received thirty-eight votes, and was declared elected to the U. S. Senate.

THE CALAMITY ON THE DELAWARE.—The loss of life by the burning of the Camden and Philadelphia ferry boat turns out to have been much greater than was supposed. The Ledger of the 18th states that vigorous search was being made for the bodies, and publishes a list of names of those recovered amounting to 19; it also publishes the names of 29 who are still missing. The bodies were taken to the Station House as fast as recovered, and the Ledger says:

As each body was brought in, the friends of the missing crowded around, anxious to learn whether the lifeless corpse was that of the object of their anguish, and when the remains were recognized, the lamentations were painful in the extreme. The bodies, with the weeping relatives of the dead and the missing ones, made up a picture that wrung the stoutest hearts, and the like of which we hope never to be compelled to witness again.

Females in assembling habiliments are increasing in New York. A young lady genteelly dressed in pantaloons, frock coat, etc., was arrested in that city on the 17th. She declared she was a man, but in default of proof thereof, was taken to the calaboose.

Finally she confessed her sex, named her place of residence and was sent home.

Acts of the Legislature.

We have received a copy of the list of all the acts, etc., which passed the Legislature of the State at the late session. They are 176 in number; of which the greater number are local. The following is a list of such of them as are of a general character, or which relate to this parish or that of Jefferson:

An act to provide for the emancipation of minors, over the age of eighteen.

A joint resolution authorizing the State Printer to make the official publication of the Journal and Reports of debates, in both Houses, in a newspaper printed in Baton Rouge.

An act relative to appeals in contested election cases.

An act ceding to the United States of America jurisdiction over certain lands and appurtenances in the city of New Orleans, and for other purposes therein mentioned.

An address removing from office Joseph Hutty, Sheriff of the parish of Orleans.

An act concerning coroners in the city of New Orleans.

An act relative to juries in the parish of Jefferson.

An act to provide the manner of paying jurors in the parish of Jefferson.

Joint resolution in relation to the defence and protection of our entire Gulf coast, in the State of Louisiana.

An act relative to the salary of the Superintendent of Public Education.

An act relative to public works and improvements in the village of the parish of Jefferson.

An act to incorporate the New Orleans and Ohio Telegraph lessees.

An act granting certain powers to the Police Jury of Orleans, on the right bank of the Mississippi river, to levy taxes for improvements.

An act to provide for the payment of the debts of the city of Jefferson.

An act supplementary to an act entitled an act to provide for the expropriation of lands for railroads and other works of public utility, approved March 18, 1852.

Resolution relative to the arms and munitions of war belonging to the State, and the muster of the militia.

An act to limit and equalize municipal taxation in the city of New Orleans.

An act to amend and reenact article two hundred and fourteen of the Code of Practice.

An act authorizing the Governor to appoint a Superintendent of Public Education, in certain cases.

An act authorizing the Governor to fill vacancies in the office of Secretary of State, in certain cases.

An act authorizing the Governor to appoint an Attorney General, in certain cases.

An act authorizing the Governor to appoint a State Treasurer, in certain cases.

An act in relation to the printing of official reports and documents.

Joint resolution instructing Senators and requesting Representatives to oppose the extension of patents.

An act to provide for the relief of the State Seminary of learning.

An act to amend certain acts entitled an act to incorporate the city of Jefferson, approved March 9th, 1850, and the act amending the same, approved March 4th, 1853.

An act to provide for the payment of the debts of the Penitentiary.

An act to repeal the 65th section of an act entitled an act to provide a revenue, and the manner of collecting the same, approved March 15th, 1855.

An act to amend the charter of the incorporation of the Church of St. Louis, of New Orleans, approved March 17th, 1846, and all acts passed subsequent thereto and mandatory thereof.

An act to authorize the corporation of the city of New Orleans to tax real and personal property.

An act entitled an act to incorporate the Jackson Fire Company No. 18, of the city of New Orleans.

An act for the relief of Robinson Penniger and Martin, of Algiers.

An act to amend an act to consolidate the city of New Orleans, and to provide for the Government of the city and the administration of the affairs thereof.

An act to amend an act entitled an act relative to the General Assembly, approved March 15th, 1853, as an act to amend and reenact the 20th section of an act entitled an act relative to District Courts, approved March 15th, 1855.

An act relative to the rate of interest.

An act regulating and defining the duties of Harbor Master.

An act for the temporary relief of the State Treasury.

An act making appropriations for the expenses of the State for the year 1856.

An act relative to Parish Treasurers.

Joint resolution authorizing the Jackson Monument Association to pay Clark Mills, the artist, $5,000.

Joint resolution instructing the State Engineer to report to the Legislature at its next session a system of internal improvements.

An act to amend an act entitled an act relative to elections, approved March 13th, 1855.

DISCOVERY OF A DIAMOND MINE IN LOUISIANA.—The West Baton Rouge Sugar Planter publishes the following letter from the Parish of Iberville, and says that the statement comes from reliable parties:

NEW RIVER, March 17, 1856.

Mr. Editor:—About a fortnight since, a bird about the size of a large turkey and color of a guinea-fowl, was killed in this neighborhood by Mr. Francis Gazel, who extracted from the gizzard and craw of the same upwards of nine hundred diamonds, twenty-seven of the smallest of which he disposed of in New Orleans for $100. The remainder, now in his possession, are estimated at $15,000.

* * * *

This was evidently a foreign fowl, and is supposed to have been blown from its native shore by a storm, and was wending its way across our continent to the Gulf of Mexico when dispatched. J. S. G.

The same paper has the following paragraph:

A gentleman from Iberville informed us that nearly all the cane planted in that parish since the late severe cold spell of weather, was rotting in the ground. The heavy rains has continued so long they were compelled to plant in mud-and-water, hence the destruction mentioned.

Local Intelligence.

MORTUARY.—The interments in the city cemeteries for the week ending Sunday morning, numbered 71.

HE IS DEAD.—Napoleon is dead; not the illustrious nephew of his uncle," but the poor old quasi-mulatto who so long guarded Charity Hospital, at night, in the belief that he was appointed of Heaven to perform the task, and whose militia by beating, as he paced ceaselessly to and fro, woo for him the angel title above named. He died in the hospital, after an illness of three days." Strange and romantic is that madness which impels its victim to lavish spirit-like, absurd traditions of religion or of charity. They always excite emotions of respect and pity when living, and gladness rather than regret when they depart for the shadow-land; for the feeling is instinctive that such creatures have nothing to fear in the hereafter. The "old Guardian of the Cathedral" still provided prays about the Mecca of his many years' devotion. Within a few years past, his hair and beard have become a little longer, a little thinner, and a little whiter, and he body a little more bent; but the debt of his soul for heaven's grace, and the anxiety of his brain for the solutions of his impossible mathematical problems, are as intense and as short of satisfaction as ever. He looks as if his travail were nearly at an end; and when he shall have followed "Napoleon" to the grave, his history will be a rare theme for any poetic or fanciful pen that may be able to command the incidents of his sad romantic life.

SUPREME COURT DECISIONS.—Monday, March 24.

Thos. Medley & Co., appellants, vs. John S. Hughes, appellee—Appeal from Fifth District Court of New Orleans—Judgment affirmed. Buchanan, J.

Rachel Goldsmith, appellee, vs. Hampden Green, appellant—Sixth District Court of New Orleans—Judgment reversed. Voorhies, J.

Thomas McFarlane, appellee, vs. City of New Orleans, appellant—Fifth District Court of New Orleans—Judgment affirmed. Voorhies, J.

William H. Buswell, appellee, vs. James McKay, appellant—Fourth District Court of New Orleans—Judgment reversed. Spofford, J.

W. A. P. Bald, appellee, vs. L. Millandon, appellant—Fourth District Court of New Orleans—Judgment affirmed. Voorhies, J.

John Williamson, appellant, vs. McRae, Dolfinan & Co., appellees—Fourth District Court of New Orleans—Judgment affirmed. Spofford, J.

John L. Holly et als. vs. Ferd. Kennett & Co., appellees—Allen & Nolan, warrantors, appellants. Fourth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment affirmed. Voorhies, J.

Mrs. E. J. McDaniel, appellee, vs. J. M. Wilson, appellant. Fifth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment affirmed. Lea, J.

Wesley & Forman, appellants, vs. T. O. Sully, appellee. Fifth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment affirmed. Merrick, C. J.

Wm. Willeland, appellant, vs. Paul Toulane and C. M. Gaudry, appellees. Fifth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment part reversed and part affirmed. Buchanan, J.

Mrs. Jane Gaudry, appellee, vs. Charles Labargrue, Jr., appellant. Fourth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment reversed. Lea, J.

Widow Balthazar Saulet, tutrix, et als, appellees, vs. Edward Gutthell, appellant. Sixth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment affirmed. Buchanan, J.

John Culberson, receiver, appellee, vs. John Hall, appellant. Fifth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment affirmed.—Merrick, C. J.

Paul Juge, Jr. & Co., appellees, vs. Rumsy & Platt, appellees; Jacob Mebele, appellant. Second District Court of New Orleans. Judgment affirmed. Voorhies, J.

City of New Orleans, appellee, vs. Estate of J. Wightman Sandels, appellant. Fifth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment affirmed. Voorhies, J.

City of New Orleans, appellee, vs. Mrs. A. Lesseps, appellant. Fifth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment affirmed.—Merrick, C. J.

City of New Orleans, appellee, vs. Alfred Rousseau, appellant. Fifth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment affirmed. Voorhies, J.

City of New Orleans, appellee, vs. Francois Lacroix, appellant. Fifth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment affirmed. Spofford, J.

City of New Orleans, appellant, vs. J. A. Lacroix, appellee. Fifth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment affirmed.—Buchanan, J.

Succession of Pierre Pouvfeaud—Jean Arnaud, curator, appellant; E. Tabuteau et al., opponents and appellees. Second District Court of New Orleans. Judgment reversed and cause remanded. Spofford, J.

Sigwald, Lintz & Co., appellants, vs. I. M. Altaway, John A. Mitchell, garnishee, appellee. Sixth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment affirmed. Merrick, C. J.

David Rose, appellee, vs. Edward Sparrow, curator, et als, appellants. Ninth District Court of Concordia. Judgment reversed. Lea, J.

A. M. Johnston & Co., appellees, vs. F. H. Pomroy & Co., appellants. Fourth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment affirmed. Spofford, J.

Rachel Goldsmith, appellee, vs. James Wilde, appellant. Second district Court of New Orleans. Judgment reversed. Spofford, J.

H. F. Hamilton, appellee, vs. H. F. Wade, appellant. Oath to be taken upon the plaintiff to show cause why the transcript of appeal should not be dismissed. Rule discharged at cost of appellant. Merrick, C. J.

Matthews, Finley & Co., appellees, vs. City of New Orleans, appellant. Fourth District Court of New Orleans. Judgment affirmed. Merrick, C. J.

The Beauties of Creation.

BY JOHN MONTGOMERY.

Ours is a lovely world! how fair
Thy beauties, even on earth, appear!
The seasons in their courses fall;
And bring successive joys: the sun,
The earth, the sky are full of Thee.
Benignant, glorious Lord of all!

There's beauty in the break of day;
There's glory in the noon-tide ray;
There's sweetness in the twilight shades;
Magnificence in night: Thy lore
Arched the grand heaven of blue above,
And fill our smiling earth pervades.

And if thy glories here be found
Streaming with radiance all around,
What must the Fount of glory be?
In Thee we'll hope: to Thee confide,
Thou mercy's never ebbing tide!
Thou, love's unfathomable sea!

Men, an Aspiration and a Sonnet.

God give us MEN! A time like this demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands!
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men who the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinion and a will;
Men who have honor; men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And damn his treacherous flatteries without winking;
Tall men, sun crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking
For while the rabble, with their thumb-worn creeds,
Their large professions and their little deeds,
Mingle in selfish strife, lo! Freedom weeps
Wrong rules the land, and waiting JUSTICE sleeps.

A DAY WITH ALLIGATORS.

Life in the Philippine Islands.

While seated one morning in the window of the country residence of my friend Don Arturo, an old Spaniard living in the neighborhood of Manilla, conversing with him and his pretty wife on various topics, occasionally sipping a glass of wine, and partaking of some of the rich fruits which were placed in an old-fashioned silver tray at our elbows, we at length began to feel anxious for some scene of more activity.

"I will tell you what we will do to amuse ourselves," cried the Spaniard, suddenly removing his cigar, and glancing up and down the river Pesig, which quietly flowed along within a stone's throw of the house.

"Listen," said I, removing the skin from a golden-colored lime.

"What say you to shooting alligators, my friend? That will be amusement worthy of men who have passed through the trying scenes of the earthquake with unshaken nerves. What say you, shall we go?"

"I'm one condition that we invite my friend Allen to be one of the party."

"Invite him by all means," cried Don Arturo, with warmth. "I will write him a note requesting him to ride over to-night, and start with us in the morning."

"Don't trouble yourself," I answered; "I will ride over myself and ask him."

"A good plan, my friend, and worthy of you. Order the best horse in the stable, and let the servant put the old Spanish saddle upon his back—the one that I use."

This was an act of politeness that I never expected of the Don, as he prized that saddle almost as much as he did his wife.

"I will be back before many hours," I said, as I left the room to dress for my ride.

I found Mr. Allen at home, and received a warm welcome. He was about sitting down to breakfast, and I required no urging to join him. After the meal I made my errand known to Allen, who took some time to consider on the subject, much to my surprise.

"There is more danger than sport in what you propose," Allen said; "but you shall not go alone."

"I do not intend to go alone. Don Arturo is to be one of the party."

"And he will run on the first appearance of danger."

"Da you think so?"

"I know that he will; but I will make one of the party. Stop here until afternoon, and then I'll ride over with you. In the meantime I will get my rifle in order and send it over to the Spaniard's house."

I readily consented to this plan, and spent an agreeable afternoon in listening to his interesting stories of adventures. Before dark we were at the Spaniard's house, and made all preparations for an early start on the next day. At an early hour we retired to rest, after dispatching a servant to hire two large bangos for the transportation of ourselves and provisions to a small lake on the river.

We rose at daybreak, partook of a hearty breakfast, swallowed a few cups of coffee that was strong enough to bear an egg, and then walked to the river banks where the boats were awaiting us. One of the bangos was filled with our tent, blankets and provisions, while the other, which was handsomely decorated, was reserved for ourselves. Four Metis, or half-castes were detailed for each boat, to row or use their long poles, as the state of the river's current permitted.

"The alligador," said Don Arturo, as we shot into the stream, lighting a fresh cigar, and reclining his head upon a bundle of pillows, "is a peculiar animal and requires some skill as a marksman to kill with a rifle shot. This is the season for the females to lay their eggs, so that we shall have plenty of chances to hit them before they take to the water—although I am bound to confess that they are more ferocious now than at any other time of the year."

"Did you ever kill one at a single shot?" asked Allen, imitating the Don's example, and stretching himself at the bottom of the boat.

"No, I think not," replied the Spaniard, after a moment's hesitation; but I am in hopes to do so before we return."

"Humph!" grunted Charley, raising a bottle of red-colored liquid to his mouth, which had been wrapped in wet flannels to keep cool.

"Pull, rascals!" suddenly shouted the Spaniard, looking towards the oarsmen—"Pull, rascals! and you shall dine off an alligator, if I kill one."

Slingular as it may appear, the promise did not inspire the men with that enthusiasm which one might have expected under such strong temptation. They made a grimace, expressive of disgust—but bent to their oars with cheerfulness; and in a few minutes we shot out the burial-ground by turning an elbow of the river.

We passed numerous small villages, the houses of which were built of bamboo, thatched with leaves of the same tree, and raised from the ground on poles, at an elevation of about five feet. This is done to prevent their being swept away during the rainy season, and also for the purpose of resisting the shocks of earthquakes—flexible supporters yielding as the ground rumbles, and unless the earth opens, the dwellings of the natives are more secure than those of their masters. Frequently, during a slight shock have I seen the huts sway to and fro, like trees in a strong gale, while the occupants preferred remaining indoors to trusting themselves out, well-knowing that if their habitations should fall they would be in no danger of injury, as the materials were too slight to break the back of a respectable-sized lizard.

It was nearly 11 o'clock before Don Arturo gave orders to the natives to pull for the land. We stopped under the shade of large cocoa trees, unloaded the boats, and then, bidding three of the men follow, to carry our ammunition, started for the lake, about a dozen rods distant. The sheet of water was not very large, covering an extent of about fifty acres; but I think that it was the most beautiful spot I ever saw.

The foliage of the trees was rank with the richness of the soil; while all along the borders of the lake bright colored flowers and dense creeping vines were spread from branch to branch, until even the sun could not penetrate with a single ray. Hundreds of birds, with plumage of the most gaudy description, were flattering from tree to tree, too tame to be frightened at our approach; while monkeys, with impudent gestures, and bold, defiant chattering, gathered in groups, and wondered why we should thus invade their domains.

Upon arriving at the lake, we found a large raft, built of bamboo, which had been left by some sportsmen, a few days before, tied to a tree. Upon this we determined to embark, and try our fortune upon the water. The natives were sent back to the boats for paddles, while we proceeded to load our rifles. As soon as they returned, we shoved off, and worked our way slowly along the shore.

"As I am the most experienced alligator hunter," Don Arturo said, "I shall claim the privilege of the first shot and if——"

"There is a chance, then," Charlie said, interrupting the Spaniard, and pointing to what I supposed to be a large log upon the surface of the water.

"By Saint Antonio, but you are right!" the Don said, dropping upon his knees for the purpose of steadying his aim, and trembling with nervous impatience.

"Well," cried Charley, after a moment's pause, "are you not going to fire?"

"In a minute, amigo. Now I think I've got him on a line."

He discharged his rifle, and the

Give me the Hand.

BY FRANCIS A. CARR, OF BOSTON.

Give me the hand that is warm, kind and ready,
Give me the hand that is calm, true and steady,
Give me the hand that will never deceive me,
Give me the grasp that I aye may believe thee.
Soft is the palm of the delicate woman,
Hard is the hand of the rough, sturdy yeoman:
Soft palm or hard hand—it matters not—never,
Give me the grasp that is friendly forever.

Give me the hand that is true as a brother,
Give me the hand that has harmed not another,
Give me the hand that has never forsworn it,
Give me the hand that I aye may adorn it.
Lovely the palm of the fair blue-eyed maiden,
Ugly the hand of the workman abiden;
Lovely or ugly—it matters not—never,
Give me the grasp that is friendly forever.

Give me the grasp that is honest and hearty,
Free as the breeze and unshackled by party;
Let friendship give me the grasp that becomes her,
Close as the twine of the vine of the summer.
Give me the hand that is true as a brother,
Give me the hand that has wrought not another;
Soft palm or hard hand—it matters not—never,
Give me the hand that is friendly forever.

THE DOPPELGANGER.

A Mesmeric Mystery.

Albert Lachner was my particular friend and fellow-student. We studied together at Heidelberg; we lived together; we had no secrets from each other; we called each other by the endearing name of brother. On leaving the university, Albert decided on following the profession of medicine. I was possessed of a moderate competence and a little estate at Ems, on the Lahn; so I devoted myself to the tranquil life of a proprietaire and a book-dreamer. Albert went to reside with a physician, as pupil and assistant, at the little town of Cassel. I established myself in my inheritance.

I was delighted with my house; with my garden, sloping down to the rushy margin of the river; with the view of Ems, the turreted old Kurhaus, the suspension bridge, and, further away, the bridge of boats, and the dark wooded hills, closing in the Bille colony on every side. I planted my garden in the English style; fitted up my library and smoking-room; and furnished one bed-chamber especially for my friend. This room overlooked the water, and a cedar grew up round the window. I placed there a bookcase, and filled it with his favorite books; hung the walls with engravings which I knew he admired, and chose draperies of his favorite color. When all was complete, I wrote to him, and bade him come and spend his summer holiday with me at Ems.

He came; but I found him greatly altered. He was a pale, dark man. Always somewhat taciturn and sickly, he was now paler, more silent, more delicate than ever. He seemed subject to fits of melancholy abstraction, and appeared as if some all-absorbing subject weighed upon his mind—some haunting care, from even which I was excluded.

He had never been gay, it is true; he had never laughed in the Homeric extravagance—never fought a duel at the Hochschule—never been one of the disheveled set of Burschen—never boozed, and quarrelled, and embraced them the next day, while brow as we were! But then, he was constitutionally saturnine for such violent sports; and a humorous, which dated from his early childhood, proved an effectual bar to the practice of all those athletic exercises which became to other men the same as manners and nature. Still, he was genuinely attached; and it cut me to the heart to see him so sad, and not to be permitted to partake of his sorrowful. At first, I thought he had been studying too closely; but this he protested was not the case. Sometimes I fancied that he was in love; but I was soon convinced of my error. He was changed—but how, or why, I found it impossible to discover.

After he had been with me about a week, I chanced one day to allude to the rapid progress that was making everywhere in favor of mesmerism, and added some light words of incredibility as I spoke. To my surprise, he expressed his absolute faith in every department of the science, and defended all its phenomena, even to clairvoyance and mesmeric revelations, with the fervor of a determined believer.

I found his views on the subject more extended than any I had previously heard. To mesmeric influence, he attributed all those spectral appearances, such as ghosts, wraiths, and doppelgangers; all those natural and fortuitous spirits; all those tasteless or family apparitions; all those hauntings and miscellaneous phenomena, which have from the earliest ages occupied the fears, the thoughts, and the inquiries of the human race.

After about three weeks' stay, he left me and returned to his medical studies at Cassel, promising to visit me in the autumn, when the grape-harvest should be in progress. His parting words were earnest and remarkable: "Farewell, Heinrich, mein bruder; farewell till the gathering season. In thought, I shall be often with you!"

He was holding my hands in both his own as he said this, and a peculiar expression flitted across his countenance; the next moment, he had stepped into the diligence, and was gone. Feeling disturbed, yet without knowing why, I made my way slowly back to my cottage. This visit of Albert's had strangely unsettled me, and I found that for some days after his departure, I could not return to the old quiet round of studies which had been my occupation and delight before he came. Somehow our long arguments dwelt unpleasantly upon my mind, and induced a nervous sensation of which I felt ashamed. I had no wish to believe; I struggled against conviction, and the very struggle caused me to think of it the more. At last, the effect wore away; and when my friend had been gone about a fortnight, I returned almost insensibly to my former routine of thought and occupation. Thus the season slowly advanced. Ems became crowded with tourists, attracted thither by the fame of our medicinal springs; and what with frequenting concerts, promenades and gardens, reading, receiving a few friends, occasionally taking part in musical meetings which are so much the fashion here, and entering altogether into a little mere society than had hitherto been my habit, I succeeded in banishing entirely from my mind the doubts and reflections which had so much disturbed me.

One evening, as I was returning homeward from the house of a friend in the town, I experienced a delusion which, to say the least of it, caused me a very disagreeable sensation. I have stated that my cottage was situated on the banks of the river, and was surrounded by a garden. The entrance lay at the other side, by the high road; but I am fond of boating and I had constructed, therefore, a little wicket, with a flight of wooden steps leading down to the water's edge, near which my small rowing-boat lay moored. This evening I came along by the meadows which skirt the stream: the meadows are here and there interrupted by villas and private enclosures. Now, mine was the first, and I could walk from the town to my own garden-fence without once diverging from the river-path. I was musing, and humming to myself some tune of a popular melody, when, all at once, I began thinking of Albert and his theories. This was, I assevrate, the first time he had even entered my mind for at least two days. Thus going along, my arms folded, and my eyes fixed on the ground, I reached the boundaries of my little domain before I knew that I had traversed half the distance. Smiling at my own abstraction, I paused to go round by the entrance, when suddenly, and to my great surprise, I saw my friend standing by the wicket and looking over the river towards the sunset. Astonishment and delight deprived me at first of all power of speech. At last—"Albert," I cried, "this is kind of you. When did you arrive?" He seemed not to hear me, and remained in the same attitude. I repeated the words, and with a similar result. "Albert: look round, man!" Slowly he turned his head, and looked me in the face; and then, oh, horror! even as I was looking at him, he disappeared. He did not fade away; he did not fall: but, in the twinkling of an eye, he was [illegible]. I stood awe-struck. I went into the house, and strove to compose my shattered nerves. Was Albert dead, and were apparitions truths? I dared not think—I dared not ask myself the question. I passed a wretched night; and the next day I was as unsettled as when first he left me.

It was about four days from this time when a circumstance, wholly inexplicable, occurred in my house. I was sitting at breakfast in the library, with a volume of Plato beside me, when my servant entered the room, and courtesied for permission to speak. I looked up, and supposing that she needed money for domestic purposes, I pulled out my purse from my pocket, and saying: "Well, Katrine, what do you want now?" drew forth a florin, and held it towards her.

She courtsied again, and shook her head. "Thank you, master; but it is not that."

Something in the old woman's tone of voice caused me to look up hastily. "What is the matter, Katrine? Has anything throwed you?"

"If you please, master—if it is not a rude question, have—has any one been here, lately?"

"Here?" I repeated. "What do you mean?"

"In the yard, upstairs, master."

I sprang to my feet, and turned as cold as a statue. "The bed has been slept in, master, for the last four nights."

I flew to the door, thrust her aside, and in a moment sprang up to the staircase and into Albert's bedroom; and there, plainly, plainly, I beheld the impression of a heavy body left upon the bed! Yes, there, on the pillow, was the mark where his head had been laid, there the deep groove pressed by his body! It was no deception, this, but a strange, an incomprehensible reality. I groaned aloud, and staggered heavily back.

"It has been like this for four nights, master," said the old woman. "Each morning I have made the bed, thinking, perhaps, that you had been in there to lie down during the day; but this time I thought I would speak to you about it."

"Well, Katrine, make the bed once more: let us give it another trial; and then ——"

I said no more, but rushed away. When all was in order, I returned, bringing with me a basin of fine meal. Plenty of all, I closed and barred the shutters; strewed the floor all round the bed with sand; and locked the chamber-door, and left the key, under some trivial pretext, at the house of a friend in the town. Katrine was witness to all this. That night, I lay awake and restless. Not a sound disturbed the utter silence of the autumn night; not a breath stirred the leaves against my casement.

I rose early the next morning; and by the time Katrine was up and at her work, I returned from Ems with the key. "Come with me, Katrine," I said; "let us see if all be right in Herr Lachner's bedroom."

At the door we paused and looked, half terrified, in each other's faces; then I summoned courage, turned the key and entered. The window shutters, which I had fastened the day before, were wide open—unclosed by no mortal hand; and the daylight streaming in, fell upon the disordered bed—upon footmarks in the sand! Looking attentively at the latter, I saw that the impressions were alternately light and heavy, as if the walker had rested longer upon one foot than the other, like a lame man.

I will not here delay my narrative with an account of the mental anguish which this circumstance caused me; suffice it, that I left that room, locked the door again, and resolved never to reenter it till I had learned the fate of my friend.

The next day I set off for Cassel. The journey was long and fatiguing, and only a portion could be achieved by train. Though I started very early in the morning, it was quite night before the diligence, in which the transit was completed, entered the streets of the town. Faint and weary though I was, I could not delay at the inn to partake of any refreshment, but hired a youth to show me the way to Albert's lodgings, and proceeded at once upon my search. He led me through a labyrinth of narrow, old-fashioned dwellings with projecting stories and a curiously carved doorway. An old man with a lantern answered my summons; and, on my inquiring if Herr Lachner lodged there, desired me to walk up stairs to the third floor.

"Then he is living!" I cried, eagerly.

"Living!" echoed the man, as he held the lantern at the foot of the staircase to light me on my way—"living! Mein Gott, we want no dead lodgers here!"

After the first flight, I found myself in darkness, and went on, feeling my way step by step, and holding by the broad banisters. As I ascended the third flight, the door on the landing suddenly opened, and a voice exclaimed:

"Welcome, Heinrich! Take care; there is a loose plank on the last step but one."

It was Albert, holding a candle in his hand—as well, as real, as substantial as ever. I cleared the remaining interval with a bound, and threw myself into his arms.

"Albert, Albert, my friend and companion, alive and well!"

"Yes, alive," he replied, drawing me into the room and closing the door. "You thought me dead!"

"I did, indeed," said I, half sobbing with joy.—Then glancing round at the blazing hearth—for now the nights were chill—the cheerful lights, and the well-spread supper-table: "Why, Albert," I exclaimed, "you live here like a king."

"Not always thus," he replied with a melancholy smile. "I feed in general a very sparing hach-elor like existence. But it is not often I have a visitor to entertain—and you, my brother, have never before partaken of my hospitality."

"How!" I exclaimed, quite stupified; "you knew that I was coming?"

"Certainly. I have even prepared a bed for you in my own apartment."

I paused for breath, and dropped into a seat.

"And this power, this spiritual knowledge——"

"Is simply the effect of magnetic relation—of what is called rapport."

"Explain yourself."

"Not now, Heinrich. You are exhausted by the mental and bodily excitement which you have this day undergone. Eat, now; eat and rest. After supper, we will talk the subject over."

Wearied as I was, curiosity, and a vague sort of horror which I found it impossible to control, deprived me of appetite, and I rejoiced when, drawing towards the hearth with our meerschaums and Rhine-wine, we resumed the former conversation.

"You are, of course, aware," began my friend, "that in those cases where a mesmeric power has been established by one mind over another, a certain rapport, or intimate spiritual relationship, becomes the mysterious link between those two natures. This rapport does not consist in the mere sleep-producing power; that is but the primary form, the simplest stage of its influence, and, in many instances may be altogether omitted. By this I mean that the mesmerist may, by a supreme act of volition, step at once to the highest power of control over the patient, without traversing the intermediate gradations of somnolency, or even clairvoyance. This highest power lies in the will of the operator, and enables him to present images to the mind of the other, even as they are produced in his own. I cannot better describe my subject than by comparing the mind of the patient to a mirror, which reflects that of the operator as long, as often, and as fully, as he may desire. This rapport I have long sought to establish between us."

"But you have not succeeded."

"Not altogether; neither have my efforts been quite in vain. You have struggled to resist me, and I have felt the opposing power baffling me at every step; yet sometimes I have prevailed, if but for a short time. For instance, during many days after leaving Ems, I left a strong impression on your mind."

"Which I tried to shake off, and did."

"True, but it was a contended point for some days. Let me recall another instance to your memory.—About five days ago, you were suddenly and for some moments, forced to succumb to my influence, although but an instant previous you were completely a free agent."

"At what time in the day was that?" I asked, falteringly.

"About half-past eight o'clock in the evening."

I shuddered, grew deadly faint, and pushed my chair back.

"But where were you, Albert?" I muttered in a half audible voice.

He looked up, surprised at my emotion; then, as if catching the reflex of my agitation from my countenance, he turned ghastly pale, even to his lips, and the drops of cold dew started on his forehead.

"I—was—here," he said, with a slow and labored articulation, that added to my dismay.

"But I saw you—I saw you standing in my garden, just as I was thinking of you, or, rather, just as the thought of you had been forced upon me."

"And did you speak to—to the figure?"

"Twice, without being heard. The third time I cried"——

"'Albert, look round man!'" interrupted my friend, in a hoarse, quick tone.

"The very words! Then you heard me?"

"But when you had spoken them," he continued, without heeding my question—"when you had spoken them—what then?"

"It vanished—how and where, I know not."

Albert covered his face with his hands, and groaned aloud.

"Great God!" he said, feebly, "then I am not mad!"

I was so horror-struck that I remained silent. Presently he raised his head, poured out half a tumbler-full of brandy, drank it at a draught, and then turning his face partly aside, and speaking in a low and preternaturally even tone, related to me the following strange and fearful narrative:

"Dr. K——, under whom I have been studying for the last year here in Cassel, first convinced me of the reality of the mesmeric doctrine; before then I was as hardened a sceptic as yourself. As is frequently the case in these matters, the pupil—being, perhaps, constitutionally inclined more towards those influences—soon penetrated deeper into the paths of mesmeric research than the master. By a rapidity of conviction that seems almost miraculous, I pierced at once to the essence of the doctrine, and, passing from the condition of patient to that of operator, became sensible of great internal power, and of a strength of volition which enabled me to establish the most extraordinary rapports between my patients and myself, even when separated from them by any distance, however considerable. Shortly after the discovery of this new power, I became aware of another and still more singular phenomenon within myself. In order to convey to you a proper idea of what this phenomenon is, I must beg you to analyse with me the ordinary process of memory. Memory is the reproduction or summoning back of past places and events. With some, this mental vision is so vivid as actually to produce the effect of painting the place or thing remembered upon the retina of the eye, so as to present us with all its substantive form, its lights, its colors and its shadows. Such is our so-called memory—who shall say whether it be memory or reality? I had always commanded this faculty in a high degree; indeed, so remarkably, that if I but related a passage from any book, the very page, the printed characters, were spread before my mental vision, and I read from them as from a volume. My recollection was therefore said to be wonderfully faithful, and, as you will remember, I never erred in a single syllable."

Since my recent investigations, this faculty has increased in a very singular manner. I have twice left as though my inner self, my spiritual self, were a distinct body—yet scarcely so much a body as a nervous essence or ether; and as if this second being, in moments of earnest thought, went from me, and visited the people, the places, the objects of external life. Nay," he continued, observing my extreme agitation, "this theory is not wholly new in the history of magnetic phenomena—but it is rare. We call it, psychologically speaking, the power of far-working. But there is another and a far more appalling phase of far-working—that of a visible appearance out of the body—that of being here and elsewhere at the same time—that of becoming, in short, a doppelganger. The irrefragable evidence of this truth I have never dared to doubt, but it has always impressed me with an unparalleled horror. I believed, but I dreaded; yet twice I have for a few moments trembled at the thought that I—I also may be—may be—— O rather, far, far rather would I believe myself deluded, dreaming—even mad! Twice have I felt a consciousness of self-absence—once, a consciousness of self-seeing! All knowledge, all perception was transformed to my spiritual self, while a sort of drowsy numbness and inaction weighed upon my bodily part. The first time was about a fortnight before I visited you at Ems; the second happened five nights since, at the period of which you have spoken. On that second evening, Heinrich"—here his voice trembled audibly—"I left myself in possession of an unusual mesmeric power. I thought of you, and impelled the influence, as it were, from my mind upon yours. This time, I found no resisting force opposed to mine—you yielded, to my dominion—you believed."

"It was so," I murmured faintly.

"At the same time, my brother, I felt the most earnest desire to be once more near you, to hear your voice, to see your frank and friendly face, to be standing again in your pretty garden beside the running river. It was absurd, and I pictured to myself the scene from that spot. Even as I did so, a dullness came over my senses—the picture on my memory grew wider, brighter; I felt the cool breeze from the water; I saw the red sun sinking over the far woods; I heard the vesper-bells ringing from the steeples—in a word, I was spiritually there. Presently I became aware of the approach of something. I knew not what—but a something not of the same nature as myself—something that filled me with a shivering, half compounded of fear and half of pleasure. Then a sound, smothered and strange, as if muffled for the organs of my spiritual sense, seemed to fill the space around—a sound resembling speech, yet reverberating and confused, like distant thunder. I felt paralysed and unable to turn. It came and died away a second time, yet more distinctly. I distinguished words, but not their sense. It came a third time, vibrating, clear, and loud—'Albert look round, man!' Making a terrible effort to overcome the bonds which seemed to hold me, I turned—I saw you! The next moment, a sharp pain wrung me in every limb—there came on total darkness, and I then found myself, without any apparent lapse of time or sensible motion, sitting by yonder willow, where, gazing on the sunset, I had begun to think of you. The sound of your voice yet rang in my ears—the sight of your face was still before me. I shuddered—I tried to think that all had been a dream—I lifted my hands to my brow; they were numbed and heavy. I strove to rise, but a rigid torpor seemed to weigh upon my limbs. You say that I was visibly present in your garden; I know that I was bodily present in this room. Can it be that my worst fears are confirmed—that I possess a double being?"

We were both silent for some moments. At last I told him the circumstances of the bed and of the footmarks on the sand. He was shocked, but scarcely surprised.

"I have been thinking much of you," he said; "and for several successive nights I have dreamed of you and of my stay—nay, even of that very bedroom. Yet I have been conscious of none of these symptoms of far-working. It is true that I have awakened each morning unrefreshed and weary, as if from bodily fatigue; but this I attributed to over-study and constitutional weakness."

"Will you not tell me the particulars of your first experience of this spiritual absence?"

Albert sat pale and silent, as if he heard not. I repeated the question.

"Give me some brandy," he said, "and I will tell you."

I did so. He remained for a few moments looking at the fire before he spoke; at last he proceeded, but in a still lower voice than before. The first time was also in this room; but how much more terrible than the second. I had been reading—reading a metaphysical work upon the nature of the soul—when I experienced, quite suddenly, a sensation of extreme loathing. The book grew dim before my eyes—the room darkened—I appeared to find myself in the streets of the town. Plainly I saw the churches in the gray evening dusk—plainly the hurrying passengers—plainly the faces of many whom I knew. Now it was the market-place—now the bridge—now the well-known street in which I live.—Then I came to the door—it stood wide open to admit me. I passed slowly—slowly up the gloomy staircase—I entered my own room—and there——

He paused—his voice grew husky, and his face assumed a stony, almost distorted appearance.

"And there you saw," I urged—"you saw"——

"Myself!" Myself, sitting in this very chair. Yes, yes—myself gazing on myself! We looked—we looked into each other's eyes—we—we—we"——His voice failed—the hand holding the wine-glass grew stiff, and the brittle vessel fell upon the hearth, and was shattered into a thousand fragments.

"Albert! Albert!" I shrieked, "look up! O, heavens! what shall I do?"

I hung frantically over him—I seized his hands in mine; they were cold as marble. Suddenly, as if by a last spasmodic effort, he turned his head in the direction of the door, and looked earnestly forward. The power of speech was gone, but his eyes glared with a light that was more vivid than that of life. Struck with an appalling idea, I followed the course of his gaze. Hark! a dull, dull sound—measured, distinct and slow, as if of feet ascending. My blood froze. I could not remove my eyes from the doorway: I could not breathe. Nearer and nearer came the steps—alternately light and heavy, light and heavy, as the tread of a living man. Nearer and nearer—across the landing—upon the very threshold of the chamber. A sudden full beside me, a crash, a darkness!—Albert had slipped from his chair to the floor, dragging the table in his fall, and extinguishing the lights beneath the debris of the accident.

Forgetting instantly everything, but the danger of my friend, I flew to the bell and rang violently for help. The vehemence of my cries, and the startling energy of the appeal in the midnight silence of the house, roused every creature there; and in less time than it takes to relate, the room was filled with a crowd of anxious and terrified lodgers, some just roused from sleep, and others called from their studies, with their reading-lamps in their hands.

The first thing was to rescue Albert from where he lay, beneath the weight of the fallen table—to throw cold water on his face and hands, to loosen his neckcloth, to open the windows for the fresh night air.

"It is of no use," said a young man, holding his head up and examining his eyes. "I am a surgeon; I live in this house. Your friend is dead."

"Dead!" I echoed, sinking upon a chair. "No, no—not dead. He was—he was subject to this."

"No doubt," replied the surgeon: "it is probably his third attack."

"Yes, yes—I know it is. Is there no hope?"

He shook his head and turned away.

"What has been the cause of his death?" asked a bystander in an awe-struck whisper.

"Catalepsy."

A DEATH BELL.—A story is told of the casting of the bell for the church of St. Magdalen, Breslau—When the metal was ready to pour into the mould, the chief founder went to dinner, and forbade his apprentice, under penalty of death, to touch the vent by which the metal was conveyed. The youth, curious to see the operation, disobeyed orders, and the whole of the metal ran into the mould, and the enraged master, returning from his meal, slew him on the spot. On breaking away the mould, he found he had been too hasty, for the bell was cast as perfect as possible. When it was hung in its place, the master had been sentenced to death by the sword for the murder of his apprentice, and he entreated the authorities that he might be allowed to hear it once before he died. His petition was granted, and the bell has since been rung at every execution.

TENACITY OF LIFE IN A TORTOISE.—A water tortoise in the possession of Mr. James G. Slade, of Woburn, Mass., an amateur Zoologist, has just died, after living in water two years and six months without food. It is believed that this exceeds very much any known instance of this reptile's wonderful tenacity of life. Redi, a distinguished Italian physician, kept one fasting eighteen months; and a land tortoise, in which he had removed its entire brain, lived and was active more than six months afterwards. It seems that this lowly animal, enclosed in a strong suit of armor, in which it ordinarily lives above a century, is no less dilatory in the process of dying than in its motions, which have passed into a proverb.—[Boston Trav.

QUACKERY.—The statistical returns of Providence, R. I., show that two patent medicine establishments in that city render the enormous product of 1,000 barrels and 432,000 bottles of medicine to the value of $700,000.

A writer in one of the Western papers on School Discipline, says: "Without a liberal use of the rod, it is impossible to make boys smart."

In olden time, unmarried women used to wear a scarlet petticoat during leap year. If they showed the edge of this garment to any man, he was bound to marry them; but could buy himself off by presenting the lady with a new gown—a cheap alternative.

For men to resolve to be of no religion, till all are agreed in one, is just as wise and rational as if they should determine not to go to dinner till all the clocks in town struck twelve together.

THE AVARICIOUS MAN.—Four more truthful lines than the following, are rarely written:

"That man may breathe, but never lives,
Who much receives, but nothing gives—
Whom none can love, whom none can thank,
Creation's blot, creation's blank."

BOASTING.—Whenever you hear a man boasting often of the riches or the power of his ancestors, you may be pretty certain that he possesses but little merit himself.

It is related of Johnson—"rare Ben Johnson"—that going home in his wagon, one hot day, he fell asleep. Some young scamp, passing that way, unhitched his nag, and sending the poor beast a running, drew the wagon to the fence. After a time, Ben awakes. He wonders, and, wondering, exclaims: "Am I Ben Johnson, or am I not? If I am Ben Johnson I have lost a horse: if I am not, Ben Johnson I have found a cart."

Doctor Fordyce sometimes drank a good deal at dinner. He was summoned one evening to see a lady when he was more than half-seas over, and conscious that he was so. Feeling her pulse, and finding himself unable to count its beats, he muttered, "drunk, by ——!" Next morning, recollecting the circumstance, he was greatly vexed; and just as he was thinking what explanation of his behavior he should offer to the lady, a letter from her was put into his hand. "She too well knew," said the letter, "that he had discovered the unfortunate condition in which she was when he last visited her; and she entreated him to keep the matter secret, in consideration of the inclosed" (a hundred pound bank note.)

We agree with the editor of the Nashville Gazette when he says "a man that has a soul worth a sixpence must expect to have enemies. It is utterly impossible for the best of men to please the whole world, and the sooner this is understood, and a position taken in view of the fact, the better. Do right, though you have enemies. You cannot escape them by doing wrong; and it is little gain to barter away your honor and integrity, and divest yourself of moral courage to gain what? Nothing. Better abide by the truth frown down all opposition, and rejoice in the feeling which must inspire a free and independent man."

☞ The best evidence that can be adduced in favor of the efficaciousness of Hoofland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, is the unprecedented demand for them from all parts of the Union; and, although there may be many compounds prepared and represented as being worthy of a liberal patronage, yet we feel constrained to remark, that the vast number of testimonials with which the worthy doctor has been honored, by persons of the highest character and respectability, who found it necessary to have recourse to his preparation, is testimony sufficiently conclusive; that a more efficient remedy for the utmost immediate relief of those afflicted with that direful malady, dyspepsia, has never been discovered. See advertisement. m1 1m

☞ A MASTERPIECE OUTDONE.—We have lately supposed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was the Ultima Thule in its line, and that nothing had been or would be invented which could at all surpass it in its 5 se points of excellence as a medicine. But we are confidently assured, by those competent to judge on the subject, that Ayer's new Pills excel in high medical artistry even that widely celebrated embodiment of his skill. He has succeeded in making them not only pleasant to take, but powerful to cure the large class of complaints which require a purgative remedy.—Lancaster Argus, Ky.

They are for sale by J. WRIGHT & CO.,
fe23 2m and all city druggists

Plantation and Garden Fertilizers.

The subscriber has constantly on hand the following concentrated manures, a single trial of which will prove to the most incredulous their value as a restorer of fertility to worn out soils, and their adaptation to increasing largely the products of the Garden and the Orchard.

Numerous testimonials from gentlemen who tried them last season have been received, all of whom concur in saying that their experiments were satisfactory and profitable beyond their anticipation—

PHUSPHATED GUANO,
In barrels of about 250 lbs, at 2 cents per lb.
SUPER PHOSPHATE OF LIME,
In barrels of about 250 lbs, at 2 cents per lb.
COARSE GROUND BONES,
In barrels of about 175 lbs, at 1¼ cents per lb.
FINE GROUND BONES,
In barrels of about 250 lbs, at 1½ cents per lb.
PERUVIAN GUANO,
In sacks of about 140 lbs, at 2½ cents per lb.
POUDRETTE
Or de-oderized Night soil, in powder, at $1 50 per bbl.
LAND PLASTER,
At $1.75 per barrel.

Also—

ROCK SALT, in barrels of about 300 lbs, at 1 cent per lb.

☞ Orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to. A pamphlet, containing further particulars and directions for using the above fertilizers will be sent by mail on the receipt of a postage stamp, to any one desiring it.

D. U. LOWBER, 92 Magazine st.
m15 6m New Orleans.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE

FACULTY:

Rev. H. O. THWEATT, D. D., President and Professor of Mental and Moral Sciences, Belles-Lettres and Ancient Languages.
A. R. REMKHAT, M. D, Professor of the Physical Sciences and Mathematics.
——, Professor of Music and Modern Languages.
Miss L. BAYNE, A. M, Instructress in English Literature, Modern Languages, Music, Drawing, Painting, Embroidery, &c.
Miss ISABELLA V. MCCORMICK, graduate of the State Normal Institute, New York, Instructress in Music, Drawing and Painting.
Miss MARY E. CAGWIN, M. E. L, Instructress in Academic Department.
Mrs. ELIZABETH E. MCCONNICA, Instructress in Primary Department.
——, Assistant Teacher in the Elementary branches.

N. B.—In a few weeks, a gentleman of distinguished reputation will be added to the present corps, his name occupying the vacancy of Professor of Music and Modern Languages.

RATES OF TUITION FOR SESSION OF FIVE MONTHS.

Primary Department	$12 50
Academic Department	15 00
COLLEGIATE DEPARTMENT.
Freshman and Sophomore classes	20 00
Junior and Senior classes	25 00
ORNAMENTAL DEPARTMENT.
Music on the pianoforte, harp or guitar	25 00
Use of instruments	5 00
Vocal music	1 00
Drawing, with use of copies	12 00
Water and chromatic painting, each	15 00
Oil painting	20 00
Embroidery	10 00
Incidental expenses	2 00
Fee for Graduation and Diploma	5 00

No extra charge made for Modern or Ancient Languages.

Payment to be made at the close of each term. Board, including lodging, washing, lights and fuel, can be procured in the village and immediate neighborhood at ten dollars per month. Students will be received at any time during the session, and will be charged only from the time of their entrance to the end of the term.—We would however, respectfully urge all parents or guardians who design placing their daughters or wards in the institution to do so at their earliest convenience, as it will tend much to the individual interest of the pupils, and the general prosperity of the school, facilitating, as it will, a proper arrangement of the various classes in their respective branches of study.

School books, stationery, &c., may be had at any of the various stores in the village at the usual rates.

The scholastic year, embracing ten months, will be divided into two equal terms of five months, one immediately succeeding the other.

The first session commencing on the 5rst Wednesday in October, and closing the last week in February; the second session commencing on the first Wednesday in March, and closing the last week in July. At which time the annual examination will be held, and the usual rewards and honors conferred. The vacation will embrace the months of August and September.

All applications for admission of pupils, &c., to be made to the president of the College. m1 1y

Marion (Ala.) Female Seminary.

TRUSTEES.

Hon John D Phelan | Mark A Myatt, Esq
Hon Andrew B Moore, | James Underwood, Esq.
Leonard A Weissinger, Esq |

FACULTY.

Rev JAS. K. ARMSTRONG, Principal and Professor of Moral, Mental and Natural Science.
Miss Elias Hopkins, English and Mathematical Branches
Miss Annie Hopkins, English Branches and French,
Miss Ellen Moore, English Branches.
Miss Emma U Mann, English Branches.

ORNAMENTAL DEPARTMENT.

Alfred Schmidt, Professor of Vocal and Instrumental Music, Piano, Harp, Guitar, Melodeon, Violincello,
Mrs E C Adrian, Embroidery, Drawing, Painting, Crape Work and Worsted Work.

STEWARD' DEPARTMENT.

L F Bondurant, Esq. and Lady.

COURSE OF INSTRUCTION.

The course of study and text books used will be furnished in catalogue, which will be immediately forwarded on request.

IMPROVEMENTS.

Notwithstanding the apparatus, chemical, philosophical and astronomical, is equal to that of any similar institution in our country, it will be still further increased within the next three months by an additional instrument, of $500.

The grounds of the Seminary are to be greatly extended and beautifully ornamented.

The Library will be greatly enlarged.

Though the Fossil and Mineral Cabinet is already of fair extent, arrangements are in process of rapid fulfillment for greatly enlarging it.

For the carrying out of the above improvements and additions to our facilities, the Principal of the Seminary now holds a solvent subscription of more than $2 000. All the improvements promised will be completed by the last of July. m1 tf

Steamboat for Sale.

On the 8th day of April next the steamer R. FULTON, of the undersigned will be sold at public auction, at his landing on Pascagoula River. The boat is well calculated for peddling, and has been built with a particular view to this purpose. She is 55 feet long by 8 wide, and has a 2½ horse power portable engine and boiler, occupying on the floor only 5 by 8 feet. Her speed is from 6 to 7 miles per hour, with 50 lbs steam, and her boiler is capable of carrying 100 lbs. She burns but one cord of wood per week, and requires but two men to run her.

Terms of Payment—One-third in cash, ⅓ after six months, and ⅓ after twelve months, with approved security.

A. KIRKWOOD.
East Pascagoula, Feb 2 1850. fe23 4t

Good Medicines.

It is estimated that AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL and CATHARTIC PILLS have done more to promote the public health than any other one cause. There can be no question that the Cherry Pectoral has by its thousand on thousand cures of colds, coughs, asthma, influenza, bronchitis, &c., very much reduced the proportion of deaths from consumptive diseases in this country. The Pills are as good as the Pectoral, and will cure more complaints.

Everybody needs more or less purging. Purge the blood from its impurities. Purge the bowels, liver, and the whole visceral system from obstructions. Purge out the diseases which fasten on the body to work its decay. But for diseases, we should die only of old age. Take antidotes early, and thrust it from the system ere it is yet too strong to yield.

Ayer's Pills do thrust out disease, not only while it is weak, but when it has taken a strong hold. Read the astounding statements of those who have been cured by them of dreadful scrofula, dropsy, ulcers, skin diseases, rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, internal pains, bilious complaints, heartburn, headache, gout, and many less dangerous but still threatening ailments, such as pimples on the face, worms, nervous irritability, loss of appetite, irregularities, diseases in the head, colds, fevers, dysentery, and indeed every variety of complaints for which a purgative remedy is required.

These are no random statements, but are authenticated by your own neighbors and your own physicians.

Try them once and you will never be without them. Price, 25 cents per box; 5 boxes for $1.

Prepared by Dr J. C. Ayer, chemist, Lowell, Mass, and sold by all respectable druggists every where.
fe23 3m J. WRIGHT & CO., Wholesale Agents.

GEORGE G. LYON. JEH TAYLOR JONES.

LYON & JONES,

Attorneys and Counsellors at Law,

DEMOPOLIS, ALA.

Will practice in the several Courts of Marengo, Greene and Sumter counties, Alabama. jan1 1y

A New Building Material.

This material is not surpassed for cheapness, strength, durability and beauty. It strongly resembles polished marble or cut stone. It is, in fact, artificial stone, produced by a combination simply of common sand and lime, subjected to great pressure in moulds to the shape and size required, without burning, after which a gradual state of crystallization takes place. Presses are now in the city for manufacturing. Specimens may be seen and all particulars had, from the agent,

L. S. KELLOGG, St. Uberies Hotel,
fe16-4t or at 57 Poydras street.

Atlanta Medical College.

The second course of lectures in this institution will commence on the 5rst day of May next, and continue four months.

FACULTY:

Alexander Means, M. D, chemistry and pharmacy
H W Brown, M. D, anatomy,
John W Jones, M. D, principles and practice of medicine
W F Westmoreland, M. D, principles and practice of Surgery.
Jessee Boring, M. D, obstetrics and diseases of women and children
Joseph P Logan, M. D, physiology and gen'l pathology.
J G Westmoreland, M. D, materia medica and medical jurisprudence.

From experiments made last session, the fact is established beyond dispute that even for winter dissections bodies properly preserved are preferable to those not prepared; and that warm weather does not render such subjects offensive if found when put up. The dissecting room supplied with good subjects, will be opened by the 20th of April.

Fees for the entire course of lectures, $105, matriculation payable once only, $5, dissecting ticket, obligatory once only, $10, graduation, $25

Good board can be procured at from $3 to $3 50 per week. For farther particulars address,

J. G. WESTMORELAND, Dean of the Faculty
Atlanta, Ga., Jan 30, 1850. fe16-4t

Tuskegee Female College.

TUSKEGEE, MACON COUNTY, ALA.

FACULTY.

Rev. A. A. Lipscomb, D. D, President.
Rev Mark R. Andrews, A. M, Professor of Ancient Languages and Mathematics.
Rev George F. Price, A. M, Professor of English Literature.
F. L. Funck, Professor of Music.
Mrs Rose, Assistant Teacher of Music.
Mrs Charlotte M. M. Reed, Principal of the Primary Department.
Boarding Department—Mrs Octavia S. Bailey.

TRUSTEES.

David Clopton, Esq. President; R. F. Ligon, Esq. Secretary, J. D. Porter, Treasurer; J. W Willis, J. D Bilbro, J Dent, Hon L. Alexander, Rev D Perry, R H Powell, Arnold Seals, D E Anthony, Joh Thompson, Dr R H Howard, B F Howard.

TRUSTEES

On the part of the Conference M E Church, Alabama.

Rev M S Andrews,	Rev J A Heard
Rev S Armstrong,	Rev O R Blue
Rev T J Kogar.

EX-OFFICIO.

Rev E J Hamill,	Rev T W Borman, D D,
W B Neal,	W H Ellison, D D.

COLLEGE EDIFICE.

A large and commodious building, planned by the best architectural talent, and erected in the most substantial manner, is now nearly ready for the reception of pupils. Feeling the great importance of space and comfort for the educational and domestic interests of the institution, the Trustees have spared neither pains nor expense to meet the demands of utility and beauty in the construction of the edifice.

EDUCATIONAL FACILITIES.

A new and valuable apparatus has been purchased for the College. Cabinets of minerals, fossils and curiosities have also been provided. Stated courses of lectures on science, art and literature will be delivered.

OPENING.

The first term of the college will commence on the second Monday of February, 1850.

TERMS.

Board, including washing, fuel and lights, will be furnished at $12 50 per month. Tuition fees will be at the ordinary rates.

REMARKS.

The present circular is merely designed to give notice of the approaching opening of the college; and to afford a general outline of its plans and objects. The public may rest assured that the Trustees, in co-operation with the Faculty, will use all proper and possible means to render this institution worthy of a cordial and generous support. The remaining officers of the Faculty will be elected as soon as circumstances will allow, and it is confidently expected that in a short time the college will be fully organized in all the departments of a thorough education.

Acknowledging with gratitude the earnest and

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY A COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS FOR THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.....H. N. McTYEIRE, EDITOR.

VOLUME VI....NUMBER 9.
WHOLE NUMBER 269.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 5, 1856.

$2 A YEAR IN ADVANCE.
OFFICE 86 CAMP ST.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION OF NEGROES.

NUMBER FOUR.

In former numbers we have endeavored to urge upon masters the important obligations which rest upon them to see that their servants be furnished with religious instruction. We have also briefly noticed the obligations of our Church and the ministry in reference to the same subject. We propose now to notice this part of the subject at greater length.

We regard the Southern Methodist Church especially charged to do her part in the work of evangelizing the slaves of the Southern plantations. Her position before the country, as well as her relations to a very large portion of the slaves and their masters, would seem to demand that she be no laggard in this work, and her doctrines and her peculiar economy seem to fit her for doing good service in this grand crusade against the Powers of Darkness. Indeed, from the beginning of her history she has recognized the claims of this class of our population upon her sympathies and her efforts. The early Methodist preachers, even when their number was small and their fields of labor were vast, when their circuits embraced as much ground as modern districts, and their pay was sixty-four dollars a year, and they received, probably, half their allowance—when rides were long and roads few and bad, under all these circumstances they cared for the negroes, and preached to them and talked with them about their souls, and had class meetings with them, and attended to discipline among them, as they did among the whites; and by this very means they commended themselves to public confidence, and their humble and unpretending, patient and pains-taking attention to the slaves won the respect and confidence of the masters, and gave them access to many a heart and many a family among the influential and respectable portions of the community, and were honored with title of negro preachers, and blushed not to bear the name, but gloried to be regarded as par excellence the preachers for the poor; and their bishops set them the example, both by word and deed. But there were large tracts of country to which they could not then have access, and these, too, were the regions where thousands and tens of thousands of negroes were dwelling in almost pagan darkness. To the large estates on the rich doltas of the South and Southwest we could not go, partly from the smallness of our number, but perhaps mainly because the indiscreet zeal of Bishop Coke and some of our first preachers on the subject of slavery had caused us to be regarded as abolition emisaries.

These facts in our early history are known to all the old Methodist preachers. Dr. Coke, when he first landed in North Carolina, had as fair a prospect of success as any man could have desired; and if he had confined himself to his proper work of preaching the gospel, as did his Master and his apostles, he might with great success have carried the message of mercy to the palace of the master and the cabin of the slave. Instead of doing so, with an honest but misguided zeal, he commenced an abolition crusade, which at once blocked up his way of further access to both master and slave; and this mistaken course of this great and good man blighted the prospects of success among that people for more than half a century; indeed, the prejudices engendered by his course still linger in many a family, and affect injuriously our labors for the salvation of the people in that region. I well recollect that when on my first circuit, which was in the lower part of South Carolina, and skirted in its lower edge just on the borders of the large rice and cotton plantations. That whole region was regarded, in some sort, as forbidden ground to Methodist preachers. To the white people I could sometimes preach, but to the thousands of negroes on those large estates I had no access. In Charleston we have, since my first acquaintance with it, always had a very large colored membership, to whom our preachers have always paid special attention. Many of the large planters from the surrounding country used to spend the summers in Charleston, and some of them or their wives frequently visited our churches in the city. They were thus brought into contact with our ministry, and became familiar with our operations among the negroes, and witnessed its effects upon the conduct of their household servants. All these influences, under the blessing of God, gradually opened the way for the introduction of Methodist missions on the cotton plantations in the neighborhood of Georgetown, Charleston and Savannah. It was providential that my honored and lamented friend, Dr. Capers, now with God, was at that time laboring in that portion of the work. His personal weight of character, together the high respectability of his family connections, gave him an interest with the aristocracy of the low country which it is probable no other man in the Methodist ministry could have commanded. Through him we were invited to send missionaries to several neighborhoods, and thus was commenced our great missionary operations among the slaves of the large Southern plantations, which have been continued with varying fortunes till this day, at an immense cost both of men and means.

At the first institution of these missions, it was the design to send men as missionaries to the blacks only to those neighborhoods where there were large numbers of negroes who could not be reached by the regular pastoral labors of the circuit preachers, and where, without this missionary labor, the negroes would have no privilege of hearing the gospel. We never designed that the missionaries should relieve the circuit preachers of any portion of their responsibilities. It was designed to reach those communities of slaves who would otherwise have no gospel regularly preached to them. Such, I know, was the original design in commencing this work for Dr. Capers and myself were then intimately associated in the ministry, and he was in the habit of free and confidential intercourse with me on this subject. It had been well for us and this great branch of our missionary work if we had stuck to this principle throughout; but it is feared we have not done so in many instances, as we may hereafter take occasion to notice.

For the successful conduct of this part of our mission work, a great deal of tact and prudence are necessary, without which our efforts will prove a failure. First, a good deal of wisdom is necessary in choosing proper mission fields. At this point there is much danger of erring, there are so many things to be considered in order to a correct decision, and so many influences are frequently brought to bear upon those who make this decision, that those who have the selection of proper mission fields should be men of good judgment, well informed on all the points necessary to enable them to make a correct conclusion, and who have as little personal pecuniary interest as possible. Secondly, no neighborhood should be put on the list of missions which can be reached by the regular operations of any adjacent circuit. In very many instances I have known the circuit preacher to preach on the Sabbath, in the forenoon, to the whites, and in the afternoon the missionary to the colored people holds forth to the negroes, in the same house. This ought not to be. Wherever the circuit preacher has a Sabbath appointment, let him attend to the negroes as well as their masters. But it is alleged that the preacher has another appointment to fill on Sabbath, and is obliged to hurry away, and has not time to attend to the blacks. Then throw the whole—the mission and the circuit—into one; make a two weeks' circuit with some eight appointments, according to the plan recommended by my venerable friend, Dr. L. Pierce, in the Southern Christian Advocate, and let there be two preachers to serve the work, in regular circuit, form; then the whole of the church interests for whites and blacks will be brought directly under the eye of the Quarterly Conference of the circuit, things will be better managed, and there will be waked up and perpetuated a greater interest for the souls of the negroes.

I have always regarded the separation of the religious interests of the slaves and their masters as unfortunate to the interests of both. Hence would urge, that wherever it can be done, the master and the slave should worship together, have the same preacher, and be under the same pastoral oversight. This will, I think, be desirable for both parties. The intelligence and sobriety of the whites may serve to keep in check the wild excitement to which the negro has a sort of constitutional tendency; and the warmth and unaffected and simple piety of many a pious negro, which can never believe that a hearty amen or a warm and old-fashioned glory to God is a violation of gospel order, or church decency, might serve, to some extent, to correct the strong tendency to worldly fastidiousness and formality which is the curse of many a genteel congregation of Christians in these days of wonderful refinement.

But, there are other objections to the plan of separating these interests, which too often prevails among us. It is feared that very often the desire on the part of owners for the separation of the work arises from the utter negligence of the circuit preachers in reference to the blacks. Our lay brethren have sometimes said to me, "Bishop, we must have a missionary to our negroes, for our circuit preachers pay no attention to them, and the poor people are utterly neglected." Alas! Alas! and can it be possible that such a charge can be brought against one who has taken the vows of a Methodist preacher upon him? And yet he is perhaps regarded as a very respectable man, and his character passes at Conference, and the Presiding Elder endorses him as one who stands well on his circuit, and as doing all the work of a Methodist preacher. And whence this endorsement? Is it because the P. E. is equally guilty with himself? God help us and forgive us. And so the people want a missionary to their negroes; and a petition goes to Conference, and the Bishop sends them the gentleman preacher back to the whites, and sends a missionary to the negroes in the same bounds, at an expense of several hundred dollars to the Missionary Society; and all because the polished gentleman who affects to talk logic and rhetoric and theology to the white people, (for which he expects to be decently paid,) and drives a fine horse and buggy, and loves to eat good dinners, and talks politics with public men, and simpering nonsense to the girls, and talks mincingly about a bronchial affection as a reason for ignoring class meetings and pastoral visiting, and for sleeping till breakfast time—I say all this additional outlay of muscle and nerve and breath and money is because the gentleman whose portrait we have drawn above would rather see the poor darkies all go to the devil in a lump than to come up to the full measure of his duty, according to the order of God and the vows which he has taken upon himself at God's altar and in the presence of his brethren. We must pause in our course. This state of things cannot long continue, without great and manifest injury to the cause of missions. Of this more hereafter.

JAS. O. ANDREW.

For the N. O Christian Advocate.

THE PACIFIC CONFERENCE.

Rev. H. N. McTyeire—

DEAR BROTHER: The Pacific Annual Conference met in San Francisco Thursday, February 21, 1856, at 9 o'clock A. M. No Bishop being present, the Conference was called to order by B. H. Russell, Secretary of the previous session. O. Fisher was called to the chair, and opened with appropriate religious exercises. The Conference then organized by electing W. R. Gober President, and M. Evans Secretary.

Recommendations were presented from various Quarterly Conferences for J. L. S. Wood, E. G. Cannon, H. C. Settle, D. Beauchamp, S. D. Bunch, J. B. Williams and J. B. Johnson, and they admitted on trial. The last named having been for several years an Elder in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, satisfied the Conference as to the earnestness of his faith in doctrine and discipline, and his credentials recognised.

J. T. Cox, R. A. Latimer, R. C. Martin, James Ronsall, J. G. Shelton, M. Maupin, J. C. Stewart and T. W. Moore were continued on trial.

O. P. Fitzgerald, James W. Stahl and Thos. C. Barton were received into full connection and elected to Deacons' orders.

E. B. Lockley and L. C. Adams were located, at their own request.

No deaths, withdrawals or expulsions during the Conference year.

The aggregate of the membership reported is about 1,000, which, compared with last year, gives no correct idea of the work done, or the numbers added to the Church during the past year. The total increase of this year over last, as shown by the minutes, does not equal the number added to the Church during the past year on the San Francisco District alone.

The missionary collections were meagre. Several causes contributed to this; but I fear culpable neglect attaches to a majority of the Conference at this point, of which they ought to be, and I trust are, heartily ashamed. Will they not show the fruits of their repentance over this matter at the next session, in a way that will be satisfactory to all concerned?

The other reports were encouraging. The establishment of a paper was considered lengthily by a select committee of five appointed by the President for that purpose, who reported in favor of a paper, provided the members of the Conference would individually assume certain liabilities; and also recommended a member of the Conference to edit it, in case of its establishment. But the conditions were not complied with, and the whole subject was dismissed. After one signal failure in this line, a majority of the Conference are disposed to move cautiously in that direction.

The preachers were nearly all present, in good health and fine spirits, encouraged by past success and buoyant with hope for the future. The sessions were preceded by a Conference prayer meeting of an hour's length. A deep religious influence prevailed, brotherly love characterized the entire proceedings, and a more harmonious and delightful session I never attended anywhere The business of Conference was attended to promptly and with despatch.

The business of the Conference was finished early on Tuesday, the 26th. At night, by request of the Conference, Rev. O. Fisher preached a sacramental sermon, and administered the Lord's Supper. The Head of the Church was present, Divine power was felt. It was a melting time. After which the President read the following

APPOINTMENTS:

San Francisco District, A. M. Bailey, P. E.
.. Station, B. F. Crouch.
Oakland Circuit, J. F. Blythe.
Contra Costa Circuit, J. T. Cox.
San Jose and Santa Clara, B. R. Johnson.
Santa Clara Circuit, J. W. Stahl.
Los Angelos and Lexington, J. W. Ellis.
Gilroy and Santa Cruz Circuit, J. G. Johnson and H. C. Settle.
Bodega and Russian River Circuit, J. L. Sanders and M. Maupin.
Petuloma and Marin Circuit, J. C. Pendergrass.
Sonoma and Suisun Circuit, S. W. Davies and S. D. Bunch.
Sacramento District, B. H. Russell, P. E.
.. Station, A. Graham.
.. Circuit, T. W. Moore.
Marysville Station, to be supplied.
Nevada .. W. R. Gober.
Grass Valley .. M. Evans.
Iowa City Circuit, J. C. Stewart.
Georgetown .. to be supplied.
Placerville .. P. O. Clayton and one to be supplied.
Amador Circuit, J. M. Fulton, R. C. Martin.
Yolo .. R. A. Latimer, J. G. Shelton.
Yuba .. to be supplied.
Stockton District, R. W. Bigham, P. E.
.. Station, O. Fisher.
.. Circuit, T. C. Barton and J. B. Williams.
Murphy's Circuit, E. G. Cannon.
Sonora and Columbia, O. P. Fitzgerald.
Merced, J. Bonsall and D. Beauchamp.
Mariposa, J. C. Simmons.
Visalia, F. G. Gray and J. L. S. Wood.

Next Conference to be held at Gilroy, November 12, 1856.

The object of these short years is to bring the time of holding the sessions to the fall. No time was ever given for holding the session just closed by the Bishop. The Conference requested Bishop Andrew to have it about the middle of February, and expected it so to be; but waited until about the middle of January, when were informed by letter from Bishop Kavanaugh that he would reach San Francisco about the 15th February, and requesting the convening of Conference deferred until his arrival. I accordingly wrote the preachers at once, informing them that Conference would begin on the 21st. They governed themselves accordingly, but still have no Bishop. He is most likely on the Isthmus, as the New Orleans steamer did not connect at Panama. These failures are frequent; and men who wish to reach California at a given time would do well to remember that fact if they would avoid a two weeks' stay at Panama. To avoid confusion, next time the Conference has fixed the time of meeting, hoping the Bishop will take due notice thereof, and govern himself accordingly. You may hear from me again when I reach my new field of labor.

Yours, &c., W. R. GOBER.

SAN JOSE CALA, Feb. 28, 1856.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

THE DUTIES OF PREACHERS IN CHARGE

In the little book where these duties are enumerated, the 8th is, "To take care that every society is supplied with books."

This is a plain and simple statement of a plain, practical and important duty. Each may, if he will, understand it. If he would be successful in winning souls, in building up the Church, he must see that the right sort of books are in the hands of the people.

It is our duty to see the people are properly instructed in doctrines, duties, privileges—that they may be intelligent Christians. This cannot be successfully and extensively done by preaching a sermon once in two, three or four weeks. But take care that good books be in their hands to read at intervals, and the Church will grow in intelligence piety, zeal and usefulness.

Are you taking this care, my brother?

I was on a circuit where you had traveled, and in large congregations could see but two, three, or may be six hymn books, and could find no disciplines except among some of the older members of the Church. The younger members had not read our Articles of Religion, General Rules, nor anything in reference to our government. Some places it gave me trouble, too.

Now, brother, will you not stir up a little on this one point of your duty? It will open the way to other duties, to usefulness to families that you could not reach otherwise. I know, from observation and experience, that what I write is so.

I am anxious to see the day when every preacher in our Church, from Bishop down, will feel it to be his duty to be a colporteur; and will do the work of one, too.

Will you be one to act?

H. H. MONTGOMERY.

For the N. O Christian Advocate.

MAKING TRACKS!

ALABAMA, March 22, 1856.

Mr. Editor—It was my purpose, at the commencement of my labors this year, to keep you, and through your paper, the Church, advised of my whereabouts, and the measure of success attending my labors. But much travel, work and cold weather has hitherto prevented me. Early in the month of January I left home, took steamer at Selma, destined for Mobile. Many things attracted my attention, as downward bound, both of scenery and localities without, and man and manners within. For the present, however, these must all remain unwritten.

At Mobile, reshipped on the cars of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad—dreadful road, then: and such weather as produced for once unity of expression that the like had never been seen! Omitting all the petty details of suffering and minutiæ of little trials of faith and patience, suffice it to say, that Saturday morning, the 12th, found me at Marion, Miss., hovering around the fire, enjoying the converse of the Station preacher, R. W. Spence, while all without was blank, but surpassingly beautiful. For such a sleet, when did we see!

Sunday morning the clouds fled away, and the sun, in his golden chariot, ascended the heavens, and from its friction fires sent down enough of life and heat to encourage a few persons, in spite of wind and rain, to go to church. A brief sermon and appeal was made in behalf of the Tract Cause, and a collection taken amounting to seventeen dollars. Services at 3 (to the blacks) and at night closed the labors of the day.

After a delay of a day or two, remounted the cars on the return route; halted at Enterprise, Miss, where I lingered till after Sabbath. Colder still and the congregation smaller; got only the small amount of ten dollars. Neither the collector nor the debtors had a fair chance; and I do hope when the warm weather expands them a little, they will show their pluck by giving brother Turner a good support, and a large missionary collection.

Tuesday, 22d, left for Mobile, and why we did not reach there until daylight next morning is too long to tell; but just think of stopping by log fires at a railroad station for five mortal hours, the coldest night of the coldest winter, and you have some idea of the blessedness of him who makes tracks!

Wednesday, the 23d, at 10 A. M., opens the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance. We called for the leaders of the pledged, the badged, the bannered hosts. But few responded. We asked, "Whore are thoy?" And echo replied, "Where!" Some had died, "with their faces to the foe," and others had "ingloriously fled," while others had been "taken captive by the devil at his will;" while over all the State, we had reason to know, there were many whose battle cry is, "We never surrender."

And now, dear reader, let me ask you—yes I mean you—if you have no interest in this languishing temperance reformation? Is there no grand raffle, or lottery, near by your dwelling, in which, at which, you, your father, your son, brother, friend, will only he charged a dime for a chance, to win some one or all of the following prizes: Paleness, bad company, profanity, red eyes, tempers, many knocks and bruises, loss of character, of occupation, rags, want, the poor-house, the jail, the stocks, a cell in the State Prison, the gallows, and drunkard's grave and the drunkard's hell? If you can allow these "grand schemes" to live and prosper, and smile at their success, I had as well, like Ephraim of old, "let you alone." High resolves were made by the assembled leaders of the "forlorn hope" of the temperance army, we adjourned to meet again in July at Florence, Ala., and again next January, in Mobile.

Sunday, the 27th, preached in the forenoon, to the congregation of the Franklin street charge, and took up a collection amounting to fifty-six dollars. At 3 o'clock P. M. preached to the colored congregation, State street, and, as the old Methodists would say, "we had a good time of it." At night met the congregation at the St. Francis street charge, and realized $110.

Monday, the 28th, being homeward bound I went aboard the steamer Wm. Jones, and at 5 o'clock P. M. we looked our adieu to the Gulf City. Without any details of the events transpiring during this voyage, or moralizing thereon, or even delaying the reader to go home with me a few days, I pass on to say that the second Sabbath in February found me in Wetumpka, enjoying for a few days the converse of precious friends and brethren, cheered up especially by the genuine whole-heartedness of that prince of unselfish men, Rev. J. Barker. The collection amounted to some forty-seven dollars, and a good many books disposed of.

The third Sabbath I ministered in the forenoon to the congregation at Indian Hill, and raised twenty-one dollars; at night, in Prattville, from which fifty dollars was contributed to the good cause.

The fourth Sabbath I was in Autaugaville, and by the hearty aid of Rev. D. Duncan raised eight-six dollars.

This closes the memoranda of two month's work, and as my sheet is nearly full, I shall close, and beg to have a continued hearing.

Before I close, allow me to say that the few scattering words that I have said about one or two ministering brethren is not to be interpreted to the disadvantage of any of them. Indeed, this agency has certainly, with all its hardships and shadows, enabled me to know my ministering brethren better, to love them more, and to feel assured that they in the main belong to that honored class of whom "the Holy Ghost sayeth, the world was not worthy!"

Yours, truly, F. G. FERGUSON.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

SOMETHING NEW.

A minister of a certain church in our town had failed to get this salary for a year or two, and sent his resignation to the officials, giving that as one reason for his resignation.

This stirred up some of the good ladies, and they stirred in good earnest for some time, and succeeded in getting up a supper, the proceeds of which they gave to their minister, to induce him to stay.

Yet the members and friends of that church, in that town and vicinity, are generally wealthy, or in good circumstances, pecuniarly. I think I can select two members or families connected with that church who could buy out every member of the Methodist Church in that community, and not be embarrassed by it. Ought they not to be ashamed of their parsimony? Would they be still and quiet if the Methodist ladies there were to have a supper to obtain money for the support of their preacher?

But aristocracy can do many things which plain people cannot.

MICK HEALY.

PROSPECTS OF THE SUGAR PLANTERS.

SABBATH BREAKING.

A subscriber, who lives in Avoyelles parish, La., sending forward his advance pay for the Advocate, which he says he continues to receive regularly and read with unabated interest, gives a gloomy account of the sugar planting interest in these parts. Capt. J. Callahan, from the same regions, was in our office on Monday, and confirms the statement is too generally true. It may be of interest to many of our readers.—Ed.

HOLMESVILLE, March 17, 1856.

There is no religious news in this section worth naming. All is dull and cold. Our young men are going forward in the discharge of their duty on the circuit. May God give them souls for their hire.

We who are engaged in sugar planting are all down in the mouth—overseers, employers and all. The seed cane is nearly all killed by the frost, or rotted in the cold, wet earth, since it was planted, and the stubble cane is all killed off. Last year there was not a half-crop of sugar made on Bayou Boeuf, and this year, I fear, there will be less made. The large amount of seed made last year greatly reduced the crop, and now it turns out to be a total loss. Every sugar planter will plant half a crop of cotton. In this way they may manage to make both ends meet.

I think these failures may do a little good in the long run; for it is now quite common to hear planters talk about corn and hogs, sheep and cattle—things they used hardly to think of. If half the money paid out by this State for pork was saved and laid out in railroad stock, I am of the opinion that the planters would not long be in the habit of rushing their produce into a glutted market, for fear of low water.

But I am fully satisfied that the State at large will never prosper to half the extent of its resources until the people learn to "remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy." Man may appoint, but God can disappoint. This is a Sabbath-breaking State, and thereby it disobeys the express command of God. Let the people remember this.

Respectfully, J. C. YOUNGER.

SUGAR.—The growth of sugar in Louisiana for the last year, say 1855, proves to have been 231,427 hhds. against 316,635 hhds. for the year 1854. This shows a deficiency of a fraction over 33 per cent. from last year, and a deficiency of nearly 49 per cent. from the great crop of 1853. The following figures give the crop for five years:

1855	hhds. 231,427
1854	hhds. 316,635
1853	hhds. 449,124
1852	hhds. 321,934
1851	hhds. 236,547

The estimated quantity in pounds for 1855 is 254,569,000, which is something over 1,000 pounds per hhd.

The venerable and celebrated Indian chief Blacksnake, died recently at his residence near Cold Spring, N. Y. He was nearly 110 years of age.

MISSIONARY REPORTS.

S. A. WILLIAMS, Treasurer of the East Texas Conference Missionary Society—

Dr.

SAN AUGUSTINE DISTRICT.
San Augustine circuit	$39 00
Shelbyville "	36 50
Pulaski "	28 00
Henderson station	22 60
" circuit	18 50
Nacogdoches	5 15
	$149 75
MARSHALL DISTRICT.
Harrison colored mission	229 25
Mount Pleasant	45 00
Wood mission	58 05
Gilmer	19 50
	$351 80
CLARKESVILLE DISTRICT.
Clarkesville	52 50
Red River	30 10
Clarkesville colored mission	110 00
Paris circuit	44 00
Grayson	13 00
Sulphur	10 00
	$259 60
TYLER DISTRICT.
Tyler circuit	99 10
Palestine station	10 00
Jacksonville	5 50
Vanzant mission	60 00
Millwood	40 00
Kaufman	66 50
Athens mission	27 50
	$308 60
WOODVILLE DISTRICT.
Woodville mission	56 10
Marion "	69 60
Cherokee circuit	73 00
Crockett	23 50
Livingston	16 30
Newton	2 00
Jasper	17 00
	$257 50
ANNIVERSARY AT MARSHALL.
Life membership	575 25
Hat collections	22 15
Annual membership	34 10
Four bales cotton	80 00
	$711 50
RECAPITULATION:
Total from circuits, stations and missions	$1,327 25
Anniversary	711 50
	$2,038 75
Balance on hand last year	860 07
	$2,898 82
Cr.
By 1st, dfts. for six districts	$1,406 50
2d, dft. for San Augustine district	150 25
2d, dft. for Clarkesville	131 25
Amount paid missionaries on their work	713 75
	$2,401 75
Balance on hand	497 07
March, 1856.	$2,898 82

Later from Texas.

The steamship Mexico, Capt. Lawless, arrived yesterday morning from Indianola via Galveston.

The Galveston News of Saturday says:

We learn that the Brazos has fallen 6 or 7 feet and is still falling, but that there is still water enough for good navigation.

From the commercial article of the Civilian of Friday, we extract the following:

COTTON.—The receipts of Galveston, the week ending this morning, have been 2934 bales. The exports 5896 bales. The market, previous to the receipt of the news by Monday night's mail, from Europe, the North and New Orleans, exhibited some signs of languor; but rallied under the influence of this intelligence, though it still partakes somewhat of the feeling prevailing at the great cotton port of the South, nearly always the regulator for the smaller markets. The sales of the week amount to some 2700 bales, at an average of about 8½c per lb.

The Indianola Bulletin of Saturday says:

For the last several days the weather has been exceedingly fine; and if we are to judge from the large trains of cotton wagons that are constantly coming in, the roads must be in an improved condition. We counted, on Thursday, seventeen wagons and carts in one train heavily laden with cotton. If the weather should continue good a few days, we apprehend that the remainder of the crop will all be sent forward.

The Houston Telegraph states that within the past twelve months not less than 2000 slaves have been introduced into that county.

There is but little Indian news. A number of Germans recently surprised four Indians encamped at Post Oak Hill, near the Cibolo, and killed them all.

The San Antonio Ledger says:

On the 13th of last month, Col. Johnson commanding at Fort Mason, directed Capt. Oaks and a party to scour the San Saba and Llano rivers. After scouring the former to within a short distance of Fort McKavett, he met the guide belonging to that post, who informed him that a party of four Indians had attempted to steal horses from the Fort on the previous night. He accordingly proceeded there, when he learned that small parties of Indians had several times visited them during the previous week. Capt. Oakes divided his force, directing Lieut Shaaf to go to the head-waters of the Concho, while he himself followed a trail which led in the direction of the upper Llano. The trail was soon lost, but continuing in the general direction for some days, it was again found. After suffering greatly from the want of water, and the inclemency of the weather, they, on the fourth day, came upon the camp of the Indians, which they immediately attacked, and succeeded in killing one, wounding several, and capturing all their animals and camp fixtures. The nature of the ground precluded pursuit, otherwise, it is thought, none would have escaped.

Professor Ehrenberg's microscope, which did such good service in procuring undeniable proof of the Simonides' fraud, has been made use of again, in Prussia, to detect the thief that stole a barrel of specie, which had been purloined on one of the railways. One of a number of barrels, that should all have contained coin, was found on arrival at its destination to have been emptied of its precious contents, and refilled with sand. On Professor Ehrenberg being consulted, he sent for samples of sand from all the stations along the different lines of railway that the specie had passed, and by means of his microscope identified the station from which the interpolated sand must have been taken. The station once fixed upon, it was not difficult to hit upon the culprit in the small number of employees on duty there.

Christian Advocate.

Terms: $2.00 per annum, in advance.

NEW ORLEANS:

SATURDAY, APRIL 5, 1856.

Religious Instruction, &c.—Bishop Andrew's articles are very like the powerful appeals of Chrysostom, Bishop of Constantinople, to masters, Christians and preachers of his day, in behalf of the servile population. One can hardly realize that the bishop of the fourth century and he of the nineteenth are so far apart in time and space, so like are their burning rebukes of neglectful shepherds and their care for the neglected poor. If No. 4 does not draw a blister on guilty consciences, the case is hopeless.

Dr. Drewry's Lectures.—We have had the pleasure of hearing several of the course on "Human Life and Destiny" which this gentleman delivers in Dr. Clapp's Church. Gifted with a deep, liquid voice, under skillful management, strong-minded, and set off with that classic finish for which Unitarian clergymen are distinguished, Dr. D. is furnishing our community with the richest intellectual treats of the lecture season. The mind can but receive a positive polish, while listening. But we have our misgivings as to where his finite positions and bearings ultimate. "Ultra-religious" is an ominous word.

Orphans' Home.—This Protestant Asylum for boys and girls, in the Fourth District, is pursuing its quiet career of charity. Dr. Angell, the physician, kindly furnished us with the last report, which, though late, we had not received before, and that copy we have mislaid. The institution much needs a hospital, or sick nursery. We understand an effort is about to be made for approaching public generosity on this behalf. May the fair part off remuneratively. Those who cannot come, may send aid to these fatherless and motherless. The most distant person ought to feel equally as near these as those who minister. All are alike related to the orphans, and all alike will look heavenward for reward.

Opelousas, La.—A letter, dated March 26, gives us hopeful tidings from this town. Rev. B. Alexander, pastor, was aided in carrying on a protracted meeting by Rev. J. A. Ivey, of Morgan street. Six or eight souls had professed conversion, and others were inquiring the way of life. May these be but the first fruits of a happy and large ingath ering.

Centenary College.—We have received of Rev. W. H. Watkins, Secretary, a notice for a meeting of the Joint Board, to be held at Jackson, La., 10th April. The interests of the college demand a heed to this notice. Other calls have failed. The prosperity of this institution should not be hindered by lack of attention on the part of those who can attend.

Our Last Bale.—Wish we had a score or two more to be sold and turned into the Missionary Treasury, which is about empty. Can't some of our cotton-growing friends order their commission merchants here to turn over a few bales of the last crop, unsold?

W. R. Stuart & Co. this week make return of sale of the last bale, marked "Randell," weight 449, at 9¼ cents per lb.; expenses of freight and insurance, $2 75. No commission charged. Thanks to W. R. S. & Co.

Bishop Kavanaugh.—By Rev. Mr. Brookshier, who came passenger on the Grenada, we learn that Bishop Kavanaugh arrived safely at San Francisco on the 1st March. It will be seen by our correspondence that his detention on the Isthmus prevented his presence at Conference. He was in time to attend to some ordinations and other business.

As of Old.—Who can say that the good practice of old has gone out—that there is no more old Methodism in the land, when, in the corner of a business letter to the Advocate, there is occasionally such a P. S. as this: "Last Sunday we had the best meeting I have seen this year; especially the class meeting at the conclusion of the services. It would have done you good to be there."

Liberia.—Rev. Dr. Bacon, of Washington City, a member of the Executive Committee of the American Colonization Society, is now in our city. Persons desirous of emigrating to the flourishing Republic of Western Africa can get all the information they want from Dr. B. He speaks by authority. The interviews we have been favored with have impressed our mind with the good prospects of Liberia, as well as the soundness of the colony's government and domestic affairs. A ship with emigrants will sail from Baltimore in the month of May, touching at Savannah. Particular information about this expedition can be got of Dr. B., or by addressing the society's Secretary at Washington, Rev. R. R. Gurley.

Christ is life—others only live.

Methodist Press.

The Christian Advocate and Journal comes to us in mourning—with the column usually occupied by the editorial, blank! The venerable but vigorous hand that by those weekly words instructed and controlled the minds of thousands, is still in death. Dr. Bond died, as we a fortnight since noticed, on the 14th March, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. He was a native of Maryland, a local preacher, and in early life practiced medicine in Baltimore. The New York Commercial Advertiser says:

"We may be allowed to speak of his last sickness. Although comparatively short, it was severe, yet he never murmurred or complained. His was a composure that we have seldom seen in like conditions. It was our privilege to spend a part of last Sunday with him. No gloom or doubt rested upon him. He possessed his mind in all its vigor, and looked as calmly upon the future as he did benignly upon the present. To his family the loss will be irreparable. Few men were so beloved where they are best known—in the home circle—and the memory of his genial temper and Christian urbanity will there long survive."

"No matter what you believe," is or ought to be the first article in the creed of diabolne. Talk as much against the importance of creeds as we may, there is one fact undeniably established: never has history recorded the case of a pure theology advocated by a corrupt Church. The converse of this is true. As soon as a church begins to go astray, it becomes slack and less careful of its theology.

Such sound language holds the Memphis Advocate, in this age of indifferentism; and clipping deeper into the same column, we present our readers a pithy sermon on—"Buy the truth and sell it not." Have a care of your principles as well as actions:

"Error never did, never can work anything but evil; and just so far as any scheme of denominational theology is unscriptural, just so far in some way will it work not only inefficiency, but positive mischief, in the practical enterprises of the denomination in which it is cherished.

Paul has most beautifully illustrated this idea, where he tells us that other foundation than Christ cannot be laid; that if upon this foundation any one would build gold, silver, precious stones, hay, stubble, the fire shall try his work; and that though he himself might be saved, yet all his work would be destroyed, and even he be saved as by fire—an awfully close salvation indeed. What does this mean, but simply that as the man aimed his labor for Christ, he shall be saved, because his motive was pure, his heart was right, but that while barely saved himself, all his labors would be lost? Is not such an issue as this to the labors of a life-long but misguided career, a thing dreadful to contemplate by a soul earnest to accomplish some good before death? Beside his own peculiar duty of personal salvation, every believer in Christ has a mission to fill on earth. If he fail to do this, his life will be a sad and solemn failure indeed. But fail he must if he attempt to build on the rock Christ Jesus human whim and speculation, instead of the pure gold of a sound Bible theology."

The North Carolina Advocate announces in its tenth number that its subscribtion list numbered about 2,700! "This," says our cotemporary of St. Louis, "is better than we expected. When the tenth number of the St. Louis Advocate was issued, the number of subscribers was considerably below two thousand; now it has a list of considerably over five thousand, and increasing as rapidly as at any former period in its history. But what screwing and scratching, managing and working it has required to bring it on we know, but no one else can tell."

What easy figuring, how a paper is to live, even in the most eligible positions, as this and St. Louis. And how invariable and hard the struggle! Sydney Smith used to say there were three things every man thought he could do—manage a small farm, drive a gig and publish a newspaper. Oftener than expected the first breaks down, the second turns over, and the third dries up. Just on this point, nothing has astonished us more than the tenacity of life exhibited by the California Christian Advocate. That paper must have the best agents in the world, for it has more subscribers than there are members of the Church!

An Empty Treasury is the startling announcement of the S. C. Advocate, which states the case. The Missionary Society, of all others, has the strongest claims, and the very number and strength and plainness of its claims makes it liable they will not be urged, and thus overlooked.

"Not quite empty yet, but emptying fast. The drafts are drawing the money out, and unless we can at once turn all the little rills, alas! how little, into the reservoir, it will be empty. Read the bulletin below from the Board of Managers of the Missionary Society. The out-standing and rapidly maturing drafts exceed by more than $30,000 the funds in the hands of the Treasurer! The cause is set forth. The drafts of last year outstanding when the Board met were larger than was then suspected, and the balance had to be met from the moneys afterward collected. We may have been nearly broken then, but did not know it."

The Texas Advocate sketches, with pen and ink, a few hurtful and odious characters. We have indeed heard of tarantulas and big spiders in Texas, and some Indians, but hoped the ecclesiastical pests here enumerated had not yet arrived out there:

"Everything, therefore, that fosters insincerity destroys the corner-stone of Christian character, and removes the basis of social confidence and individual excellence.

One form of this ecclesiastical hypocrisy is seen sometimes as follows. One denomination denies that another is a church—calls it a "human institution"—and consequently refuses to recognize its members as of the body of Christ, by participating with them in the ordinances of the house of God. But at the same time, "because they love the praise of men more than the praise of God," they freely unite with the ministers of the reprobated denomination in preaching the gospel, and in more ways than one recognize the validity of their ministry. This is not only insincere and sinful, but is also a deference to the clergy at the expense of the laity. A church that is too time-serving to practice its theory is not worthy of public confidence.

Another form of this insincerity is seen in the turning aside of some ministers from the regular work of preaching the gospel for the conversion of sinners and the edification of their flocks, to the not only questionable, but absolutely degrading work of proselyting the unstable of other denominations. Every church has a right preach its own doctrine, publicly, earnestly, candidly and peacefully; and is entitled to the full force of conviction on the public mind it is able to produce. But this private, cunning, electioneering, appealing frequently to the most human motives, is utterly unworthy of a man, to say nothing of a Christian minister.

Another form of this insincerity is seen in most wanton and unchristian attacks of one denomination upon another, under a long-faced, devout profession of zeal for the truth!"

The advocates of the M. E. Church, North, may be put in two classes—the Abs. and the Ultra-Abs. The former would have the General Conference pass a rule rigidly regulating slaveholding, with conditions of emancipation, &c. The latter would admit no slaveholder hereafter, on any terms, of any kind, and would name a day, not distant, when all those now in shall cease their connection with the Church or the peculiar institution. One would totally prohibit, the other only regulate. The regulations would not be tolerated in any Southern State. They are as impracticable as the measures proposed by the Ultra-Abs., without their consistency. Dr. Elliott, of the Cincinnati Advocate, is reckoned among the conservatives. The following, clipped from the Pittsburg Advocate, shows how his paper is received in Western Virginia:

"Glennsville Circuit, W. Va. Conference.—At the beginning of this year we had some revival influence; twenty-five joined the Church, and nearly that number professed religion; and about the time we expected to see a general engagement all around the circuit, a great excitement was raised by our enemies on the subject of abolitionism, and to convince the world that we were a band of abolitionists, the Western Christian Advocate was burned in the streets of Glennsville, without any notice to me or a member of our Church. The pretext for so doing was, that it was printed with the intent to incite negroes to rebel or make insurrection, &c.—the very paper that Dr. Bowen, of the Northern Advocate, pronounces pro-slavery. Since the burning of our paper at Glennsville, three or four have been burned at another office in the bounds of this circuit. Our papers at these two offices have been withheld. L. Parks.

Dr. Bond was the bold and skillful file leader of this band. It numbers the Central Advocate, (St. Louis,) the Western, (Cinn.,) the Buffalo(?), the Pittsburg and the New York. The Ultra-Abs.: Zion's Herald, (Boston,) The Northern, (Auburn, N. Y.,) the Northwestern, (Chicago, Ill.) By the location of these Church papers it will be seen that they are geographically interspliced—a streak of fat and a streak of lean. If they represent the membership of their several communities, a division of the Church on any large scale is impossible. If it breaks up at all, it must be into several fragments. Dr. Durbin has ranged himself powerfully with the conservative party. The Bishops are silent. It is significant that the California Advocate seized with avidity and republished the articles of Drs. Bond and Durbin, and claims them to be exponents of the mind and position of Northern Methodism.

Our German Churches.

The Presbyterians, last Sabbath, laid, in the Fourth District, the foundation for the first German Church in connection with them in this city. The Methodist German Churches are straitened for room. The Beer Garden, a place of rowdyism, gluttony and beer-bibbing, in the Third District, has given place to a neat chapel, that will soon be dedicated to God. Its Sabbath School flourishes. Those friends abroad who sent aid to that enterprise are entitled to the satisfaction of knowing that it was well bestowed. Turn a beer garden into a church and Sabbath school! That is a gospel transformation.

A fortnight ago, another German Church, in connection with us, received twenty-three substantial and hopefully converted persons, nearly all of whom had been Romanists.

The foundation of a large brick church will soon be laid in the First District. Those who seek a good investment of the Lord's money will have opportunity for laying it out. It will be needed. The work is large and will be undertaken more with faith than funds. Our German brethren are as economical and thrifty in their Church finances as in their personal. They waste nothing.

Death of Rev. J. S. Belton.

Dr. Stevenson, writing to the S. C. Advocate, from New York, March 17, says:

"Last evening I visited our dear brother Belton, just returned from China. Found him in a sinking condition, but calm, resigned and unshaken in his faith and hope. He breathed his last at an early hour this morning, leaving an amiable wife and a lovely little daughter, the former in a very delicate state of health, to mourn the early loss of a devoted husband and father.

Brother Belton has been well cared for by our brethren and friends in this city. His unpretending piety, good sense and excellent spirit have made a fine impression on all with whom he had to do during his illness. How darkly mysterious the ways of Providence! "What I do," said Jesus, "thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." This is enough. We should ask no more.

I shall not leave for the West until after his funeral, which will take place at 3 o'clock to-morrow evening."

Amer. Methodist Historical Society.

Such a society, of laudable purpose, has been formed in Baltimore, Md., under the immediate patronage of the Baltimore Conference. It is not sectional, but national in its character and design. It bears the name of Baltimore, because this was essential to securing its incorporation under a general law of Maryland.

It is its purpose, by all possible means, promptly and perseveringly used, to rescue from loss or entire destruction everything that either directly or indirectly bears upon the history of Methodism in this country or elsewhere. Already much has been accomplished.

We have received a copy of the constitution, &c. No better place than old Baltimore for its domicil. We trust its archives will be enriched from every quarter. The Methodist Magazine, a valuable monthly, is its organ. Its anniversary comes off this month.

Among the valuable and rare things already gathered is the following:

Bp. Coke exercises episcopal functions in England.

Since the organization of the Methodist Historical Society of the Baltimore Conference, many things of great Methodistic interest have come into our possession. Among them over a hundred old letters, several of them containing useful and valuable information. I send you an extract of one written by Rev. Wm. Myles, author of the Chronological History of the Methodists, to his brother, the late Zachary Myles, of this city, who was well known to you. This letter is dated London, June 8, 1803. In the postscript, dated June 13, he says:

"I am sending this by way of Virginia. Yesterday, being the Lord's day, was a blessed day to my soul. I read prayers, preached and administered the Lord's Supper at Lambeth in the morning, and preached in the evening at New Chapel. I found liberty and comfort in my own soul, and I trust the Lord blessed and refreshed his people. I was ordained by Dr. Coke, in the autumn of 1800, at Bristol; since then I have assisted him in ordaining several of the preachers. I forget whether I mentioned this circumstance to you before. I hope you have got my History before now. I am not sorry, but glad that I published it.

I think it probable that the fact stated in this extract concerning Dr. Coke is not generally, if at all known in this country at the present day. I therefore send it to you as a point in our history of some moment.

George C. M. Roberts,
Advocate and Journal.

An Office Goes Begging.

The Talladega (Ala.) Reporter says that such is the fact. And have we arrived at the pure days of the Republic?

What is true of Talladega county may be of others. And as the Advocate circulates largely in Alabama, it may serve the cause of popular education, and give the present school system aid, to extend the circulation of these sound remarks of the Reporter:

"The last Legislature, by amendments made to the Free School law, abolished the traveling duties of the State Superintendent, reducing his salary from $2,500 to $2,000, and the contingent fund placed at his disposal from $2,500 to $900.

They have also dispensed with the County Commissioners, and provided for the election of one Superintendent for the county, who is to receive as a compensation for his services such salary as may be allowed him by the Commissioners' Court of the county. This officer is to be elected by the people on the first Monday in May next, and will hold his office for two years. Where are the candidates? Let the patriotic host who have the good of their country at heart, and desire to serve it in an official capacity, come forth and show themselves. We have known candidates drafted into the service in order to fix up and secure a caucus nomination, where offices of not much greater importance were at stake.

But, jesting aside, the office to which we allude is an important and responsible one. One, too, in which the people of the county have a deep interest. In order to give the new school system a fair and impartial trial, great care should be taken to secure the selection of competent and efficient officers to place the machinery of the system in execution. Under a prompt, judicial and energetic administration it may work well, and much good be accomplished. while in the hands of inefficient men, the very best system would necessarily prove a failure."

Dr. Scott and his English Shilling.

The members of the Pacific Conference, which lately held its session in San Francisco, California, were presented by Rev. Dr. Scott with a copy of his book on Achan, styled, "The Wedge of Gold." This is a little cooler than would have been his sending "with compliments of the author,"(!) a copy of his celebrated Daniel to Dr. Cumming, of London.

In this book occurs this paragraph, which has already been nailed to the counter as slanderous:

"It is said that the great Mr. John Wesley was so perplexed between Calvinism and Arminianism, as theological systems, that he cast up an English shilling to decide whether he should be a Calvinist or an Arminian."

The copy presented to the Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in California, is not expurgated of this paragraph! How could they receive it! Perhaps a resolution of thanks was passed by a rising vote. We advise them to get that "English shilling" of Dr. Scott, and cut their eyeteeth on it.

Meekness is the child of mercy.

Methodism North and South.

These geographical adjectives will be used, notwithstanding our brethren of the Upper Division object to being called the M. E. Church, North. Their position dubs them, and it is no ill-nature in us that does it. When the Louisville Convention determined on the title M. E. Church, South, then M. E. Church, North, was a correlative necessity. Certain of the Northern press have time and again rebuked it, as calling them out of their name; and one went so far as to characterize a paper as slanderous and lying for using the expression, M. E. Church, North.

Abroad, Wesleyans in America are viewed more as a unit in feeling, influence and character. The rent dividing the body is not seen as far as its light shines.

The following we clip from the "Resume des Nouvelles" of the Archives du Méthodisme of March, Paris:

"Etats-Unis.—D'après les actes des 39 Conferences annuelles de l'Eglise méthodiste du nord des Etats-Unis, pour 1855, le nombre des membres s'élève actuellement à près de 800,000, soit 16,000 de plus que l'année précédente. Le nombre des pasteurs est de 5,408 et celui des prédicateurs locaux de 6,610.

Les nombreuses Conferences de l'Eglise méthodiste du sud des Etats-Unis se tiennent en général dans les mois du novembre, décembre et janvier, cette saison de l'année étant la plus favorable dans ces contrées aux déplacements nombreux qu'occasionnent des réunions de ce genre. Nous apprenons que cette année elles ont eu général présenté un caractère encourageant. Partout il y a eu progrès dans le nombre des amis, des membres et des pasteurs de l'Eglise, ainsi que dans les recettes pour les divers fonds. La discipline est maintenue, et l'harmonie règne. En un mot, il n'est peut-être pas d'Eglise, dit le Christian Advocate de la Nouvelle-Orléans, qui jouisse d'une plus grande paix que la nôtre. Ses sont au dehors et non au dedans.

Louisiana Education.—We have been obliged by Dr. Bard, Superintendent of State Education, with a copy of his address before the General Assembly. He makes up an encouraging estimate of State facilities:

"But it is not true that we are wholly wanting institutions possessing the merit of growing excellence. Louisiana, said the speaker, with an air of triumph, is not entirely destitute of colleges. We have Centenary College, numbering upwards of two hundred pupils, and possessing, he was informed, a chemical, philosophical and astronomical apparatus, equal, if not superior, to many institutions North. There was, also, the promising college at Mount Lebanon, in the parish of Bienville, whose President was pronounced by Thomas Jefferson, in a private letter, to be one of the ripest scholars that adorned the soil of Virginia. There were, also, institutions of learning at Homer and Minden, in the parish of Claiborne, of which much might be said in commendation. And here, said the speaker, at the Capitol of the State, we have several institutions which should gratify the pride of all who take an interest in the advancement of the cause of education in our State."

Baltimore Conference.—This body held its session at Baltimore. The following persons were elected delegates to the General Conference: John A. Collins, Henry Slicer, S. V. Blake, N. J. B. Morgan, A. Griffith, Norval Wilson, A. A. Reese, W. Hamilton, J. S. Martin, T. B. Sargeant, John Lanahan, John Poisal, W. Hirst, M. Gehen, N. B. Brown. Reserves: T. H. W. Munro, G. Hildt and Isaac Collins.

The committee on the Metropolitan Church in Washington City reported that the estimated cost of the building is $100,000, and that subscriptions amounting to $40,000 had been received.

The Rev. A. Griffith, having been in the ministry thirty-five years, asked for a supernumerary relation, which was granted.

The Conference voted to request the next General Conference to divide it into two Conferences. A motion was offered to make three Conferences out of the present one; this was finally rejected by a large vote, and the report recommending an equal division was carried by a large majority; the one to be called the Baltimore Conference, the other the Baltimore East Conference.

Thy Will Be Done.—The late Mr. Kilhin, of Exeter, writes: "I knew a case in which the minister, praying over a child apparently dead, said, 'If it be thy will, spare .....' The mother's soul, yearning for her beloved, she exclaimed, 'It must be his will. I cannot hear *if*s.' The minister stopped. To the surprise of many the child recovered; and the mother, after suffering almost a martyrdom by him while a stripling, lived to see him hanged before he was two and twenty. O! it is good to say, 'Not my will, but thine be done.'"

Saving.—Save fifty cents or a dollar, by paying in advance. If you are already in arrears for a year, save on the next by remitting five dollars—three for the year past and two for the present.

Do not be content with swimming on the surface of divine truth—make it your element, dive into it.

There is no solid peace but through Christ; there is no solid wealth but in Christ.

Assyrian Discovery.—It is stated that Col. Rawlinson, who is at present engaged in prosecuting the discoveries commenced by Layard and Botta, and in exhuming from the mounds of the long lost rival cities of Nineveh and Babylon the instructive remains of this once gigantic power, has lately discovered, in a state of preservation, what is believed to be the mummy of Nebuchadnezzar. The face of the rebellious monarch of Babylon, covered by one of those gold masks usually found in Assyrian tombs, is described as very handsome; the forehead high and commanding, the features marked and regular. This interesting relic of remote antiquity is for the present preserved in the museum of the East India Company.

Of all the mighty empires which have left a lasting impression on the memory, none has so completely perished as that of Assyria. More than two thousand years have gone by since the two great cities, renowned for their strength, their luxury and their magnificence, have crumbled into dust, leaving no visible trace of their existence; their very sites forgotten. A chance traveler, Layard, riding through the Mesopotamian Valley, discovered the buried city, and with a success that will immortalize his name, has commenced to unroll the book of Assyrian history and civilization, which, of all the histories of the first period of the world, is most clearly connected with the subsequent destinies of the human race. The discoveries already made furnish ample testimony to refute the skeptic and unbeliever of Scripture truth.

Projected Scriptural Museum.—A new museum is projected, under fair auspices. It is to be called the Scriptural Museum, and its purpose is to afford a series of illustrations of Bible history, geography and manners. Mr. Benomi has lent his cabinet of Egyptian antiquities and his sketches of Assyrian sculpture to the society. A good beginning most assuredly. The society, of which the Earl of Chichester is the President, and Rev. D. Edwards Secretary, propose to embrace the following subjects in their collection: Landscape scenery of Palestine, models of Jerusalem, productions, vegetable, animal and mineral; illustrations of the civil and ecclesiastical polity of the Hebrews, military disciplinæ, sacred antiquities of the Israelites, Assyrians, Egyptians; tabernacle, temple prosenchæ and synagogues; dress of priests and Levites: temple vessels, musical instruments, domestic antiquities, tents houses and furniture; coverings for the head, phylacterics, raiment of camel hair, signets, rings sandals, literature, science and art; writing materials and implements; Siniatic and other inscriptions; manuscripts, poetry, painting and music; agricultural implements, arms and chariots of war; weights, measures, coins and other articles relating to commerce; treatment of the dead and funeral rites. It is proposed to establish a library in connection with the museum, and also to organize courses of lectures on the topics illustrated by the articles in the society's collection.

[London Athenæum.

If we have God for our portion, though everything else is swept from us, we shall do well.

You best consult your interest in time, when you first consult your interest in eternity.

If we embrace error, we reject truth, and the rejection of truth necessarily involves in it the rejection of the God of truth.

It is a great honor to be almoner to the King of Heaven. To give is the greatest luxury. How indulgent then, is God, to annex future reward to what is so much its own recompense!

Naval News.—An officer on board the United States ship Macedonian, under date of Hong Kong, January 15th, says:

The Vandalia is just down from Amoy, and will sail soon for Manilla. The movements of the Macedonian are not yet certain. When this reaches you, both ships will have been absent from the United States over three years, and the terms of service of all their original crews must have then expired, and they, without exception, will be receiving the one-quarter additional pay allowed to men kept over their time.

The Macedonian started from the United States with two hundred and seventy souls on board—but now, notwithstanding she has been constantly recruiting her crew by new enlistments, she has but two hundred and twenty aboard. The deficiency is to be accounted for by deaths, desertions, and the number invalided home. Twenty-two deaths have occurred, and about fifty invalided and returned to the United States.

The Liquor Law Unconstitutional.—The Court of Appeals in Albany, N. Y., has rendered a decision adverse to the constitutionality of the search and seizure clause of the prohibitory liquor law. In another case in which judgment was rendered by the lower court in favor of the constitutionality of the prohibitory principle, the Court of Appeals has reversed the judgment, thus declaring not only the search and seizure clause, but even the general principle of prohibition, unconstitutional.

Four Children Murdered by their Mother.—On the 23d a woman named Ward, residing near Bridgewater, New York, murdered her four children with an axe, and then made an unsuccessful attempt upon her own life. It was said that the neglect and brutality of her husband led to the desperate act.

The Baton Rouge Comet says that a madman was turned out of the penitentiary the other day, his time having expired, and went roaming about town. He finally attacked a party of ladies, but a negro man prevented him from harming them and he was then secured.

The Baton Rouge Sugar Planter of Saturday, says:

It is pretty well conceded that the crop of this parish, for the coming year will be cotton instead of sugar. There has been for some time past, a pretty brisk demand for cotton seed, and so far it has been rather difficult to procure. Since our last issue we have heard of some twelve or fifteen planters, both large and small, who have also determined to try their chances for a crop of cotton.

The Current Week.

Like a soldier flushed with the pride of early success, and conscious of strength sufficient to bear him through all obstacles, into the very heart of the enemy's territory, spring marches against summer and pushes its gleaming cohorts to the charge. Each day chronicles some further achievement; and we who in this great Armageddon travel constantly with the victor, rejoicing in his successes and imraing over the defeat of time, our joint enemy, may learn a lesson from the commentaries of those who have preceded us, fought and won many a skirmish of weeks, months and years, but found Waterloo in the unconquerable reserve of a century.

Monday, March 31.—St. Benjamin, a primitive Deacon, and St. Guy, who flourished about 1046, are the tutelars of the day.

In 1814, the sovereigns who formed the holy alliance entered Paris at the head of the Russian troops. Russia is receiving her reward from France now, and there are fears in England lest the punishment may not end with the least of the foes, but extend across the channel.

In 1850 John C. Calhoun died at Washington.

Tuesday, April 1.—St. Melito, A. D. 175. Saints Hugh and Gilbert.

The annual mercury, dedicated to St. Hugh, is the floral emblem.

The first day of April, by immemorial usage and observance to which the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, has been hallowed as sacred to a great part of the human race—to All Fools.

The Latin name of the month, from which our nomenclature takes its paternity, is Aprilis, from aperio, to open. The Saxons called it Oster, or Easter monath, from the feast that occurred in it to the honor of Easter, or Easter. It is sometimes represented with a girl clothed in green, with a garland of myrtle, hawthorn buds; holding in one hand primoses and violets, and in the other the zodiacal sign, Taurus, the bull, into which constellation the sun enters during the month. The Romans consecrated the first of this month to Venus, the Paphian Queen; the goddess of beauty, the mother of love, the queen of laughter, the mistress of the graces; and the Roman widows and virgins assembled in the temple of Vain Fortune, and disclosing their personal deformities, prayed the goddess to conceal them from their husbands.

The costume is common to all countries. The Indoos make use of it in their Huli festival; and Tessin, an old Swedish traveler, was even sent on an April fool's voyage by royalty, in order to add zest to the joke. He carried the joke so far that he never came back.

In 1810, Napoleon married Maria Louisa, Archduchess of Austria, and the waggish Parisians called him un poisson d'avril—analagous to our April fool. On the occasion the Emperor had a medal struck with Love bearing a thunderbolt for its device, in commemoration of the event.

Wednesday, April 2.—St. Francis of Paula, St. Theodosia, Constantine II, of Scotland, and many more are the catalogued Saints of the day.

The white violet, dedicated to St. Francis, is the emblem.

In 1801, Lord Nelson achieved his great victory at Copenhagen, when eighteen sail of the line were either captured or destroyed.

Thomas Jefferson was born April 2, 1743, and James Monroe, in 1759.

Thursday, April 3.—Agasse, Chlonia and her sisters, and their companions, A. D. 304; St. Richard and others have their anniversaries this day.

The Evergreen Alkanet, dedicated to St. Agasse, is the flower.

St. Richard de Wiche, is among the patrons of the day, was born at Wiche, near Worcester; studied Oxford, Paris and Bologne; became Chancellor to the diocese of Canterbury, and in 1245, against the desire of Henry III, was consecrated Bishop of Chichester. The king seized all his temporalities, but he got them back by replevia, pleading his own cause against the king's deputies, before Innocent IV at Rome. He preached a crusade against the Saracens, and died in 1253. Boniface IV made him a Saint because Bishop Portur said that he restored the dead to life; gave sight to the blind and worked other miracles, which led the old chronicler to add "such wonders have never been performed in our day, and hence the Popes could not make Saints."

Friday, April 4.—St. Isidore, Bishop of Seville, A. D. 636, and St. Plato, an Abbot, are the Saints.

The red crown imperial is the flower, dedicated to St. Isidore.

In 1774 Oliver Goldsmith, "poor Goldy," a possessor of great genius and a plum colored coat, much learning and an old fiddle, died; leaving, however, behind him a name that will be remembered when many prouder ones have perished, and an affectionate regard that no time can destroy.

In 1802, Lloyd, Lord Kenyon, Lord Chief Justice of England, died, aged 69.

—In 1812 the House of Representatives passed the Embargo Bill, which caused the late war with England.

In 1841 William Henry Harrison, President of the United States, died.

Saturday, April 5.—St. Vincent Ferrer, St. Gerald, St. Tigernach and St. Becan, have their commemoration to-day.

The yellow crown imperial, dedicated to St. Vincent Ferrer, is the botanical emblem.

In 1605, John Stow, the antiquary, died, at the age of eighty. He was a tailor, but stitched himself a very prominent place in the great blanket of letter writers.

In 1811, Robert Raikes, of Gloucester, died, aged 76. He was the father and founder of Sunday Schools, and spent his life in acts of kindness and compassion—promoting education as a source of happiness to mankind, and bestowing all of his exertions to help the poor.

The Yamassee Indians, concerning whom Simms has written a very pleasant story, plotted the destruction of all the white settlers from Cape Fear to Florida. A general rising was to be made on the 15th April, 1715; but the plot fortunately came to light and the Yamassees were expelled from the province.

Sunday, April 6.—St. Sixtus I, 120 Pope, martyrs, St. William and St. Celsus, are the saints of the day.

The starch hyacinth, dedicated to St. Sixtus, is the plant.

In 1348 Laura de Noves, immortalized by the verse of Petrarch, died. She returned his love with indifference, but, at Vaucluse, when he had nothing to do but remember her charms and imagine her perfections, he sat and sang to the world of her, and, through his verse, the world will ever recollect her. Unfortunately for romance, Petrarch survived his dulcinea the unusual mourning period of six and thirty years. Francis I, who compared a court without ladies to a spring without flowers, had her grave opened and threw the verses of her lover upon her remains.

In 1803 the celebrated Hyde Park duel was fought between Col. Montgomery and Capt. Macnamara, because their dogs had fought before. Col. Montgomery got a ball in his heart, and Capt. Macnamara one in his hip. After a trial, Capt. Macnamara was acquitted.

Preliminaries to the peace of Utrecht were agreed upon.

Water on the Texan Plains.—We learn that the efforts made by direction of government to procure water on the great plains from Texas to the Pacific, have thus far proved successful. It is stated that in one instance, near the Pecos river—about the 32d parallel—at the depth of 630 feet, the greatest abundance of pure water was obtained. Besides this, the operation developed the existence of coal beds easily accessible, and, as far as the experiments have progressed, evidently underlying the whole of the immense district.

The U. S. Steamer Arctic.—It appears that this vessel, during her late search for the Pacific, encountered a terrific storm that occurred one night off Cape Sable, when the sea was constantly dashing over the decks, and not a soul on board expected to be saved. The staunch qualities of the Arctic—which is considered the strongest and most serviceable vessel in the service—were tested to the utmost. She encountered several other gales, which were, mostly accompanied by snow. The Arctic experienced little or no obstruction from ice, except about Sable Island.

People who think there is something in a name, remark that the greatest English philosopher was Bacon, one of the finest Scotch poets, Hogg, and one of the pleasantest British essayists, Lamb.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

List of Remittances

Received at the Office of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, for the month of March, 1856.

A.
Abernathy	2 00
C Aldridge	2 00
B.
Barlee	2 00
Barrett	2 00
Brown	2 00
Baxter	2 00
Bissell	2 00
Borden	2 00
Bridges	5 00
Byrd	2 50
C Barksdale	2 00
Berlin	2 00
H Blodworth	2 00
Bard	2 00
J Blocker	2 00
M Baldwin	2 00
H Beck	2 00
Brown	2 00
C.
C B Concerly	18 00
Collison	2 00
Clark	4 00
H Carter	2 50
Collins	5 00
Carlile	2 00
Corprew	2 00
Comack	10 00
H Cox	0 50
B Cottrell	2 00
P Crymes	2 00
C Carter	2 00
A Cooper	1 00
W M Copeland	3 25
Clark	2 00
Callahan	0 00
W Conrey
D.
W Dupree	2 00
Dowling	3 50
Dalton	2 50
P Dickinson	7 00
Doocell	2 00
E.
English	5 00
Elmore	2 00
F.
Fuller	2 00
W Flagg	10 00
Flanders	6 00
Foote	2 00
F Flynn	2 00
L Forsythe	10 00
Foster	2 50
H Freeman	2 00
L Fuller	2 00
G.
K Gayle	3 00
Godwin	2 00
A M Goodgion	10 00
Greenwood	8 50
P Gordon	2 00
W Glenn	4 00
R Godfrey	4 00
M Gilmer	2 00
Graves	2 00
Girod	2 00
B Gibson	5 00
H.
W C Hearn	4 00
T Hester	2 00
J Howard	2 00
E Heard	2 00
A A Holt	2 00
D Haden	3 00
J Harp	5 00
T C Hall	4 00
R S Hall	2 00
C Huckabee	2 00
A S Hamilton	2 00
H Houston	2 00
R S Hunter	5 00
J.
J W Jones	1 25
J H Johnson	2 50
Jones	2 50
E H Jordan	5 00
A Jackson	5 00
E Jackson	2 50
K.
R F Kennedan	2 00
H H Kuntz	2 00
J W King	2 00
L.
F H Lewis	2 00
Logenbuhl	2 00
E Lewis	2 00
L Lynch	11 50
A V Leyert	14 00
W E M Linfield	10 00
M.
D G Marse	2 00
Wm McFee	2 00
W Mayfield	2 00
W M Molly	2 00
R J Moore	2 00
J Mury	8 00
H H Montgomery	4 00
J O Morgan	3 00
Miss Morgan	7 50
J W Moore	12 00
S Matthews	2 00
W McPherson	2 00
C N McLeod	2 50
E Myers	3 65
E T Martin	5 00
J K Marshall	2 00
J McGowen	2 00
A S Miller	20 00
N.
J H Nelson	2 00
O.
Wm Owens	2 00
P.
W H Payne	2 00
P S Petty	4 00
P D Pope	2 00
J B Peol	3 00
G H Patello	2 00
S Perkins	2 50
D Pipes	2 05
V J Perkins	5 45
J H Powell	2 00
L F Pulham	2 00
R.
R Randle	5 00
J W Ross	2 00
Wm Ricketts	2 00
L A Reed	10 00
J Richey	2 00
S.
J W Starr	6 00
C A Saddler	2 00
Mrs Scott	2 00
Capt Strock	2 50
B Scales	5 00
W A Sampey	6 00
L P Schooler	2 00
Wm Silcox	2 00
R A Stobe	2 00
W Stegall	2 00
R P Spier	2 00
O W Stewart	2 00
O L Smith	2 20
T.
P J Trammel	2 00
J W Thompson	2 00
A S Tombe	2 00
V.
L Vanscon	2 00
W.
S Windham	2 00
De Warthington	2 00
D M Wiggins	20 00
L M Wilson	2 00
W K Wilson	2 00
F White	1 00
J Works	2 00
G Watson	2 00
J F White	2 00
F Washington	3 00
J H Waters	17 50
S Woodbury	4 00
J D Worrell	2 00
Y.
W W Young	2 00
J C Younger	3 00
A Younger	2 00

MARRIAGES.

On the 12th March, at Summerville, in the parish of Ouachita, by Rev. Reynolds Trippett, Mr. ROBERT G. FAULK to Miss Susan M. WILLIAMS, daughter of Rev. Robert Williams, all of Outohita, La.

On the 23d March, by Rev. J. M. Towles, Mr. JAMES C. BIBBO to Miss NANCY JANE WILSON, all of Jackson county.

☞ As a spring or summer medicine we would recommend Dr. J. Hostetter's celebrated Stomach Bitters above all others. Its strengthening and invigorating effect upon a debilitated system is truly astonishing. Its tonic action on the liver, its tendency to drive all humors to the surface, thereby cleansing the system from all impurities, is what has caused for these bitters such an incredible reputation, inasmuch as they are pleasant to the taste even as a beverage, and are in general use as a family medicine wherever known. For sale by druggists, hotels and dealers generally; O. O. Woodman, corner Magazine and Common streets; John Wright & Co., 21 and 151 Chartres street. of 16

☞ If you are sick, the probability is that the seat of your sufferings is in the stomach. From a weak stomach proceed dyspepsia, languor, oppression in the diaphragm, jaundice, headache, nausea, bodily weakness, dimness of sight, heartburn, costiveness, dysentery, and a legion of other tormenting diseases. Indigestion produces thin blood, and therefore destroys the strength and vigor of the system. To restore the strength of the stomach, and enable it to throw off and dismiss forever all these tormenting and dangerous complaints, nothing is necessary but a persevering use of Hoofland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, Philadelphia. There is no mistake, no failure in their sanative effects. See advertisement. m 1m

☞ A MASTERPIECE OUTDONE.—We have lately supposed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was the Ultima Thule in its line, and that nothing bad been or would be invented which could at all surpass it in its fine points of excellence as a medicine. But we are confidently assured, by those competent to judge on the subject, that Ayer's new Pills excel in high medical artistry even that widely celebrated embodiment of his skill. He has succeeded in making them not only pleasant to take, but powerful to cure the large class of complaints which require a purgative remedy.—Lancaster Argus, Ky.

They are for sale by J. WRIGHT & CO. and all city druggists.
f23 2m

A SOUTHERN REMEDY.

Made by O. O. Woodman, New Orleans, La.

HAS received the appointment from the proprietor for the sole agency of

Woodman's Cherry Expectorant.

the medicine that has created such an excitement at the North among the Physicians, and has been pronounced by all who have used it as being far superior to any Cherry Pectoral.

WOODMAN'S CHERRY EXPECTORANT

Contains the active medical qualities of the pure decoction of Wild Cherry Bark, and many other valuable ingredients that render it far better than any other cough medicine in this country.

RECOMMENDATION.

NEW ORLEANS, April 9, 1855.

Dear Sir—The public generally are fully aware of the thousands of remedies for diseased lungs, under the title of Sanatives, Pills, Plasters, Liniments, etc., that are daily brought to their notice through the newspapers by way of advertisements. My object in writing this note for publication is to induce the public, or at least those who are afflicted, to use one that contains articles of real worth in pulmonary diseases. I am conscious that in so doing, I am acting most unprofessionally and derogatorily to the interests of Medical Science and the regular practitioners of Medicine. I refer to Woodman's Cherry Expectorant, which in a scientific remedy that I have used with more success than any of the usual prescriptions used by physicians.

A. M. MAITLAND, M. D.

This preparation has attained a wide celebrity from the universal success which has attended its use. For though coughs, colds, and in fact, any pulmonary complaint, yields medicine, from its peculiar properties as a discutient, and its soothing power to all irritations of the throat, will probably be preferred to any other offered to the public. As an appetizer, or dyspeptic remedy, it will also be found excellent, its natural and genial warmth keeping the digestive powers in proper tone.

Remember that this is the only cough medicine that has stood the test of the medical fraternity. It is sanctioned by, Approved of, and recommended by leading physicians of New York city. Every bottle is warranted, give it a fair trial and no money required. We guarantee it to be better than any Cherry Pectoral, Cod Liver Oil, or anything else now extant.

For BRONCHIAL AFFECTIONS it will be found superior to all other remedies.

Sold by O. O. WOODMAN, New Orleans.

Sold by all the Druggists in the South. m5 1t

Centenary Institute----Female Dep't.

SUMMERFIELD, ALABAMA.

Rev. A. H. MITCHELL, D. D. President and Professor of Mental and Moral Sciences.
Rev. B. F. LARRABEE, M. A., Professor of Mathematics and Astron.
W. C. L. RICHARDSON, M. A., Professor of the Natural Sciences.
J. E. GLEFFER, Professor of Music and Modern Languages.
Mrs. L. P. LARABEE, Teacher of Music.
Mrs. M. A. GLEFFER, Teacher of Drawing, Painting, etc.
Mrs. M. COLEMAN, Teacher of Preparatory Class.
Mrs. M. A. CURTISS, Matron.

The graduating exercises take place on the first Wednesday in July. The examination commences on the previous Friday.
March 29, 1856. m29 3m.

INTERESTING DISCOVERY.—On the 22d, a number of laborers engaged in digging a well near Camp Springs, St. Louis, discovered a quantity of Spanish coin and an ivory crucifix.

KANSAS EMIGRANTS FROM THE SOUTH.—On the 27th the Kansas Association of Charleston, S. C., forwarded its second corps of emigrants, consisting of twenty-eight spirited and active young men, who go with the purpose of advancing their private fortunes, and maintaining law, order and Southern rights, in the territory of Kansas.

Magnetic Telegraph.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE ATLANTIC!

PEACE VIRTUALLY CONCLUDED.

Male Heir Born to the French Throne.

NO TIDINGS OF THE PACIFIC.

CONSOLS DECLINED—BREADSTUFFS ENCHANGED.

BY THE SOUTHERN LINE.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The U. S. mail steamship Atlantic, Capt. West, from Liverpool, the afternoon of the 19th, has arrived off Sandy Hook.

Markets.

The Liverpool Cotton market was dull, with sales of only 19,000 bales in three days. Prices were easier but not quotably lower. Lower qualities were the dullest.

The Manchester market was quiet and firm.

Breadstuffs were generally unchanged, and the market dull.

SUGAR—The market closed with an active demand.

MONEY—The market closed steadily. Consols had declined slightly, and are quoted at 91¾ to 92.

Peace! Peace!!

Peace was considered as virtually concluded upon, and the Conference only awaited the arrival of the Prussian Plenipotentiary to sign the protocol.

A Son Born to France.

Our advices state that a son has been born to the French Throne. The young King of Algeria and mother were doing well.

American Affairs.

We have nothing new regarding American affairs.

The Pacific.

Nothing has been heard of the Pacific yet.

ADDITIONAL BY THE ATLANTIC.

The Peace Conference.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Baron Manteuffel, the Prussian Plenipotentiary, had arrived in Paris, and it was expected that the peace protocol would be signed in a few days.

The secrecy concerning the proceedings of the Conference still continues.

Reschid Pacha, convicted of malversation, had been sentenced to imprisonment and fined several hundred thousand francs.

Parliament had adjourned.

The young Prince of Prussia is about to revisit England, to be betrothed to the Princess Royal.

Markets.

CINCINNATI, April 2.—Flour, $6; Whisky, 19½ to 19¾; Mess Pork, $14; Sugar, 8¼ to 8¾; Coffee, 12¼ to 13; Molasses, 41 to 42.

NEW YORK, April 2. Flour is a little lower:—Southern, $7 40 to $9 00.—Mess Pork, $16 50 to $16 75; Lard, 10c.

BATON ROUGE, March 30.—The State-House took fire about 2 P. M. to-day. The excitement is tremendous, alarms are ringing, and citizens are gathering in immense numbers. The fire is in the north-western tower.

SECOND DISPATCH.

March 30, half past 2 o'clock.—The fire has been checked by the intrepidity of the citizens, without doing any material damage to the main building. The tower is considerably burnt. The floor of the Hall of Representatives is flooded with water, and it is thought much damage has been done to the furniture. The fire is supposed to have originated from the careelessness of some persons ascending the tower with cigars.

☞ The superiority of American inventive genius, not only over that of our English progenitors, but indeed of all other nations, has become too tangible to be disputed. It was notorious at the World's Fair in London, that the Americans far outstripped all others in the useful inventions which they supplied. We hear the English in every city railroads, telegraphs and manufactures by power. We are beating them in the Arts, and manufactures by power. We are beating them in the Arts, and in the scientific arts of Chemistry and Medicine, as we have long been the test of manhood. A few and practical proof of this assertion is shown in the fact that the principal remedies of the allied armies of the East are furnished from the laboratory of our own countryman, Dr. J. C. Ayer, of Lowell, is filling orders for his famous preparations of his Cherry Pectoral and Cathartic Pills, for both the land and sea forces in Turkey. His medicines have been tried and approved by those in power, who have found them the most reliable which they could procure for the exigencies in which they are to be employed. [New York Tribune.

Steamships to Nicaragua.

The difficulties between the Rivas-Walker Government and the New York Vanderbilt Company, are not destined to work a suspension of Steamship communication between New Orleans and the El Dorado of the South but for a very short period, and will cause but little material inconvenience. In fact, we think the future will demonstrate that the Company has lost largely by the withdrawal of the line, and that it would have been better for parties therein concerned if the interruption had never taken place.

We understand that steamships will soon be put, even if they are not already, on the Pacific and Atlantic lines, and that ample accommodations will be provided for the conveyance and transit of passengers. Indeed we should not be at all surprised if steamships were now regularly plying between San Francisco and San Juan del Sur, and other ports on the Pacific coast. Before the late troubles, it is understood arrangements were perfected whereby Mr. C. K. Garrison, of San Francisco, had engaged to supply a sufficient number of steamships to meet the requirements of the Pacific side, in case the Transit Company's boats were, or were not, withdrawn. We have good reason to believe this contract is already being carried out in good faith.

On Saturday we received information from an unquestionable source that a steamship from New York is to be despatched by Mr. Charles Morgan, would arrive here on or about the 10th of April, and would start for San Juan de Nicaragua as speedily thereafter as might be deemed advisable. We were also told that this steamship would remain permanently in the trade; and another, we presume, will be added, if necessary. Mr. Morgan never does things by halves.

So it will be seen that the stoppage of steam navigation between the two Republics is destined to be brief, and that no great harm can have resulted from the difficulties to which we have alluded.

An Act

Supplementary to an act entitled "An act relative to Aurora," Approved 11th March, 1855.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana, in General Assembly convened, That each of those persons who are now exempt, or who may hereafter be by law be enrolled active members in any one or more of the present or future fire companies within the parish of Orleans, attached to, connected with, and co-operating with the Firemen's Charitable Association, and who may serve as firemen for a period of six years after the age of eighteen years, and who, while thus serving, are also members of the Firemen's Charitable Association, shall, during the period of such service, be and thereafter, be exempt from any jury or militia duty, within the State of Louisiana, except in cases of invasion or insurrection: Provided, That in every case in which any person may claim the privileges granted by this act, he shall exhibit to the President and Secretary of the Firemen's Charitable Association a certificate or certificates of time of service and honorable discharge, signed by the commanding officer and Secretary of the incorporated fire company or companies in which he has been enrolled, and the said President and Secretary shall find that the loss served singly or collectively as an active member in one or more of said fire companies, and been a member of the Firemen's Charitable Association during the term of six years, it shall be their duty to furnish each of such persons with a certificate in duplicate accordingly, to serve as proof of the facts therein stated, and receive from each of such persons a contribution of two dollars for the benefit of said Firemen's Charitable Association, one of which certificates shall be filed in the archives of the Sheriff of the parish of Orleans.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That all acts or parts of acts contravening the provisions of the foregoing, be and the same are hereby repealed.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, etc., That this act shall take effect from and after its passage.

WILLIAM W. PUGH,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
C. H. MOULTON,
Lieutenant Governor and President of the Senate.
Approved March 29, 1856.

ROBERT C. WICKLIFFE,
Governor of the State of Louisiana.

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE,
I hereby certify the foregoing to be a true and correct copy of the original act deposited in this office.
Given under my hand and seal of the State, at Baton Rouge, this 29th day of March, A. D. 1856.

ANDREW S. HERRON,
Secretary of State.

A correspondent of the Charleston Courier, writing from Jacksonville, Fla., relates a singular suicide committed near that place by a stranger. He was sick, and had come to the place for his health; he purchased a pistol, hired a horse and buggy, drove out of town to a wood, dismissed the driver, and before the latter had driven out of hearing, blew his brains out. He was from Boston, and his name was J. N. Knox. Before committing the deed, he had deposited about $1,000 with the keeper of the hotel, and took his receipt for the same. He was in extremely bad health, scarce able to walk, and had remarked that he had suffered more than forty deaths.

A Beautiful Painting.

Every one who is at all conversant with American art, has seen either the original or some copy of Cole's celebrated paintings of Life, a beautiful allegory worked out in four pictures, of as much power and inspiration as any this country has ever produced. They take a new-born child, conduct it through infancy, youth, manhood and old age, at last opening the portals overhead, and ushering the tired spirit into another and brighter world. The conception and execution have both been highly praised, and the great whole stands among our foremost works of art. They have been distributed, recently, by some Art Union scheme, in Cincinnati.

A painting, not unlike Cole's, in general purport, in excellence of plan, excellence of conception and coloring, has been recently produced by an artist whose name we are confident will yet be prominent among those of our country—Mr. Robert Gschwindt. He has executed a work which combines the highest merits of allegorical art with great truthfulness of portraiture. It is intended to represent a young daughter of Col. Acklen, and in merging her own personality in a dream which she had not long before her death, whereby an Angel appears and stands by her side. The little girl is sitting upon a sofa, in a partially reclining position. At her side, just so removed as to give the portrait a perfect exhibition, appears the Angel, looking kindly and affectionately upon her, and with the left hand upraised, pointing above. The portrait is very natural and well executed, although we cannot avoid thinking that, like most post-mortem pictures, the coloring is somewhat dead and too near the precise copy. As it was taken a fortnight after death, this could hardly be expected otherwise.

The Angel is a very beautiful and poetic conception: golden haired and blue-eyed, with features in the highest degree spiritualle and loving, looking like an incarnation of affection and innocence. The wings have a dreamy, feathery and indistinct appearance, which elevates in a great degree, our natural association and antagonism between the real and the ideal; that which is hard, earthly fact, and that which is the beautiful conception of the mind. The expression of the mouth and eyes is as pure and innocent as anything we have ever seen, and the whole figure is that of an airy Undine, self-reliant and overflowing with love. From the waist down the mist suppdants that pictorial millinery too often made use of, and just touches the foot of the couch. A great promise and expectation breathes in the whole being, and an apparent effort is exhibited to open for the dying child some such glorious view as the spectator is compelled to imagine yet rest up and irradiate the memory of the Angel-guardian.

It is a very difficult thing to paint with words all that is expressed by the brush. It is the high prerogative of the latter to embrace a thousand sentiments too shadowy and ethereal for utterance. It seems to us, that, in this picture, the poet-painter has written out an elegy and an allegory of far more than ordinary merit—indeed, surpassing anything we have seen for a long time. He has told two stories of this world and the next; and has so beautifully draped that transition state in which the "mortal puts on immortality and death is swallowed up in life," as to make the journey delightful and attractive, rather than gloomy and dark; irisembored with a promise the mind fails to wholly comprehend. It was the manner of the ancients to make death a great Golgotha and place of skulls; to inscribe the tomb with cross-bones and inverted torches; to paint a setting sun and gathering cloud. Our more kindly and christian philosophy rejects the barbaric customs and depicts rather a rising sun, opening buds, and the song of birds. In the painting of Col. Acklen's daughter this theology of civilization is beautifully allegorized and wrought out. The painting can be seen for a few days at the carpet store of Todd & Co., 120 Canal street.

Cotton Statistics.

In our paper of Wednesday last we alluded to the quantity of cotton yet to come out of Red river, and said it would be difficult to arrive at any definite amount, estimating the quantity at 75,000 bales, intending to convey the impression that that amount would be received from above Natchitoches, not meaning our estimate to include Ouachita river, which although emptying into Red river some thirty miles from the Mississippi river, is not considered a branch of the same; nor do we when speaking of the cotton to come from Red river include that which is to be received from the Ouachita section.

Our remarks have called forth a communication which will be found below over the signature of "Observer," who brings a tremendous array of figures and statistics to sustain his views, which would go to swell the receipts at this port towards 1,850,000 bales. How much cotton is in the country bordering on Red river and its branches, is impossible to ascertain. That a considerable quantity will be retained over will be conceded, and when the subject is closely scanned 75,000 bales to come from above Natchitoches will be nearly the extent that will reach market this season. This will be allowing one thousand bales per day until the middle of June.

But as "Observer" includes Ouachita in his estimate it is unnecessary for us to extend our remarks; only if we receive three thousand bales per day until the 14th of June, from Red and Ouachita rivers, with the expected amount from other sections, those who are buying at present prices may begin to calculate the losses, and if existing rates are to be realized we should urge every planter to send his crop or crops to market with all speed, even the planter who has three entire crops now above the raft would do well to profit by our advice, though others in sections of the country accessible at all times are holding for 12½ cents:

NEW ORLEANS, March 27, 1856.

To the Editors of the Crescent—In your issue of yesterday's date you allude to the quantity of cotton yet to be received from the Red, Ouachita and other rivers, but as you give no basis, perhaps the following facts and inferences together may be interesting to your numerous readers. From records that have been kept to the present date this year and carried out in the same proportion for the remainder of the month to the 1st of April, we are enabled to make a comparison with the year 1852 and '53, of which we have a record of the receipts equipped for the region referred to:

The receipts from the Red river and tributaries, including the Ouachita, in 1852 and '53, were	bales, 260,756
There was same cotton left over the season of 1853 and '54, and a considerable proportion of the crop of 1854 and '55. To meet objections as to the following estimate we will say nothing about the cotton left over 1853 and '54, and not take into the calculation the increased product from the new lands and extended planting that is constantly going on in that productive region, and moreover to meet the objections of those who may think so much of the increased corn planting we will assume that the whole quantity to come forward from the 1st of September, 1854, for the season was only	bales, 40,000
Now, more, we will deduct from this 15 per cent, for the objections of those who may say the crop was not as good,	bales, 30,000
Which leaves a total to be received in 1854 and '55, bales,	340,000
During the whole of last season we received, to the 1st of September, 1855, only	bales, 169,681
Cotton remaining in the country	bales, 171,000
The crop of the past year has at least been as good as 1852 and '53, without making any allowance for increased force and increased cultivation for three years, or rather, putting that against any drawbacks	bales, 400,000
To be received, 1855 and '56	bales, 571,000
Deduct receipts to the 1st of April, 1856	bales, 334,000
Cotton yet to come forward	bales, 237,000

This statement I may add is supported by the known quantities of cotton on some plantations, and by the opinions of intelligent men in various sections of the country referred to. The new crops have not reached the points yet that you allude to or only a portion.

The receipts to the 1st of April, 1853, were		bales, 356,532
"	1st 1855,	112,809
"	1st 1856, will be	334,253

Navigation has not been so good, so early, nor so continuous as in 1853, or we would undoubtedly have had more cotton. In the month of February alone this year we received from Jefferson, Benton, Carolina Bluffs, Minden, Powhatan and Hurricane Bluffs, 26,148 bales of cotton, against none during the same period of last year, and that is a sample of the whole year of Red river. To those who may assert that the cotton was hauled to lower points, I would state that during the same month of February we only received from Shreveport, Grand Ecore, Pompte, Alexandria and Plaisance, 18,312, and that for the same period this year from the same points we have received 27,000 bales. The same comparison held good with the Ouachita. The planters have yet to haul and haul to haulings a large portion of the last crop, they have not been able and have done as much or more in the limited time we have had this season than could have been expected; but that is no argument, for there is no more cotton in the country. We know there is a good deal more, but what that quantity is must be left to logical conjecture unless we admit the unconscionable data I have brought forward, and draw the recipes from them. Perhaps some of your correspondents may be able to add some to elucidate the subject. I have given my mite candidly, and submit the myself.

Yours, respectfully, OBSERVER.

A DAY SPEEDY.—Late advices from Isle au Sal, Cape de Verds, state that the Island was very healthy, but water was exceedingly scarce, no rain having fallen for four years, which caused the cattle to die in great numbers. Breadstuffs were held at very high prices—flour at $18 per bbl., and bread-at $19 per bag.

NICARAGUA.

Important from Central America.

War Declared between Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

The steamship Daniel Webster, Capt. Patterson, arrived on Saturday from San Juan, which place she left on the 23d, bringing over 100 passengers.

The steamship Star of the West left San Juan at the same time, with 200 passengers, and $260,000 in treasure, for New York.

Left in port, British brig-of-war Heroines, American brigs G. W. Russell and R. Haskins, and schooner Thomas Bradley. The latter vessel clearing for New York. The British sloop-of-war Eurydice sailed on the 18th, on a short cruise.

This arrival brings the expected intelligence, that war has been declared between Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

It will be remembered that the amicable overtures of the Nicaraguan government to Costa Rica were rejected, for the alleged reason that she had employed North Americans in her military establishment. Col. Louis Schlessinger, the ambassador, returned from his mission and reported, that he had a favorable reception in one Department, but on arriving at Punta Arenas, on the Pacific, the native officer with him deserted, and he and Capt. Sutter were immediately sent, under guard, out of the country, with threats against all Americans.

On the 19th, Schlessinger and Sutter returned to Granada, an ambassador arrived from San Salvador, bringing despatches of a peaceable character, but asking Gen. Walker why he brought so many Americans to Nicaragua, and, report says, offering him $25 each to take them from the country.

The President of San Salvador, in a recent message to the Congress of that State, calls attention to Nicaragua, and states that she has been increasing her regular army without assigning reasons therefor. El Nicaraguense denies this, and says:

Heretofore, and at all times, the standing army of this State has varied from one thousand to fifteen hundred men, and in times of war the number has been increased to twenty-five and forty hundred men. This must be known to the Executive of San Salvador. To-day the army under Gen. Walker does not consist of more than nine hundred men—less than it ever was before and yet the President of San Salvador animadverts upon it as an undue enlargement. It has been the conceded privilege of the State to keep an army of fifteen hundred soldiers, and until another understanding is had, we cannot acknowledge the right of any one to take umbrage at the enlistment of that number of men. When, in the midst of profound peace, the Republic exceeds this limit, then it will be time for neighboring powers to forewarn themselves of the fact."

On the 10th inst., Gen. Walker issued the following proclamation:

To the People of Central America.

Invited to Nicaragua by the Democratic party of the Republic, the American force under my command has steadily struggled to carry out the principles for which the revolution of 1854 was undertaken. In order, however, to consolidate a general peace, we were willing to bury past differences and endeavor to amalgamate the two parties into one. For this purpose we have, since the treaty of October last, held in check our old friends, the Democrats, and have attempted to conciliate the men formerly attached to the Government of Estrada.

With the same view the Provisional Government of Nicaragua, although differing in ideas and principles from the Governments of the other States of Central America, attempted to establish frank and friendly relations with the neighboring Republics. Our overtures of peace have been rejected. Our propositions of friendship have been not only disregarded but treated with scorn and ridicule. Contempt and continuously have been returned for the amicable messages we sent to the other Governments. The only reason for such conduct is the presence of American forces in the State of Nicaragua.

The self-styled legitimist party of Nicaragua has repulsed our efforts at conciliation. They have maintained communications with their fellow-serviles in the other States. They have, by all means in their power, attempted to weaken the present Provisional Government, and have given aid and encouragement to the enemies of Nicaragua outside of the Republic.

In this condition of affairs, nothing is left for the Americans in Nicaragua but hostility to the serviles throughout Central America. A very large proportion of the so-called legitimists of this State are either open or secret enemies to our presence on this soil. They owe us for the protection they have had for their lives and property; they have paid us with ingratitude and treachery.

Against servile parties and servile Governments of Central America, the Americans in Nicaragua are banned, by the common law of self-protection, to declare eternal enmity. Our proffered friendship has been rejected. We can only make them feel that our enmity may be as dangerous and destructive as our friendship is faithful and true.

The troops of the army of the Republic of Nicaragua will assume and wear the red ribbon. By command of

WILLIAM WALKER,
General Commanding-in-Chief.

Ph. R. Thompson,
Adjutant General Nicaraguan Army.

The next day a formal declaration of war came from the Costa Rican Government—an address from the President of Costa Rica to the people of Nicaragua calling on them to rise and destroy the Americans. A translation of this we give below:

The President of the Republic of Costa Rica to all its Inhabitants:

Fellow-Countrymen, to Arms!—The hour that I foretold to you has arrived. Let us march to Nicaragua to destroy that wicked phalanx which has reduced her to the most shameful slavery! Let us march to fight for the liberty of our brethren.

They call on you: they expect you to rise up against her oppressors. Her cause is our cause. Those who to-day rob, revile and assassinate them, audaciously defy us, and endeavor to bind upon us the same bloody chains. Let us fly to burst asunder those of our brethren, and to exterminate their executioners by the last man.

We do not go to contend for a piece of land, or to acquire ephemeral power; not to achieve miserable conquest, and much less for sacrilegious purposes. No! we go to struggle for the redemption of all our brethren from the most iniquitous tyranny. We go to help them in the fruitful work of their regeneration. We go to tell them, "Brethren of Nicaragua, arise! annihilate your oppressors. We come here to fight by your side, for your liberty, for your country! Union, Nicaraguans, union! Bury your internal differences forever! No more party feuds, no more fratricidal discords! Peace, justice, and liberty for all! War only on filibusters.

To the conflict, then, Costa Ricans—I march at the head of the national army. I, who rejoice to see this day your noble enthusiasm, which makes me proud to call you my sons, wish always to share danger and glory with you.

Your mothers, wives, sisters and daughters animate you. Their patriotic virtues will make us invincible. In fighting for the safety of our brethren, we shall fight likewise for them, for their honor, for their existence, for our idolized country, and Spanish-American independence.

All the loyal sons of Guatemala, San Salvador and Honduras, are in march upon that horde of bandits. Our cause is holy—triumph certain. God will give us victory, and with it peace, concord, liberty, and union in the great Central American family.

JUAN R. MORA.

San Jose, March 1, 1856.

The reply to this was an immediate declaration of war against Costa Rica by the Government of Nicaragua, in the following decree, published in the Spanish department of El Nicaraguense, of March 15th:

The Provisional President of the Republic of Nicaragua to the inhabitants thereof.

Whereas, the Government of the Republic of Costa Rica has unjustly refused to recognize that of Nicaragua, and has interfered in her domestic affairs; and whereas said government has insulted the dignity of him upon whom now rests the destinies of Nicaragua, repelling the amicable mission of last month, whose object was the establishment of a fraternal alliance; and further, has called to arms its inhabitants by an offensive proclamation dated the first of the present month; and as the Government of Costa Rica is responsible for all the evils that may be occasioned by its doubtful and unjust course of proceeding;

Therefore, this government, in the exercise of its faculties,

DECREES:

ARTICLE 1st. War is declared against the Government of the Republic of Costa Rica; and in conclusion Nicaragua will not be responsible for the evils that this declaration may produce, for the reasons above given, and because it is made with the object of vindicating her honor and her rights.

Given in Granada, on the 11th of March, 1856.

PATRICIO RIVAS,

The following order was then issued by Gen. Walker:

GENERAL ORDERS—No. 15.

HEAD QUARTERS OF THE ARMY,
Adjutant-General's Office, Granada, March 13, 1856.

The Supreme Provisional Government of the Republic of Nicaragua having formally declared war, by decree of March 11th, 1856, against the State of Costa Rica, the army will be held in readiness to commence active operations.

By command of WM. WALKER,
General Commanding-in-Chief.

PH. R. THOMPSON, Adjutant-General N. A.

The Picayune of yesterday says:

We are informed that Gen. Walker, immediately after the declaration of war, attended 300 troops across the Lake to Virgin Bay that evening, and that after waiting a day to secure supplies, he sent 280 in a battalion of five companies into Costa Rica, Col. Schlessinger commanding, until Walker himself or Gen. Hornsby should join him. Major J. C. O'Neal and Capt. D. W. Thorp were the next in command. Ad last advices the Nicaragua troops had not even taken Rivas, but had supplied themselves with horses, and on the 21st inst. they were to march for Guanacaste.

The Central American of the 14th, published at San Juan, says:

War has been declared against Nicaragua by the Government of Costa Rica, and 3,500 troops are under way, headed by Gen. Mora, the commander-in-chief. Baron Bulow is in the field with 500 men.

We are informed that the Transit Company have been notified to stop running their boats upon the river, or Costa Rica will, not be responsible for the consequences.

On the part of Nicaragua, Gen. Walker has dispatched Major Schlessinger to meet the Costa Ricans. Up to our going to press all kinds of exaggerated reports are made by the natives, upon none of which we can safely rely.

Of the actual condition of affairs between the belligerents we have no further news. From an article in El Nicaraguense we extract the following paragraphs:

Nicaragua would have preferred a peaceable adjustment of the difficulties with Costa Rica, as her offers of peace have amply testified. But she does not shrink from the sternner arbitrament of the sword. And since war has been thus wantonly thrust upon us, since we are so unjustifiably insulted, it does not rest at our charge to ask for peace. The enemy must offer terms of reparation for this aggression before Nicaragua can consent to any cessation of hostilities.

The proclamation of President Mora is a regular piece of Bunkumbe, and would do credit to a backwoods lawyer. He says a great many things he does not mean, and proposes feats he has no idea of accomplishing. He is a weak President, something after Franklin Pierce's model, and no doubt has a Minister quite the counterpart of Mr. Marcy. But they have waked up the wrong man—they have put on airs in the wrong company. Gen. Walker will learn them better manners, while he imposes upon their minds a serious lesson in politics. Such will be the consequence of this piece of parchment to Mr. Mora and his Secretary individually.

To Costa Rica, as a nation, we cannot calculate the consequence. On her rests the blame, and on her must fall the effects. This much we can say, however, that peaceful citizens need apprehend no evil. The soldiers of Nicaragua come to regenerate, not to destroy; and while an energetic war will be waged against the Government of Costa Rica, private property will be held sacred, and personal liberty proclaimed as inviolable. The agitators, however, who have set this war on foot must hold themselves responsible to a new and different authority from any that ever judged their delinquencies heretofore.

It has been vaguely hinted that Americans are turned in battle by the enemy, are to be summarily executed. The truth of this report we must disbelieve, but we assure the army that the General has determined on a fearful retribution in the event so inhuman a proceeding should be attempted. The frightfulness of the retaliation would make a gitting of the State. But we have no fears of so improbable a contingency, and only refer to it as a rumor.

It is highly probable our army is to-day within the borders of Costa Rica, and in a few days we shall hear of the capture of Guanacaste.

We learn that it is General Walker's intention, as soon as the proper supply of horses can be obtained, to mount two companies of men, armed with Sharp's rifles, sabres and revolvers, to be employed as rangers in the military service of the State.

El Nicaraguense has an account of the ceremony of raising the flag of Nicaragua for the first time, which took place in the plaza of Grenada on the 2d inst. The ceremony closed with a salute of twenty-one guns and three cheers for Gen. Walker. The ensign consists of three stripes, two of sky-blue, with a white stripe in the centre. In the midst of the white is a circular device of the seal of State, and the representation of seven volcanoes, in token of the volcanic range of Nicaragua.

A letter from Virgin Bay states that the troops which marched against Costa Rica, consisted of one from New York, under command of Capt. Creighton; one from New Orleans commanded by Lieut. Coleman; a German and a French company. The letter reports the men in excellent spirits, and resolved, if they get a chance, to make their first fight tell.

The True Delta publishes a letter of the 10th from Castillo, from which we extract the following:

The English mail to Costa Rica was seized a few days since at the junction of the Cherikpokee and San Juan rivers, by the detachment stationed at that point by Gen. Walker.

Correspondence had passed between the English officers at San Juan, and Col. Baldwin, the commandant of the detach

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

THE MISSING SHIP.

BY W. H. HOSMER.

No news from the missing ship
With her precious freight of lives,
Though on the watch for tidings
Are husbands, lovers, wives!
The nation's mind is troubled
To learn the vessel's fate;
Both hearts may she find, at last,
With her thrice-precious freight!

The sea is a mighty mistress
In this dread world of care;
Roaring in Polar Regions,
Or far below coral bowers.
Within her grand, old chambers,
What treasures lie concealed!—
The conquering fleets of Carthage,
And hosts with spear and shield.

No news from the missing ship!
Has she struck on frozen shores?
Or by an iceberg shattered,
Sought part in the far Azores?
Or anchorage, forever,
In ocean has she found—
Vast tombs, where hope lies buried
And Royalty discrown'd!

The winds we have questioned, often,
That landward wildly blow;
They only moan and whistle,
But say not YES, nor NO!
When will the missing Steamer
Approach our coast again?
Give answer, blast of midnight—
Give answer, roaring main!

Prayers for her safety, mightily,
Rise from a million lips;
A shimmering of hope remains
That clouds not know eclipse.
May the signal-gun give token
That she is under way,
With her precious freight of human lives,
And moving up the Bay!

[N. Y. Evc. Post.

The Farmer.

Does the farmer dig the dirt?
Aye, aye;
Does he wear a coarse shirt?
Aye, aye;
And if his cheek is brown
With the kisses of the sun,
Is he less a gentleman?
Nay, nay.

Does the farmer plough and sow?
Aye, aye;
Does he wield the spade and hoe?
Aye, aye;
And if his hand is hard,
And his feet be roughly shod,
Shall we give him less regard?
Nay, nay.

Does the farmer work for all?
Aye, aye;
Labors he for great and small?
Aye, aye;
If from out the farmer's store
Comes the bread for rich and poor,
Should we honor him the more?
Yea, yea.

Give the farmer then his due!
Aye, aye;
Though he serves, he's master too!
Aye, aye;
And may heaven its blessings shed
Upon the farmer's head,
Till we cease our cry for bread!
Aye, aye.

Chastisement of a Bully.

During the period of the occupation of France by the allies of Louis XVIII, in 1815, this system was pursued extensively by the French officers. Patriotism and a deep sense of injury perhaps palliated its atrocity. Day after day, English and Prussian officers would be grossly insulted by Frenchmen, would send a cartel, fight, and be carried off regularly to Pere la Chaise. Some of Napoleon's maitres d'armes made a business of killing their man regularly each day.

A story is told of one of them—an old Capitaine Ducroc—who had slain his scores, and was never known to have met his match with the sword. He never sent a challenge, was always the aggressor, and pitilessly insisted on the right of choosing his favorite weapon. When he had not found an adversary in the course of the day, he would enter the Cafe Foy, at Paris, towards six o'clock, for dinner; and the waiters could tell by his face, and the way he twirled his mustache, that he was on the look-out for a quarrel. Woe to him who gave him the least chance. One evening, there chanced to drop into the same cafe an English officer named Gwynne. He belonged to the army of occupation, but had only just returned to his regiment from his home, where he had been kept a close prisoner by a wound received at Waterloo. During his absence, his brother had the misfortune—so he heard—to quarrel with Capitaine Ducroc, and be killed by him in a duel.

Gwynne entered the Cafe Foy, a few minutes before six, and sat down at a small vacant table. A waiter started at the sight, and running to the Englishman, observed, with some agitation, that that was "the Captain's table." "What captain, my friend?" asked the Englishman. "Oh! le Capitaine Ducroc!" answered the waiter, pronouncing the terrible name almost with a feeling of awe. Gwynne's cheek flushed at the name, but merely observed that "this table was like all the others, seemingly; still" he said, "if the Captain insisted upon it, he would doubtless satisfy him." On which he took up the newspaper, and began to read.

Almost at the same instant the door opened and a heavy tread of spurred boots was heard approaching the table. When at a few feet distance, le Capitaine stopped, and surveyed the usurper with an insulting smile. Gwynne looked calmly at him, but did not speak. The Capitaine sat down at a table close by, and began to twirl his moustache. People who knew him understood the meaning of the gesture, and gathered closer to the redoubtable champion of France. They had not long to wait before he commenced operations.

Stretching across suddenly, he seized the lamp on the Englishman's table, and snatched it away while with the other hand he plucked the newspaper out of Gwynne's grasp. There was a buzz in the cafe at this gross insult, and one or two Englishmen present sprang to their feet and moved toward their countryman. But he did not speak nor move; his face did not even show any apparent notice of the affront.

Le Capitaine read for a moment or two, then turning his chair so as to bring it close to the Englishman's table, he suddenly stretched out his leg, and brought down the heel of his heavy boot on Gwynne's foot. There was another hiss and murmur among the connaisseurs; but Gwynne contented himself with drawing his foot up and folding his arms. His countrymen gathered round him, evidently galled at his seeming indifference to the insult; but he took no notice. At last le Capitaine, after a long look at his antagonist, called to the waiter for a glass of brandy. When it was brought he raised the glass and drank it, saying to Gwynne, "A votre courage, Anglais!"

Then slowly and leisurely the latter rose. He was a man of immense size and strength. With one stride he stood beside the Frenchman; then, grasping his moustache with one hand and his chin with the other, he wrenched his mouth open and spat down his throat.

"Il faut Monsieur deux fit," he said, in a calm, quiet voice, "to honor me with a call, there is my card." So saying, he left the cafe. Needless to add that his invitation was not accepted. Ducroc never challenged; the choice of weapons was essential to his safety.

A Dog Story.—The other day off a trial of a steam the engine in this city, a dog, entirely white with the exception of two black spots about his head, a short heavy nose, and a tail at once remarkable for its thickness and brevity, displayed a degree of grit, and of persistance in a useless and dangerous occupation that would amply establish—if there should be a controversy on the subject—his claim to membership of the bull-dog family. Soon after the jet of water began to play, he found this way through the crowd and regarded it with fierce and glowing eye. When the hose was lowered he commenced to plunge and snap at the blazing and flashing stream, as if to put it out. Presently the jet struck him and he whirled over several times in the mud, soiling deplorably his white coat. Then the hose was elevated, and the dog remounting himself leaped furiously at the flying water, bobbing up and down, crashing his teeth and howling, until the stream being directed earthward struck him again, emitting him "bobbing around," fairly spinning like a top. At this he appeared astonished, and after considering the case for a moment, shook himself, and with the dignity of a hero discomfited without dishonor, left the scene of action. It was conceded that if the capacity to fight a steam fire engine had ever been concentrated within a dog skin, he would have conquered. Perhaps, at last, the radical mistake that he made was only in attacking the stream instead of the fountain head. He was merely ignorant of the first principles of hydrostatics.—[Cin. Commercial.

Lord Seaforth, who was born deaf and dumb, was one day to dine with Lord Melville. Just before the time of the company's arrival, lady Melville went into the drawing-room a lady of her acquaintance, who could talk with her fingers to dumb people, that she might receive Lord Seaforth. Presently Lord Guilford entered the room; and the lady taking him for Lord Seaforth, began to ply her fingers very nimbly; Lord Guilford did the same; and they had been carrying on a conversation in this manner for about ten minutes when Lady Melville joined them. Her female friend immediately said, "Well, I have been talking away to this dumb man." "Dumb!" cried Lord Guilford; "pass me, I thought you were dumb." I told this story (which is perfectly true) to Matthews; and he said that he could make excellent use of it at one of his evening entertainments.—[Rogers' Table Talk.

A lady who made pretensions to the most refined feelings, went to her butcher to remonstrate with him on his cruel practices. "How can you be so barbarous as to put little innocent lambs to death?" "Why, madam," said the butcher, "you surely would'nt eat them alive, would you?"

Preventing an Elopement.

A writer in the Democratic Quarterly Review, in sketching life at Baden-Baden, records the following incident:

A noble Hungarian lord, Count Christian W——, had come to pass the season at Baden, accompanied by his daughter Helen. Young, beautiful, charming, and heiress to an immense fortune left her by her mother, the young Countess soon found herself surrounded by a host of admirers. Adorers of all kinds were not wanting—rich and poor, noble and obscure, bolder and passionate, grave and gay. It was a perpetual tournament, of which she was the queen, and whose the aspirants contended for her hand by exhibiting their address, grace and seductive qualities. When she entered her carriage, ten cavaliers were in the saddle caracoling around her caleche. At the ball the most elegant dancers were devoted to her. They had neither cares, attentions nor sighs, but for her; whereat many beautiful women—French, English and Russian—were particularly mortified. Amongst these pressing suitors Helen selected the most worthless. The Chevalier Gaetan M—— was, it is true, a charming fellow, pale and delicate, with fine blue eyes, and long black wavy hair, in the place of true passion, he had eloquence of look and word; in short, he dressed with taste, danced marvelously, and sang like Rubini. But, unhappily, these advantages were contrasted by great vices. A disgraced gambler, and unprincipled, the Chevalier Gaetan had quitted Naples in consequence of some scandalous adventure in which he had been implicated. The Count, after having informed himself of these facts, desired, but too late, to put his daughter on her guard against a dangerous affection. Helen listened neither to the advice, the prayers, nor the orders of her father. The man for whom he endeavored to destroy her esteem, was already master of her heart, and she obstinately refused to believe in the disgraceful antecedents of the young Italian. If Gaetan had had to do with a father who lacked energy, perhaps he would have become the happy husband of the young Countess, and the peaceful possessor of the immense fortune with which he was so frantically in love. But the Count knew how to carry his point either by management or force. He was an old lion. He had preserved all the vigor of youth, and all the rude firmness of an indomitable character, which nothing but paternal tenderness had ever softened. Self-willed in his resolutions, stern in his execution of them, he cast about for means to pathora due combat this carpet knight, who had dared to undertake to become his son-in-law in spite of him, when accident threw into his hands a letter which Gaetan had written to Helen. The Chevalier, impatient to attain the goal of his desires, proposed, in direct terms, to the young Countess, an elopement, and proposed a clandestine meeting, at the hour when the Count was in the habit of going out to play whist with some gentlemen of his acquaintance at the Conversation House.

A rose placed in Helen's belt was to be the signal of consent.

The young girl had not read the adroitly intercepted note. "Put this flower in your belt," said the count to her, offering a rose, "and come with me."

Helen smilingly obeyed, and took her father's arm. In the course of their walk they met Gaetan, who, seeing the rose, was overjoyed.

Then the Count conducted his daughter to the residence of one of their acquaintances, and requested her to wait until he came for her. That done, he returned to the little house in which he lived, at the outskirts of Baden, on the Lichtenthal road. He had sent away his servants, and was alone. At the appointed hour Gaetan arrived at the rendezvous, leaped lightly over the wall of the garden, and, finding the door shut, entered the house through one of the low windows. Then mounting the stairs, filled with pleasing emotions, he directed his steps towards the apartment of Helen. There, instead of the daughter, he found the father, armed with a brace of pistols. The Count closed the door, and said to the wretched Gaetan, trembling with terror:

"I could kill you; I have the right to do so. You have entered my house at night. You have broken into it. I could treat you as a felon; nothing could be more natural."

"But, sir," replied Gaetan, almost inaudibly, "I am not a robber."

"And what are you, then? You have come to steal my daughter—to steal an heiress—to steal a fortune. Here is your letter, which unveiled to me your criminal intentions. I shall show you no mercy! But to take your life, I had no need of this trap. You know the skill of my right arm; a duel would have long ago rid me of you. To avoid scandal I did not wish a duel, and now I will slay you only at the last extremity, if you refuse to obey me."

"What is your will, sir?"

"You must leave Baden; not in a few days; not to-morrow, but this very instant. You must put two hundred leagues between it and you, and never again come into the presence of my daughter or myself. As the price of your obedience, and to pay your traveling expenses, I will give you twenty thousand francs."

The Chevalier wished to speak.

"Not a word!" cried the Count, in a voice of thunder. "You know me, understand! I hold your life at my mercy, and a moment's hesitation will be punished with death."

"I obey," stammered the Chevalier.

"In good time! Your twenty thousand francs are in that secretary: take them!"

"Permit me to decline your offer."

An imperious gesture over the false modesty which the Chevalier expressed feebly, and like a man who declines for form's sake.

"But," said he, "the secretary is locked."

"Open it."

"There is no key in it."

"Break the lock then."

"What! you wish me to——?"

"Break the lock, or I'll shoot you."

The pistol was again presented, as an argument which admitted no reply. Gaetan obeyed.

"It is well!" said the Count. "Take that package of bank notes; they are yours. Have you a pocket-book?"

"Yes."

"What does it contain?"

"Some papers—letters addressed to me."

"Let your pocket-book fall in front of the secretary you have broken open."

"What?"

"I must have proof which will convict you."

"But——"

"But, sir, I mean to have all the evidences of a burglary. I mean that the robber shall be known. Robber, or death! Choose! Ah! your choice is made. I was sure you would be reasonable. Now you are about to fly. You will go before me. I do not quit you until you are a league from Baden. For the rest, make yourself easy. I will return late, and will enter no complaint until to-morrow. You may easily escape pursuit, and if my protection becomes necessary, reckon on me. Begone!"

After this adventure, which made a great noise, Helen could no longer doubt. Gaetan was banished from her heart, and she married one of her cousins, Captain in a regiment of cavalry in the service of the Emperor of Austria.

The Philosophy of a Frog.—We saw yesterday, on Bollingbrook street, a lump of solid transparent ice, about ten inches thick and wide, in the heart of which was a large frog nicely frozen up, and looking quite pleasant with a beaming eye. The ice was found on the marsh behind the gas works, and when melted down, the frog very good humoredly shook himself, and jumped about quite lively. We heard a railroad operative describing the philosophy of the thing to a friend of his, as follows:

"You see," says Mikey, "the poor varythun's instinction towld it the air was going to be cowld and that the frost was goin to power down red hot; so it it jumps into the wather to get out of the dampness, and wraps itself up in a foot-square of the liquid to keep the frost out, as whisky was'nt convenient, which is the correct clothing for any intilligent baste—barrin a Know-Nothing—to dress his intarior with. And ye know that water is transporious, for it runs into ye at one end an' out or ye at the other, and never gets into your head at all; and so, it began to snow with a fever bate, and the cowld penetrated the bones of the frog through a foot thick of dry water, so he shook his feathers to keep up the circulation of his blood, which the Haythins call ichor, till by dint of kickin, with his hands and toes—for devil a leg has a frog or any other natural lipid in America—he soon got a comfortable warm congealment of ice round him, and there he squatted as happy and cosy as if he was on Miles' soft, feather bed which was made out of hard porky-pine quills, and looking for all the world like a bane in a sinner's eye, or like a new ambry tipe picture, which is the representation of no mortal conceivable thing any way you can take it. So you see the ice conglomerated round about the frog, for he hit on that plan like an Eighshun shunning to preserve himself in secula seculorum, as the parrot says, till conjaynial times should come, when pop goes the weazel, and he'd come out in a blazing perspiration!"

"And was it the frog did all them mighty things by himself?" demanded Tady.

"'Twas the frog's own natural philosophy," answered Mikey.

"The frog!" said the incredulous Tady.

[Petersburg Democrat.

Professor Mitchell closed one of his recent lectures with the following magnificent illustration: Describing the gradual tendency of the earth's orbit to assume the circular form, he said its short diameter was gradually lengthening, and would continue so to expand until it should become perfectly circular; when it would again contract to its original shape and dimensions. And so the earth would vibrate periodically, and these periods were measured by millions upon millions of years. "Thus," said Prof. M., "the earth will continue to swing back and forth, and to and fro, in the heavens, like a great pendulum beating the seconds of eternity."

At an assemblage of a few friends one evening lately, the absence of a lady was noticed, which was apologized for by an acquaintance, who stated that she was detained by a little incident. "Ah, yes," exclaimed Mrs. John Smith, "and a beautiful little incident it was, too—it weighs just nine pounds and a half!" Mrs. Smith is at present principal of a fashionable academy in the West, named "The School for Scandal," right opposite the "School of Reform." Curious coincidence, ain't it? The world is full of such "little incidents."

DRUGS, CHEMICALS, PAINTS, OILS, WINDOW-GLASS,

O. O. WOODMAN, WHOLESALE DRUGGIST,

Successor to Jarvis & Woodman.

CORNER OF COMMON AND MAGAZINE STREETS, NEW ORLEANS.

IMPORTER AND DEALER IN

CHOICE DRUGS, SELECTED MEDICINES, PURE CHEMICALS, ESSENTIAL OILS,

Medicinal Extracts, Fine Perfumery and Fancy Soaps,

PATENT MEDICINES, SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS, DRUGGISTS' GLASSWARE,

BRUSHES,

FRENCH AND AMERICAN WINDOW-GLASS, PAINTS, OILS, DYE STUFFS, ETC.

☞ Druggists, Physicians, Country Merchants and planters who purchase medicines, may rely upon being suited. Orders Promptly attended to.

300 DOZEN CHERRY EXPECTORANT—FOR THE CERTAIN CURE OF COUGHS, COLDS, INFLUENZA, Croup, Bronchial Affections, Consumption, and all diseases of the lungs, in the incipient stage. Also for the relief of Consumption, in the advanced stages of the disease.

This is an Anodyne Expectorant, prepared on the plan of combining the most active and efficient remedies usually prescribed by the Profession, in all their purity, affording a remedy which is found to give energy and certainty of effect which cannot be had by using the same remedies as usually prescribed by the physician or apothecary.

It is not designed that this shall be a secret remedy, and the formula, with the proportion of each ingredient, will be readily submitted to physicians.

The cost of the preparation is such that it will not warrant the usual amount of Advertising and puffing resorted to by popular medicine dealers. It must make its way in public favor by its intrinsic merits alone.

The following is one of the many testimonials volunteered by physicians of the first standing:

FROM DR. W. M. DEASON.

HALLATIN, Miss., May 1st 1852

O. O Woodman—Dear Sir: I have given your Cherry Expectorant a fair trial—and am well pleased with its effects—better than any other article I ever met with. I would be pleased for you to send me a half a dozen bottles by the bearer.

Respectfully, W. M. DEASON.

Prepared and sold by O. O. WOODMAN, corner of Common and Magazine streets, New Orleans, La. Also, by O. O. WOODMAN & Co., Wholesale Agents, Vicksburg, Miss.

DIRECT IMPORTATION FROM EUROPE—RECEIVING, BY LATE ARRIVALS, DIRECT FROM England, France and Germany, a large assortment of DRUGS, CHEMICALS, GLASSWARE, PERFUMERY, BRUSHES, etc. Among which are—

1020 boxes French Window Glass, assorted sizes.
100 lbs Conrad's Hydriodic Potash.
500 ounces Pelletier Et. Quinine.
500 ounces Howard & Kent. Ess. Quinine.
300 ounces Zimmer's German Quinine.
150 lbs Mander's English Blue Mass.
100 lbs Mander's English Liquorice.
30 gross French Tooth Brushes.
6 gross fine Hair Brushes.
20 gross Camel Hair Pencils.
10 gross assorted Pomatums, French.
2 gross bff lbs assorted Pomatums, in tin cans.
20 reams Filtering Paper.
12 dozen White Plaster Skins.
12 dozen White Split Skins.
5 gross Toilet Soaps, French.
French Surgical Instruments.
6 dozen French Regulating Syringes.
10 lbs Kreosote.
10 lbs Iodine.
3 cases Carb. Magnesia.
200 hanks Violin Strings.

FROM THE BEST AMERICAN MANUFACTURERS—

100 ounces of Quinine, Power & Weightman.
50 ounces Sulphate of Morphine.
10 ounces Acetate Morphine.
50 ounces Strychnine.
100 lbs Am. H. S. Calomel, Flat.
200 lbs Am. H. S. Calomel, in 25 lb boxes.
30 kegs ref. Sal Petre.
25 dozen Chloride Soda.
75 lbs Chloroform.
100 lbs Citric Acid.
10 demijohns Aqua Ammonia.
10 demijohns Sweet Spirits Nitre.
10 lbs pure Nitrate Silver, sticks.
5 lbs pure Nitrate Silver, crystals.
10 bbls Alum.
5 bbls Ground Alum.

I WARRANT ALL POWDERED DRUGS SOLD BY ME AS STRICTLY PURE—HAVING been selected personally, in their crude state, and powdered for my sales. Among which are—

300 lbs Powdered Liquorice.
250 lbs Powdered India Rhubarb.
150 lbs Powdered Cantharides.
100 lbs Powdered Cinchona, red.
250 lbs Powdered Cinchona Yellow
50 lbs Powdered Extract Colocynth.
30 lbs Powdered Bird Cayenne.
150 lbs Powdered Gum Arabic.
1000 lbs Powdered Cream Tartar.
200 lbs Powdered Tartaric Acid.

JUST RECEIVED, BY LATE ARRIVALS FROM NEW YORK—

2 bales India Senna.
1 cask Alex. Senna.
5 bales fresh Hops.
10 baskets fresh Tapioca, 60 lbs. each.
10 cases Calcined Magnesia.
25 cases Hooper's Jalaplas.
8 bbls Camphor.
1 can, 40 lbs, Oil Bergamot, pure.
1 can, 40 lbs, Oil Lemon, pure.
20 bbls No. 1 Irish Glue.
20 bbls No. 1 American Glue.
3 bbls Printers' White Glue.
1 cask Madder.
3 cases White Wax.
3 cases Extract Liquorice.
3 cases Gum Arabic, select.
1 cask Gum Arabic, common.
1 case Fiske Manna.
5 gross Cone's Sparkling Gelatine
1 case, 175 lbs, best Turkey Opium.
27 gross Balsam Capaiba.
5 gross Cubeb Oil Capsules.
10 kegs Pearl Barley.
5 kegs Irish Tamarinds.
100 dozen Broom's Scotch Snuff
100 dozen Preston & Merrill's Yeast Powders.

☞ Arrangements have been made to receive, direct from Saratoga, a regular supply of CONGRESS WATER.

PAINTS, OILS, AND WINDOW-GLASS—

10,000 lbs Pure White Lead
10,000 lbs No. 1 White Zinc Paint, Am.
2000 lbs French Snow White Zinc Paint.
20 casks French Yellow Ochre.
5 bbls Copal Varnish.
6 bbls White Damar Varnish.
3 bbls Japan Varnish.
2 bbls Coach Varnish.
600 gallons Spirits Turpentine.
500 gallons English Linseed Oil.
50 casks English Venetian Red, to arrive.
60 bbls Lamp Black.
1000 boxes American Window-Glass, assorted sizes from 8 by 10 to 24 by 30.
100 kegs Yellow Ochre, in oil.
100 kegs Venetian Red, in oil.

Together with all the various colors, dry and in oil.

200 DOZEN DR. BILLINGS' CARMINATIVE AND ASTRINGENT SYRUP—AN INFALLIble remedy for Cholera Infantum or Summer Complaint of Children, Cholera Morbus, Diarrhœa or any irregularities of the bowels. The long and successful experience in the use of this remedy, by the inventor, in the treatment of all the diseases for which it is recommended, together with the highly respectable testimony which numbers bear to its efficacy in the cure of the lower affections of children, Diarrhœa, Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, in grown persons, entitle it to the confidence of the community.

200 DOZEN WOODMAN'S EXTRACT JAMAICA GINGER—IT IS ELABORATELY PREPARED from carefully selected articles of the best quality; it possesses, in a concentrated form, all the valuable properties of the Jamaica Ginger, and is warranted to be free from all irritating or other properties of injurious tendency.

THE BEST RECOMMENDED MEDICINE IN THE COUNTRY—500 DOZEN MINOR'S MAGICAL FEVER AND AGUE CURE. Warranted in all cases to effect a cure.

200 DOZEN PAIN-KILLING LINIMENT—FOR RHEUMATISM, AFFECTIONS OF THE SPINE, NERvous Diseases, Sore Throat, Weakness, Salt Rheum, &c.

☞ All of which will be sold at the LOWEST MARKET RATES AND TERMS.

O. O. WOODMAN.

a5 5t

The Cordon of Sweet Sounds.—We find the following decidedly good story in the Paris correspondence of the New York Express. It will be appreciated by musical gentlemen with weak nerves:

The sleeping apartments of two gentlemen, belonging to different grades of the upper classes, joined each other. M. de V—— passed his nights in amusing himself at his club, and came home to go to bed at 5 o'clock in the morning. M. de P——, his neighbor, rose at 6 o'clock, and, being an enthusiastic lover of music, commenced "practicing" at the piano. This arrangement not being precisely agreeable to M. de V——, that worthy entreated his neighbor to restrain his enthusiasm until four or five hours later in the day. M. de P—— coolly responded that his enthusiasm was of the nature of the "noon-gun" in the garden of the Palais Royal, and was "bound to go off" at the regular hour. The nocturnal gentleman appealed to a neighboring Commissary of Police. He was laughed at for his pains, and advised to go to bed at a reasonable hour. He had a lease for six years; he tried to rent also the apartments of the musician, but found that he, too, had agreed with the landlord for a term of six years. That plan was, therefore, indefeasible. Should he send the musician a challenge? Upon inquiry he learned that the object of his resentment was an invalid and never quitted his room. As a sort of dernier resort M. de V——, caused his walls to be lined with thick mattresses; but this did not exclude the horrible matinal music. M. de V——, concluded to commence the aggressive. He bought an enormous cor de chasse and made his servant keep up a fearful din throughout the night. M. de P——, the piano man, cited his neighbor before a magistrate and caused him to be fined for a misdemenor—blowing the French Horn for amusement being only permitted during the last days of the Carnival. M. de V——, bought a hammer and pounded with all his might upon the wall. M. de P——, waited until he and the servant were both exhausted with their exertions, and then recommenced his piano. All this time M. de V——, could get no sleep at all. The hammer wouldn't do—that was clear. The noise couldn't be kept up long enough. He must invent something that would be lasting and incessant in its din. The piano must be forced to capitulate. A hand organ passed one day under M. de V——'s window. He called in the proprietor, a Savoyard, and purchased the instrument. It was an organ which had been frozen during its passage across the Alps, and had never since been tuned. M. de V—— bought a patent turn-spit, which ran eight days without being wound up but once, and "adapted it" to his hand-organ. When all was ready, he put his organ close to his neighbor's wall and set the turn-spit in motion. M. de P—— stood it bravely for nineteen hours, at the end of which time he concluded to send a bearer of a flag of truce. He was informed that M. de V—— had gone into the country for eight days, and had carried the key of his apartment with him. At the present writing the organ is in rapid motion, and M. de P—— is trying to underlet his rooms—though with small chances of success.

Important to Smokers.—In Frorlep's Journal of a recent date, an interesting article has been published on the habit of tobacco smoking, and on poisoning by nicotine. Among the facts there mentioned are experiments instituted by Mr. Malapert, a pharmacien, of Poictiers. His intention was to ascertain the exact quantity of nicotine absorbed by smokers, in proportion to the weight of tobacco consumed.—The apparatus used consisted of a stone jar, in which the tobacco was made to burn, connecting with a series of bottles communicating by tubes. The bottles were either empty, or contained some water, mixed or not with a little, sulphuric acid. From a few experiments it was found that in the smoke of tobacco extracted by inspiration, there is ten per cent. nicotine. Thus, a man who smokes a cigar of the weight of seventy grains, receives in his mouth seven grains of nicotine, mixed with a little watery vapor, tar, empyreumatic oil, etc. Although a large portion of this nicotine is reacted, both by the smoke puffed from the mouth and by the saliva, a portion of it is, nevertheless, taken up by the vessels of the buccal and laryngeal-mucous membrane, circulated with the blood and acts upon the brain. With those unaccustomed to the use of tobacco, the nicotine, when in contact with the latter organ, produces vertigo, nausea, headache and somnolence, while habitual smokers are merely thrown into a state of excitement similar to that produced by moderate quantities of wine or tea. From further investigation it was found that the drier the tobacco the less nicotine reaches the mouth. A very dry cigar, while burning, yields a very small amount of watery vapory; the smoke cools rapidly, and allows the condensation of the nicotine before it reaches the mouth. Hence it comes that the first half of a cigar smokes more mildly than the second, in which a certain amount of condensed watery vapor and nicotine, freed by the first half, are deposited. The same remark applies to smoking tobacco in pipes, and if smokers were prudent they would never consume but half a cigar or pipe, and throw away the other. Smoking through water, or with long tubes and small bowls, is also a precaution which should not be neglected.

An "Orful Deacon."—An old acquaintance of ours in the country indulges in a very exaggerated style of description and illustration in his ordinary conversation. For instance, when describing the effect of an alteration in his kitchen chimney, which he had ordered his mason to smoke, he said that "before the chimney was altered it drew the wrong way so powerful, that, every block of wild geese that flew over the town for ten years was sucked down into his tin-place, but since the alteration has been made, the draught was so strong, that if he should hook one end of a log-chain in the middle of the kitchen floor, the other end would stand quivering up the chimney."

"A man discovered America, but a woman equipped the voyage." So everywhere man executes the performance, but woman trains the man. Every effectual person, leaving his mark on the world is but another Columbus, for whose furnishing some Isabella, in the form of his mother, lays down her jewelry, her vanities, her comfort.

Plantation and Garden Fertilizers.

The subscriber has constantly on hand the following concentrated manures, a single trial of which will prove to the most incredulous their value as restorer of fertility to worn out soils, and their adaptation to increasing largely the products of the Garden and the Orchard.

Numerous testimonials from gentlemen who tried them last season have been received, all of whom concur in saying that their experiments were satisfactory and profitable beyond their anticipation.

PHOSPHATED GUANO,
In barrels of about 250 lbs, at 2 cents per lb.
SUPER PHOSPHATE OF LIME,
In barrels of about 250 lbs, at 2 cents per lb.
COARSE GROUND BONES,
In barrels of about 175 lbs, at 1¼ cents per lb.
FINE GROUND BONES,
In barrels of about 200 lbs, at 1½ cents per lb.
PERUVIAN GUANO,
In sacks of about 140 lbs, at 2½ cents per lb.
POUDRETTE
Or de-odorised Night soil, in powder, at $1 50 per bbl.
LAND PLASTER,
At $1 75 per barrel.

—Also—

ROCK SALT, in barrels of about 300 lbs, at 1 cent per lb.

☞ Orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to. A pamphlet, containing further particulars and directions for using the above fertilizers will be sent by mail, on the receipt of a postage stamp, to any one desiring it.

D. C. LOWBER, 93 Magazine st.

m15 6m New Orleans.

Marion (Ala.) Female Seminary.

TRUSTEES.

Hon John D Phelan
Hon Andrew B Moore,
Leonard A Welsinger, Esq
Mark A Myatt, Esq
James Underwood, Esq.

FACULTY.

Rev JAS. K. ARMSTRONG, Principal and Professor of Moral, Mental and Natural Sciences.
Miss Eliza Hopkins, English and Mathematical Branches
Miss Annie Hopkins, English Branches and French,
Miss Ellen Moore, English Branches.
Miss Emma C Mann, English Branches.

ORNAMENTAL DEPARTMENT.

Alfred Schmidt, Professor of Vocal and Instrumental Music, Piano, Harp, Guitar, Melodeon, Violincello.
Mrs E C Adrian, Embroidery, Drawing, Painting, Crape Work and Worsted Work.

STEWARD DEPARTMENT.

L F Dondurant, Esq. and Lady.

COURSE OF INSTRUCTION.

The course of study and text books used will be furnished in catalogue, which will be immediately forwarded on request.

IMPROVEMENTS.

Notwithstanding the apparatus, chemical, philosophical and astronomical, is equal to that of any similar institution in our country, it will be still further increased within the next three months by an additional instrument, of $600.

The grounds of the Seminary are to be greatly extended and beautifully ornamented.

The Library will be greatly enlarged.

Though the Fossil and Mineral Cabinet is already of fair extent, arrangements are in process of rapid fulfillment for greatly enlarging it.

For the carrying out of the above improvements and additions to our facilities, the Principal of the Seminary now holds a solvent subscription of more than $2 000. All the improvements promised will be completed by the 1st of July. m1 tf

Steamboat for Sale.

On the 5th day of April next the steamer R. FULTON, of the undersigned will be sold at public auction, at his landing on Pascagoula River. The boat is well calculated for peddling, and has been built with a particular view to this purpose. She is 55 feet long by 8 wide, and has a 2½ horse power portable engine and boiler, occupying on the floor only 5 by 3 feet. Her speed is from 6 to 7 miles per hour, with 50 lbs steam, and her boiler is capable of carrying 100 lbs. She burns but one cord of wood per week, and requires but two men to run her.

Terms of Payment—One-third in cash; ⅓ after six months, and ⅓ after twelve months, with approved security.

A. KIRKWOOD.

East Pascagoula, Feb 2, 1856. fe23 4t

Good Medicines.

It is estimated that AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL and CATHARTIC PILLS have done more to promote the public health than any other one cause. There can be no question that the Cherry Pectoral has by its thousand on thousand cures of colds coughs asthma influenza bronchitis, &c., very much reduced the proportion of deaths from consumptive diseases in this country. The Pills are as good as the Pectoral, and will cure more complaints.

Every body needs more or less purging. Purge the blood from its impurities. Purge the bowels, liver, and the whole visceral system from obstructions. Purge out the diseases which fasten on the body to work its decay. But for diseases, we should die only of old age. Take antidotes early, and thrust it from the system ere it is yet too strong to yield.

Ayer's Pills do thrust out disease, not only while it is weak, but when it has taken a strong hold. Read the astounding statements of those who have been cured by them of dreadful scrofula, dropsy, ulcers, skin diseases, rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, internal pains, bilious complaints, heartburn, headache, gout, and many less dangerous but still threatening ailments, such as pimples on the face, worms, nervous irritability, loss of appetite, irregularities, dizziness in the head, colds, fevers, dysentery, and, indeed, every variety of complaints for which a purgative remedy is required.

These are no random statements, but are authenticated by your own neighbors and your own physicians.

Try them once and you will never be without them. Price, 25 cents per box; 5 boxes for $1.

Prepared by Dr J. C. Ayer, chemist, Lowell, Mass, and sold by all respectable druggists every where.

fe23 3m J. WRIGHT & CO., Wholesale Agents.

H. JOHNSON, ATTORNEY AT LAW, WESTVILLE, MISSISSIPPI, will attend to collections in the counties of Rankin, Scott, Smith, Covington, Marion, Lawrence, Copiah and Simpson. ap7—1y

Tuskegee Female College.

TUSKEGEE, MACON COUNTY, ALA.

FACULTY.

Rev A. A Lipscomb, D D, President.
Rev Mark S. Andrews, A M, Professor of ancient Languages and Mathematics.
Rev George F. Price, A M, Professor of English Literature.
F L. Franck, Professor of Music.
Mrs Ross, Assistant Teacher of Music.
Mrs Charlotte M. M. Reed, Principal of the Primary Department.
Boarding Department—Mrs Octavia S. Delley.

TRUSTEES.

David Clopton, Esq, President; R. F. Ligon, Esq, Secretary, J. D. Porter, Treasurer; J W Willis, J B Bilbro, J Dent, Hon L Alexander, Rev D Perry, R H Powell, Arnold Seale, D E Anthony, Job Thompson, Dr R H Howard B F Howard.

TRUSTEES

On the part of the Conference M E Church, Alabama.

Rev M S Andrews,
Rev S Armstrong,
Rev T J Koger,
Rev J A Heard
Rev O R Blue

EX-OFFICIO.

Rev E J Hamill.
" W B Neal.
Rev T W Dorman, D D,
" W H Ellison, D D.

COLLEGE EDIFICE.

A large and commodious building, planned by the best architectural talent, and erected in the most substantial manner, is now nearly ready for the reception of pupils. Feeling the great importance of space and comfort for the educational and domestic interests of the institution, the Trustees have spared neither pains nor expense to meet the demands of utility and beauty in the construction of the edifice.

EDUCATIONAL FACILITIES.

A new and valuable apparatus has been purchased for the College. Cabinets of minerals, fossils and curiosities have also been provided. Stated courses of lectures on science, art and literature will be delivered.

OPENING.

The first term of the college will commence on the second Monday of February, 1856.

TERMS.

Board, including washing, fuel and lights, will be furnished at $12 50 per month. Tuition fees will be at the ordinary rates.

REMARKS.

The present circular is merely designed to give notice of the approaching opening of the college, and to afford a general outline of its plans and objects. The public may rest assured that the Trustees, in co-operation with the Faculty, will use all proper and possible means to render this institution worthy of a cordial and generous support. The remaining officers of the Faculty will be elected as soon as circumstances will allow, and it is confidently expected that in a short time the college will be fully organized in all the departments of a thorough education.

Acknowledging with gratitude the earnest and liberal sympathy which this enterprise has so generally received and thankful to that kind Providence which has conducted it to its present stage of promising usefulness, the trustees have now the happiness to announce the near fulfilment of their long-cherished wishes. The location of the college is as healthy and agreeable as could be desired. It is perfectly accessible, and yet sufficiently retired for the purposes of a moral, intellectual and womanly culture. Its expenses will be made as moderate as practicable, and a faithful, parental guardianship will be exercised over all who may be committed to the charge of the institution.

Tuskegee, Jan. 10, 1856. f16—3m

Mansfield Female College

FACULTY.

Rev. H. C. Thwaite, B. D., President and Professor of Mental and Moral Sciences, Belles-Lettres and Ancient Languages.
A. R Rembert, M B, Professor of the Physical Sciences and Mathematics.
——, Professor of Music and Modern Languages.
Miss L. Dake, A M, Instructress in English Literature, Modern Languages, Music, Drawing, Painting, Embroidery, &c.
Miss Isabella V. McCormick, graduate of the State Normal Institute, New York, Instructress in Music, Drawing and Painting.
Miss Mary E. Crowder, M E L, Instructress in Academic Department.
Mrs. Elizabeth E. McCormick, Instructress in Primary Department.
——, Assistant Teacher in the Elementary branches.

N. B.—In a few weeks, a gentleman of distinguished reputation will be added to the present corps, his name occupying the vacancy of Professor of Music and Modern Languages.

RATES OF TUITION PER SESSION OF FIVE MONTHS.

Primary Department	$12 50
Academic Department	15 00
COLLEGIATE DEPARTMENT.
Freshmen and Sophomore classes	20 00
Junior and Senior classes	25 00
ORNAMENTAL DEPARTMENT.
Music on the pianoforte, harp or guit

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY A COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS FOR THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH---H. N. McTYEIRE, EDITOR.

VOLUME VI—NUMBER 10.
WHOLE NUMBER 270.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 12, 1856.

$2 00 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.
OFFICE—30 CAMP ST.

From the N. Y. Evangelist.

Turning to God.

Encouraged by thy Book,
O God, to thee I look;
Though thee I have forsook,
In sin astray.

Yet deign died for me—
Hung on the accursed tree;
Through him, O! make me free!
To thee I pray.

I crucify my pride,
Thy Rock, O! do not hide—
Thy truth shall be my guide;
I would obey.

Thy way shall hence be kept;
Thy offer I accept;
With all my follies wept—
Help me essay.

My sin, I own my sin!
Repenting, I begin,
Eternal life to win,
Through Christ, the way.

O! blessed Spirit, hear!
My wounded bosom cheer,
And make my vision clear,
With no dismay.

Thy frown I cannot bear;
It slants me in despair;
Lord, let thy smile appear
In mercy's ray.

Lord Jesus, comfort me,
That I may live to thee;
And thy salvation see,
In glory's day.

And when I come to die,
Lord Jesus Christ, be nigh;
Receive my soul on high:
Thy grace display.

Resigning all beneath,
Peaceful I'll cease to breath;
Fly, resolute in death,
To heaven away!

Joy and Sorrow.

Joys are our wings, griefs are our weights.

Joys are the wings with which we soar
Above this world so dark and drear,
With them we're bound to earth no more,
Exalted to a happier sphere.

Woes are the spurs while e'er we fly,
Which urges on life's lonely road;
They prick, they wound, we mourn, and sigh,
We fain would leave grief's dark abode.

What is the goal, what is the prize,
For which we press through sorrow's gulf?
Eternity beyond the skies,
Auld endless day of pure delight.

AN ENGLISH TRACT.

The following is a specimen of the tracts which are printed in England, on a single leaf and circulated by the thousands among the people.

JUSTICE AND MERCY.

JUSTICE ..... JESUS ..... SINNER.

"A Just God and a Saviour."

JESUS.

Bring forth the prisoner, Justice.

JUSTICE.

Thy commands
Are done, just Judge—see, here the prisoner stands.

JESUS.

What has the prisoner done? Say, what's the cause
Of his accusation?

JUSTICE.

E'en by his own confession,
His sins are trying, and they cry aloud—
They cried to Heaven, they cried to Heaven for blood.

JESUS.

What say'st Thou, Slander? Dost aught to plead
That sentence should not pass? Hold up thy head,
And show thy brazen, thy rebellious face.

SINNER.

Ah! me, I daresay, I'm too vile and base
To tread upon the earth, much more to lift
Mine eyes to heaven: I need no other shrift
Than mine own conscience, Lord, I must confess
I am no more than dust, and no whit less
Than mine indictment styles me. And if thou
Search too severe, with too severe a brow,
What flesh can stand? I have transgressed thy laws;
My merits plead thy vengeance, not my cause.

JUSTICE.

Loud, shall I strike the blow?

JESUS.

Hold, Justice! Stay.
Sinner, speak on—What hast thou more to say?

SINNER.

Vile as I am, and of myself abhorred,
I am thy handiwork, thy creature, Lord;
Stamped with thy glorious image, and at first
Most like to thee; though now a poor, accursed,
Convicted caitiff, and degenerous creature,
Here trembling at thy bar.

JUSTICE.

Thy fault's the greater.
Lord, shall I strike the blow?

JESUS.

Hold! Justice, stay.
Speak, Sinner, hast thou nothing else to say?

SINNER.

Nothing but mercy, mercy, Lord; my state
Is miserably poor and desperate.
I quite renounce myself, the world, and flee
From Lord to Jesus—from Thyself to thee.

JUSTICE.

Cease thy vain hopes; My angry God has vowed
A just mercy must have blood for blood:
Shall I yet strike the blow?

JESUS.

Stay, Justice! Hold!
My bowels yearn, my tainting blood grows cold,
To view the trembling wretch. Methinks I spy
My Father's image in the prisoner's eye.

JUSTICE.

I cannot hold.

JESUS.

Then turn thy thirsty blade
Into my sides; let there the wound be made.
Cheer up, dear soul, redeem thy life with mine;
My Soul shall smart, my heart shall bleed for thine.

SINNER.

Oh! groundless deeps! Oh! love beyond degree!
The offended dies to set the offender free!

"NOW UNTO HIM THAT LOVED US, AND WASHED US FROM OUR SINS IN HIS OWN BLOOD, AND HATH MADE US KINGS AND PRIESTS UNTO GOD HIS FATHER; TO HIM BE GLORY AND DOMINION FOREVER AND EVER. AMEN!"

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

FEMALE COLLEGES.

NUMBER ONE.

There is a pressing demand for a higher grade of female schools than exists!

The truth of this proposition has often forced itself upon the mind of the experienced instructor of young ladies, but to the world in general it is not so patent. The bloom, the beauty, the simple, playful loveliness of our daughters, divert our minds from the consideration of the more enduring attributes of character. If the schools heighten the polish and augment the winning effect of their manners—if they teach them to wield more skilfully their fascinating charms of person and heart with which nature has endowed them, we are more than satisfied, we are pleased.

Teachers, therefore, aim at this result. They know that the bread of their children depends upon their success in pleasing their patrons; they know that their patrons will be pleased with the glitter and the "gloss;" and, as they have not time to educate the girls and polish them besides, they determine to do the latter as the safest and most remunerative course. Thus the blindness of parents and the interests of teachers conspire to prevent a reform.

There are exceptions to this state of things, both among parents and teachers; and happily the number of these exceptions is continually increasing; and if a reform is ever effected, it will be when they cease to be exceptions and become the rule—when teachers will be candid enough to confess the imperfections of their schools, and to point out the remedy; and parents discerning and zealous enough to receive the former and apply the latter.

That we may contribute our mite to this end, let us examine for a moment the present facilities in Alabama for educating children. What schools have we? The answer is, we have common schools, academies and colleges. The object of the common schools is to furnish to the rudiments of an English education. In those States of the Union where this system is reached, its highest excellence, this object has been well nigh accomplished; but in Alabama comparatively little has been effected. To supply this deficiency various means are resorted to, such as private tuition, neighborhood schools and preparatory departments to schools of higher grade. But it not unfrequently happens that the primary school, in any form, is wholly ignored, and the child is sent to the second grade of institutions to make the beginning. This is always unfortunate—because every grade of schools is better adapted to do its own work than to do that of another; and when ever an academy is called upon to make up the deficiencies of a primary education, it seldom or ever does it well. Of course teachers of such schools should never receive such pupils; but so long as it is for their pecuniary advantage, and public opinion upholds them in it, the largest number of them will yield to the temptation. The whole business should therefore be systematized, the line of separation be definitely drawn, and every departure from it be visited with condemnation.

The primary, or common schools, are for both sexes; but how is it with the academies? There are many "male academies," but are there any for the other sex? My mind wanders in vain among the towns, the villages, and the groves of Alabama, in search of a female academy! It rests upon none! There are scores of "female colleges," but not one female academy!

The marvel is, how the girls get from the common school into the college at one step. Boys are doomed to three or four years close confinement and rigid training within the walls of the academy before they can gain admittance to the classic walks of the college. Girls disdain the vulgar academic plodding, and enter at once upon the grandeur and greatness of college life! This must seem passing strange to those who do not know what the thing called a female college really is.

I have said above that there are no female academies. An academy (says the dictionary) is a school or seminary of learning, holding a rank between a college and a common school. This is the American sense of the term when applied to schools, and it is in this sense exclusively that it is employed here. Now of all the schools for girls in Alabama, so far as my observation has extended, there is not one that professes to hold that rank. They all assume to be of the order collegiate. They are not all named colleges; some are called institutes, some seminaries, and possibly some of them may be termed academies; but in every case where the name does not imply as much, the advertisement or the circular is careful to inform the patrons that the establishment is of collegiate rank. By which is meant that it purposes to complete a young lady's education and graduate her. A few have gone even further, and styled themselves universities, intimating thereby that their graduates would be not only educated, but learned also.

(To be continued.)

SKEPTICISM AND UNHAPPINESS.

Many worldly people shrink from the religion of the Bible as gloomy and repulsive, imposing a heavy yoke of duties, and restraining from many coveted pleasures. But the lives of those who reject religion rarely provoke emulation by their influence of enjoyment. The Presbyterian gives a notes worthy extract from Byron's correspondence, with some significant comments:

"A letter of Lord Byron's, lately published, contains the creed of that brilliant and unhappy man.

"I prefer," says he, "Confucius to the ten commandments—Socrates to St. Paul. Hold virtue in general, or the virtues severally, to be only in the disposition—each a feeling, not a principle. I believe truth to be the prime attribute of the Deity, and death an eternal sleep—at least of the body. You have here a compendium of the sentiments of the wicked. George Lord Byron."

Brief it is, but sufficiently and sadly explicit. The portentous visage of infidelity scowls upon us through these careless, scornful sentences. And self-scribing himself "wicked," although this may have been in a sneer at those who mourned over his departures from all that was good, did he not unconsciously indicate the effect wrought in him by the load skepticism he proclaimed? A scanty and wretched creed produced a corresponding character—and his life became a continued violation of that holy law which he rated beneath the sublime commonplaces of Confucius.

Other effects flowed also out of this one pregnant cause. We transcribe a few lines written by the same hand at another time:

"I once attempted to enumerate the happy days I had lived—days which might, according to the common use of language, be called happy. I could not make them count more than eleven, and I believe I have a very distinct remembrance of every one. I often ask myself whether, between the present time and the day of my death, I shall be able to make up the dozen."

The relation between this extract and the former one is evident. It may be stated thus: Skepticism, when it has conceived, brings forth wickedness; and wickedness, when it is finished, bringeth forth misery. The filiation is complete and most easily traced. We may wonder that he should deny the excellence of God's law, or undervalue those divine truths which Paul spake and wrote; but having avowed his unbelief, we are none under that sin should follow, and lead on to wretchedness; for the starting point foreshadows the end. The cause contains within it its vitality and disastrous result.

And yet twelve days of happiness—is it so? Is that he reach the twelfth—see a but a small portion, even for one who so creed was no scanty and his life so sad. Byron died when he was thirty-seven years of age, and thus, by his own computation, but one day of happiness to three years of life—one gleam of sunshine amidst heightened gloom and sadness.

REVIVALS IN A COLLEGE.—Rev. Dr. Talmage, President of Oglethorpe University, writes to the Southern Presbyterian that it has pleased God to pour out his Spirit upon the students of that institution. He says: "We are enjoying at present almost encouraging state of religious awakening in the college. It began at a students' prayer meeting on the night of the last Thursday of February, after public religious exercises in the chapel in the afternoon. Some six or seven are entertaining hope of conversion, and many others are inquirers. We have a crowded sunrise prayer meeting every morning in the recitation rooms, and a meeting for prayer and exhortation an hour every night, on which are found in attendance at least three-fourths of our young men, who give evidence of the deepest interest in the meetings."

HARSHNESS.—Many a true heart, that would have come back like a dove to the ark, after its transgression, has been frightened beyond recall by the angry look and menace—the taunt, the savage charity of an unforgiving spirit.

The Title, "Saint."

"Why do you not use the term, 'Saint,' when speaking of the Apostle John, Peter, Paul, and others?" We answer, neither the Apostles nor any other class of men are in the Scriptures denominated Saints, in distinction from the body of Christians. Hence, there is no propriety in giving it to one man and not to another, when it belongs equally to both. The term is applied in the Scriptures to all believers—all the servants of God, male and female—all who have been sanctified by his Spirit and set apart for his service in any capacity. It is not, therefore, a title of office; nor a term descriptive of an order among Christians. The only instance in which it is applied in the Bible to any individual name, is that of Aaron; and yet, singularly enough, we have never heard him styled St. Aaron. Why not say St. Aaron, St. Moses, St. Isaiah, St. Phœbe, St. Dorcas, as well as St. Peter, St. Paul, or St. Augustine? The titles, Apostle, Bishop, Elder, Evangelist, are Scriptural, and are significant and distinctive. For purposes of discrimination, we prefer these to that of Saint, which, in this view, means nothing, and is inappropriate and useless.

If it be employed as a mere term of respect, it is equally meaningless, unless it be construed to imply what is unscriptural and untrue—namely, that those to whose names it is prefixed are saints in some such manner as other Christians are not. When we have occasion to cite the example of the words of Paul or John, it is not the fact that they were saints that makes them an authority for us in matters of faith and practice, but the fact that they were Apostles, divinely commissioned and specially inspired. Hence we style them the Apostle Paul, the Apostle John. As saints, their writings are only like those of other good men, liable to be erroneous; as Apostles, they are infallible.

Advocate.

The First Protestant.

This promise of Christ, we are told, invested Peter with infallibility. It constituted him supreme head of the Church and enabled him to decide all controversies of error. The minds of the unstable and unlearned are wrought upon by the specious plea of the supreme advantage of there being always in the church an unerring judge of doubts and disputes. From this supposed advantage is next urged the certainty of the thing. Such a judge was Peter appointed; and a succession of men after him were to exercise the same amazing powers and to be invested with the same infallible discrimination between truth and error. Now, is not the simple fiction, upon which we are meditating, sufficient to attest to the winds these enormous assumptions? Are not these words enough to overturn, from the very foundation, the towering edifice of Papal usurpation? When the Apostle Paul stood forth in the midst of the Church at Antioch, and withstood Peter to the face, because he was to be blamed; when he openly charged him with conniving at insidious error, and compromising the purity and truth of the gospel by time-serving complainces, did he not really tear away as with a Samson's might, the very pillars of the anti-christian temple? And whether or not he apprehended the full bearing of the course he then pursued, he knew that he was inserting the account in his epistle to the Galatians he was leaving on record, by anticipation, a protest against the subsequent encroachments of the Man of Sin, doubtless he was governed throughout by the influence of the Holy Ghost. When the question is asked, where was Protestantism before the days of Luther? we need be at no loss for an answer. Not only did God raise up faithful witnesses to the truth in every age of sin and apostacy, who resisted even unto blood, striving against sin; but in the Holy Scriptures themselves we have prophecies the most clear, warnings against future corruptions the most decided, and protests pointed and directed against the first germs and buddings of error.—Bishop Lee's Life of St. Peter.

BIBLE CAUSE IN TEXAS.—Rev. Robert Alexander, an agent of the American Bible Society, Texas, has, during the past year, traveled more than four thousand miles, organized seventeen auxiliary societies, and eleven Bible committees; has visited nineteen auxiliary societies, properly organized; has preached one hundred and fifty sermons, raised cash to the amount of $3,694 97, and in subscriptions $1,600; and has sent in to the inferior of the State copies of the Scriptures to the value of $1,675 50.

Orthodoxy and Unitarianism.

THE DIFFERENCE.

The Rev. Dr. Ellis, in the Christian Examiner, giving a review of Unitarianism during the last half-century, says that Unitarianism opposes Orthodoxy on three points: First, that human beings do not inherit from Adam a ruined nature that there is no transfer from his guilt made to us, inflicting upon us a moral inability—that our relation to God has not been prejudiced by his fall.

Second, that whatever be the rank of Jesus Christ in the scale of being, and whatever be his nature, he is not presented to us in the Scriptures as the Supreme God, or as a fractional part of the Godhead—therefore he is not the source, but is the channel of divine grace—he is not the object of our homage or our prayer.

Third, that the Scriptures do not lay the emphatic stress of Christ's redeeming work upon his death, above or apart from his life, character and doctrine—and that his death, as an element in his redeeming work, is made effective for human salvation through its influence on the heart and lives of men, not thro' its vicarious value with God, nor thro' its removal of an abstract difficulty in the Divine government, which hinders the forgiveness of the penitent without further satisfaction.

THE SABBATH IN ENGLAND.—The following motion, offered in the British House of Commons, by Sir Joshua Wimshey, and discussed with great interest both in and out of Parliament, has at length been decided:

"That, in the opinion of this House, it would promote the moral and intellectual improvement of the working classes of this metropolis if the collections of natural history and of art in the British Museum and the National Gallery were opened to the public inspection after morning service on Sunday."

The question came up on the 21st ult., and was advocated with great zeal by the mover and Lord Stanley. The House divided, and the numbers were:

For the motion	48
Against it	376
Majority against	328

It is long since any question of a public nature has so stirred up public attention and public interest as this effort of the enemies of the Sabbath and of evangelical religion. It has enlisted the advocacy of many able men; the pen of Dickens was called into requisition incidentally (in "Little Dorrit") to secure its success; but it also aroused the friends of true religion all over the kingdom, and called forth a degree of ability in discussing the subject which has seldom been exhibited in popular debate, and which has produced a most happy effect on the public mind.

FACTS WITH A LESSON IN THEM.—The following wait we found floating in our exchanges: "We see it stated that of 2,201 ministers in the Old Presbyterian connection, only 1,088, less than one-half, are pastors or pastors elect; 465 are stated supplies; leaving 608 as professors, teachers, secretaries, editors, domestic and foreign missionaries, or infirm. Of 3,079 churches, only 1,108 have pastors, 954 have stated supplies, 754 are vacant, 259 are not classified, most of them vacant, doubtless."

Admitting these figures to be correct, as we presume they are, what a lesson of content they teach Methodists! They show that two-thirds of the churches in the denomination named are without regular pastors! Nearly a thousand ministers, too, are without a fixed relation to any church! Under our system such a result is scarcely possible. Where, then, is the wisdom of efforts to shape our system into forms which are so fertile of unhappy results as those described in the above paragraph?

[Zion's Herald.

THE INFLUENCE OF ONE LETTER.—The Rev. Sydney Smith, preaching a charity sermon, frequently repeated the assertion, that of nations, Englishmen were most distinguished for generosity and love of their species. The collection happened to be inferior to his expectations, and he said that he had evidently made a great mistake, for his expression should have been, that they were distinguished for the love of their specie.

WHAT EVERY CHRISTIAN NEEDS.—Henry Martyn said: "I felt the need of setting apart a day for the restoration of my soul by solemn prayer; my views of eternity have become dim and transient." And what Henry Martyn felt, every Christian often needs.

From South America.

Dates from Rio Janeiro are to the 11th of February. The following are the particulars of the capture of the slaver Maria Smith, alluded to a few days ago in a Boston telegraphic dispatch:

An American schooner called the Maria Smith attempted to land a cargo of 320 negroes which she had brought from the coast of Africa, but was taken prisoner by the Brazilian brig schooner of war Olinda, and taken into Bahia. The commander and crew are all Americans, and were, immediately after landing, fenced and he kept up in the yard of Bahia. The schooner embarked 500 of the poor blacks from the coast, but they were so closely packed on board, totally naked, and actually fed during the voyage, that 180 died, and were thrown overboard, and of those landed at Bahia 61 died a few hours afterwards. The survivors were immediately fed and clothed, and will be taken care of until their ultimate destination is resolved upon.

Rear Admiral Johnstone, commanding the British South American squadron, had demanded explanations from the American Commodore in regard to an American merchantman recently arrived at Rio, which he suspected to be a Russian privateer. The English and French vessels in port made ready to follow the alleged privateer, but finally ascertained that she was an innocent trader.

BUENOS AYRES.—News from Buenos Ayres is to the 1st ultimo. Latest particulars respecting the Costa invasion state that the invaders have been routed, and that Ramon Bustos was killed, and Costa, with several others, including two Englishmen, one named Wills, a lieutenant of artillery, and his adjutant taken prisoners.

It was further reported that Costa had died, and that twelve or fourteen officers had been secured.

The British Packet has published the documents relating to the defeat of Flores, which took place on the 24th of January, and was followed by the invasion of Costa on the 28th of that month, which was effected in spite of the vigilance of steamers and other cruisers at Zarate, where they effected a landing, and took the town by surprise, deposing the justice of the peace and placing another in his stead as an act of local sovereignty.

By a coincidence somewhat strange, he discovered an ample supply of horses, and daringly penetrated to the interior, passing the Pajalla del Senor, and taking undisturbed possession of the Villa de Lujan. At this time, according to the accounts, the forces of Costa amounted only to two hundred men, partly negroes and partly Spanish Basques. From this place he was disturbed by the approach of Col. Conesa's force, and took a southerly direction, as if for Lobos or Chascomus.

Beyond this nothing is known but the rumored news of his defeat. It was said that Gen. Urquiza had declared war against Buenos Ayres, but there was no foundation for the report. Although political affairs at Buenos Ayres were somewhat unsettled by the various rumors afloat, commercial matters had during the month remained favorable, and more business had been done than was expected under the circumstances.

Items of Foreign News.

The British steamer Esmi arrived at Boston early on the morning of the 27th ult., from Liverpool 12th. The following paragraphs contain the most important features of her news:

A strong agitation still prevails in England on the subject of Sabbath observance; and the National Sunday League, the object of which is to obtain the opening of the British Museum, National Gallery, Crystal Palace and similar institutions, on Sunday afternoons, have recently held a large meeting in London. It appears that its members are undismayed by the late Parliamentary decision; but the meeting, which was largely composed of working men and females, was anything but unanimous. One artisan advocated the establishment of a half-holiday on some week day, as a means of settling the matter in dispute.

The coroner's inquest on the late Mr. Sadlier, M. P., have rendered a unanimous verdict of felo de se—that he died by his own hand whilst in a perfectly sane state. It transpired that the deceased was in the habit of chewing opium. No new forgeries have been brought to light.

As everything that concerns the existing negotiations is of interest, it may be well to state, which I do on good authority, that in the first interview which the Emperor had with Count Orloff, his Majesty said, "Well, Count, you bring us peace." "No, sire!" was the reply, "I come to demand it!" I may also mention, that what at first gave rise to the confidence manifested here in the conclusion of peace, was caused by the plenipotentiaries having replied by common accord, to all the questions put to them, "Tout va bien!" "Things are going on well!"

The London Post, of March 12, says that peace is regarded as a certain issue of the Conference. All matters of principle, it is confidently asserted, will have been finally arranged before the end of the month.

Accounts from Constantinople state that the Allies continue building hut barracks on both banks of Constantinople. The English are surveying ground for the formation of a camp in Asia.

THE WAR. The following are among the latest telegraphic dispatches received:

PARIS, March 31.—Letters have been received from Norway, announcing that the Russians have made good use of winter in adding to the defences of the White Sea.

HELSINGFORS, March 8.—The English steamers Samson, Pylades, Edeon and Harrier have left today, and gone to the southward.

It will be seen, too, by the following paragraph, which appears in the Paris of this evening, that a naval engagement between the Russian and the English squadrons in the Baltic is considered not unlikely, the ice not applying to operations at sea.

Letters from Helsingfors contain some information on the subject of the Russian vessels, the departure of which from Sweaborg has been announced by telegraph. It is stated that they have steered for the coast of Denmark for the purpose of attacking the advanced guard of the English fleet squadron.

It is moreover stated that the Grand Duke Constantine intends to bring on a naval combat with the English in the neighborhood of Sweaborg or Cronstadt, preferring to thus run the risk of defeat to probanging this year the inaction of the naval forces of Russia.

[In the later dispatch, from Berlin, this is denied.]

FROM HAVANA.—The steamship Cahawba, Capt. Bullock, arrived on Saturday afternoon, bringing dates from Havana to the 2d inst. The purser furnishes the following memoranda:

The English squadron under Admiral Fanshaw, composed of the Rosamond, 30 guns, (flag-ship) Powerful, 90 guns, Terrorgant, 26 guns, and Buzzard, 20 guns, were in Havana when the Cahawba left. A grand fete was to be given on the night of 2d, by the officials of the Island to the officers of the squadron. The United States squadron, composed of the Potomac, 60 guns, (flag-ship of Commodore Paulding), Saratoga, 22 guns, Cyane, 20 guns, and Fulton, 4 guns, were in Matanzas. The Cahawba brings 97 passengers from New York and Havana; and a very heavy assorted cargo. On the 1st, passed on the Great Bahama Bank, twenty-one vessels at anchor, becalmed. The health of Havana continues good, and the weather favorable for the planters.

We find nothing of particular interest in our Havana exchanges. The American ship Sea Witch, with 500 Chinese Coolies for Cuba, went ashore on the 28th ult., about fifteen miles from Havana. No lives were lost, but the vessel was among rocks and became a total wreck.

Slave labor, it is said, has become so unprofitable in the Eastern department of the Island that a large number of slave-holders in that district are removing from it, or selling their slaves to planters in the department of Havana. The local government of St. Jago proposes arresting this exodus by levying a tax upon all slaves removed or sold out of the department.

FROM EUROPE.—The steamship Fulton arrived at New York on the 29th ult., from Cowes the 13th.—From a dispatch of her news we extract the following:

The Vienna correspondent of the London News states that the mystery of the recent improved relations between Austria and the United States has been cleared up: "An Austro-American commercial company is about to be formed, in order to open a direct trade between the two countries to import cotton and other products direct from America, instead of from London and Liverpool as heretofore." The writer intimates that a treaty of commerce between the United States and Austria will be concluded at no distant day.

Colonel Hodges, the British representative at Hamburg, had made representations to the Hamburg Senate respecting the quantities of the ammunition that had left that port for Russia. An examination followed these reclamations, when it was proved that these supplies had in most instances been forwarded on account of two houses of high standing in England, to which one member of parliament was interested.

The consequences of the explosion of the steamboat Metropolis in the Ohio river, were more serious than at first stated. A late Pittsburg paper states that twenty persons were injured, nine of whom are dead. Capt. Hazlitt died five hours after the accident.

FROM THE RIO GRANDE.—The steamship Nautilus, Capt. Thompson, arrived yesterday morning from Brazos Santiago. To her purser we are indebted for a copy of the Brownsville Flag of the 22d ult., from which we extract the following paragraphs:

We take pleasure in recording the fact that quiet is again restored to our community. Affairs having arrived at that point "where forbearance ceases to be a virtue," our citizens took the matter in hand, forming themselves into vigilant committees, and have succeeded in making the place too hot to hold evil doers.

In Matamoras the greatest quiet prevails, the merchants complain of a want of purchasers. This stagnation of business is complained of pretty generally on both sides of the river, though we opine it is confined to the retailing dealers, and even with them we venture the prediction that it is only temporary. The recently existing struggles in the interior have drawn both the purchaser and the consumer towards the scene of action; but now that quiet is like to be again restored we may soon expect to see our marts refilled with buyers. Even now we are informed that large invoices are arriving, destined for a market on the Northern frontier of Mexico.

THE WAR IN CENTRAL AMERICA—English and French Interference.—A New York dispatch of the 29th ult., to the St. Louis Republican, says:

Private letters by the Illinois state that the British frigate which recently arrived at Panama from Callao, immediately on her arrival hastened back to Punta Arenas, in order to defend the country against the threatened incursions of Gen. Walker. A French vessel was already there, acting in concert with the British forces against Walker.

A MISSION TO THE BLACKFEET INDIANS.—The executive committee of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, desiring to send out by June next one or two missionaries, with their wives, to the Blackfeet Indians, and having requested permission of the Indian Department for their missionaries to reside among this tribe of Indians, the same was granted, and the following circular issued by the Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs to aid in carrying out this object. The Board believe they possess some advantages for opening a mission among this tribe, from the fact that three boys and four girls belonging to this band, who have been educated at the boarding-school of the Iowa mission, will in a short time be well qualified to become teachers, or to assist the missionaries and teachers who may be stationed among them. [Washington Union.

The Franklin Banner of the 3d inst. says:

The recent dry weather has crusted the surface of the earth so as to check vegetation, and our planters now want a slight shower to assist the cane out of the ground. It is hardly possible to estimate the amount of damage done to the seed cane and the ratoon just now, by the severe freezes of the past winter. We are fearful the injury is greater than has been anticipated. We have received a private letter from a friend residing in one of the parishes on the Mississippi river, which gives a gloomy account of the state of the sugar crops in that region. It is stated that on the uplands in the vicinity, a number of planters have concluded to plow up their stubble and plant cotton. Another such a winter as the one just passed would be of incalculable injury to the sugar interests of our State.

THE STEAM FRIGATE MERRIMAC.—All doubt in regard to the success of this vessel, appears to be dissipated. A letter from Washington states "upon competent authority," that she is, beyond question, a very perfect ship. The writer says:

Under canvass, with her propeller out of water, she is remarkably fast, stiff and weatherly, and she steams from nine to ten knots. She ran under steam alone, and against a strong tide, from Old Point Comfort to the Naval Hospital, a distance of thirteen miles, in seventy minutes. Her consumption of coal is less than was anticipated. During her late trial trip, in which she experienced very heavy weather, the greatest consumption in twenty-four hours was thirty-four tons. The average was thirty tons. She carries five hundred and eighty tons below the berth-deck, which is sufficient for twenty days' steaming at full power. Her armament of forty heavy shell guns, (8, 9 and 10 inch) is very formidable.

THE SUGAR CROP IN POINT COUPEE.—The Point Coupee Echo, of Saturday last, says:

From all sections of our parish we hear of nothing but the most discouraging accounts of the coming sugar crop. Owing to the utter worthlessness of the stubble and a defect in a large quantity of seed cane, many of our planters will not be able to grind at all the coming season, and not a few will scarcely make sufficient cane for seed for 1857. Many, foreseeing the inevitable failure, have plowed up the old stubble, and in its stead, put in large crops of cotton and corn.

The Caddo Gazette of the 29th ult., says:

We received a visit on yesterday from Judge Ferd, who returned on the day previous from Monroe. He brings cheering news of the progress of the work on the eastern section of our railroad. Between four and five hundred hands are at work, and Dr. Young has notified the contractors that they can discharge all their white laborers, about seventy-five, as the number of slaves will be sufficient to keep pace with the track-laying. Twenty-five miles are now ready for the cross-ties, some of which, together with the rails, have by this time been laid. Ten miles of iron have been received, and twenty-five miles more are on the ocean, the payment for which is to be made on the 20th April, for which the money is ready.

Mr. Robb, the agent for its purchase, says that if that payment is made promptly, there will be no difficulty about the balance. The hands at the last accounts had proceeded to the thirty-first mile. It is confidently expected that the cars will run to Monroe by August twelve months.

CONTRIBUTIONS LEVIED BY WALKER.—It is stated that S. L. Wood & Son, United States merchants at Greytown, have addressed a formal protest to the President against the exactions of Gen. Walker, whose troops recently took forcible possession of $3,000 worth of their goods, without tendering any remuneration. They, therefore, beg the intercession of our government in their behalf as citizens of the United States and entitled to the protection of its flag. It is also stated that Walker levied contributions upon the following merchants, after he had taken the city of Grenada:

Wiedeman & Barsclin, (German merchants) $5,000. Duke & Derbyshire, (English merchants) $6,000. Mr. Solari, (Italian merchant) $5,000. The Brothers Lacayo, (Nicaraguan merchants) $12,000. Mr. Bernard, (French merchant) $250. Pedro Roux, (French merchant) $250. As well as others to a large amount. The respective governments of these sufferers will probably interfere in their behalf.

FROM TEXAS.—The steamship Perseverance arrived yesterday from Galveston, bringing papers to Saturday, but they contain nothing of importance.

A letter to the Advocate states that Mrs. Napp and two children were drowned in attempting to cross the Brazos river, on the ferry-boat at Hanna's ferry, about seven miles above Fort Sullivan.

The San Antonio Texan says that Col. Skinker, and another man, whose name is not given, were murdered on the 23d ult. by some teamsters, with whom they were traveling. Col. S. was a merchant, residing at Fort Clark, and originally from Virginia. The murderers had not been arrested.

SNOW IN THE MOUNTAINS.—There is a tolerable prospect that in the mountains of Virginia there will remain snow enough to afford good sleighing during the entire summer. A correspondent of the Hardy Whig, writing from Pendleton county, says the snow in the Alleghany mountains, at this time, averages three and a half feet in depth, and the writer is informed that it is drifted in some places to the depth of from one hundred to a hundred and fifty feet—so that the topmost branches of the tallest trees barely project above the surface.

The Cunard steamship Curlew from Halifax for Bermuda, struck the north breaker of Bermuda on the morning of the 18th ult., and sunk in three minutes, decks under water. Her hull soon broke in two. The passengers and crew were saved, but the mail was lost.

"There he goes again," said Mrs. Partington in the legislature, as a member stood up for the fifth time to speak on a question. "There he goes like a soda fountain, and just as fluidly as water. Now, Isaac, mind him, and see if you can't become a speaker of the house of reprehensibles sometimes. I declare!" continued she as a new burst of eloquence reached her ear, "it does seem as if the mantelpiece of Daniel Webster had fell onto him, he is so bright."

[Boston Post

The Columbus (Ohio) Journal, of a recent date, says that millions of wild pigeons have been flying over that city, and that sportsmen have made great slaughter among them.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The N. O. Christian Advocate.

TERMS—$2 00 per annum, in advance.

NEW-ORLEANS:

SATURDAY, APRIL 12, 1856.

POST ROUTES.—We are indebted to friends occasionally for valuable hints for expediting the delivery of the Advocate. It goes first to a main distributing office, thence branches off to the various destinations. J. B. Meigs, Esq., P. M., Almirante, Fla., favors the office with this information:—

"Send our papers via Pensacola. The Advocate reaches this office at present by going via Montgomery—a round of 1,500 miles. Quite old when it comes to hand. Paper of 15th March got here 27th. By Pensacola it will get here in four days."

Thank you—it is done. We are constantly improving the routes. Suggestions of this sort will oblige.

REVIVAL IN NORFOLK, VA.—Our exchanges give most cheering news of a deep and prevailing religious interest in this lately-stricken city and Portsmouth. Happy the people who so receive the Lord's chastening.

SOUTHERN BAPTISTS.—The 30th of this month a called Convention of Southern Baptists meets at Augusta, Ga., to discuss the propriety, and if deemed advisable, the means and mode of establishing a Baptist Union Theological Seminary for the South and Southwest. Several State Conventions and Education Societies have appointed delegates, and there promises to be a large representation.

The German Paper.

This paper, published weekly at Galveston, and edited by Rev. P. Moelling, is a gem of neatness. It has every every element of interest.—Editorials, communications, selections, correspondence and paragraphic clippings. This "Evangelische Apologete" is an arm of the missionary service. How is it being supported? Publish it abroad—if you have a German neighbor, put him in the way of being a subscriber—which perhaps will be done by having it sent free one year. It has now reached the twenty-fifth number, and is issued at the ridiculously low price of one dollar per annum. The German element in this country is worth looking after. It has power and is growing. Can it be brought under the influence of a saving and conservative form of Christianity? Therere are hopeful indications of an affirmative solution of this practical and momentous question. They are a thinking, reading, thrifty people. A Christian paper is capable of being a powerful agent for good among them.

The Wesleyan Psalter.

Of the valuable publications which our Publishing House has given the Church, we place none above this—whether neatness of typographical execution be considered or, careful research and taste in editing, or the delightful entertainment of reading.

The poetical versions, translations and paraphrases of the Psalms are very numerous. It has been ascertained that nearly seventy entire versions, in metre, have been published since the Reformation. For the gratification of the curious, a list of entire and partial versions, chronologically arranged, is subjoined at the end of this beautiful volume. Every kind of verse has been applied to the task.

The Wesleys (Samuel Wesley and his three sons, John, Charles and Sam'l Jr.) took stock in this work. Between them it is nearly or quite all taken up. Charles, of course, takes the largest share. "By a singular providence," the Rev. Mr. Fish—an enthusiastic admirer of Wesleyan Muse—came into possession of a manuscript volume of his version, in his own handwriting—a volume by him presented to Lady Huntingdon. This has been published. Dr. Summers, who was thoroughly at home and in heart on this subject, has added from old volumes in his possession and furnished him, others before published, some of which had gone out of print. The collection is complete, unique and interesting. It is needless to say edifying—for the Wesleyan muse saw David's Lord and Son in David's Psalms.

For pointing a text or adorning a sermon—for commending a godly sentiment to the ear or floating it musically into the heart, preachers will find this volume unequalled to quote from.

THE RAINY SEASON.—The Rev. W. A. Sampey writes, from Clark county, Ala.:—"Being appointed to a circuit where it is inconvenient to have Sabbath Schools, I have resolved to instruct the children at their homes; and for this purpose I need a lot of Catechisms. I enclose you seven dollars to buy," &c.

THOS. E. BOND, M. D., of Hartford Co., Maryland, son of the lamented Doctor Bond, is the editor ad interim of the Christian Advocate and Journal. This gentleman is a local preacher.

CHRISTIAN MONUMENTS.

Enough sorrow and suffering have befallen missionary efforts upon China to begin to engage the Church's faith and love and heroism. Disappointments, losses, tears and graves, seem to be moral necessities and preparations for such a work. The cause must go on now; it is consecrated. China cannot be given up now. For every one that falls there will be many recruits. Aid will be forthcoming readily, where before scantily. Death defeats itself—suffering strengthens the cause it seems to destroy.

It must be exceedingly gratifying to Southern Methodists, and especially to the Alabama Conference, to know that their brother Belton died, was buried and mourned and his family comforted at the North, with the tenderness that awaited his return to his own sunny South and home. Bishop Janes and wife, boarding in the same family, were intimately near and kind. The funeral took place from the 8th street (Methodist) Church, eight ministers acting as pall-bearers. Rev. Dr. Foster, of Brooklyn, opened the services by a hymn, followed by an impressive prayer by Rev. Dr. Holdich, Secretary of the American Bible Society. Rev. Dr. Osbon read a lesson from the Scriptures, and Rev. Dr. Cross made a beautiful address, singularly adapted to the occasion.

The tidings have been suitably received at our Mission Rooms, at Nashville. At a meeting of the Missionary Board on Monday, March 31, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted, by a rising vote:—

"WHEREAS, The Board has learned with feelings of deep sorrow the death of Rev. J. S. Belton, one of our missionaries to China, by which dispensation of Divine Providence a most faithful, able and devoted minister and promising missionary of the Church has been removed from his field of labor and toil to his heaven of reward; and whereas, in common with the whole Church of which the deceased was an honored minister, the Board would meekly bow, acknowledging submissively the high behest of heaven in this dispensation of Providence, feeling that "the Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away." Therefore—

"RESOLVED, That in the death of Brother Belton the Church has lost one of her most faithful and promising sons, and the cause of missions one of the most noble and self-sacrificing missionaries.

"RESOLVED, That the Board hereby tender the expression of their deepest sympathy and sorrow to the afflicted and bereaved widow, children and relatives of our departed brother.

"RESOLVED, That we also most deeply sympathize with our stricken band of missionaries in China, and assure them in the hour of gloom of our continued regard for them and their mission, and our unceasing prayers for the blessing of God to rest upon them.

"RESOLVED, That the gratitude and thanks of the Board are hereby tendered to our ministerial brethren and members of the Church in New York for the kind attentions shown by them to our deceased brother in his affliction, and his bereaved family in the hours of their sorrow and bereavement.

"RESOLVED, That the Secretary of the Society be requested to forward a copy of the above to our beloved Sister Belton, our missionaries in China, the Methodist press, the Methodist ministers of New York, and to the worthy and esteemed editor of the New York Commercial Advertiser, with such other expressions of respect and tenderness as the occasion calls for and he may feel free to make.

"E. W. SEHON,
A. R. ERWIN."

In the proceedings of the Board of Managers of the Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, (North,) held in New York, on the 18th ult., we notice the following:—

"Another death was announced, although not directly connected with the Board, yet of a missionary of a sister church. It was that of Rev. Mr. Belton a member of the Methodist Church, South, and recently a missionary in China, who died in this city at an early hour on Monday morning, far from home, but surrounded by Christian friends. The case was one of peculiar interest. Mr. Belton was a young man of great promise, who left Alabama some two years since for China, as mentioned in yesterday's Commercial. Rev. Dr. Floy, Rev. H. Bangs, and Dr. Kennedy made suitable and impressive remarks, when a committee, consisting of Drs. Durbin and Floy, was appointed to prepare resolutions expressive of the feelings of the Board at the loss Mr. Belton's family and his Missionary Board has sustained."

Here are Christian monuments of love and substantial unity at home. What of these monuments abroad? Dr. Wentworth, China missionary of the M. E. Church, (North,) thus writes home about the impression produced on the Chinese by viewing the graves of female missionaries, who left their homes to die in a far distant land, for the sake of Christ:—

"It is sad to loook upon the graves of three young women in our missionary cemetery, (Mrs. White, Mrs. Wiley and Mrs. Wentworth,) who had scarcely entered upon their work ere they laid down their lives for the cause they had espoused. They were emphatically what they gave themselves up to the Church to be—'missionaries for life.' Being dead, they yet speaketh. There they lie, side by side, in the midst of untold thousands of the race they came to save. Hundreds of inquisitive Chinese pause upon that little oval esplanade, overshadowed with spreading olives and sighing pines, and ask wonderingly, 'What monuments are these?' They are the graves of Christian women, who left their homes, braved the ocean, and came 16,000 miles to preach to us: 'Jesus and the resurrection.' 'And who is Jesus?' Go to the Christian chapel, and learn or procure some of the books that his followers are freely distributing in all parts of the city, suburbs and adjacent country, and read for yourself the story of the cross, redemption and salvation."

THE PLACARD BIBLE.—The British Banner states that a proposal has been set on foot for posting placards all over the city of London, containing passages from the Bible, printed in the largest characters, so as to arrest attention. Each placard is to contain only one verse, and sometimes only one sentence; and to be renewed as frequently as the funds obtained will permit. A society was to be organized for carrying out this idea, and, if possible, a commencement was to made in January, 1856.

Some men do seeming good, in order that they may do evil with impunity.

RELIGION IN COMMON LIFE.

Since the days of Herod, another plain sermon has been sounded into the ears of royalty! Victoria has heard one. This is lute for the head of the Establishment to enjoy that privilege, but better late than never.

Being away from her own chapel and chaplain, she and Prince Albert—to the scandal of some zealous prelates—attended "the Crathie Church." Rev. John Caird preached, as though Her Majesty was not there. Preached a manly, plain sermon—such, doubtless, as is preached every Sunday in thousands of conventicles within the Queen's dominions, but which her lofty and her lonely imperial position forfeits.

TEXT—"Diligent in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord." The theme drawn out was Religion in Common Life. No special compliment, not flattery, no adulation was indulged. Such fare as the lairds and peasants of Aberdeenshire got, Her Majesty—sented among them—got. The sermon which pleased and edified Her Majesty, was published by her command. The newspapers say 60,000 copies have been sold, realizing to the author $3,500.

Blackwood's Magazine, (February,) noticing the sermon says: "It strikes at the very heart and root of all our living. It is not a recommendation of good things or good books, or any exclusive manner of existence, but a simple laying open of that great secret which is the very atmosphere and the breath of religion. This preacher is not content that anything which God has cleansed should be called common or unclean; he will not consent that a tithe of our faculties and emotions, like a tithe of our lands and our riches, should be reserved for God, making a carefill separation between the profane and the holy. Strange argument to quicken those dull toils which even good men call secular and worldly!—strange charm to speed the plough, to guide the ship, to hasten every day's triumphant labors through its full tale of animated hours! Whatsoever you do, do it heartily, as unto the Lord, and not unto men.' It is on this great principle of life and labor the preacher founds his reasonings, as he shows us how well we may reconcile diligence in business with fervour of spirit, and brighten our ordinary occupations with the full force and radiance of godliness. The lesson comes with especial force in these days, when we are beguiled by the most sweet voices of the Ritualist and the Mystic on each side of us, and are much persuaded to a vulgar disparagement of the honest necessary work of this earth. How it may become holy work—and how we ourselves, surrounded by its cares, vexations and trials, are in reality placed in the most advantageous position for proving and and glorifying our Lord and Leader, who had share of all these labors before us, is the burden of this message; and we do not doubt it will show to many men how much nearer than they suspected, even in their very hands and households, if they will but do it, lies the work of the Lord.

'No man,' Mr. C. preached, 'can be a thorough proffiecint in navigation who has never been at sea, though he may learn the theory of it at home. No man can become a soldier by studying books on military tactics in his closet; he must in actual service acquire those habits of coolness, courage discipline, address, rapid combination, without which the most learned in the theory of strategy or engineering will be but a schoolboy soldier after all. * * * Tell us not, then, that the man of business, the bustling tradesman, the toil-worn laborer, has little or no time to attend to religion. As well say that the pilot, amid the winds and storms, has no time to attend to navigation; or the geueral, on the field of battle, to the art of war. When will he attend to it? Religion is not a perpetual moping over good books—religion is not even prayer, praise, holy ordinances—these are necessary to religion; no man can be religious without them. But religion, I repeat, is mainly and chiefly the glorifying God amid the duties and trials of the world—the guiding our course amid the adverse winds and currents of temptation by the starlight of duty and the compass of Divine truth—the bearing us manfully, wisely, courageously, for the honor of Christ, our great Leader, in the conflict of life.'"

The "homely, brown colored little book," introduced by the royal imprint, will enter houses where sermon reading is not common. The exceptional personage and occasion will help to give these sound sentiments wide and impressive circulation. The publication partakes of the natare of a tract. If queens would become nursing mothers of the tract and colporteur system, it would be well for their people, as in this case.

Blackwood handsomely acknowledges the act: "We honor the preacher, too much absorbed with his greater errand to take advantage of so good an opportunity of paying court to his Sovereign; and it is still more honorable to the royal pair who listened, that it was no disqualsition upon their own exalted office—no enthusiastic voice of loyalty, urgent upon the honors due the crown nor indeed any discussion whatever of the peculiar relationship between monarch and people—which moved them to this marked and emphatic satisfaction. The Queen presents to us, earnestly, an address in which herself is not distinguished even by a single complimentary inference—a lesson unsoftened by the remotest breath of flattery, and without even a "special application." God save the Queen! We take our princely friend at her word, acknowledging with what a noble honesty she shares with us, bearing her own full part of all the daily duties of common life."

So it is from a British Queen to a Georgia Major—the preacher will do most good who ignores titles. Raised by his office above all titles, while he treats every person respectfully, he is forbid to be a respecter of persons. Thus discharging his duty, he will be likely to find what he does not seek—an honest approbation. Many a good sermon has been spoiled and congregations turned empty away, because it was whispered in the preacher's ear, on entering the pulpit, that the Judge or the Colonel would be in the congregation. A high shot is made over all heads, not even hitting the Judge or the Colonel. The moral woes and wants, the emotions and understandings and sympathies and soul-cravings of mankind lie more in range than their apparent conditions and titles. God hath concluded them all in unbelief, that He might have mercy upon all.

The Fruits of Christian Missions.

Bishop Pierce, in notes to the Southern Christian Advocate, describing his late episcopal tour in the West—especially in the Indian Territory, where he held a conference and visited mission schools, forms and churches—thus vindicates Christian benevolence by its fruits:

"It would be well if all who are skeptical about the possibility of evangelizing the Indians could attend a session of our Conference among them. Indeed, even those who never doubted the redeeming, elevating power of the gospel, might have their faith confirmed and their ideas exalted by the services and sympathies of such an occasion. I confess to strange and commingled emotions, for days and nights, while the business of Conference was in progress. The place, the school, the Conference, each and all, make an interesting paragraph in the current history of this aboriginal race. But a generation gone they were heathens; now they have flourishing academies, houses of religious worship, the apparel and manners of civilization, districts, stations and circuits—the white man's book, his gospel and his preacher.

"How strange is everything around me! I have just passed over a wild, vacant country, dreury but for its beauty, with here and there at long intervals, a hut, a wigwam—and now here is a large three-story brick building, a school-house, with superintendent, with teachers, male and female, and an Annual Conference assembled within its walls! The bell rings, and we all descend to the dining-hall; the boys sit at one table, a teacher at the head, the girls at another, the guests at a third. All is order—no rushing and jamming; and now every one at his place awaits in silence the invocation of a blessing upon the beunteous board. Is this an Indian country? Who maketh these to differ from their kind, and even from themselves? Is this magic? Yes, but not of Aladdin's Lamp. Christian benevolence has wrought this change. The gospel and schools, Christianity and education, have greatly reformed, improved and elevated these tribes. You can see it in the first red man you meet on the highway. Yon cabin and enclosure evince the fact. That quiet audience, eager for the Word of Life, proclaims the chaage and the cause of it. Listen to that song—that prayer. The dialect is strange—an unknown tongue—you cannot understand him, but you feel that he who speaks 'knows in whom he has believed.' From a thousand causes, the tendency among all the roaming tribes is to extinction. They are perishing. Every year leaves their number less. But the Cherokees, Creeks and Choctaws multiply, increase. Chili McIntosh informed me that the Creeks had increased two thousand in five years. This fact proves a change of habits, physical and moral, and is a decided vindication of the plans of the Government in their settlement, and of the Church in their instruction."

BIBLES IN TURKEY.—A box of New Testaments in Turkish, that were to be shipped to Thessalonica, were recently sent from the Bible depot in Constantinople to the custom house. As they were books, some copies had to be sent to the government censor to be examined before they could pass. They soon came back with the government seal on the first blank leaf, authorizing their free circulation in Turkey.

Wholesome is the discipline which drives us into the fold and keeps us there.—Horne.

Honesty the Best Policy.

"P. T. Barnum, the great showman, whose successful impostures are so glowingly set forth in his autobiography, published a year or two since, has been examined under oath as an insolvent before the New York Supreme Court. He says that he considered himself, in June last, to be worth a half a million of dollars, above all his debts. By endorsement for the Jerome Clock Company he has become hopelessly involved, he does not know to what extent. The shrewd old schemer endorsed in blank for the "suckers" who took him in, and left them to fill up the notes at their discretion. They say that the amount is $460,000, while Barnum supposed he was in for about $100,000. It seems to be as true now as it was in Solomon's day, that "wealth gotten by vanity shall be diminished." Young men who were fascinated by the prosperity of his early tricks, may now profitably "consider the end." He says he is keeping boarders for a living, and has no property but his watch and $25 in money. There is a lien upon his piano, and his garments are seedy.

The pernicious influence of his autobiography, we hope, will be counteracted by this finale. What a contrast! It is scarcely two years since Barnum published that amusing record of successful dunning, trickery and imposture, and sought to illustrate in his own person the fortunate results of a systematic and unprincipled course of humbug in playing upon the weakness of human nature. He triumphed in the ingenuity with which he had manufactured a mermaid; passed off a supernuated negress for the nurse of General George Washington; persuaded a gullible nation that Tom Thumb was a young man, when he was really little more than an infant; palmed Yankee tricksters on the public as wonderful Italian jugglers; and, by adroit management contrived in a few years to amass princely wealth. With a self-complacency almost astounding, he had plumed himself upon his mastery of a system of shameful deceit, and appeared to regard his naked and unrelieved confession of a total absence of moral honesty as smartness. Never was less sympathy felt for a ruined speculator. Just retribution.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Books and Tracts and Rev. H. H. Montgomery.

LOUISIANA, April 2, 1856.

Mr. Editor:—In your last issue I find an article from the above named brother, that needs explanation from him or the Book agents at Nashville. It is in reference to what he calls a plain proposition. He says, "I will furnish you with good books, and that you do the best you can in selling to those who will buy, and then have the privilege of returning to us, as so much stock, what may be on hand at the end of the year, with 30 per cent. discount."

The first thing I wish to be informed about is this: Have the Book Agents established a branch of the Book Concern at Vicksburg, Miss., and appointed Bro. M. Agent?

Again: How is it that he can sell books so much cheaper than they can at Nashville, where they are published?

And, above all, how is it that he can take back all the unsold books as stock while we who buy books at Nashville can only get them at 25 per cent. discount, and bear all the losses of books left on hand?

I, for one, wish light on this subject; for, if the Book Agents have two wholesale prices, and differ as to the discount allowed on such, I, for one wish to know it. It is certainly a new rule in the Concern to me. So I hope either Bro. Montgomery or the Agents at Nashville will explain.

Yours, &c.,

A MEMBER OF MISS. ANN. CONF.

CONVOCATION AND UNION.—Few farces can be more solemn than the convocation meetings and adjournments of the English Church. They have married the Church to the State, and get its honors and support. They must take the consequences, and be legislated for and governed by the State.

A correspondent of the Auburn Advocate gives this item:—"The Church of England has of late striven hard to revive the Convocation with the whole of its original power. It always meets with every new gathering of Parliament, but it is always prorogued the first day, and not allowed any independent action. Of this a powerful party in the Church strongly and loudly complain. The Bishop of Oxford, at the last meeting said, 'I, for one, desire to see the power of internal consultation upon her own affairs revived in the Church of England.' He and those who think with him profess to desire the revival of the powers of Convocation with the hope of making overtures of union to some of the most influential denominations in this country, especially the Wesleyan Conference. A notice of petition on the subject of union between the Church of England and the Wesleyans was actually entertained; but until the Church of England secures her independence from State Control, and banishes far away the virus of Popery and Puseyism, the followers of John Wesley, unless fearfully degenerate, would utterly repudiate such a foul embrace."

The Southern University.

The trustees held a meeting, on the 17th March, in Greensboro', Ala., which continued till Wednesday midnight—evidently in earnest. Twenty of the twenty-three present—some of whom had come far. Dr. Summers writes to the S. C. Advocate:—

"Hon. John Erwin presided at the meetings of the Board—an accomplished and dignified chairman. The Board met with some difficulty in fixing upon a site for the University. They, however, effected a compromise, by agreeing unanimously upon a tract of land situated east of the town, not quite a mile from the Methodist Church. Their choice gave general satisfaction to the citizens of the place, who took a lively interest in the projected institution. A Building Committee was appointed, consisting of Messrs. DeYampert, Johnson and others, clothed with authority to erect a suitable edifice for the University, at an expense not exceeding forty thousand dollars. They are not, however, to proceed to its erection, without first laying the plan, specifications, &c., before the Board. No dormitories are to be built, only as circumstances may bring them in requisition. The question of their utility was discussed at considerable length, and the Board seemed to agree that their partial adoption may be found expedient. A Committee of Finance and an Executive Committee were also appointed. Bishop Paine was chosen President of the Board, Dr. Wadsworth Corresponding Secretary; also, for the present, Recording Secretary; Dr. Webb, Treasurer—a happy selection. A committee was appointed to examine into the financial state of the enterprise, and they reported that one hundred and thirty-eight thousand dollars were secured by notes, and ten thousand dollars more guaranteed. This ten thousand is one-half of twenty thousand guaranteed at the last Conference—the other half having been secured in notes by the agent, Rev. C. C. Callawny. After he shall have secured the other ten thousand, he will push his agency to increase the subscriptions, so that the University shall have every chair endowed—twenty-five thousand dollars being the endowment of each professorship. This, at 8 per cent., will bring two thousand dollars per annum, which, with a contingent arising from tuition fees, will, so far as salary can do it, secure an able staff of professors."

MISSIONARY MATTERS.

FROM OUR MISSION ROOMS.

CHINA MISSION.

Just as we announce to the Church the sad intelligence of the death of our beloved brother Belton, we are pained to receive information from our remaining missionaries in China of their present truly afflicted condition. We are indebted for this information to the kindness of our friend, Rev. W. C. Johnson, who permits us to publish the following interesting letter, which he has just received from Mrs. M. L. Kelley, the mother of our loved missionary, Dr. D. C. Kelley.

LEBANON, March 27, 1856.

My Dear Bro. Johnson:—We know not what a day may bring forth. I wrote to you last night, little expecting to do the same again to-night. Yesterday, tears were shed because of the death of the companion of our beloved boy, one whom he so dearly loved, being taken from the work in which they expected to be co-laborers. To-day, an unexpected letter from our dear children gives us the sad tidings that shortly after the departure of Bro. Belton from Shanghai, David was attacked with bilious fever and was confined to his bed three weeks. He was able to be up the first January, and Dr. Lockhart pronounced him in a fair way to get well, provided he did not expose himself. Bro. Cunnyngham and wife were sick with small-pox. Sister Lambuth was having chills. Dr. Jenkins and family had been on a trip for two weeks to the mountains, for Mrs. Jenkins' health. Little Mary's nurse was also sick, and they were trying to sustain her with Buffalo's milk, not being able to procure another nurse. The dear little one, too, was exposed to the small-pox, without defence of vaccination, as the matter could not be procured. Mr. Points, of the Episcopal Mission, had also been very sick. The weather at Shanghai, the first January, was cold enough to freeze the canal over near David's house. The latest dates of the letter was January 6; recived March 27—the shortest time performing the trip of any letter we have received yet. What tidings may next come, the Lord only knows. May His grace be sufficient for all that may befall your sincere friend,

M. L. KELLEY.

P. S.—Please inform Dr. Sehon of these facts, and obligo yours, M. L. K.

It is a great honor to be almoner to the King of Heaven. To give is the greatest luxury. How indulgent, then, is God, to annex future rewards to what is so much its own recompense.

BUSINESS COMPARISONS.

Some days since we gave the comparative receipts of produce at this port, via the river, for three years past. We now give the comparative receipts for five years, from the 1st of September of each year up to the 31st of March, say seven months. It is unnecessary for us to go into extended details to prove that the trade of our city is on the decline. Figures sustain the assertion that, if the country produces any returns to the cultivators of the soil, our city will continue to increase in importance and grandeur. Of the increasing productions of the great West we shall assuredly receive a good share of the yearly increase. There are no railroads in the country that can compete with the mammoth steamboats which now navigate the Mississippi river, in the transportation of freight. If the residents of the West who reside in the immediate vicinity of the great railways entertain the opinions which have obtained so great currency during the past two or three years, that the gigantic trade of the West is to be diverted from its natural highway towards New Orleans, and go to northern cities, they would not yearly, yea, almost monthly, be adding to the number of steamboats navigating the Mississippi and its tributaries. There are not more than two or three railroads in the Western States that will even pay their loans, their bonds and mortgages, and every seven or eight years they will all have to be rebuilt. Out of two hundred and forty-five railroads in the United States—very many of them in the West—there are only twenty-five, the stocks of which are above par. The stock of the remaining two hundred and twenty ranges from nothing, or 0, up to 90 and 95, but a majority fall below forty per cent. discount. Does the stock of the people's great highway, the mighty Mississippi, ever depreciate in this manner? We merely allude to this comparison of the costs of railway carriage and water transportation to allay those apprehensions which pervade the public mind, in some sections, of the superiority of railroads over water courses. We are asked to consider the low stage of the rivers, for many months of the year, to which we can add, as a set off, the interruption to railroads from ice and snow, as has been the case during the past winter.

Of the great utility of railroads to our own city there cannot be the least doubt. In fact, we feel their usefulness every day, and regret the extreme apathy and inattention of the two great roads which are now progressing, one west and the other north and east. They, however, will only, at certain periods of the year, come in competition with the great steamboat interests. Steamboats will undoubtedly continue to increase, yearly, as they have for twenty-five years past; and the increasing business of the country will be equally divided between the two great powers, railways and steamboats. It is not our intention, however, to give a dissertation on railroads, and we proceed to comparisons.

In making up these comparisons of receipts of produce, as below, we have availed ourselves of our files for the past year, and drawn on the New Orleans Price Current for previous years. The statements will be found as correct as can be gathered from so extended facilities.

It will be observed that there are only wanting a few thousand bales of cotton to make up the quantity for this year to that of 1852–3. The average receipts of sugar for the five years are 142,955 hhds.; the average receipts of molasses, 223,011 barrels per annum. It will be noted that, only in two seasons has the quantity of molasses been in excess of the present year. The sugar and molasses sold and delivered from plantations are not included. The receipts of flour for 1856, 1854, 1853, 1852, are very uniform. In 1848 they were larger. 1855 being a season of deficient harvests, as is manifested in the short receipts, being but a trifle over one-half of the three preceeding years. In wheat the increase is enormous, being one million five hundred and twenty thousand bushels for the present year, against fifteen thousand bushels only in 1855; 292,000 bushels in 1854, 68,000 bushels in 1853, and 60,000 bushels in 1852, being an increase of four hundred and nineteen per cent. over any year for the last seven years. In corn the increase is three hundred per cent. over last year. In potatoes there is an increase over last year, but a falling off from '52 and '53. The communication with the West in those years was not obstructed nearly three months by ice. In all other articles the figures speak for themselves.

	1856.	1855.	1854.	1853.	1852.
Cotton, bales	1,486,404	966,781	1,098,583	1,494,721	1,190,787
Sugar, hhds	197,698	148,048	108,077	155,434	107,498
Molas's, hhds	236,209	257,044	247,702	215,161	187,943
Flour, bbls	661,780	388,354	659,722	607,177	639,246
Corn, c'r, bbls	36,000	6,600	42,280	17,620	406,43
Corn, sacks	1,220,300	400,329	925,524	816,397	747,798
Wheat, sacks	648,156	5,303	117,069	27,497	24,264
Oats, sks, bbls	343,373	202,077	271,801	252,951	234,763
Tobac'co, hhds	9,500	15,924	14,829	31,033	17,862
Potatoes, bbls	191,127	141,178	159,719	166,434	188,036
Pork, bbls	129,250	157,382	171,238	270,628	183,016
Pork, b'k hog	5,476,948	1,995,656	8,576,760	9,723,910	5,492,791
Pork in bxs	3,600	7,490	14,565	1,192	399
Lard, bbls, trs	68,523	94,853	101,512	90,140	99,295
Lard, in kegs	34,550	46,892	47,765	118,043	99,692
Bacon, b'k, bx	118,670	70,300	110,000	109,000	34,200
Do bxs, hhds	15,200	23,414	28,781	35,568	24,294
Butter, firkins	14,698	24,670	33,094	30,733	20,193
Beef, bbls	41,489	24,317	22,625	43,086	33,613
Beef, hhds, trs	10,300	9,329	8,629	27,712	11,084
Hay, bales	60,207	39,484	33,182	62,615	24,910
Hides	92,000	42,733	55,119	90,149	68,295
Lead, pigs	29,560	16,440	21,987	31,967	87,845
Whisky	62,374	58,708	88,702	95,656	83,404
Candles, b'xes	39,560	30,782	41,333	47,332	34,537
Apples	52,600	23,307	40,134	31,919	14,791

Many articles of produce such as lard, pork, beef, with a considerable quantity of flour, come, via this port, en route to New York and Boston. With the present rates of freights, which are much lower than they were expected to be, increased quantities will seek our market for shipment. Moveover, by sending via this city the advantages of two markets can be realized. We challenge competition with and throw the gauntlet to any other city or community for the superiority in the way and manner of conducting business in this city. The sales of produce are made for cash; no four months, six months, nor sixty days credit, embellishes an account of sales emanating from this city, with a string of charges, embracing five cents for nails, three cents for twine and two pence for the use of a lard trier; nor twenty-five cents as interest on premium of insurance, with five per cent. commissions, and other charges too numerous to enumerate.

But let us go back and see what the trade of New Orleans was twenty years ago, say in the year 1836:

Cotton, bales (1st April)	371,301
Sugar, hhds	72,128
Flour, bbls	112,851
Corn, in ear, bbls	129,770
Corn in sacks	12,225
Wheat in sacks	1,095
Oats, bbls and sacks	11,598
Potatoes, bbls	2,908
Pork in bbls	37,410
Lard in tierces and bbls	813
Lard in kegs	86,870
Bacon, boxes and casks	2,200
Hams, casks	1,765
Butter, firkins	2,980
Beef, bbls	7,223
Hay, bales	7,110

Though twenty years may be considered a long time to look at things in New Orleans, by those who take delight in decrying her great natural position for commerce and trade, yet in the year 1836 similar predictions were made that our good city had reached its climax, and the extent of our business was to be measured by the results of six years, say from 1830 to 1836; but somehow or other, the city continues to extend, and if there are any virtues in figures, the tables above refute all the assertions so boldly promulgated year after year. What do we gather from these statistics? Why, we find that cotton has increased over four hundred per cent., sugar over fifty per cent. In receipts, at the time, though the crop of 1835 was only 30,000 hhds; in 1836 78,000; in 1856 it is 231,427 hhds., which is an increase of three hundred per cent. Does this resemble anything of a retrograde movement? Flour has increased five hundred per cent; corn from 225,212 bushels to 3,000,000 bushels, or a fraction over twelve hundred per cent; and from 2,500 bushels of wheat the quantity has grown to 1,620,000 bushels. We think we have brought forward sufficient data to maintain our position, that the trade of New Orleans is destined to increase, and is now far below what it will be in 1866, if its citizens are true to its interests and to themselves.

Although the banking capital in 1836 in this city was fifty millions of dollars paid up, and the citizens of the State were indebted to the banks, (sixteen in number) on the 1st of January, 1836, in the amount of forty-seven millions of dollars, it was no proof that the culminating point of the city's greatness was attained; for the gigantic business of New Orleans is now done under a banking capital of $13,414,000, and an average indebtedness for the last six months of 1855 and the three first months of 1856 of $21,000,000.

To maintain the present proud and enviable position of New Orleans is, we presume, the desire of every citizen; at the same time, we must not be lagard in our feelings towards our system of internal improvements. Our two great railroads require the helping hand of the moneyed men of the city. Although they will not enter into competition with the great highway, the Mississippi, their extension into regions of country not immediately connected with water courses, is required to sustain and hold that supremacy which we have endeavored to make more than apparent. [Crescent.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Acknowledgement.—The Treasurer of Ministerial Education Society of the Alabama Conference of the M. E. Church, South, acknowledges the receipt of the following sums during the month of March:

March 17	Anonymous, post marked Bayaun, Ala.,	$10
"	22—Rev. Wm. C. Hearn, on the twenty dollar resolution	20
"	22—Rev. John S. Moore, on the same	10
"	24—Rev. Wm. J. Powers on the same	20
	Total amount	$60

Montgomery, Ala., April 1, 1856. W. W. DOWMAN, Treasurer.

MARRIAGES.

On the 2d April, by Rev. Robert J. [illegible], at the residence of the bride's father, in the parish of Tensas, La., Mr. THOS. F. OWEN, of the parish of Concordia, to Miss TABITHA M. KENDRICK.

On the 3d April, by Rev. Robert J. [illegible], in Jefferson county, Miss., Dr. CHARLES B. [illegible], to Mrs. MARGARET N. CLARK, both of the aforesaid county.

On the 25th March, by Rev. William [illegible]sworth, at the residence of A. Hedrick, Mr. J. S. [illegible]ERS to Miss M. L. HEDRICK, all of Washington county, Miss.

On the 3d April, by Rev. Thomas [illegible], Dr. DAVID W. FOSTER to Miss M. SPURLOCK, all of Amite county, Miss.

DEATHS.

Died.—Or rather, fell asleep in Jesus, the 18th March, in Westville, Miss., FRANCES [illegible]NS, in the 20th year of her age.

She was for long years a sufferer. Her end was peace. Yea, more, it was the triumph of the Christian faith over the last enemy. Her dying words were those of assurance, transport and delight: "I am going to heaven—Happy! happy!" Her funeral was preached by the writer, the day after her decease, to an attentive and weeping audience.

May God sanctify to those still detained in the vale this afflicting dispensation of his all-wise yet inscrutable providence!

"Lo! the prisoner is released—
Lightened of her fleshy load;
Where the weary are at rest,
She is gathered unto God."

B. M. WHITTINGTON.

Died.—On the 24th March, in Carrollton, Miss., Mrs. CATHARINE C., consort of Robert [illegible]ngham, and daughter of Stephen Terry.

Sister B. was an early victim to the fell destroyer, [illegible]monary consumption. For five long years she [illegible]red the ravages of the fatal disease, with almost more than Christian fortitude. In early life she had [illegible]cated herself to Almighty God, and found his [illegible]fficient grace could sustain her. From the time [illegible]er connection with the M. E. Church to her death [illegible]ived a most consistent and pious life. On the [illegible]before her departure she was called on by her [illegible]r, when he conversed with her freely about her [illegible]pects beyond the grave. She expressed herself [illegible], and said her only trust was in Jesus; that she [illegible]resigned to death and possessed peace within. [illegible]was then left to herself for a short time by her [illegible]r, he expecting to see her again. But when he [illegible]rned three hours afterwards, death had been [illegible]e—the spirit was gone—earth could no longer re[illegible]heaven's treasure:

"How blessed the righteous, when he dies,
When sinks a weary soul to rest!
How mildly close the beaming eyes,
How gently heaves th' expiring breast!
Life's duties done, as sinks the clay,
Light from its load the spirit flies—
While heaven and earth combine to say,
How blessed the righteous, when he dies!"

R. T. JONES.

Died.—On the evening of the 13th of [illegible]ruary, 1856, after an illness of ten days, in Harris county, Texas, WILLIAM HAYS, aged 71 years.

Father Hays was born in Mississippi Territory, on [illegible]'s Creek, near Natchez. He moved to Texas in [illegible]. He joined the M. E. Church in 1813, made a [illegible]ession of religion soon afterwards, and lived a consistent and devoted member until he was called [illegible] his toils here to his reward in heaven.

Not a murmur did he utter. Speak to him of his approach unto death, his answer was: "All is [illegible]ce within." At intervals, quoting many beautiful passages of Scripture. A few moments before he expired, he used these words, "The Lord is my shepherd—I shall not want." His voice failed him—he closed his eyes on earthly objects, and his spirit passed away. None knew him but loved him.

C. B. D.

Died.—On the 1st February, at the residence of Mrs. E. W. Lewis, in Woodville, Miss., JOHN D. STOCKETT, in his 34th year.

He was born, reared, married, and continued to reside in Wilkinson county, Miss., until his demise. He joined the M. E. Church early after he grew to manhood, and was happily converted to God, and for several years after lived in the enjoyment of religion, possessing much of the social element in his nature, and loving many irreligious friends, he was led astray, and left the Church, and lost his enjoyment in religion. Subsequently, however, he rejoined the Church, and was a member at his death; and from a deep and earnest penitence, the humble and fervent prayer, and the expressions of confidence in the Saviour which characterised his last illness, his friends have hope in his death. May that Providence that rules the fortunes of the world overrule this death to the present and eternal good of the friends of the deceased!

W. B. H.

Died.—On the 9th Feb., at the residence of Mrs. E. W. Lewis, in Woodville, Miss., after a long illness, Mrs. SARAH L. STOCKETT, wife of the late John D. Stockett, in the 32d year of her age.

She had been for years and died in communion with the Methodist Church.

Possessing a large degree of hope, she manifested that buoyancy of spirit, even amid the afflictions of life. These traits, together with that ingenuousness as characteristic of her mental constitution, were largely beneficent to her, by disburdening the mind of its care and anxiety, and at the same time dispelling the clouds and cheering the gloom of affliction. It was thus the wasting tide of life was borne on beyond its expected shore. But these features of character are not only beneficial to those who possess them, but to others also. Who, hardened with sin and gloomy forebodings, has not felt the beseeching influence of a cheerful countenance and buoyant spirit?

Soon after she grew to womanhood, she became a member of the Methodist E. Church, and in 1851 was united in marriage to John Stockett, who preceded her to the grave a few weeks only. They have left no little orphaned ones. May they be reared to God and become lively stones in his spiritual temple.

W. B. H.

Died.—On the 24th March, in the village of Elyton, Jefferson county, Ala., ELIZA M., consort of Robert H. Patten.

She was born and raised in East Tennessee. She professed religion about the year 1846, and joined the M. E. Church, and has lived a faithful Christian ever since. In afflictions, her soul was greatly blessed. Religion was her constant theme. Though not permitted to attend church regularly, she was happy at home. Her faith was strong in the atonement of our Lord Jesus Christ, and her confidence unshaken. In intervals of her last hours she was in the possession of her mind, and during these hours she was careful in impressing upon the minds of her husband and children the importance of their soul's salvation. She was happy as long as she could speak. She praised God and left all in joy.

R. P.

Died.—On the 21st Feb., in Brasoria, Texas, WALTER, son of Milton H. and Nancy Elizabeth Hardworth, aged 3 years and 5 days.

E. F. T.

Died.—On the 25th February, 1856, Sister MARGARET McCAA, consort of Bro. David McCaa, of Jefferson county, Miss., in the 38th year of her age.

"Friend after friend departs—
Who has not lost a friend?"

Many, on observing this notice, will say and feel that they have lost a friend; for she whose happy death we here record was "a friend indeed" to very many into whose hands this will fall.

Our departed sister had been a member of the Church about twenty-three years. She was taken into it by Rev. James Cotton, of the Mississippi Annual Conference, in her fourteenth year. Thus, in the morning of her days, did she dedicate herself to the service of God. Nor did she ever regret that dedication; for during her whole Christian course she exemplified a devoted and ardent temper in the cause of Christ. She was strongly and intelligently attached to the doctrines and discipline of the church of her choice. All its benevolent enterprises had a claim on her benevolence. The Sabbath School cause, especially, was dear to her heart. She not only wished it well, but gave her personal efforts for its success, even when domestic cares might have formed a reasonable excuse for neglect.

Her personal piety was deep and ardent; religion was her principal theme of conversation for years before her death. Her hospitality was of the most generous and liberal character. Ministers of the gospel were always among her most honored guests. She was a devoted wife, a fond mother, and a true friend.

Her death was a triumph of Christian faith. A short time before her death she said that she had long trusted in her Saviour—that she still trusted in him, and that she knew that she would go to him. Her last words were, "Lord, receive my spirit."

May her friends follow her as she followed the Saviour. So shall their end be confiding, calm and peaceful.

J. L. FORSYTH.

Fayette, March 2, 1856.

Died.—On the 4th March, in Glenmville, Barbour county, Ala., of bronchial affection, Mrs. ELIZABETH BASS, relic of the late Sterling Bass, Sr., of Russell county, Ala., in the 76th year of her age.

For months she had suffered under a severe and protracted attack of dysentery, which she bore with Christian fortitude. From this she recovered. But hope, how illusive! A lurking disease of years, a bronchial affection, supervened, which, aggravated by debility from long suffering, baffled the skill of physicians, the kindest and most assiduous filial care and nursing. She retained full possession of her mental faculties to the last moment of her life, when, blessed by the presence of all her living children, and consoled with an unshaken hope of her acceptance with God, she "fell asleep in Christ."

The deceased was born in North Carolina, in 1780, and marrying her late husband, removed with him in that year to Georgia. In 1818 they both joined the M. E. Church, and faithfully persevered to the end. From 1818 till her death she knew no variableness or change in her faith and hope; but walked humbly before God, obeying his law, all her days, until it pleased him to take her home.

Read This.—For all Bowel Diseases, Cholera, Diarrhœa, Dyspepsia, Flatulency, Constipation and General Debility, we know of nothing better than Dr. Hostetter's celebrated Stomach Bitters. One wine glass taken three times each day, before meals, will be a sure cure for all the above diseases, will remove all heaviness from the stomach, keep you free from costiveness, assist digestion, give a good appetite, and impart a healthy tone to the whole system. Every family should keep these Bitters on hand during the summer season, as a family medicine. For sale by all principal Druggists and dealers generally. At wholesale, by E. J. Hart & Co., 79 Tchoupitoulas street, and Cady & Holmes, 7 Gravier street.

apl 2 6t&W — a12 1t

If you are sick, the probability is that the roof of your sufferings is in the stomach. From a weak stomach proceed dyspepsia, languor, oppression in the diaphragm, jaundice, headache, nausea, bodily weakness, dimness of sight, heartburn, costiveness, dysentery, and a legion of other tormenting diseases. Indigestion produces thin blood, and therefore destroys the strength and vigor of the system. To restore the strength of the stomach, and enable it to throw off and dismiss forever all these tormenting and dangerous complaints, nothing is necessary but a persevering use of Hostland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. O. M. Jackson, Philadelphia. There is no mistake, no failure in their sanative effects. See advertisement. — a7 1m

A Masterpiece Outdone.—We have lately supposed that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was the Ultima Thule in its line, and that nothing had been or would be invented which could at all surpass it in its fine points of excellence as a medicine. But we are confidently assured by those competent to judge on the subject, that Ayer's new Pills excel in high medical artistry even that widely celebrated embodiment of his skill. He has succeeded in making them not only pleasant to take, but powerful to cure the large class of complaints which require a purgative remedy [Lancaster Argus, Ky.

They are for sale by J. WRIGHT & CO., fe23 2m and all city druggists.

"The child is only troubled with worms," says the thoughtless mother, when the puny appearance of her offspring is remarked upon. ONLY WORMS! why not say ONLY Cholera or ONLY Yellow Fever, for Worms destroy more lives than either. If you love your little ones, administer to them, even if you only suspect them to be "troubled with worms," a sure, safe and immediate remedy. Every household where it has been tried, every physician who has seen its effect, pronounces WINER'S CANADIAN VERMIFUGE such a remedy.

Be particular and remember the name—"Winer's Canadian Vermifuge." This is the only article that can be depended on. For sale in New Orleans, wholesale and retail, by J. Wright & Co., Nos. 21 and 151 Chartres street, sole proprietors. Sold by all the Druggists. — a12 1t.

PRINTERS' WAREHOUSE.—Our brethren of the craft, and all connected with the art preservative of all arts, are interested to know that George H. Whitney, No. 105 Poydras street, between Camp and St. Charles streets, is prepared to furnish presses, type, inks, paper, cards, and all other articles belonging to and needful for the business. Those who desire to re-dress their weekly appearance, can exchange their old material for what is new, at a reasonable cost.

Capt. Adams, who was arrested in Norfolk for killing one of his sailors at the Chincha Islands, has been discharged from custody.

A fire occurred in Galena, Ill., on the 1st inst., which destroyed about thirty buildings, including a Catholic church.

The sugar house of Mr. Cullum, with a large quantity of sugar, in the northern part of the parish of Pointe Coupee, was destroyed by fire a few days ago.

VIRGINIA.—The law lately passed by the Virginia legislature to prevent the abduction of slaves in northern vessels, compels pilots to search every outward-bound vessel leaving Virginia ports.

The brick wall of an old stable in New York, fell on the 31st ult., burying a number of children who were playing about it. A lad fifteen years of age was killed, and nine others badly hurt.

The ship Undaunted, Capt. Freeman, was at Ivica, on the 3d of March, loading salt, for New York. The Spanish Government had issued orders to allow only those vessels which had obtained permits to load; and that no further permits to ship salt be granted.

Geo. Mecar, of Harrisburg, Pa., a few days since, recovered $4,000 damages for personal injuries from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. It appears Mecar was crossing the track of the road in a covered wagon, when a locomotive, without warning, came along, shivered his vehicle to pieces, and dangerously wounded him.

IMPORTANT, IF TRUE.—A late number of the Medical Gazette says:

The high price at which sulphate of quinine can now be had in its purity has led to its extensive adulteration. Physicians and the public should be on their guard, and only obtain the article from safe and reliable hands, else they may be using arsenic peperine or strychnine, for all these are employed for adulterating purposes.

Magnetic Telegraph.

FIRE IN BALTIMORE.

BY THE NATIONAL AND SOUTHERN LINES.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—A great fire occurred in Baltimore to-day. Several stores were burnt. The loss is estimated at $200,000.

Steamship Launched.

NEW YORK, April 7.—The Adriatic, a new steamship of the Collins line, was launched to-day.

NEW YORK, April 8.—Dr. Graham, who killed Col. Loring in the St. Nicholas Hotel, some months ago, has been pardoned by Gov. Clark.

THERMOMETRICAL OBSERVATIONS.

FOR JANUARY, 1856.....BY LEWES D. TAYLOR.

Month.	9 A.M.	12 M.	3 P.M.	Wind.			Weather.
Jan. 1	40°	46°	47°	NE	NE	NE	Clear.
" 2	44°	48°	49°	NE	NE	NE	Rain.
" 3	44°	50°	54°	NE	NW	NE	Clear.
" 4	34°	42°	38°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 5	40°	52°	52°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 6	42°	54°	52°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 7	52°	66°	61°	NE	NW	NE	..
" 8	40°	50°	51°	NE	SE	NE	Rain.
" 9	34°	39°	41°	NE	NE	NE	Cloudy.
" 10	30°	32°	32°	NE	NE	NE	Rain.
" 11	30°	34°	34°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 12	36°	38°	38°	NW	NW	NW	..
" 13	44°	54°	55°	NW	NW	NW	Clear.
" 14	42°	48°	52°	NW	NE	NW	Cloudy.
" 15	32°	40°	42°	NW	NE	NW	Clear.
" 16	32°	43°	44°	NW	NE	NE	..
" 17	45°	48°	50°	NW	NE	NE	..
" 18	39°	60°	58°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 19	51°	59°	60°	NE	NE	NW	Rain.
" 20	34°	36°	37°	NE	NE	NW	Cloudy.
" 21	34°	34°	40°	NW	NW	NW	Clear.
" 22	25°	35°	38°	NW	NE	NE	..
" 23	32°	42°	40°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 24	40°	46°	51°	NW	NE	NE	Cloudy.
" 25	42°	43°	45°	NE	NE	NE	Rain.
" 26	42°	44°	46°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 27	40°	46°	46°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 28	40°	41°	42°	NE	NE	NE	Rain.

Mean average of each day's temperature, 41°, 59' 25 6/10".
New Orleans, February 1, 1856.

FOR FEBRUARY, 1856.....BY LEWES D. TAYLOR.

Month.	9 A.M.	12 M.	3 P.M.	Wind.			Weather.
Feb. 1	54°	60°	61°	SW	SW	SW	Clear.
" 2	50°	54°	62°	NE	NE	NE	Rain.
" 3	34°	44°	39°	NE	NE	NE	Clear.
" 4	30°	32°	31°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 5	28°	32°	31°	NE	NE	NE	Rain.
" 6	36°	40°	41°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 7	32°	40°	40°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 8	30°	36°	36°	NE	NE	NE	Clear.
" 9	32°	40°	40°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 10	50°	61°	61°	NE	SE	NE	..
" 11	51°	61°	62°	SW	SW	SW	..
" 12	52°	62°	62°	SW	NW	SW	..
" 13	52°	64°	62°	SW	SW	SW	..
" 14	56°	64°	64°	SW	SW	SW	Rain.
" 15	56°	66°	66°	NE	NE	NE	Clear.
" 16	62°	74°	70°	SW	SW	SW	..
" 17	54°	62°	60°	NW	NW	NW	..
" 18	48°	50°	51°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 19	50°	64°	62°	NE	SE	NE	..
" 20	54°	58°	62°	NE	NE	NW	Rain.
" 21	50°	62°	62°	NE	NE	NW	Cloudy.
" 22	54°	62°	62°	SW	SE	NE	Clear.
" 23	56°	70°	70°	SW	NE	NE	..
" 24	46°	58°	64°	NE	NE	NE	Rain.
" 25	56°	66°	66°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 26	64°	72°	70°	SW	SW	SW	Clear.
" 27	70°	80°	82°	NW	NW	NW	..
" 28	60°	60°	62°	NE	NE	NE	Rain.

Mean average for each day's temperature, 56°, 20' 42/100".
New Orleans, February 29, 1856.

FOR MARCH, 1856.....By LEWES D. TAYLOR.

Month.	9 A.M.	12 M.	3 P.M.	Wind.			Weather.
March 1	66°	74°	70°	SW	SW	SW	Rain.
" 2	48°	54°	55°	NE	NE	NE	Clear.
" 3	44°	54°	52°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 4	48°	58°	62°	NE	NE	NW	Cloudy.
" 5	54°	60°	62°	NW	NE	NW	Rain.
" 6	52°	56°	58°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 7	54°	66°	65°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 8	54°	58°	62°	NE	NE	NE	Clear.
" 9	56°	72°	68°	SW	NW	NW	..
" 10	58°	62°	62°	NE	NE	NE	Rain.
" 11	52°	62°	62°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 12	54°	58°	62°	NE	NE	NE	Clear.
" 13	54°	58°	62°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 14	44°	52°	52°	NE	NE	NE	Rain.
" 15	52°	62°	62°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 16	52°	64°	64°	SE	SE	SE	..
" 17	62°	74°	72°	SW	SW	SW	..
" 18	62°	68°	68°	NW	NE	NW	Clear.
" 19	62°	74°	68°	NW	NE	NW	..
" 20	58°	68°	68°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 21	58°	68°	68°	NE	NE	NE	Rain.
" 22	58°	68°	68°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 23	58°	68°	68°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 24	58°	68°	68°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 25	58°	68°	68°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 26	58°	68°	68°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 27	58°	68°	68°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 28	58°	68°	68°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 29	58°	68°	68°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 30	58°	68°	68°	NE	NE	NE	..
" 31	58°	76°	76°	SE	SE	NW	..

Mean average of each day's temperature, 65°, 14', 11 3/5".
New Orleans, April 1, 1856.

ANOTHER ARCTIC EXPEDITION.—We learn from the New London Star that Dr. Kane, accompanied by Mr. Henry Grinnell, were recently in that city for the purpose of "examining the ship Resolute, with a view of her fitness for another conflict with Iceden." From this we might be led to infer that another expedition to the North Pole—probably to explore the newly discovered Polar Sea—was projected.

A proclamation has been issued by the War Department announcing that for the purpose of meeting the present exigencies of the service, the President has directed that the State of Florida, except that portion of it lying west of the Chattahoochie and Apalachie rivers, shall be constituted a separate military department. It is not yet stated who will have the command.

IN LUCK.—Mr. J. Brown, of Hart county, Ga., who is described as the father of twenty-nine children, has discovered a rich vein of gold which yields from a small pinful of earth a penny weight of gold. The old man and his little boys, with their mortars and pans, make from five to six dollars per day.

MR. EVERITT'S PATRIOTIC TOUR.—It seems that the further Mr. Everitt proceeds in his great errand of patriotism, the more unanimous and the more urgent are the appeals for his continued devotion to his noble undertaking. We are informed that he has partly consented to return to Virginia, to speak in a number of towns there, after his appearance in Philadelphia on Friday evening next, and that he may yet accept the invitation to visit Cincinnati and other Western cities. As the charge fixed for his discourse at all those places is the same as at Baltimore—one dollar—and as Mr. Everett accepts no pecuniary return for his labors, the entire sum needed to secure the Mount Vernon Estate, may be raised by the instrumentality of his eloquence alone.

COUNTERFEITS.—The officers of St. Joseph's county, Mich., have arrested a gang of counterfeiters, with a press and $15,000 in five dollar counterfeit bills on the Westminster Bank, Rhode Island. They secured McDougal, who implicated Wm. B. Latta and his son, N. B. Latta, and —— Finch. Latta and his son were arrested, but Finch eluded the officers and escaped with the dies and plate. Latta is held to bail in the sum of $4,000.

The Irving Bank, in New York, lately redeemed a counterfeit on its twenty-dollar note, which had been executed with a steel pen, aided by a pencil brush! The fac simile was perfected with such consummate skill that it was a long puzzle even to the engravers of the Bank.

SUPERIORITY OF AMERICAN SHIP BUILDING.—The Great Republic, the largest clipper in the world, built by Donald McKay, Boston, in running between Marseilles and the Crimea for the French Government, has frequently with a common single reef top-sail breeze, outsailed the fleetest steamers afloat. An English merchant who had made two passages in her, offered $100,000 for a nine months' charter, which was declined on the ground that she was doing better in her present employment.

The propeller Arctic, Capt. Hartstein, sent in search of the Pacific, arrived at Brooklyn Navy Yard on the evening of the 31st, after a cruise of 49 days. She encountered a succession of heavy gales and met with no vessels in distress.

A grand reception ball in honor of John Frost, the renowned English Chartist, was given recently in New York, by his Democratic friends and admirers.

A young man named Cudworth, recently died in the western part of the State of New York, nineteen years old, who swallowed a rye straw, two inches and a half long, when he was one year old. A post mortem examination was held, when the straw was found in a perfect state of preservation, having been lodged in the right lung eighteen years.

EARTHQUAKE.—The Alexandria Gazette states that at 9 o'clock, on the morning of the 21st, an earthquake shock was felt in the counties of Nelson, Amherst and Albermarle, Va. The shock was quite perceptible. The motion of the earth, it was supposed, lasted from ten seconds to half a minute, and was accompanied with a low, rumbling noise, like distant thunder.

THE CURRENT WEEK.

Like an army with banners, whose burnished spear tops and glittering lances reflect back the rays of the sun; whose pennons and pennonceles flaunt like the synonymes and brave forarunners of great deeds of courage and knightly achievement; while thousands of grand hearts, moving by their side, anxiously look forward to the drawing of swords and the clamor of gods and men fighting for honor, for fame, and for love, the legions of the present are swiftly marching on to the future, in which lies their Armageddon and final victory or defeat.

The army of spring, gaining a skirmish here and a victory there, now touches the promise of that purple triumph from which shall be garnered greater glories, higher honors and more permanent prosperity than the weeks and months preceding. Every little shrub and the smallest blades of grass, are investing themselves with a royal greenery to do honor to the occasion, and many small flowers, painted all over more cunningly than by any mortal painter, are showing themselves in full attire to hail their friend and deliverer.

All hail to the brilliancy of the promise, as in every realization of even our highest hopes we too often find but the apples of Sodom. In the future and the past, in memory and expectation, lie all true poetry, all right history, all sound philosophy. The present rings with the blows of the hammer—the exponents of toil. The future has only the perfect Alhambras of labor—the past, the glorious architecture of the Acropolis and the abyss of Tyre.

Monday, April 7.—St. Aphranates, fourth century; St. Hegesippus, St. Turian, of Kenan-Ethick, are the guardians of the day.

The wood anemony—anemone nemerosa—dedicated to St. Aphranates, is the floral emblem.

In 1520, Raphael of Urbino died, on the anniversary of his birthday, which was in 1483. His fame and glory have long survived, and his memory will live green and glorious so long as art and genius survive in the world.

In 1807, Lalande, the great astronomer, died at Paris, aged seventy, after a life devoted to science and scientific pursuits. Though no great discoveries, like those of Laplace and Newton, are allied to his memory, the hard mathematical pursuits which led to and demonstrated their labors, will serve as an eternal corona to the memory of Lalande; and those who, in his manner, travel sic iter ad astra will remember him with praise.

Tuesday, April 8.—St. Dionysius, Bishop of Corinth, in the second century, and Albert, Patriarch of Jerusalem, in 1214, when the crusades enlisted the flower and chivalry of Europe, are the prominent saints.

The ground ivy, glecoma hederacea, is the humble plant which keeps green and growing the memory of St. Dionysius.

In 1341 the celebrated sonnets of Petrarch, embodying his love for Laura, gained for him so great regard and esteem that he was crowned in Rome, where Virgil and Horace had been before him, and all the people of the three-hilled city shouted "Long live the poet."

In 1364 John, King of France, who had been brought captive to England by Edward the Black Prince, died at the Savoy palace, in his captivity; having refused a release on terms that he was not sure of his ability to fulfil—sans peuer et sans reproche.

In 1846 General Scott, leaving a garrison at Vera Cruz, commenced his march to the city of Mexico, by way of Jalapa, with an army of eight thousand five hundred men: while Santa Anna was entrenched, with twelve thousand, at a mountain pass called Cerro Gordo, and had the whole country as a reserve to fall back upon.

Wednesday, April 9.—St. Mary of Egypt; the Massyllan Martyrs; the Roman Captive Martyrs in Persia, A. D. 362, are the Saints. The Red polyanthus, primula polyantha rubra, dedicated to St. Mary, is the floral emblem.

In 1483, Lord Bacon died, in disgrace, at the advanced age of sixty-six. He fell from his high estate because he cultivated high wisdom at the expense of every day wisdom. Rushworth says of him that he "was eminent over all the christian world for his many excellent writings. He was no admirer of money, yet had the unhappiness to be delled therewith." His connivance at the treachery and fraud of his servants wrought his ruin. The gifts of suitors in chancery caused him to be suspected, but his decrees were so just, suitable and fit, that no one was ever reversed. His great work, De Augmentarum Sciential, is an epitome of all that was sound concerning knowledge, and will remain one of those priceless extracts of divine thought that cannot die.

In 1744 "King George's War" was proclaimed by England. It originated in disputes concerning the kingdom of Austria.

In 1747, Lord Lovat was executed on Tower-Hill, for high treason, at the age of ninety. He was a bold, bad man, and carried to the scaffold the same coolness which had accompanied him through a dishonorable life. Walter Scott sketches him in one of his stories.

In 1807 John Opie, the self-taught artist, died.—Though no great and lasting work ever fell from his brush, he attained a high rank in his profession.

Thursday, April 10.—St. Badenus, 376; B. Mechtildes, Virgin and Abbess, 1300, are the patronesses of the day.

The pale violet dedicated to St. Mechtildes, is the flower.

In 1809, Mr. Erskine's negotiations opened anew our trade with England which, by the act of non intercourse, passed by Congress on the 1st of March, prohibited trade or commerce of any kind with either France or Great Britain. Short as was the duration of the non-intercourse, a series of failures swept over the whole country and nebula, such as has not existed since in its comprehensiveness and general ruin, affected every kind of industry and all branches of business. Only those whose support was drawn immediately from the soil were enabled to withstand the shock.

Friday, April 11.—St. Leo the Great, Pope, 461, St. Antipas, St. Guthlake, St. Maccal and others of whom no one is notable, have in charge the eleventh.

The dandelion, taraxacum dens leonis, dedicated to St. Leo, is the emblem.

In 1713, the great peace of Utrecht, which gave a temporary respite to exhausted Europe, was concluded, and in its conclusion was settled the twelve years' war which sprang from the succession to the Spanish throne and involved the whole continental peace.

The war which prevailed in our own country during this period is commonly known as "Queen Anne's War," and was attended with a great many circumstances of barbarity, murder and inhumanity.

Saturday, April 12.—St. Sabas, St. Zeno, St. Julius, the Pope, and St. Victor are the notable names of the day for recollection and observance.

The great saxifrage, saxifraga cæsifolia, is the plant dedicated to St. Zeno.

Senecar, the philosopher, a native of Cerdaba, in Spain, died at Rome, A. D. 65, in the fifty-third year of his age. His moral writings give him his greatest claim to immortality—breathing as pure and sincere a morality as those of any heathen author. He was a preceptor to Nero, who, when he had acquired power, sent an order to the old philosopher to destroy himself. This order he complied with by opening his veins and taking poison. During these operations he conversed calmly with his friends, and as his blood flowed languidly, he caused himself to be put in a hot bath, until Nero's soldiers, becoming impatient, placed him in an oven and suffocated him by steam. It is imagined from the tenor of Seneca's writings that he must have listened to the preaching of St. Paul, and there now exists a written correspondence said to have passed between the two, which has been supposed by many to have been genuine.

In 1705, Dr. Edward Young, author of the "Night Thoughts," died.

In 1782, Admiral Rodney defeated the French fleet, under Count de Grasse, in the West Indies.

In 1814, London was generally illuminated on three successive nights, for the termination of the war with France.

Anniversary of the birth of Henry Clay.

Sunday, April 13.—St. Hermenegild, Martyr, 586; St. Gulnoch, 838; St. Caradoc, 1122, are the patrons of the day.

The green narcisso, dedicated to St. Hermenegild, is the flower.

In 1517, Cairo was taken by the Sultan Selim, who thus became master of Egypt.

In 1814, Charles Burney, author of the "History of music," and other works showing literary ability, died, at the age of 88.

In 1822, this date was made memorable by giving birth to "one of us."

In 1823, one of the most desperate sea fights ever recorded, took place in the Mediterranean between two corsairs belonging to the Algerines and a private armed vessel, carrying the American flag. The corsairs were successful and carried their prisoners into captivity, whence one finally escaped and published a full record of his experience among the Algerines.

REV. DR. DEWEY'S LECTURE.—Rev. Dr. Dewey delivered another lecture last evening in Dr. Clapp's Church, concerning the ends and means of human culture and all that appertains to man. There was a very large and attentive audience present, and the utmost attention paid to all that was said.

Taking man up as a creature of Fate, and considering him in his relationship to certain irrevocable laws, the plastic nature of man under certain great laws was shown, and the effect that those laws have both upon individuals and nations.

The same generic laws that rule his outer and material, regulate his inner and intellectual life. Man cannot throw off the imperative law that binds them. They have tried and failed.

Slowness is the opposite of our age's characteristic. But moral progress is slow, and must be so, because there is no royal road for advance.

Discipline is the great thing in life. No man's trials are made greater than he can bear, if he will discipline himself beforehand. It is wearisome to do the same thing frequently over, but it cannot be avoided, for the extraordinary is attained at high cost. There is the compensating thought that excellence is in itself a reward, and that what comes to a man from hard labor can never be wrenched away.

This skeleton, filled up in the able and glowing manner that it was, and woven at length, well repaid all who attended.

Five O'Clock—Saturday.

There are some months in the year more notable and pleasant than other months; some weeks that surpass their predecessors and successors, and some days colored with greater eventfulness than those which herald or complete them. So, too, there are particular hours of each day that make the jewels of the whole and shine as burning diamonds upon the breast or brow of the hearer. The midnight of the last days of December, the morning stroke of the first day of January, twelve o'clock upon Christmas night, the cocks crowing upon the first of April, are special and notable hours, big with recollection and freighted with remembrance. In our own ilk, five o'clock in the post meridian of any day—but five o'clock on Saturday, beyond all its compeers, is resonant with business and notably important to all whose pursuits are connected with occupation upon the river and its great tributaries.

Saturday is, par excellence, the steamboat day of the week. From an early hour of the morning up to the moment when the gangway planks are drawn in, the last passenger and his baggage—the invariable gentleman who puts off his arrival until the last stroke of the bell end is then in any amount of trouble to get on board—has reached the deck, there is an incessant bustle, an unceasing tumult, a deafening clamor. Drays and baggage wagons, coaches and cabs dash to and fro over the planking, in a wild endeavor to make up for lost time; apple and orange venders scramble about in most precarious positions, in an effort to dispose of their juicy merchandise; doubtful characters, in doubtful boats, scull about under the levee and, almost, under the steamboat wheels; old men and young men acquire the vigor of machinery and emit voices of brass, trying to sell the latest novels or the evening papers; venerable heads of families, who have tarried a moment too long to enjoy a stirrup-cup with some dear friend, run along the hurricane decks of adjoining steamboats trying to jump on their own boats; the whistle sounds clear and distinct above the surrounding noise; the planks are suddenly withdrawn; the deck hands gather forward and join in a discordant chorus to the words of their leader; the great boat backs slowly out amid the waving of handkerchiefs and bowing of heads—drops a few lengths down the current, points her nose up river, gives a slight tinkling of the engineer's bell, emits a few hoarse snorts, tries the escape pipes, and as smoke and steam make a great canopy overhead, starts against the current on her long journey to Vicksburg, Alexandria, Memphis, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Pittsburg or St. Anthony's Falls. The crew, gathered forward, shout or sing:

"We're going up the Mississippi,
O-ah-one;
Engineer, you let her rip,
A-e-ah-ah-ah!"

and to this delightful recitative—continued for a half mile, at the top of the lungs of fifty stalwart deck-hands—the boat jumps along, quickening her way, momently, as though in an effort to pierce and escape the din of the city. Order then reigns—unless the pilots see fit to make a push at some boat which put out a few moments before them—in which case coal and pine timber are burned up in a manner indicative of a wish to leave nothing for that grand conflagration which has been predicted is yet to arrive. A few passengers wander along the hurricane deck, getting a last view of the steeples, topmasts, house-roofs, and other prominent matters of note that divide the heavens from New Orleans. The remainder go below, look into their state-rooms, open some kind of social conversation, and endeavor by all the arts at their command to find amusement. As the latest of the boats leaves an open space at the levee, some descending packet pokes her nose into the slight space, wedges her way inward, makes fast to some strong post and vomits instantaneously forth a great flood of life and merchandise. The deck hands and laborers, who live upon the work and business of the levee, pick out their cotton-hooks, and begin to transfer the floating freight unto a more stable foundation. Spectators gradually disappear; tarpaulins are thrown over perishable produce, if it threatens to rain; and Nature spreads her grand tarpaulin over all. Peace reigns, except where some wharf-rat moves secretly about, in an effort to appropriate; in accordance with the doctrine of equal rights, from the pile of his more fortunate fellow. The police begin their patrol; a thousand lamps make the city seem like a sphere of radiance—and the levee is at rest.

We recommend all who wish to see the greatest panorama of the country; to behold a picture framed in no other city; to enjoy a scene that is without rival—to visit the levee on Saturday afternoon, and, walking circumspectly, from Canal street to the Texas steamship landing, to keep their eyes busily engaged in inventorying, and their minds active in chronicling the events that render Saturday afternoon, at five o'clock, more busy and active than any other hour in the days that make the weeks of every month in a New Orleans year. Out of the turmoil and excitement, the roar and hustle, they may carry away something worthy of recollection. The scene is an old one to us—but so is the sunlight—not the less pleasant either, however, from the fact that they have been seen before. Each day has its peculiarities.

A switch-tender on the Little Miami Railroad, in Ohio, who recently caused an accident whereby the engineer lost his life, has become insane in consequence.

The Indiana ladies have made another swoop at the whisky shops. After demolishing everything in

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

SUPREME COURT.

[Concluded from last week.]

Merrick, C. J.—However desirable the mature considerations of constitutional questions may be in ordinary cases, we have thought that on account of the important public interests which are involved during this litigation, this case ought to be disposed of at the earliest moment practicable.

It may be agreed common right that any person, should be deprived, without fault on his part, and without being heard, of an office in which he has been elected. And so far as concerns the address of the Legislature removing Mr. Hufty, it is probably in the same form it would have assumed if charges had been preferred against him, and he had, as in usual in other cases, been furnished with a copy of them, and permitted to appear before the House. We state not, therefore, the question permitted to infer anything unconstitutional on account of the mere form of the proceeding. On the contrary, we are bound to presume that the proceedings are regular, for the members of the two Houses are the judges of the regularity of the proceedings before them, except in those particulars only which are prescribed by the Constitution; and we have no more right to question the reasons, or causes, or successive steps in their proceedings, than we have to review the proceedings, decisions and decrees of this Court.

Neither do I consider that we have the right to determine whether the motives which have influenced the Legislature are sufficient to justify the address. The exclusive control of this matter has been by the Constitution vested in the Legislature as to all officers not otherwise expressly provided for in that instrument.

The members of the two Houses alone are the judges of the grounds and causes of the removal, and as this power has been confided by the people to their representatives, it would seem that they are responsible to the people for its exercise or abuse.

But it is said the Constitution commands the Legislature to provide by law for the trial, punishment and removal from office, of all officers who may be guilty of crime, which would favorize the idea that from no other, but also a mode of removing civil officers for crime, is to be provided by law. Article 99 of the Constitution declares that "Which the Governor shall have power to remove from office, whenever in his opinion they have rendered themselves incapable or unfit to discharge the duties of their office, or have been guilty of malfeasance in office, or any other high crime or misdemeanor, or neglect of duty, such officer may be impeached by the House of Representatives, and tried by the Senate; and the Senate shall have power, when sitting for that purpose, to punish such officers, when convicted, by removing them from office, and disqualifying them to hold any office of honor, trust or profit under this State; but judgment in such cases shall not extend further than removal from office and disqualification as aforesaid; but the party convicted shall, nevertheless, be liable to indictment, trial, judgment and punishment according to law."

Article 73 declares that "The Governor shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons after conviction, except in cases of impeachment; and, in case of conviction for treason, he may suspend the execution of the sentence until the case shall be reported to the Legislature at its next session, when the Legislature shall either grant a pardon or commute the punishment, or direct the execution of the sentence, or grant a further reprieve. He shall report to the Legislature at the commencement of each session every case of reprieve or pardon granted by him, stating the name of the convict, the crime of which he was convicted, the sentence and its date, and the reasons for granting the pardon."

Article 74 declares that "The Governor shall have power to remove any officer appointed by him, whenever in his opinion he may think proper to do so."

Article 75 declares that "The Governor shall have power to fill vacancies that may happen during the recess of the General Assembly, in all offices the appointment to which is vested in him by this Constitution, which appointments shall expire at the end of the next session of the General Assembly."

Article 76 declares that "The Governor shall have power to appoint a Notary Public for the parishes of Orleans, Jefferson, St. Bernard and Plaquemines, for each of whom he shall appoint a Deputy, who shall reside in the city of New Orleans, and shall perform the duties of Notary Public in the parish for which he is appointed, and shall be removable at the pleasure of the Governor."

Article 77 declares that "The Governor shall have power to appoint a Register of Public Works also full power to appoint a Register of Public Works also full power to appoint a Register of Public Works also full

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY A COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS FOR THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH---H. N. McTYEIRE, EDITOR.

VOLUME VI—NUMBER 11. WHOLE NUMBER 271.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 19, 1856.

$2 00 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE. OFFICE—76 CAMP ST.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

A Biographical Sketch OF THE HON. AND REV. JOHN M. TAYLOR.

VICKSBURG, MISS., March 30, 1856.

He died at his residence in Madison parish, La., on the 28th February, after a protracted sickness and great suffering, which was borne with characteristic fortitude and submission. Thus, another of earth's noblemen, and one of the truest friends and ablest supporters of Christianity, has gone from amongst us. Death has been strangely busy of late in taking down the pillars of society, and removing the great props of morality, conservation and religion. Among many who have been recently called to pass the "Dark River," few, if any, will be more missed than the excellent Christian gentleman whose death we record. He was born in Orange county, Va., June 28, 1788. He was a near relation of Gen. Zachary Taylor, and they were both born on adjoining plantations.

JUDGE TAYLOR was a man of mark. His streng mind and active intellect were strikingly exhibited very early in life by the ease with which he mastered his studies. When about nineteen years of age, he commenced the study of law in Staunton, Va., where he continued for two years, at which time he was admitted to the bar, and soon after removed to Colnmbia, Tenn., where he commenced the practice of his profession.

In March, 1811, he married Miss Anna Foote, eldest daughter of William Foote, Esq., of Fauquier county, Va. Our age has produced few such women. She was possessed of a noble intellect, and manners the most refined and attractive. She was an ornament to her sex. Hor society was courted in every circle of refinement, and her exalted piety, serene dignity and devotion to the duties of her several relations, won the homage of ardent affection. She lived and died a model Christian, wife and mother.

JUDGE TAYLER remained but a few years at Columbia. After his marriage, he settled in Huntsville, Ala., (then Mississippi territory,) where an unusually intelligent population was settling, and where he had not lived long before he took his stand in the front rank of the able bar then residing and practicing in that section of country. He was a member of the Convention which formed the Constitution of the State of Alabama. At about the age of thirty-one years he was elevated to the bench of the Circuit Court by the Legislature, which office he filled with distinguished ability. A few years afterwards he was elected by the Legislature to fill the office of the Supreme Bench, which office he held as long as he remained in the State; and no Judge occupied the same responsible position who has discharged its duties with greater fidelity, zeal, and general satisfaction. His resignation of the office was received with great reluctance, but his fixed purpose of removing to Mississippi led him to take the step. He removed to Mississippi and settled in Vicksburg in 1832, and devoted his attention to planting and the practice of the law. No gentleman ever entered a community under more favorable auspices, or was more cordially received by an intelligent and appreciative people. Himself and family were deemed an acquisition and an an ornament to the place, and their esteem grew with increasing years.

Before 1844, he had nearly relinquished the practice of his profession, and in that year purchased a plantation in, and removed to Chicot county, Arkansas, where, in 1847, he had the misfortune to lose his estimable wife. He removed to Madison parish in 1850, and was married in 1851 to Miss Caroline E. Thurman, who still survives him.

In February last he closed his mortal career, and calmly sleeps the sleep of a holy death.

At the age of thirty-three years he renounced a skeptical scheme of reasoning in which he had fortified himself against the claims of Christianity, and taking the Bible as the only guide worthy of rational and accountable creatures, soon found himself rejoicing in the true spirit of the gospel, and counted it his chief joy through life to find his most intimate associates among the disciples of Christ. Soon after he had united with the Church, he felt it his duty to preach the gospel; and whilst his existing responsibilities would not allow him to give himself wholly to the work of the ministry, he devoted so much time to the duties of the pulpit that for many years there were few more effective or useful ministers in the country. His name would secure a crowded audience at almost any time or place, and those who heard him seldom failed to be greatly instructed and substantially improved by his discourses. He was an able minister of the New Testament. His mind was comprehensive, logical, acute; his utterance ready and fluent; his manner at once dignified and persuasive. He was in earnest. He did not preach merely to fill up an idle hour, but because he loved the gospel and wanted all men to understand it and enjoy its glorious bounties. Hence his countenance glow'd with a divine philanthropy, his eye moistened, his words took fire, and the hearts of his hearers swayed to and fro under the power of his peculiar eloquence. There were very few such preachers.

As a Christian, his private life was marked for its devotion, zeal, prayerfulness and conscientious discharge of every duty—as much so as that of any person we have ever known. He was not merely a good husband and a kind father, in the common-place usage of those terms, but he stood in his family-circle as a patriarch, saying, 'As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.' He loved the souls of his family, and while, with commendable diligence, he toiled to furnish them those things essential to this life, he did not neglect to instill into their minds the great lessons of life and immortality through Jesus Christ.

JUDGE TAYLOR was a warm advocate of his political views, but he was as conscientious as he was ardent; and before he came to this State the fairest field and most flattering prospects were opened before him for a successful career as a statesman; and frequently was he urged to accept nominations for the highest honors the people can bestow; but his peculiar views of what he deemed his duty in another sphere led him to decline the offers of his devoted political friends.

As a citizen and neighbor, it might be truly said of him, "None knew him but to love him." Not that we would say all loved him—he was too noble, too incorruptible, pure and philanthropic—he was too much a man of God, a man of daily prayer, a Christian indeed, for many people truly to know. He mingled with hundreds and thousands who were struck with his dignified, refined and manly bearing—who were impressed with the stamp of superior intelligence on his brow—who felt awed by his stern and lofty integrity, his transparent truthfulness and lofty pride of character. But they did not all know him. Only those who cherished kindred views and sentiments could fully appreciate and ardently love him. Those who reveled in "laciviousness and excess of of wine," thought it strange that the Christian gentlemen did not "run with them to the same excess of riot; speaking evil of them," in St. Peter's day; and their successors to these distinguished characteristics are as true to their practices as is the needle to the pole. The man of whom it may be said "none name him but to praise," is not fit for the rugged, every-day life battles, not prepared to measure arms with the giant forces of resistance with which all true men must meet. But no man need wish to be more honored, and have a larger number of devoted friends. And, take him all in all, it will probably never fall to the lot of many, if of any, who enjoyed his acquaintance, "to meet his like again."

One who stood by him in the great hour when soul and body were shaking hands, and after a fellowship of nearly seventy years, were now parting for their respective abodes—dust to dust, and the spirit to God who gave it—says of him, "He died in the manner that his noble life gave promise of. For months before his death the great theme of his conversation was the merits of the atonement, and his devotions were as unremitting as his consolations in believing were remarkable. He frequently exhorted us all on the subject of religion. We never saw him weep but once during all his illness, and those were tears of joy and not of grief.

A short time previous to his death he exclaimed, "Jesus! O, how sweet the name! How sweet to think we have such a friend to lean upon." And as he thus spoke the tears gushed from his eyes; and as those eyes were uplifted in sweet contemplation, it was quite evident that his spirit was even then almost at the pearly gates of heaven. His death was remarkably easy; his life went out like a candle; and it was so calm,

> "We thought him dying when he slept,
> And sleeping when he died."

The Methodist Episcopal Church became the church of his choice, after a thorough investigation of her usages and doctrines; and, though drawn by powerful influences to a form of worship more ceremonial and attractive, yet he found what he had need of most, a spiritual people adhering to primitive Christianity, with all the characteristics of the true Church of Christ. After nearly forty years' study, observation and experience, he rejoiced that his judgment and heart approved his early decision. His family and uncounted numbers of friends, will hold his memory dear and sacred as long as life shall last. May it be their happiness and ours to meet him above, and rise with him in the resurrection of the just.

C. K. MARSHALL.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

FEMALE COLLEGES.

NUMBER TWO.

In a former article I have endeavored to show that there is a remarkable blank in the schedule of female education—that whereas boys go from the common school to the academy, and from the academy to the college, girls pass directly from the common school to the college.

Their academic training, then, is either overlooked or else it is attended to in the college. But is it possible for the female college to fill this double office? Can it be an academy and a college at the same time? If it cannot be both, in which class does it more properly fall?

To these questions we are compelled to answer that it is not very much of either, though a little of both. In the attempt to transcend academic respectability and reach college grandeur, it has fallen into an anomalous and absurd position.

I would not be thought unnecessarily fault-finding; and, though what I say may seem harsh or uncalled for, yet I trust that when fairly understood, as I hope to be in due time, it will appear that whatever may be said in these articles is said in the spirit of candor, and with a desire to contribute to the reform of our imperfect systems of instruction.

I say, then, that our female schools are quite anomalous in their character and unsatisfactory in their results. They are neither academies nor colleges, but an exceedingly dainty mixture of both with a very ingenuous patent preparation superadded. But before we further attempt the exposure of their faults, it may be well to inquire what is an academy, what is a college, and what is the legitimate business of each?

We answer, in general terms, that an academy is, or ought to be, an institution where the basis of a true education is securely and adequately laid. A college is, or ought to be, an institution where the grand superstructure is laboriously reared. It is not the office of either to furnish the edifice to any considerable extent. This is the mission of the university or the scientific school, or of the educated man himself. Education and learning are by no means identical. One is the disciplining, the the unfolding, the strengthening of the powers of body, mind and heart; the other is the knowledge gained during and subsequent to this process. Now, manifestly, the education comes naturally first in order; but inasmuch as a certain limited amount of elementary knowledge is essential to the beginning of the rigid disciplinary processes, it becomes necessary that the primary schools—the common schools—should make the communication of this elementary knowledge their chief concern. This done, the business of the academy is obvious. It is to enter patiently, systematically, perseveringly upon the labor of education—of development and discipline. Of course, a great deal of valuable information will be imparted during this training, but this should be regarded as an incidental result necessarily attendant upon the inculcation of proper habits of study, of investigation, and of reflection. To give the pupils these habits, to invigorate their minds, to systematize their thoughts, and to quicken and whet their powers of discrimination, should be the deep and constant endeavor of the academy. The means which are best adapted to the accomplishment of this work should always be employed. Now experienced instructors, both in Europe and America, are nearly unanimous in the decision that these means are, the study of the ancient languages and mathematics. Surely an opinion founded in centuries of experience, and supported by the united testimony of all the greatest scholars, philosophers and educators of the world, ought not to be set aside in haste.

But this is an exceedingly slow and toilsome process. It does not at all tally with the steam and lightning ambition of rash Young America! She would have something less gradual and weighty and tedious—something more fleet and practical and showy! She would ignore education altogether, and take learning by the forelock.

She asks, with an air of triumph, "What possible use have my sons and daughters for languages that have long since ceased to be spoken? Of what practical utility to the majority of people are the higher mathematics?"

You venture to remonstrate with her, and assure her that, independent of their intrinsic value, which is incalculable, no substitute has ever yet been suggested which is at all comparable to them as a disciplinary regimen. Still she pertinaciously repeats the question, "What is the practical good that is to result from them?" She manifestly does not understand the case, and her very inquiry reveals her youth.

Young America has yet to learn that education, at least, cannot be subjected to her abbreviating processes, but must ever remain what it always has been, the work of many patient, toilsome years; and that sound learning is a trophy only to be gathered by mature and educated minds.

MENTOR.

(To be Continued.)

A REMARKABLE CONVERSION.

[Dr. T. H. Stockton's discourse on the Life and Character of Rev. Samuel K. Jennings, M. D., furnishes the following. Dr. Jennings died in the City of Baltimore, 1854, at the age of 83. He is herein nobly eulogized as of ample breadth of character, generous intensity, scientific thoroughness and practical skill. Some of his descendants reside in Alabama—his son, Rev. J. M. Jennings, being a member of that Conference.—ED.]

His conversion was a remarkable one. I have often talked with him about it, and have its main facts deeply impressed upon my memory. Notwithstanding his religious associations, he was himself skeptical, very skeptical—perhaps in the pride of conscious but immature mental power. He was a Deist—rejecting the Bible and Christianity. He had read much, thought much, made out his system, arranged fact and argument in its support, entrenched himself invulnerably, as he supposed, at all points, and was ready for a contest with the strongest and most skillful champions the gospel could produce. Such he was—candid, open to conviction, and, it may be, even anxious, if in error, to be delivered from it; though it is probable that, from his standpoint, he saw no position within the whole horizon from which to anticipate a successful assault upon him. In this condition, as so frequently happens in similar cases, it pleased God to approach him by means of a comparatively humble messenger. His father appears to have been "given to hospitality," and among the visitors at his house was a Methodist itinerant by the name of Heath. In conversation with this plain but pious and useful man, the young Deist was happy to have an opportunity of stating and maintaining his theory. It may be that his assurance of superior ability and accomplishments occasioned the expectation of an easy victory. The preacher, sensible of natural and educational deficiences, and yet truly wise and serenely patient, listened with such polite and profound attention, that the eager orator of infidelity was exceedingly gratified, and began to hope that he had, indeed, won him over to his cause, and soon might proclaim his conquest. When, however, his logic and rhetoric were exhausted, and he paused for the desired acknowledgment, the meek servant of Christ replied, in substance, as his Master gave him utterance, "Young man, I see that you are established upon a rock"—ah! thought his hearer, I have caught him! but the preacher proceeded—"from which nothing but the power of God can ever move you." Ah! thought his stricken hearer—what's that? And so, to his utter disappointment, he was himself instantly confounded. In truth, the power of God was already on him. He continued to reflect. The power of God!—this is a new element in the process. I must examine this. If it be a genuine experience, I must know it. Authorities, arguments, ingenuous speculations, logical inductions and deductions, books, debates, all such things were now out of place. Christianity came before him as a thing to be tried by actual experience—to be honestly submitted to a simple, practical test. "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God." He retired, therefore to his closet, fell upon his knees, acknowledged with new interest the great God of nature, and prayed with all his soul that if Christianity were indeed a revelation from him, he might be convinced of the fact. Then he added other practical compliances with gospel requirements; watching his heart meanwhile for spiritual impressions. There was a certain place in the woods, not far from his own house, where he often went for prayer. On a certain day, while engaged in writing, at home, a sudden impression was made upon his mind of this sort, "Now retire and receive the blessing." He answered it, mentally in the way of brief postponement—Yes, I will, as soon as I have finished this paragraph. But that was a seeming preference of his own will to the will of God. When the paragraph was completed he retired, but found no place where he could pray—wandering hither and thither in vain. This incident was a lesson to him. He determined that, if thus favored again, he would immediately obey. Some time after, on a Sabbath morning, while the preacher already refered to was his guest, and preparations were in progress for attendance at church, the second visitation came. Mrs. Jennings was to ride to the place of meeting on horseback. Her husband had gone out to adjust the saddle and bridle, when, just then, as if to try him again in the midst of a comparatively unimportant engagement, the impression was made upon his mind, "Now retire, and you shall receive the blessing." Instantly he let the gearing drop and hastened away to the woods. When he reached his consecrated oracle, he fell upon the ground before God. There the tempter overtook him, and assailed him with the question, "What have you come here for?" But he answered, in the fullness of his soul, "Ah! the Great Omnipotent knows what I have come here for. I have come that he may have mercy upon me, for Christ's sake, and forgive my sins." Then, looking up, there he saw, with the utmost possible distinctness, the person, or image, or some spiritual projection or representation, (I cannot pretend to decide what,) of our Lord—gazing upon him, smiling on him, ineffably beautiful and glorious, divinely benignant; saying nothing, but enrapturing his spirit with the assurance of remission, acceptance and salvation. Oh! it was a heavenly vision. But it soon vanished, and directly the tempter taunted him with the sarcasm, "Ha! now you've made out the conceit!"—as if repeating the phrase he had himself often employed in relation to others, describing conversion as mere conceit. His persuasion of the reality of this revelation, however, was confirmed by the succeeding and abiding consciousness of relief. He even desired and even sought to regain his former feeling of guilt, but could not. He tried hard, but in vain. No sorrow answered his call, no tear started, no burden could be found. All was peace, so much peace as almost in this way to afflict him; because he thought he did not deserve it, and ought not to experience it. This condition continued for weeks. Explicable or not, the great change was wrought. Deism was gone, and Christ was enthroned, as "God, over all, and blessed forever."

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Book and Tract Cause in Mississippi—Onward.

VICKSBURG, April 9th, 1856.

Please say that the Book and Tract business is moving on pretty well. I have been out among the people for several weeks, and orders have been filled by Bro. Copeland amounting to about $1,000 per week; and as our supplies had not come with the dexterity we had anticipated, some of the orders could not be filled entire, nor with the promptness we could wish ourselves. Some orders now on hand will have to lie over for a few days. We regret this, but hope to do better. Will the brethren wait a time with a little patience? Send us your orders, and we'll fill up just as fast as we can. We are glad to find so many are entering the work.

One brother, who is on a very poor circuit, proposes to be colporteur among a poor people, where more than one-half of the books will have to be distributed gratuitously, without pecuniary remuneration. Now wont some brother or sister send us $25, or $50, or $100, to pay for the books to be given away among that people? Other brethren will do the same if the books are sent to them. Who will send me a draft or the money, requesting me to send books out to the poor who want to read?

Brethren, please respond to this call. You will feel better to give a little to the poor. Besides, it is lending to the Lord.

H. H. MONTGOMERY.

Bishop Otey, of the Episcopal Church, in Tennessee, desires to employ an itinerant missionary in the Western District. He offers $500 and a horse to ride. This would be a useless expense to the Bishop. The Methodists are doing that work, and charge the Bishop nothing for it.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

DIGESTED THEOLOGY.

NUMBER ONE.

A person who has been benefitted by reading a book, feels a natural desire to communicate the fact to others; and the object of a pastor's reading should be to find those books and those truths which may, through him, be useful to his people. A direct way to this is to point out the books he has read and indicate their contents. In doing this, he may also give some of the results of his reading in his own mind. He will thus, perhaps, be of service to those who may not buy or read the work he speaks of, as well as to those who may be induced by his articles to do this. The writer proposes, therefore, to call attention to some works which have fallen into his hands, and which might be useful to others.

I.—"DEFENCE OF OUR FATHERS."

Many will doubtless recognize this work, but as it is growing old in these days of short-lived generations of both books and men, some, perhaps, may not be acquainted with it.

It was written by Dr. Emory, (afterwards Bishop,) about thirty years ago. It was directed to Dr. McCaine, who appears also to have been a Methodist, but was at that time sowing dissension about our Episcopacy, and we presume advocating the principles which resulted in the formation of the present Methodist Protestant organization.

The object of McCaine was to secure lay delegation, and this was to be effected by throwing off the Episcopacy. Hence a most vigorous and savage attack made by him on this order of our ministry.

In the Defence of our Fathers, Dr. Emory impugns the sources of his opponent's information, they being no better than a work of a former renegade, who had experienced all the trials of a mind in going from Methodism to Rome via the Episcopal Church. Nor is Dr. McCaine's motive deemed altogether unselfish, he being a local preacher.

In favor of our Episcopacy, Dr. Emory brings many powerful arguments from that invincible armory of anti-Papal and anti-Pusey argument, the "Irenicum" of Stillingfleet.

H next quotes largely from the venerable Bishop White, who may be considered the founder of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America. The peace of 1783 found the two branches of the Episcopal Church in England to be similarly situated in this country. They were alike without bishops to ordain their ministers. Mr. White, who was afterwards ordained bishop, urged the giving of presbyterial ordination to their ministers; and many of the Methodist people were willing to receive the sacraments from preachers who were unordained. The Episcopal denomination finally concluded to seek for ordination in England; but Mr. Wesley, knowing the slowness of their proceedings, and the urgency of the people, and fully believing in the validity of presbyterial ordination, finally gave us an Episcopacy of that kind.

Had we been willing to wait at the foot of throned Episcopacy in England, we might, after a long and injurious delay, have obtained formal ordination; but our preachers being more intent on saving souls, were abroad in the wilderness (for they were hunters) while Jacob obtained the blessing. But of the two children which were thus left by their cruel mother in England to suck at the dug of a wolf, that one which never returned to the unnatural parent has been far more successful in the world and before God.

Dr. Emory brings a great deal of original truth to bear upon the controversy from the early history of our Church in America, as well as from the acts and words of Mr. Wesley. It is interesting to trace Methodism from its first feeble windings, as it flowed out of the sources of human hearts in which had been opened the well-spring of eternal life, and to see how it gathers volume and might and strength as it rolls on in the accomplishment of its high destiny. But though opposed by many a rocky barrier, and often thrown out of the right line, yet its very deviations tend to enrich, and its meanderings are beautiful! To stand with Wesley at the point where he originated Episcopacy, as it proved to be, in America, is like standing with Moses when he struck the rock in the wilderness, which caused streams to flow in the desert that followed the people in all their future journey; yet like that act of Moses there might have been some informality—some ecclesiastical sin, which forbade his entering himself the promised land, and only permitted him to gaze across the flood into the happy country where Methodist Episcopacy is now so flourishing.

We commend the work to your ministers. It is written in a good style—above all, in a good spirit, and has been useful to one at least in defending himself against pretensions that are founded on the divine right of the Episcopacy. It is one of the course of study in the Northern Church, and might be profitable at the present time in ours. It may be had of Stevenson & Owen, or the agents of the Tract Society.

ALIQUIS.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Needless Multiplying of Domestic Missions.

THURSDAY, April 10, 1856.

Mr. Editor:—I am much gratified that Bishop Andrew has, in his fourth number, called public attention to the manner in which our Domestic Missions are being unnecessarily multiplied. The evil is a growing one, and is so great that it ought [illegible]. If it is not, it will hang as a millstone about us in all our missionary efforts. Indeed, it is this, in the main, which has already brought our missionary treasury to its present condition.

The plain truth is, many of our ministers on small circuits and village stations are not doing work enough to keep them in practice; and it requires, on this plan, two or three preachers to do what one man would have thought very light work fifteen years ago.

I have heard of a circuit in this Conference of two appointments, both in the country, and this year a missionary was appointed to assist the preacher on that large circuit. But you say, "Is not the work to be enlarged?" Such is the peculiar character of the country that it cannot have more than one more appointment added. So that it will be on this wise—the circuit preacher will preach in the morning, and while he is resting at home from the arduous labors of the morning, the missionary will preach in the evening.

There are other circuits in this Conference where the arrangements are not much different. If I am not much mistaken, there are a number of appointments where the circuit preacher and the missionary—save the mark!—preach in the same house; the first to the masters, the other to the servants. Such laziness is a disgrace to the ministry, and is in striking contrast with the manner in which others labor as missionaries.

I have said this useless multiplication of missions has brought our missionary treasury to its present state of emptiness; and, if it were necessary, I could give you the names of circuits that once sent up good contributions to the missionary treasury, which, under the new plan, do not give one dollar. The reason is, that they now support two men to do what one used to do; and, although one of them is called a missionary, yet you will find that the cold members in the mission are only about as numerous as when they were reported on the circuit.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Worthy of Imitation.

I have received a very encouraging letter from Bro. G. W. H., of Claiborne county, Miss., accompanied with a draft for one hundred dollars for the Book and Tract Society of the Mississippi Conference. Is not this refreshing and encouraging in these close times?

But are there not others who might follow this example, and leave their children with none the less? It would be an investment that would profit them greatly—as the Lord does not repudiate, but pays often an hundred fold. And will take him as security?

I shall expect to receive similar letters, with money or drafts for our cause.

If some of our worthy brethren and friends know how many applications I have to send books and tracts to poor neighborhoods, I feel confident they would send me the means that would enable me to comply.

Will you think of it, brethren?

H. H. MONTGOMERY.

A JESUIT IN DISGUISE.—In Dr. Stone's Life of Dr. Milnor, at page 316, is an extract from Dr. Milnor's Journal while in England, in these words:—"In the course of our conversation a curious fact was developed in relation to Dr. Kewley, predecessor in St. George's. Mr. Mayer said that he had seen him in Italy, and was well acquainted with him. He passes there by the name of Father Kewley, but Mr. Mayer says he knows his true name to be Lawson. He has no doubt that Dr. Kewley was a Jesuit during the whole time of his residence in America."

Query—May there not be some of the same class yet alive?

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The N. O. Christian Advocate.

weekly—at $2 per annum, in advance.

NEW ORLEANS:

SATURDAY, APRIL 19, 1856.

Rev. H. A. C. Walker is a proper man to take in hand the work proposed elsewhere. See his circular. Brethren who can give items, going to make up a history of "Missions to the Blacks," will entrust them to good hands, and contribute to a good cause, by communicating by letter to him, at Charleston. Thrilling items are unwritten. The experience of some is rich who are not now connected with this branch of domestic mission service. Christian masters, as well as preachers, could add to the proposed repository. We hope many will do it.

Kerr's City Directory.—We are indebted to the compiler, Mr. R. C. Kerr, for a copy of his City Directory, just published. It is a work of very little pretension, but, nevertheless, one of much value to the business man; and reflects much credit on the compiler for the industry displayed by him in getting it up in such a short time, and in

[illegible] only, will get the worth of their money, (same terms;) and those who read both, will get twice their money's worth (no extra charge!)

EXPLANATION.

Finally, if anyone still insists that the type in which our foreign and commercial intelligence is given might be larger:—

1st. If it were, you would not get so much of it. Nor would the nine-tenths to whom it is no objection, be pleased. Generosity sacrifices a slight convenience to the general good.

2d. You do not and cannot get the same intelligence in a better style. The Picayune, the two Deltas, Crescent, Courier, Bee and others, all deal out that sort of information in about the same type.

Quit taking the Advocate for this cause, and take the city weeklies, at $5 or $3 a year, and you fare no better.

We make this explanation thus at length, because objections have been made, and we wish to meet them fully, once for all.

THE RANGE OF PATRONAGE.

The Advocate belongs to the Church. To promote its edification, promulgate its doctrines and defend them; to aid its institutions and forward its enterprises; to minister to popular instruction and personal piety—these are the primary and main ends of its Advocacy. Its spirit and its influence, we trust, will ever be Christian. As such, we believe these who increase its circulation increase the means of doing good. It ought to be in every Church family, and in the hands of every Church member who has not a family. How children and members of a household are drawn to a Church and favorably affected to its usages, its ministers, and all its interests, by weekly or less occasionally reading its organ, needs not here be argued. It is so.

Many of our staunchest patrons are not members of the Church. They prefer the Advocate as a family paper to any other in the city. Its financial and commercial columns are as valuable. They are fresh and reliable, being prepared by one of the ablest reporters in the country. Our agents may therefore approach persons not in the Church with confidence. Introducing the Advocate into the irreligious family will open the door for them and their cause.

A PLEASING FACT.

We have been reliably informed of more than one instance in which the Advocate has been the means of bringing the head or members of the family into the Church, hopefully converted. Nothing in all our labor has been so gratifying to us as such results.

TO AGENTS.

We dislike to be often calling upon them and urging them; but there is a cause. Through them we get before the public. If they do not let it be known that the Church has a paper, and present its claims, and collect its dues, it cannot be sustained. Our accounts, as far as we could direct them, have been sent out. If those who have not received them will let us know the post offices in their circuits, they will oblige us greatly.

TO THE YOUNG PREACHERS

we would make a special appeal, having found them, as a class, most ready and efficient.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

If you owe, and the agent be not at hand, remit a current bill, (say $5 or $10,) with instructions to credit your account; and, if you wish it, a statement shall be furnished, "how my account stands."

MULTIPLYING.

Our circulation has not yet reached TEN THOUSAND. We would take it kindly if you would multiply yourself by two—i. e., get your neighbor to subscribe, and remit his payment with your own.

No effort shall be wanting on our part to make the Advocate a welcome weekly visitor to every home.

Old Bethel.—Rev. J. A. B. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference, writes, on the 7th inst.:—"We had our first missionary meeting for this circuit at Bethel, the third Sabbath in March. Dr. Winans preached on the occasion—text, Ezekiel, 47th ch., 1–12 vs. The Doctor was suffering physically from the weight of years and past labors, but was himself, mentally. Collection, over $200."

Revival in Talladega Institute.—Rev. B. B. Ross writes this good news, on the 8th inst.:—"A revival has been going on here for two weeks. Nearly all our girls in the Institute have been converted. The work is out among the males now, and will diffuse itself as the good leaven. Calvin and Arminius were at the altar together last night, praying for penitents. God send us more refreshing showers. School increasing."

Fact for Sabbath-Breakers.

The following fact is taken from the North American Review. In 1784 the Revolutionary Government of France abolished the division of time into weeks as well as the Sabbath and the worship of God, and substituted a system of decades—that is, nine working days, succeeded by one day of rest. It is well known that this arrangement was an entire failure; the decades had to be abolished and the Sunday restored. An interesting illustration of the working of decades occurs in one of the prize essays, "The escape from Toil, or Workman's Weekly Refuge." The author of that essay was employed at one period in a shop at Paris. He worked beside a Frenchman of extraordinary industry, who never wasted a minute. On Saturday, the Frenchman was regretting that he could not touch his work again until Monday. His British companion remarked, in a joke, that he must have been far better off and made more money in the time of the decades. "No," said the candid Frenchman, "quite the reverse. It is true, I never allowed the Revolution to draw my attention from work; on the morning of the 10th August, 1792, I crossed the Tuileries on my way to work, and did not lose ten minutes in gazing at the mangled bodies of the Swiss Guards. My employment suffered very little, if at all, from the Revolution. Notwithstanding, (exclaimed the man,) Sunday is the thing, after all that has been said and done. When there was no Sunday, there was no working day. The tenth day was not obligatory, and the workshops were not shut up. We worked whenever we liked; but not one month of the whole time did I ever make so good a bill as I do now and did before. I was glad when the decades went to the dogs and the weeks came round again. No, sir—Sunday forever! When there was no Sunday, there was no working day. When there was no settled holiday, there was no settled or sedulous labor. I caught the infection of laziness, I suppose, in some degree, as well as the rest, at any rate, I got less money for my time."

Rev. C. A. Davis writes to the Richmond Advocate that more than eighty had been converted and joined the the Church on his charge, Portsmouth, Va., within three weeks, and that seventy had been added to the Church at Gosport. At Norfolk, also, there was an interesting revival. These are the places in which pestilence committed such terrible ravages last year. A correspondent of the Christian Observer, writing on March 22, states that the number of additions to the Methodist Church in Portsmouth up to that date was nearly two hundred.

OUR NEW TYPE.

A COLLOQUY.

Is it not large enough, clear enough? Have we not met the demand of aged eyes, weak eyes, and of eyes that read by candle, torch or moonlight?

"Yes, the first and second pages will do; but look at the type in which the secular news, the business items, markets, advertisements and such like, stand—small as ever."

But how neat and clean, good agent, or paying subscriber—for you only do we care to please. Distinctness is the object; and that type is very distinct. Now—all bran-new.

A COMPARISON.

If all the stars were as big as the moon, there would not be room for half the galaxy that brightens the sky. "Long-primer" all over would crowd out many an item—racy, instructive, entertaining and important—that finds a place in "Minion" or "Nonpareil." The smaller the type, the more reading-matter.

A BARGAIN, ANYWAY.

Those who can read only large print, will get the worth of their money for the Advocate—which is $2 a year, in advance; if payment be delayed six months, $2 50; and if twelve months, $3. Those who [illegible]

The Vanity of Wills.

Enormous hoarding through life, for some grand charity after death! The folly of such a way of doing good is being held up to our community glaringly, in the case of the miser McDonogh. We take these extracts from the report of the Common Council proceedings, 8th inst.:—

A resolution was offered by Mr. Fabre, appointing Randell Hunt, Esq., to assist the City Attorney in the suit of the city of New Orleans vs. the city of Baltimore, for a partition of the McDonogh estate. Mr. F. stated that the city of Baltimore had retained Judge, Enstis and C. Roselius to oppose the partition in the U. S. Circuit Court; that the income from the estate is about $55,000 per annum; and the expenses about $27,000—leaving only $28,000 of net revenue, which is $1,000 less than the taxes on the property for the year 1854. So that the net income is insufficient to pay the taxes on it.

Mr. Fabre thought that the city had better give up the property, unless the partition can be effected and the property be made available, and the miserable hovels that disgrace the city be turned into valuable property.

Mr. Eager thought the City Attorney ought to attend to this business himself. He was opposed to expending more than $1,000 for additional counsel.

Mr. McKnight said the McDonogh estate was worth now about one-half what it was when McDonogh died—$5,000,000 then, $2,270,000 now. We have a bequest estimated, said, he, and fairly estimated, as worth $2,271,000. We have it under control of able and accomplished gentlemen; and what are the fruits of their labors? John McDonogh has been gathered to his fathers five long years. In a vain attempt to leave a noble monument of charity, he made a will as wonderful and curious as it is hopelessly impracticable. Over $250,000 have been spent in litigation; over $100,000 have been spent in charges and commissions; over $500,000 has been lost in interest and delays; over $500,000 has been lost in [illegible] and [illegible], and depreciation of the princely domain. And, in short, these five years past have cost the estate one-half its original value. But, sir, notwithstanding all this, not one dollar of charity has ever yet been received by this estate; not one poor child has ever been educated; not one poor negro has ever yet been sent to Liberia; nor the tears and sorrows of one poor orphan boy ever yet been assuaged.

Notices of New Books.

Methodist Episcopacy.—A controversy that went on for several months last year in the columns of the Southwestern Baptist, between its editor and the Rev. E. J. Hamill, pastor of the Methodist Church in Tuskegee, Ala., has taken book form to the extent of 327 pages, 12mo. It began in an attack, low-flung, unjust, untrue, unchristian, upon the Methodist Episcopal Church, by the republication of an article in that paper manufactured "out West" for political purposes. The editor, a picked controversialist of his sect, defends the article. Rev. Mr. Hamill, who happened to be in Tuskegee by the regular working of the itinerant system, demurs to it. The result is before the East Alabama public.

J. C. Morgan, near the Post Office, sends us from his book mart the following, from the publishers, J. P. Jewett & Co., Boston:—

The Catholic Letters.—A young kinsman of Derby's proposes to join the Roman Church. Derby, "a jurist," writes disuading letters, in which are refuted the claims of the Roman as the only Apostolic Church. The young man is convinced, and the letters enlarged, revised and published. A neater specimen of a printer's and bookbinder's work the trade does not furnish.

The route of argument against the claims of Rome is old and beaten. So far as Derby follows that, the case is put very well. But he claims for the Anglican Church substantially the same things he denies to the Roman. Paul established the Church in Britain! When, in the seventh century, a Pope sent Austin to convert the people of that island, behold! churches, centuries old, and bishops, archbishops, &c.! The Anglican was ever distinct from the Roman Church—as much so as the Gallican! Occasionally, Rome poached—occasionally, interfered and introduced errors. But the Anglican was ever an establishment with an unbroken succession from the Apostles, independent of Rome; or, when subjected, protesting! The grace monopoly is transferred from Peter to Paul. An advantage hardly worth contending for. The appendix is interesting—made up from Bunsen.

Life of Schamyl, and Narrative of the Circassian War of Independence against Russia, by J. Milton Mackie. The heroic, and hitherto successful opposition of the Circassians to their powerful foe, has excited a lively curiosity respecting these tribes, their romantic and prophet-chief, and the mountain regions they have defended. This will be gratified by the volume before us, which contains a series of racy sketches of Circasian life, and the principal events of the war of independence.

When the English and French Ambassadors likened their kings to the sun and moon, Dr. Franklin compared Washington to Joshua, who commanded the sun and moon to stand still, and they obeyed him. Quite as good a thing has been said by the Circassian hero, Schamyl. When the Russians called upon him to lay down his arms, declaring, "The armies which we send against you are as the sands on the sea shore, innumerable," he replied, "Our hosts are like the waves of the sea, which wash away the sands and devour them."

Dr. Whitefield was accused of rambling in his discourses by one of his hearers, to which he replied, "If you will wander to the devil, I must trample after you."

For the N. O. Christian Advocate,

"THEOLOGIA GERMANICA."*

This little book was the precursor of Luther's reformation. Of its author we know only this much, that he belonged to the society known as that of the "friends of God"—a society whose distinctive feature was a belief in the kingdom of God as consisting of inward self-renunciation, set up against the more outward and sensuous notions of Papal Rome; that he "was a priest and a warder in a house of the Teutonic order, in Frankfort," and is supposed to have written the "Theologia Germanica" in the year 1350. To those who are so unfortunate as to regard German theology as a synonyme of infidel rationalism, and thus start back from the suspicious title of this little book, it will be a sufficient quietus to quote the following sentence from Luther's preface to the second edition, published in 1518:—"And I will say, though it be boasting of myself and I speak as a fool, that next to the Bible and St. Augustin, no book hath ever come into my hands whence I have learned or would wish to learn more of what God and Christ, and man and all things, are." Bunsen differs from the great reformer in placing it above Augustin and next to the Bible. In the lifetime of Luther it passed through seventeen editions, and since then sixty editions have appeared in Germany.

Augustin was first to mention the fact that a living appropriation of christian truth must necessarily precede its dogmatic expression. Theology commences in the effervescence of a living piety, then hardens into cold beds of dogma. It remained for the Channings and Mauriees of modern times to learn, from experience, that, when a living christian truth congeals into orthodoxy, it becomes as despotic as the scarlet woman. When orthodoxy stretches its gray, watry sky over the christian life of any age, it too often bites with its hoar-frost the buddings of a fresh and childlike piety. Everybody knows how it tries to clamp even its words and phrases on the lips of christian life and prevent the simple utterances of the soul in union with God. We have all felt how inexpressibly dull are our "Institutes of Theology" and "Bodies of Divinity," which stick close to the technology of dead systems, in comparison with the pure expression of the philosophical spirit as seen in McCosh and Bowen, or of the devotional spirit, as seen in Bunyan. If the author of the "Theologia Germanica" had never heard of the theology of the schools, he could not have apprehended the christian life in a more simple, independent and individual manner. The mummy words that rattled with age from the slavish lips of his cotemporaries, are not to be found in his book. He knew God by an inward experience, and spoke of Him, not in the language of the schools, but, like John, in the words of one whom Jesus loved, and who loved Jesus. He loved a simple and pure heart more than an orthodox understanding; and I wish we had more of his disciples in the present day and in the Methodist Church. As a writer on christian ethics, while he never infringes even the letter of Scripture, he goes back of it to the source whence Scripture emanated.

The principles of the "Theologia Germanica" are thus summed up by Bunsen: "Sin is selfishness; Godliness is unselfishness. A godly life is the steadfast working out of inward freeness from self. To become thus godlike is the bringing back of man's first nature."

The standpoint that Jesus assumed against the formalism of his age, is taken by our author against the formalism of the fourteenth century. Every great religious movement starts with the return of the age to self-renunciation from ecclesiastical and spiritual pride. It was so with Luther, whose dawning light we see in this little book. It was so with Wesley. It will be so with the great reformer of the present century, whose coming the wrinkled formalism, the despotic orthodoxy and the church pride of 1856, betoken. The equality of layman and priest was an inevitable corrolary from self-renunciation, as the centre-piece of christian ethics. Luther saw this, and gave to the world Protestantism. Another corrolary, as inevitable as the former, he did not see. St. John saw it, when he wrote, "If we walk in the light as he is in the light, we shall have fellowship, &c." The next reformer will see it; and, as Luther set up a universal priesthood of faith against the sacredotal tyranny of Rome, so he will set up a universal priesthood of love against orthodox bigotry and dogmatic pride.

I mean, by denominationalism, not the outward division of Christ's body into Baptist, Methodist, &c., but that inward sectarian partition of our Lord's body which introduces an element of controversial hate into the home of redeeming love. With this explanation I proceed to remark, that the logical results of the doctrine of self-renunciation will as certainly lead to the entire destruction of denominationalism, as the same results in the hands of Luther led to the overthrow of Roman tyranny. History is a relentless logician, because God frames her syllogisms; and when self-renunciation is livingly acknowledged by all Christians as the essential principle of the religion of Jesus, denominationalism cannot exist.

The question occurs, why do I wish to call the attention of the readers of the Advocate, especially the preachers, to the "Theologia Germanica?" Because it is an unspeakable comfort to my own soul; because the formalism of the fourteenth century is not altogether extinct in the nineteenth; because it is so pleasant to take refuge from the dull style of our theological writers in the fresh pages of a simple and child-like piety, and yet count oneself orthodox—which we are seldom able to do, for we are prone to charge with Unitarianism, or Newmanism, whatever abandons the technology of the schools, and seeks to apprehend Christianity in an individual manner; because, while Methodists are contending stontly against the arrogant claims of their Anglican cousins, they themselves have caught the contagion of a spiritless ecclesiasticism, and desire more ardently the building up of Methodism as an influentiol Church, than the establishment of Methodism in the hearts of the people as a religion of love and self-renunciation. In illustration of this last, I would remind the reader of that unfortunate little tract, "Episcopus," published a few years ago, which finds its retribution in the "Iron Wheel" of the infamous Graves, taken in connection with the general tone of our press and our policy. High Churchism—Methodist, Baptist or Episcopalian, is the Anti-Christ of all Christian ages. Self-renunciation and love are the Messiah of backsliden ages.

I want to call attention to this little book, because it opposes the one and favors the other. God requires humility and self-renunciation of organizations as well as of men. Organizations shift the duty to individuals. The retribution of such a slifting must come, and will, as it did to Rome in Luther, to England in Wesley.

There is another reason why I want to call attention to this little book. Because there are vital errors—not in Methodism, but in the common apprehension of the Methodistic idea of christian ethics, which it may correct. In illustration whereof, I would merely suggest that the "Theologia Germanica" believes in a religion standing equally above the hope of reward and the fear of pain, in time and in eternity. A godlike perfection is distinctly stated as the final aim of religious progress.

May we not hope that the discerning criticism of our Book Editor will select "Theologia Germanica" for Methodist publication?

Alabama. WALTER C. HARRIS.

* To save misapprehension, or to qualify the manner in which the writer speaks of orthodoxy, we quote a paragraph from a private letter accompanying his communication:—"I am not the pink of orthodoxy, but there is more of heresy in my words than in my thoughts. I speak disparagingly of orthodoxy in this notice. Every one will understand me not to mean the essential truth, as it is in Jesus, but an intolerant sticking to a one-sided apprehension of that truth, so as to cramp the freedom of individual piety."

Anecdote of Whitfield.

Upon the death of his wife he preach'd her funeral sermon. The text was, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called, according to his purpose"—Rom., viii., 28. In noticing her character, he mentioned her fortitude, and exclaimed, "Do you remember my preaching in those fields, by the old stump of a tree? The multitude was great, and many were disposed to be riotous. At first I addressed them firmly; but when a desperate gang of banditti drew near, with the most ferocious and horrid imprecations and menaces, my courage began to fail. My wife was standing beside me as I stood on the table. I think I hear her now. She pulled my gown, and, looking up, said, 'George, play the man for your God.' My confidence returned. I then spoke to the multitude with boldness and affection; they became still, and many were deeply affected."

The Inconsistency of a Censorious Spirit.—A principle of love influences the whole conversation of a Christian in his right mind. He will not readily believe reports to the prejudice of others, without sufficient proof; and even then he will not repeat them unless he is lawfully called to do it. The Scriptures expressly prove that a censorious spirit is as inconsistent with the spirit of the gospel as drunkenness and whoredom; and that the same authority that forbids them, gives the precept, "Speak evil of no man."—John Newton.

Episcopal Itinerancy.—The Banner of the Cross is in favor of grafting the itinerancy upon the system of the Episcopal Church, as to its missions. That paper seems just to begin to find that this was the primitive plan. The Methodists discovered it a century ago.

Woman's "Empire State" is matrimony. Here she is always in the majority—always reigns and sometimes storms.

Personal Devotion.

No Christian can be comfortable or prosperous without retirement. Popular ministers may preach, converse or pray in public, to the edifying of others, and yet decline in their own souls for want of self-examination, humiliation and secret prayer, suited immediately to their own case. Nay, the most able ministers will generally cease to be very useful if their personal religion is neglected, or hurried over in a formal manner. This the fervent Christian knows. He will, therefore, redeem time for retirement at the expense of many inconveniences; and the friends of popular ministers should consider this, and not too much intrude upon the regular and needful hours for retirement of those persons in whose company they most delight. In prosecuting the work of God, our own inclinations and those of our beloved friends, must often be thwarted; we must not "spend our time" with them when duty calls us another way, or when a prospect is before us of doing essential good.—Thomas Scott.

BOOK EDITOR'S DEPARTMENT.

NEW BOOKS.

Immersionists Against the Bible; or, the Babel Builders Confounded, in an Exposition of the Origin, Design, Tactics, and Progress of the New Version Movement of Campbellites and other Baptists. By Rev. H. N. Lee, of the Louisville Conference. Edited by Thomas O. Summers, D. D. Stevenson & Owen: Nashville, 1856. Price, 50 cents.

We deeply regret the necessity which exists for the publication of such a work as the present volume. The exposure of Jesuitism, whether Popish or Protestant, is a task so irksome, that we instinctively shrink from its performance; but when it is needful to be done, he who performs it in a candid, charitable spirit, deserves the gratitude of all concerned. We think the author of the following pages has tempered unavoidable severity with the meekness of wisdom; and that no one can justly complain of a want of fairness and courtesy in the matter and manner, tone and temper of his production. The "tactics" of the immersionist translators ought to be exposed, though the exposure is humiliating to every lover of the Bible. The rampant sectarianism which is at the head and front of the movement is too palpable, and, as Mr. Lee shows, has been too often admitted, to be denied with any credit. We see, indeed, while these sheets are passing through the press, that some of the leaders in this schismatical movement are beginning to hesitate as they approach the brink of the precipice; they are afraid to take the leap—and well they might be! What if the masses for whose benefit "immersion" is to be "printed in the Bible," should learn to attach the idea of sprinkling to that term, rather than that of dipping to the mode of baptism! It is shrewdly suggested that such a thing as this would not be without precedent. And truly no one need marvel at this, for it would not be a tithe as absurd to make immersion mean affusion as to make baptism in the New Testament mean immersion. As to the other changes proposed in the New Version, all we have to say on this subject is, that if they are amendments, we do not want them in our Standard Bible, unless put there by competent authority. Of course we do not want them if they are not amendments, but mere alterations, frequently for the worse—as are many of the changes that have come under our notice. We care not how many versions and commentaries are made by learned men, provided they do not usurp the place of our English Bible. We can tolerate an occasional correction of the authorized text in the course of a sermon, though we think this should be very seldom attempted. We sometimes hear such pulpit criticisms of the version of the forty-seven translators of our English Vulgate as remind us of the anecdote told by old Isaac Waltou, in his Life of Bishop Sanderson. When Mr. Sanderson was at Lincoln College, Oxford, under the care of the learned Dr. Kilbie, one of "King James' translators," he and the learned Hebrician made a tour into Derbyshire, and being at church on a Sunday, heard a young preacher declaim against the then late translation, somewhat, it would seem, in the spirit of the immersionist revisionists. He showed, says Walton, "three reasons why a particular word should have been otherwise translated. When evening prayer was ended, the preacher was invited to the Doctor's friend's house, where, after some conference, the Doctor told him he might have preached more useful doctrine, and not have filled his auditors' ears with needless exceptions against the late translation; and for that word for which he offered to that poor congregation three reasons why it ought to have been translated as he said, he and others had considered all three, and found thirteen more considerable reasons why it was translated as now printed; and told him if his friend, then attending him, should be guilty of such indiscretion, he should forfeit his favor. To which Mr. Sanderson said, he hoped he should not; and the preacher was ingenuous enough to say he would not justify himself." We are not sanguine enough to expect such ingenuousness on the part of those who are engaged in the present movement, as a blind sectarianism is the motive by which they are influenced. Nevertheless, a fair exposure of their movements and methods may keep the unsuspecting from an entangling alliance with them, if it should not be otherwise serviceable to the interests of truth and righteousness. With this view the present little book was written by the author; that its circulation will be productive of good, is the belief of those who have examined it, including the editor.

Hymns for Infant Minds—Chiefly by the author of Original Poems, Rhymes for the Nursery, &c. Revised by Thos. O. Summers, D. D. Stevenson & Owen: Nashville, 1856.

It may be doubted whether Isaac Taylor, with all his superior gifts and varied literary productions, has done more for the world than either his sister Ann or Jane. The pretensionless rhymes of those gentle sisters have been sung in thousands of nurseries and schools, and, like the hymns composed for children by Watts and Wesley, have exerted a powerful influence in training youthful and infantile minds to piety and virtue. The present edition of "Hymns for Infant Minds" has been gotten up with care, and is illustrated with numerous engravings, unlike materially to the attractiveness of the volume.

The Great Iron Wheel Examined; or, Its False Spokes Extracted, and an Exhibition of Elder Graves, its Builder; in a series of chapters. By W. G. Brownlow, editor of Brownlow's Knoxville Whig. Published by the author; pp. 331. Price, $1 retail. Nashville, 1856.

This is no ordinary book—indeed, it is a very extraordinary book. It plunges into a controversy for which we have no taste. We have never seen "The Great Iron Wheel;" but from the quotations in this volume, we suppose it is a very bad book. One thing is certain, Dr. Brownlow makes a sad wreck of it. "Its false spokes extracted," what remains we cannot imagine. Dr. Brownlow seems to consider it his special vocation to attend to such cases as this; and, if they must be attended to, we do not know a man who is capable of doing up the business more thoroughly than he. It is well, perhaps, that everybody does not think and act as we do in regard to such traducers of Methodists and Methodism as are here castigated. We "let them tremendously alone." The author of the present volume deals some of them tremendous blows; and we are assured by those who ought to be able to form a correct judgment in the premises, that he has not performed a superfluous service. Not content with acting on the defensive, he carries the war into Africa—with what result, the reader must determine. He makes use of some weapons that we should not like to handle; but then we should not engage in the fight at all.

THE CURRENT WEEK.

Like the dawning of a perfect day, when the King of the Heavens rouses him from sleep, and throwing off blanket after blanket of the gloom which has enveloped his brilliancy and obscured his majesty walks right up the Eastern firmament—growing more glorious as he goes—the year advances to its apogee and crowning glory. Every where is heard the hum of business; and nature, in its unceasing toil and workmanship, is building up the round and perfect structure of which the months are the posts, weeks the pillars, days the boarding, and hours and minutes and seconds the ornament and finish. Mother earth, growing pregnant with new life, labors in her short gestation, throwing up the germ and corolla, filaments that adorn her brow, and putting on a sumptuous blazonry of coloring from every flower that has being. The birds mock one another in ambient air, and life of every kind pulses more vigorously in the channels of its grand body and conformation.

Monday, April 14—Sts. Tiburtius, Pappus, Agathodrus, Benezet and others. The borage, created to St. Lidwina, is the plant.

In 1471, the battle of Barnet was fought between the Houses of York and Lancaster, and old Earl Warwick, the king-maker, so touchingly, bravely and boldly painted by Bulwer, was slain on the field.

In 1685, Thomas Otway, the dramatic poet, was choked to death at a public house in London, by swallowing too hastily a crust of bread that had been given him.

In 1759, George Frederick Handel, the [illegible] cian, died. He was a native of Saxony.

In 1793, Tobago, in the West Indies, was taken by the English.

Tuesday, April 15—St. Peter Gonzales, Paternus and Mundo, rule the day. The green wort, dedicated to the first named, is the emblem.

April is the bird month of the temperate zone; in the latitude of Old and New England, the whole feathered race then migrates towards the North, builds their nests, and commences operations housekeeping. The small willow wren, the chiff-chaff willow wren, the cuckoo, the chimney swallow, the sand swallow, the martin, and other vernal birds arrive. All English literature is full of accounts concerning them; and the poets, who are the best naturalists, have sung their Genesis in every age and tense.

In 1715, the Indian tribes from Cape Fear to Virginia, agreed to rise on this day and murder all the whites. One other similar conspiracy had been detected before. The Yemassees were driven into the Spaniards in Florida.

Wednesday, April 16—Eighteen martyrs of Saragossa, St. Joachim and St. Mans, or Magnus, the principal saints, and the yellow tulip, dedicated to St. Joachim, is the emblem.

In 1818, Dr. Brewster, of London, invented the kaloidescope, or, in its true sense, sight of beautiful forms.

In 1754, Washington commenced his march to the Great Meadows, lying within the disputed territories, for the purpose of expelling the French.

Thursday, April 17—Sts. Aniectus, Stephen, Simeon and other martyrs have charge of the day. Travis Cowl, a plant unknown to our botany, is the emblem.

In 1812, a bill declaring war against England received the sanction of the Senate.

In 1847, Gen. Scott issued his orders for the battle of Cerro Gordo, on the ensuing day.

Friday, April 18.—St. Apollonios, A. D. 186. St. Galdin and Laserian have charge over the day.

The musk narcisse, dedicated to St. Appolonia, is the emblem.

In 1689, Judge Jeffries, after a reign of terror somewhat akin to that of Robespierre, Murat and Marat, died in the tower, having been caught in his effort to flee the country disguised like a common sailor. The infamous life makes a matter of history as thrilling as any on the English page.

In 1794, Earl Camden, whose reports are still valuable, died at the age of 79. He discharged Wilkes from custody, and was one of the most popular as well as one of the ablest English judges that ever occupied the woolsack.

In 1802, Dr. Erasmus Dunvin, an excellent physician, but still more eminent botanist, died.

In 1846, Gen. Taylor took [illegible] Matamoras.

In 1847, Gen. Scott fought the battle of Cerro Gordo with 8500 volunteers against 12,000 Mexicans.

Saturday, April 19.—St. Leo IX., Pope, Elpheige and St. Ursmar, are the patrons of the day.

The ursine garlic, dedicated to St. Leo, is the emblem.

In 1739, Dr. Nicholas Saunderson, a very eminent mathematician, died. Although he lost his sight in the age of one year, he became one of the greatest students of the science of certainties the world ever known.

In 1775, the American war commenced with the battle of Lexington. Seventy of the militia gathered there when Major Pitcairn with eight hundred grenadiers appeared and ordered them to disperse. The rebels not obeying with sufficient promptness, the soldiery was ordered to fire, and eight were instantly killed and many wounded. The Americans followed them sharply up, however, and drove them by the way. Had it not been for reinforcements sent out from Charleston, none would have ever returned alive.

In 1761, Dr. Richard Price, a famous mathematical moral and religious author, died.

In 1812, the President issued a proclamation of war against England on account of the impressment of our seamen, empty blockade of ports with which tries with which England was at war, and the famous orders in Council.

In 1824, George Gordon Noel, Lord Byron, died.

Sunday, April 20.—St. Serf, fifth century; St. Agnes, 1317, and St. James, 1486, are the days of remembrances. The spring snowflake dedicated to St. Agnes, is the botanical memorial.

On this day the sun enters Taurus, which the Greeks affirmed to be the bull into which Jove transmorphosed himself when he visited Europa, but which has an older astronomical history as it was known throughout the East before the Greek zodiac.

The battle of Lexington, 1775, fought on the day previous, was continued through this by the Continentals who, leaving their plows in the furrows, took up their rifles and dealt death to the retreating foe from behind every hedge and possible place of ambush.

Sweden—Telegraph to America:—The charter granted by the King of Sweden to the American citizen, Mr. T. P. Schaffner, containing the exclusive permission to lay down a sub-marino telegraph wire between the coasts of North America and Norway, is dated 24th of January, and contains the following articles:—1. The company is permitted to lay down a telegraph wire from the continent of North America to the coast of Norway, and to establish a telegraphic station there; but permission is not granted, however, to continue the line by land through the dominions of Norway. 2. The concession granted by these documents is dependent on the Company's subscribing a certain sum necessary for the undertaking within five years from the present date, and completing the submarine telegraph before the expiration of another period of five years. 3. Should any interruption of the telegraphic communication take place after the opening of the line, the company is bound to repair it at their expense as soon as possible, and not later than after a year's delay. 4. The Norwegian government engages to construct separate lines of wires on the telegraphic stations of the State, for the purpose of forwarding the despatches from America, if so desired, and on the guarantee of a minimum amount of receipts. 5. The Company and their agents and servants shall be subject to the same laws and jurisdiction as Norwegian subjects, so far as regards the telegraph in the sea and land dominions of the King of Sweden and Norway. 6. Should a war break out between Norway and any United States, or between Norway and any State through whose territory the proposed telegraph shall pass, the Norwegian Government reserves to itself the right of suspending the communication during the continuance of the war, without detriment to the privileges contained in this charter.

Movement of Troops.—The steamer Tennessee from Cincinnati, arrived yesterday, having on board forty U. S. troops, Company A, 1st Artillery, under the command of Col. Mansfield and Maj. H. U. S. A. They were brought from Newport Barracks and are en route for Fort Brown, Texas.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Information Wanted

FOR A HISTORY OF MISSIONS.

A CIRCULAR,

Addressed to each of the Missionaries to Colored People in the Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences.

DEAR BROTHER:—Intending to prepare a History of Missions to the Blacks, I earnestly solicit your aid. This you can render by giving me information on any or all the different points suggested below:—

1. Origin and progress of the mission, giving dates and incidents; number of neighborhood churches—have these advantageous or otherwise?

2. Difficulties and obstacles in the way of beginning and prosecuting the work.

3. Estimation of the efficiency of the gospel and the genuineness of conversions; based on modes of expression on these subjects by the blacks themselves and conduct consequent on profession made.

4. Anecdotes illustrative of the last item; whether among the negroes, or between them and owners, managers or missionaries. Death scenes and expressions; accounts of love feasts or class meetings, Striking conversions or experiences; influence of example.

5. General estimate in which the work is held among owners and managers; and the reasons for such estimate, whether it be favorable or otherwise.

6. Support or proportion of support contributed by those whose slaves are served—say, a statement of each year from the beginning.

7. What reflex influence has been produced on the missionary spirit and collections of the Church, or that part of the Church particularly concerned—say the conference, presbytery or the like. Has any indirect good been observable among white persons or families?

8. Names of those persons, children or adults, and any incidents of interest in life or death connected with them; who have been most active and useful in originating and sustaining any particular mission or missions.

9. Best modes of imparting religious instruction, both to adults and children.

10. Notices or biographical sketches of faithful men and women; or similar mention of white persons who may have been zealous and useful in the missionary cause.

11. Statistics; number of members and probationers in one item; number of catechumens; population within reach of your appointments, and average number attending these appointments.

Any information not here suggested which may occur to you, is most earnestly solicited, and will be gratefully received—as also any suggestion you may deem proper. I beg you will regard this not as a merely formal circular, but as a direct and personal application. Respectfully and fraternally,

H. A. C. WALKER.

Charleston, S. C., March, 1856. 1t

Notice.—TO THE MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.—Dear Brethren: Will you take pains to get the names of all the life members in the bounds of your respective charges, as soon as possible, and sent me a list of them? I have no other means of complying with Dr. Seloon's request. It is a matter of some importance, and requires dispatch. I hope soon to be able to supply you with certificates. Send, also, the names of any who have died since being made members.

W. P. BARTON,
Secretary Missionary Society, Miss. Conf.

Yazoo City, April 3, 1856. 1t

Notice—Second Round Quarterly Meetings, Opelousas District, Louisiana Conference:—

North Rapides Circuit, at Wiley's School House, May 10, 11.

Harrisonburg Circuit, at Harrisonburg, May 17, 18.

Columbia Circuit, at Black Bayou Church, May 24, 25.

Chicot Circuit, at Bayou DeGlaise, June 7, 8.

Opelousas Circuit, at Plaquemine Brulie, June 21, 22.

New Iberia Circuit, at Quene de Tortee, June 28, 29.

Franklin and Pattersonville, at Pattersonville, July 6.

P. M. GOODWYN, P. E.

MARRIAGES.

On the 3d April, by Rev. R. M. Saunders, near Tuskegee, Ala., Mr. JAMES WHITE to ANN E. BARROW, all of Monroe county, Ala.

On the 31st March, by Rev. Jas. L. Wright, at the residence of Mrs. Powell, Red River, Mr. HUBBARD S. BOSLEY, of Natchitoches parish, to Miss MARY B. POWELL, of Caddo parish, La.

On the 1st April, by Rev. James W. Heard, of Alabama Conference, Mr. H. W. PURNELL, of Noxubee county, Miss., to Miss JULIA C. CUMMINS, of Alabama.

On the 1st April, by Rev. J. D. Stewart, of Tennessee Conference, Rev. H. A. BOURLAND, of Ballard county, Ky., to Miss E. A. JOHNSTON, of Hardin county, Tenn.

DEATHS.

At the last Quarterly meeting for Spring Hill, Alabama Conference, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted by a rising vote:

WHEREAS, Death has removed from our earth Brother AQUILLA POWERS, a young man of genuine piety and much promise. Therefore—

RESOLVED, That we are profoundly sensible of the loss the Church has sustained in his death; and that in passing this tribute of respect to his memory, rather than qualifying him with authority to preach the gospel of the blessed Saviour, as was anticipated, we are impressed with the uncertainty of all hopes and plans that relate to earth.

RESOLVED, That we deeply sympathize with the relatives of our deceased brother in their bereavement, whilst we rejoice with them in the fact of his full preparation for the solemn, though, to him, most joyful change.

RESOLVED, That a page of our journal be inscribed to his memory.

J. A. HEARD, P. E.

CHAS. B. MASON, Secretary.

Died.—On the 3d April, of Pneumonia, at his residence, Mr. JOHN McCARTER BATES, in his 58th year.

He was a native of South Carolina, but married, lived and died in Greene county Ala.

He twice represented this county in the State Legislature, and there proved himself worthy of the confidence reposed in him, in the very troublous times of 1838-39.

He received his education under Dr. Waddell—more thorough than extensive, useful than brilliant. Though he was an extensive and somewhat indiscriminate reader, yet he was no visionary theorist, and educed the solid and practical from everything he read by the severely analytical powers of his mind. Predisposed to skepticism in his youth, he subjected Christianity, with its declarations and motives, to deliberate and assiduous investigation, which resulted in a conversion, the clearness and strength of which afforded him light and comfort in the darkest hour of Man's hurried life. Having satisfied himself of the truth and inestimable benefit of the Christian religion, he next examined the creeds of churches, which led him to join the M. E. Church, of which he continued a member.

A remarkable characteristic of his greatness of soul:—"I have lived simple and plain, I have despised display and the love of praise, so incompatible with the meanness of man's birth and the weakness, wants add precariousness of his life, that I might die in style." And he did die in style. With the Apostle he counted all things loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus. And he found the Savior the crowning glory of the moment. God bless his afflicted family.

W. E. M. LINFIELD.

Died.—On the 2d April, 1856, Brother DANIEL H. SMITH, son of Brother Wm. Smith, of this place, aged 24 years.

For several years he had been a consistent member of our church and exemplified a great adherence to the cause of God. Irreproachable in his conduct as a church member, ardent in his attachment to his friends, sincere in his professions, and energetic in his business affairs, he has been called away soon and suddenly from the scenes and associations of time. His death was sudden and violent. His skull was fractured by a fall from a buggy, and he survived but half an hour after receiving the injury.

Thus has our young brother been hurried away without much warning. How forcibly does the occurrence astonish us, "Be ye ready," and with increased solemnity the reflection arises, that in some one of the multiplied forms by which mortals are hurried hence, we must all contend with the conqueror—that,

"Death rides in every passing breeze,
And lurks in every flower.
Each season has its own disease—
Its peril, every hour."

THOS. PRICE.

Liberty, Miss., April 4.

Died.—In the vicinity of Gainsville, Mississippi, JOHN REAR, aged seventy years.

Mr. Rear was a volunteer under Jackson at New Orleans, and was with him in his Indian campaigns. At the close of his military service he made a profession of religion. But he afterwards lost his religion, and was for some time intemperate in his habits. In 1854 he joined a temperance order, called the Social Circle, and shortly after again connected himself with the Church, obtained pardon, and died in peaceful triumph.

J. J. EARLY.

April 4, 1856.

☞ It should be universally known, for it is strictly true, that indigestion is the parent of a large portion of the fatal diseases. Dyspepsia, diarrhea, choleric morbus, liver complaint, and many other diseases enumerated in our City Inspector's weekly catalogue of deaths, are generally the result of indigestion. Think of this, all who suffer from disordered stomachs, and if you are willing to be guided by advice founded upon experience, resort at once to the use of Dr. J. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is a curative and invigorant, stand alone unapproached. For sale by druggists and dealers generally. Alexander Norris & Co., agents, No. 2 Poydras street. a19 1t

☞ If you are sick, the probability is that the root of your sufferings is in the stomach. From a weak stomach proceed dyspepsia, languor, oppression in the diaphragm, jaundice, headache, unrest, bodily weakness, dimness of sight, heartburn, costiveness, dysentery, and a legion of other tormenting diseases. Indigestion produces thin blood, and therefore destroys the strength and vigor of the system. To restore the strength of the stomach, and enable it to throw off and dismiss forever all these tormenting and dangerous complaints, nothing is necessary but a persevering use of Hoofland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, Philadelphia. There is no mistake, no failure in their sanative effects. Sold everywhere. m7 1m

☞ A Masterpiece Outdone.—We have lately supposed that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was the Citius Thule in its line, and that nothing had been or would be invented which could excel all surpass it in its fine points of excellence as a medicine. But we are confidently assured by those competent to judge on the subject, that Ayer's new "Pills" exceed in high medical artistry even that widely celebrated embodiment of his skill. He has succeeded in making them not only pleasant to take, but powerful to cure the large class of complaints which require a purgative remedy. [Lancaster Argus, Ky.

They are for sale by J. WRIGHT & CO.,
fe23 2m and all city druggists.

WINER'S CANADIAN VERMIFUGE HAS established its superiority over every other preparation for worms, by the rapidity, simplicity and thoroughness of its cures; although literally a vegetable compound, its remedial action is much more summary than that of the Vermifuges containing Mercury. It has the merit of unerring efficiency and of perfect harmlessness, so far as the human system is concerned. Be particular and remember the name—"Winer's Canadian Vermifuge." This is the only article that can be depended on.

For sale in New Orleans, wholesale and retail, by
J. WRIGHT & CO.,
Nos. 21 and 151 Charters street, sole proprietors.
☞ Sold by all the Druggists. m20 1t

IMPORTANT TO THE METHODIST DENOMINATION.

NEW EDITION, just published, containing Twenty New and Popular, Denominational Tunes.

The Wesleyan Sacred Harp,

a collection of choice TUNES and HYMNS, for Prayer, Class and Camp Meetings, Church and Congregational Singing. By Rev. W. McDonald, of the Mobile Conference, and S. Hubbard, Esq., author of several Musical Works. Price, 50 cents, single; $5 per dozen.

This work is destined to become a very popular Music Book for social worship with the Methodist Denomination. Rev. W. F. Farrington, Pastor of the Pine Street Methodist Church, Portland, Maine, a man of fine musical taste, writes thus to the Editor of Zion's Herald, Boston:

THE WESLEYAN SACRED HARP: A collection of choice Tunes and Hymns for Social and Congregational Singing. By Rev. M. McDonald and S. Hubbard, Esq.

Rho. Wise had wonder that no more has been said publicly in favor of this excellent work. It must be that it has not been examined by a practical test, generally, or that it is thought to be without merit in itself to recommend it wherever it is known. The selection, compilation and arrangement of the music and hymns—the latter principally from our standard book—evince a taste and skill which ought to give it an extensive circulation. It is just the book for our family circles and social religious meetings. Having the hymn and music before us, on the same page, it will help to correct the time and tune of many who learn their delightful portion of religious worship, and prevent those grotesque and grating sounds which often annihilate melody, and sometimes the devotional feelings even of those whose ears and voices are scientifically cultivated. Can the compiler add, in smaller edition, some fifteen or twenty carefully selected tunes and hymns, suitable to be used in our public congregations, where congregational singing has been adopted? And we confidently suggest that this method of singing will speedily obtain throughout our New England Churches. It is the most conducive to spirituality and union of any mode yet adopted. Success to the "Wesleyan Sacred Harp" and to every Methodist Society, especially, be generally supplied with it.

Portland, Nov. 6, 1855. W. F. FARRINGTON.

☞ Published by JOHN P. JEWETT & COMPANY, Boston; and JEWETT, PROCTOR & WORTHINGTON, Cleveland, Ohio.

☞ For sale at all the Methodist Book Depositories, and by all Booksellers. m19 4t

Later from Texas.

The steamship Louisiana, Capt. Talbot, arrived at this port Saturday from Indianola and Galveston, whence she sailed on the 10th inst.

In looking over our Texas exchanges we glean little of interest. We subjoin a few items:

The Galveston News has been informed that Harris & Morgan expect to have two steamers running between Galveston and Berwicks Bay before the end of the present year, connecting with the Opelousas Railroad at Tigersville. Messrs. Harris & Morgan have recently had that Bay sounded, and have found that eight feet water can be depended on. We hope, ere long, to have the pleasure of chronicling a daily mail between this city and Galveston.

From all accounts, the increase in the culture of wheat is very rapid in Texas, so much so, that we think it is not unreasonable to calculate that, in five years hence, there will be Texas wheat and flour enough to supply the demands of home consumption.

We learn from nearly all parts of the farthest interior that they have of late had very heavy rains, and that the upper Trinity is overflowing its banks in some places. We also learn from New Braunfels that the rains have been very heavy in that section, flooding most of the small streams. Lower down, however, the planters complain generally of drought. The ground has become baked, and the cotton comes up but slowly, and fears are entertained that there will be a bad stand. Our accounts of the crop are still very unfavorable, the severe frosts of the winter having destroyed nearly all the ratoon.

The Galveston News of the 8th instant says:

Mr. McMahan, of Fort Bend, informs us that he has planted his cane land in cotton; and all in his neighborhood have done the same. We believe they have also done this in Brazoria county. As high, therefore, as we have had to pay for sugar this past year, the probability is that we shall have to pay still higher.

The Pelastine American states that there are still remaining for shipment, some 1,500 bales of cotton at Magnolia, 3,000 at Parker's Bluff, and some 3,000 or 4,000 above that point, and below Green's Bluff. We hear the reconsignder of last year's crop, yet upon and near the banks of the Trinity, variously estimated at from ten to thirteen thousand bales.

The Galveston papers report the loss of the steamer Kate, while on a trip from Galveston up the Trinity river. It is feared that the boat and cargo will prove a total loss.

The orange trees in Galveston, which were supposed to have been killed by the cold of January, are now looking green and flourishing.

We learn from the Seguin Mercury that grasshoppers are beginning to make their appearance in that section in good earnest.

Our San Antonio exchanges seem to have an unfailing supply of Indian news. Judging from their accounts, we should think the traveler in the vicinity of San Antonio, almost as much in peril from them, as eighteen or twenty years ago.

THE MEMORY OF HENRY CLAY.—Mr. Clay's birth-day is, says the Baltimore Patriot of the 7th, to be celebrated on a grand scale in libitative county of Hanover, at a beautiful place called the Slash Cottage, situated immediately on the railroad between Fredericksburg and Richmond. The Presidents of the United States and other distinguished persons are invited, and, as the celebration is totally free of party, it is hoped Clay will attend.

Magnetic Telegraph.

LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMER WASHINGTON.

THE PEACE PROTOCOL NOT SIGNED.

DIFFICULTIES RAISED BY PRUSSIA.

Mortality in the French Army.

COTTON UNCHANGED.

BREADSTUFFS DECLINED.

BY THE NATIONAL AND SOUTHERN LINES.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The U. S. Mail steamship Washington arrived at this port this morning from Havre and Southampton, with dates from the latter port to the 26th ult.

The Markets.

Cotton is reported easier but not quitably lower for lower qualities; better qualities are wholly unchanged. The market closed steady without any change in quotations. Sales of two days 15,000 bales, of which 2,000 taken for export.

and

Flour had declined 1s. to 1s. 6d.; Ohio 35s. to 36s.; Philadelphia and Baltimore 35s. to 36s.

Wheat had declined 3d. to 4d., the decline being mostly on lower qualities—white 10s., red 9s. to 10s.

Provisions.

There was no change in the market. Beef and lard quiet.

Rosin is reported quiet at 4s. 9d. to 4s. 11d.

Advices from Manchester state that the market is steady and unchanged. Consols are quoted at 92¼.

The Peace Conference.

The peace protocol was not yet signed and the Conference was less harmonious, owing to difficulties raised by the Prussian Plenipotentiary, demanding to be admitted to sign the treaty on the same footing as if that Government had been a party to the alliance throughout. It is said that Russia supports Prussia's pretensions.

Nothing had transpired of the meeting of the 24th. Peace was considered certain, however.

The opinion is that the Conference will be resolved into an European Congress.

Mr. Buchanan's Movements.

Mr. Buchanan had gone to Paris, but would leave for the United States in the Arabia, on the 9th April.

The Pacific.

Nothing has yet been heard of the Pacific. The British Government have sent two steam frigates in search of her.

Mortality in the French Army.

The French army in the Crimea is dwindling rapidly, the daily mortality amounting to two in twenty.

Affairs in the Crimea and Asia.

The war party in the Crimea wish the peace negotiations to break through.

The Allies are demolishing the lines around Sebastopol.

Ismael Pacha is increasing his army at Natolia.

The Russians have received large reinforcements.

Dost Hahommed has taken possession of Candahar and the Persian troops are marching against him.

The Russian commissioners had commenced operations for the abandonment of Nicolaieff as a military place.

The Sound Dues.

The Copenhagen correspondent of the London Times states that the Danish commissioners had submitted to the Copenhagen Conference a proposal in regard to the Sound Dues, fixing thirty-five millions of dollars as the minimum indemnity which Denmark claims. The United States having declined co-operation, the question will probably be settled without her.

Parma in a State of Siege.

Parma has been placed in a state of siege in consequence of the numerous assassinations and disturbances there.

Destructive Tornade.

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—A tornado occurred fifty houses were unroofed. The Franklin Iron Works, a massive structure, 150 feet long, was totally demolished.

The railroad depot at Kensington, and many churches and other public buildings were damaged.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE

ARRIVAL OF THE CAMBRIA.

Peace not yet Concluded.

NEW YORK, April, 14.—The Royal Mail steamship Cambria, from Liverpool on the afternoon of the 29th, arrived at Halifax this morning.

Markets.

COTTON.—Our circulars report the market as steady at unchanged prices, though inferior qualities are heavy. The sales for five days amounted to 42,000 bales, of which 4,500 were taken for export, and 7,500 on speculation. Orleans Fair 6¾; Middling 5¾; Uplands Fair 6¼; Middling 5 13-16.

The Havre cotton market is reported quiet at 92 for Orleans tres ordinaire.

The Manchester market is firm.

Breadstuffs.

Breadstuffs have declined slightly. Flour—Lower qualities have declined 1s.; Western Canal 30s to 31s 6d; Ohio 36s. Wheat—Better qualities are unchanged, but inferior qualities have declined 3d; White 11s; Red 9s 6d to 10s. Corn—30 to 30s 6d.

Provisions.

The market for provisions is steady and prices are generally unchanged. In Lard there is an improved demand without change of rates. Sugar has advanced 11d.

The Money Market.

The bullion in the Bank of England has decreased £125,000. Consols are quoted at 92¾ to 92¾. American stocks are unchanged.

The Peace Conference.

Peace is not yet concluded, although it is announced that all difficulty is at an end, and that the treaty will be signed in a few days.

The America and the Baltic.

The America, from Boston, arrived out at Liverpool on the 26th. The Baltic arrived on the 28th.

Peace Prospects.

The deliberations of the conference meeting of the 27th are said to be very important.

It is confidently believed that the treaty of peace will be signed on the 29th. The Emperor Napoleon expected a final settlement sooner, and had ordered the guns of the invalides to announce peace at the same time of the te deum in celebration of the birth of the Prince of Algeria.

Prussia's claims were resisted by Lord Clarendon and caused a delay. Clarendon prevailed, and it was arranged that the Allies sign one protocol and that a second protocol shall be drawn to be signed by the Allies and Prussia jointly.

The London Times dislikes the demonstration in favor of peace, and intimates that the people of England will be discontented with the terms.

The Armistice.

The armistice is not positively prolonged, but telegraphic dispatches have been sent out ordering the commanders not to renew hostilities without express orders.

Great Destruction of Property—Loss of Life.

PHILADELPHIA, April 14.—Accounts continue to pour in of the great damage by the tornado on Saturday night.

Two trains of loaded freight cars were blown from the track of the —— railroad.

A lady in Westchester was struck by a shutter and killed.

Innumerable houses and barns have been unroofed.

Accounts from Cleveland state that the storm did immense damage there on Saturday night. Some fifteen houses were demolished and one man was killed.

BLOCKADE OF VENEZUELA.—By the arrival of the barque Venus at New York, from Curacoa, we have received advices from Veoczuela to March 20. In consequence of a serious destruction to property belonging to the Dutch residents at Ville de Coro, by the inhabitants of Coro some six months back, the Dutch Naval West India fleet are at present at Laguayra to claim restitution for the above damages. On the sailing of the Venus they had not come to terms. In the event of Venezuela not satisfying the above claims the Dutch Commodore has positive orders to blockade the Venezuelan ports and declare war in which case there will be no more shipments of produce from the main. The issue is doubtful.

THE CLAY MONUMENT CEREMONIAL.

The ceremony of laying the corner stone of a monument in honor of the Sage of Ashland, on Saturday, was in every respect worthy of the illustrious deceased and of our city.

The day was ushered in with all the inspiring indications of a fair day. Flags were thrown to the breeze from masts, cupolas and windows; the streets were thronged with crowds of gaily clad people including troops of ladies and children; and there was a very general suspension of business. The weather was rather warm, and the streets too dusty for comfort; still, the whole population seemed to be out, either as participants in the ceremonies, or spectators of the same.

A notable feature of the day was the arrival of three gallant companies of the Mobile militia—the Cadets, Capt. Sands; the Infantry, Capt. Chamberlain; and the Rifles, Capt. Bissell—all being under Capt. Sands as the senior officer. They were received early in the morning, at Milneburg, by a committee of the Committee of Guards, Col. Corbin, an honorary member of the Guards, welcomed them in an appropriate address, which was duly responded to. After partaking of breakfast and interchanging cordialities at one of the lake hotels, the whole party came to the City in a special train, the cars being decorated with the inscription, "Our Mobile Friends." At Washington square, on the line of the railroad, the Continentals were stationed in formal waiting for their guests. A salute by the Artillery battalion welcomed their arrival. After that, Capt. Chas. H. Dreux welcomed them, in behalf of the City Mounticastal Association, in a brief and eloquent speech, which was eloquently responded to by a member of the visiting battalion. They were then escorted by the Continentals to Lafayette square, and duly installed into the pageant of the day. Their manly bearing, perfect drill, and neat uniforms, called forth the approbation of all beholders, as they paraded the streets.

In due time the pageant moved from Lafayette square, which was the grand rallying point. The following was the order of the procession, Gen. E. L. Tracy being the Grand Marshal:

The Louisiana Legion, under Gen. H. W. Palfrey; City Monument Association; Jackson Monument Association; Washington Monument Association; Cuntor of the Day, Governor of the State, Foreign Consuls, and other functionaries of distinction; Directors, Teachers and Male Pupils of the Public Schools; Veterans of Chalmette; Major General Lewis and staff; other officers and citizens of distinction; the Order of Free Masons; Deputations of the Fire Department; Benevolent Societies; and the Continental Guards, Capt. Labauza, with their Mobile guests. The sidewalks, windows and balconies throughout the line of march were densely crowded; the procession was cheered at various points; and the booming of the distant cannon mingled inspiringly with the strains of the numerous bands of musicians.

In due time the procession reached Canal street, at the St. Charles and Royal junction, where the corner stone was to be laid. The preparations consisted of a platform containing seats for the more prominent actors of the occasion, and a tastefully decorated rostrum; all shaded by an awning, and surmounted by the stars and stripes. In front was a similar platform, on which were scattered various implements of the Masonic ritual; the corner stone being close by, swung in a derrick. The stone contained in its cavity the following articles:

Life of Henry Clay, by Gen. D. Prentice; Life and Times of Henry Clay, by Calvin Colton; Private Correspondence of Henry Clay; the names of the President of the United States and his Cabinet, of the Governor of Louisiana and State officers; of the Mayor of the City of New Orleans and City Officers, and the Officers of the Customs; and the Officers of the City Mounticastal Association; also, Copies of the Daily Papers of New Orleans, April 12th, 1856; a Copy of the Civil Code of Louisiana, and one of the several volumes of the United States; and a brass plate bearing the following inscription: "This corner stone of a monument, erected to the memory of Henry Clay, was laid on the 12th day of April, A. D. 1856, A. L. 5856, by the R. W. Wm. Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, of the State of Louisiana; W. M. Perkins, Grand Master; Hall. Bosson, D. G. M.; T. C. Scruggs, J. G. W.; L. Texada, S. G. W.; S. D. Mintel, G. T.; Samuel G. Risk, Grand Secretary."

A large area was preserved in front, by lines drawn across the street, and guarded by policemen. As might have been expected, the broad avenue was densely crowded when the procession arrived—the lofty buildings on either side being, accession arrived—the lofty buildings on either side being, according to custom on such occasions, a perfect blaze of beauty; the gay dresses and parasols in the windows, and the varied costumes of the crowds below, giving the street a pleasant beauty that was delightful to behold. When the procession became properly disposed upon and about the platform, an artillery salute announced the beginning of the ceremonies.

The corner stone was deposited in its place by the officers of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of Louisiana, with all the impressive solemnities of that ancient and honorable Order. After that, an ode in French, written by M. Dombigne Roquet, and set to music by M. Prevost, was given sweetly and thrillingly by the Orleans Operatic Troupe, vocal and instrumental—they having been provided with a piece on the platform for the purpose. When the plaudits that such music could not fail to elicit had died away, Robert J. Ward, Esq., introduced to the multitude the Hon. Judge McCaleb, of the U. S. Circuit Court, as the orator of the day.

Owing to the great noise that prevailed in the neighborhood, the Judge was not able to make himself heard by more than a small proportion of his auditors. We were fortunate enough to hear him, however. His address, or eulogy, was classically beautiful and eloquent throughout. The claim of the departed sage to consideration, as the embodiment of American eloquence; the sanctity and the ennobling influence of monumental and sculptural honors to departed greatness; and the unswerving fidelity of his hero to the Union and the Constitution, were the separate themes of the address, which was rendered with the greatest oratorical dignity and distinctness.

Capt. Drew has the hand next, and read, with his usual sonorous voice, winning look, and commanding gesture, an address, appropriate to the occasion, written by Mobile's gifted daughter, Madame Octavia Walton Le Vert. It was a beautiful prose composition, poetically toned, and received full justice in the reading.

Gen. Wickliffe then read the following ode, written by himself. The composition was elegant, and the delivery of it distinct and dramatic. This concluded the ceremonies of the day, and no matter how the multitude had disappeared.

We much regret that the crowded state of our columns necessitates us to defer the Oration of Judge McCaleb, the Address of Madame Le Vert, and the Ode of Mr. Bigney. They were all highly meritorious, and would be a treat to any reader.

The Continental Guards, after the ceremonies were over, escorted their Mobile guests to the St. Louis Hotel, where a dinner, such as the Continentals know how to order and Mr. Gumbel knows how to serve up, was in waiting. Gov. Wickliffe, Mayor Lewis, and other distinguished guests were present. Several delightful hours were spent in dispatching the good things and in interchanging toasts and speeches. Here again, we must plead poverty of space, as our excuse for omitting a particular report of the warm cordiality that prevailed and the numerous good things that were said in response to the toasts. We append, however, a list of the regular toasts that were offered and honored:

1. The President of the United States.
2. The Governor of the State of Louisiana.
3. The Governor of the State of Alabama.
4. The Day.—The anniversary of the birth of one of America's noblest sons—The great Commoner, HENRY CLAY, one of the intellectual giants of the Republic. The upright Citizen, the able Negotiator, the unrivalled Orator, the profound Statesman, the pure patriot—in all things he was the true American.
5. The Military of Mobile.—Par nobile fratrum.—Here—A gallant band of men of a gallant and generous city.—In their hands the "beauty" of our sister is safely thrown, and in them her "chivalry" will ever find defenders.
6. Henry Clay.—His remembered for the civil and religious rights of all mankind, his ardent love for, and inestimable services to, the country, whose welfare and greatness were inseparable from his own glory—were hemotifully blended in his untarnished private character, with a fascinating power over all who came within the influence of his sphere, that made him alike beloved as a man, and revered as a statesman.
7. The Clays Remembered Association.—May his work they have this day inaugurated,

"The faint translation of a grateful thought,
Which swells in each true breast for HENRY CLAY,
Ever remain a beacon to guide the footsteps of the political sojourn along the luminous path of him, who "had rather be right than President."

8. Washington.—

"The still a watchword to the earth,
When man would do a deed of worth!"

9. Our Country.—

"The land of the free and the home of the brave!"

10. Woman.—Our mother, our wife, our daughter, our sister!—Holy and sacred ties, that bind us to our duty as men. God bless dear woman!

Gov. Wickliffe, Ex-Gov. Hebert, Capt. Labauza and his command, Madame Le Veri, the City of Mobile, and the City of New Orleans, were duly honored during the festival, and Brig. Gen. Palfrey, gave the following: "Iron grape for our enemies; the juice of the grape for our friends!"

Afterwards the Mobilians were escorted to the St. Charles Theater, where they remained long enough to hear Collins sing the Marseillaise. They were then marched out, disbanded, and appropriately disposed of by their princely entertainers.

Yesterday, after circulating about town, and having abundant opportunities to discover that New Orleans is by no means an unpleasant place to visit, they got together again, marched to the armory of the Continentals, and were escorted to the railroad by that gallant band with all the cordiality that marked their reception. They took leave of their entertainers with due formality, and are doubtless by this time safely at home. Altogether, the visit of the Mobile Battalion was a gratifying event, which we hope may be as pleasantly remembered in our sister city as it will be remembered here.

The only incident that occurred to mar the joyousness of this military reunion, was the premature discharge of a cannon at Washington Square, when the Mobilians arrived, by which Private Filbert, of the Artillery Battalion, had one his hands badly lacerated. There was fortunately no injury, such as to found a fear that he might lose the use of his hand. His escape from death was altogether miraculous.

Louisiana Items.

We clip the following paragraphs from the Shreveport Gazette of the 5th:

COLLISION.—The Swan, on her trip up, was quite unfortunate on Thursday. The Young ran into her, and it was only by throwing over five hundred sacks of salt and great exertions at the pumps that she was kept from going to the bottom. At one time she had five feet of water in the hold and the guards under. On Thursday night while lying at the bank somewhere below Shreveport, the Powell gave her a lick, from which, however, she sustained no serious injury. She arrived here yesterday morning with a great portion of her cargo so much damaged, that it will be sold at auction for the benefit of the underwriters.

FOUND DEAD.—A poor cruzy man, named A. G. Ryan, was found dead on Sunday morning in an unoccupied building, belonging to Mr. R. A. Cutlin, situated in the vicinity of his residence. He had for several weeks been wandering about town in a destitute condition.

The Natchitoches Chronicle, of the 5th, says:

The river is falling rapidly at this place, and doing the same above. If it continues at the same rate for eight or ten days, we shall be again without navigation to this point.

The following are from the Concordia Intelligencer of Friday last:

THE WEATHER.—Beautiful and warm, but almost too dry for our stiff, swamp soil, which has become baked by the drought, and ploughs and works less easily than if we had some penetrating showers.

THE MISSISSIPPI AT VICKSBURG.—After a fall below the highest water mark of last month to the extent of fifteen feet, the river, at this point, commenced rising again, and has, in the last four days, risen six feet. It is coming up at the rate of about a foot each night.

Thirty-Fourth Congress—First Session.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Senate.—Mr. Seward gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill supplementary to the copy-right law of 1831.

The Senate then took up the bill making extra allowance to George P. Marsh, for diplomatic services rendered by him in the special mission to Greece.

When Mr. Foot had concluded, the bill was postponed.

Mr. Sebastian reported back the House bill making appropriations for restoring and maintaining the peaceable disposition of the Indian tribes on the Pacific, and for other purposes, and asked its immediate consideration. It was then passed.

Mr. Collamer resumed his remarks on the Kansas question.

In reference to the abrogation of the Missouri compromise, he thought it rather hard that the North, having made a bargain which they were not very well satisfied with, but which they were contented to abide by for the sake of good faith, should now lose the little advantage which they got from it.

Mr. Douglas replied briefly to some of Mr. Collamer's criticisms on the majority report.

Mr. Douglas maintained that the purpose of the free State men in Kansas was to resist the Federal government if their application to be admitted as a State was rejected. They had given notice that unless they were admitted they would resist to a bloody issue, and had procured Sharp's rifles and organized the Kansas legion, with its horrible oaths, for the purpose of being prepared for such resistance. Yet the Senator from Vermont had omitted all these facts in his two days' speech.

The Senate adjourned till Monday.

House of Representatives.—Mr. Evans introduced a bill to authorize and facilitate the construction of the Northern, Southern and Central Pacific Railroad and Magnetic telegraph lines. Referred to the select committee on that subject.

The House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, (Mr. Mace in the chair,) and took up the Senate's amendments to the deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. Smith, of Tennessee, entered into an argument to show that the South is more conservative than the North. Hence the accession of slave States has a tendency to strengthen the Union. He launched into party politics, reviewing, in condemnation, the Republican and American organizations, particularly the latter.

The committee here rose, and the House adjourned till Monday.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Senate.—Mr. Mason, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, reported a resolution to the effect that no further legislation is necessary in order to put an end to the treaty with Denmark, regulating the payment of Sound Dues. The subject was, on motion, made the special order for Monday next.

Mr. Cass—I desire to present a memorial from persons composing the self-styled Legislature of Kansas, and move its reference to the Committee on Territories.

The subject, after considerable discussion, was laid aside, and the Bounty Land bill taken up.

Mr. Foote urged briefly in favor of the passage of the bill, and it was then laid aside.

The Senate then resumed the consideration of the reports upon Kansas affairs.

Mr. Geyer said his position in the Senate, as the sole representative of the State of Missouri, would not permit him to decline a participation in the debate. He engaged in it as a work of necessity rather than of inclination. The circumstances under which it was inaugurated seemed to indicate a purpose to make political capital out of the Kansas disturbances, with a view to control the pending elections, State and National; in such a controversy he had no disposition to engage. It, however, became his duty to defend his constituents from grave and serious charges.

He then proceeded to consider the constitutional aspect of the slavery question, contending that the power of Congress to make all needful rules and regulations with regard to the Territories and other property of the United States, referred to the public domain only, and not to the domestic affairs or institutions of a Territory.

Without concluding, Mr. Geyer gave way, and the Senate adjourned.

House of Representatives.—Mr. Mace, by unanimous consent, presented the constitution of Kansas, together with the memorial of the Free State Legislature on the subject. Referred to the Committee on Territories.

Mr. Mace moved to print ten thousand copies, which motion was referred to the Committee on Printing.

The House then went again into a Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union on the Deficiency Appropriation bill.

Mr. Keitt, of South Carolina, made a speech on political affairs, calling on the Democratic party and the conservatives of the North, to crush the aggressive spirit of fanaticism directed against the South. He condemned the one term principle as unwise in theory and policy, and declared his hostility to the doctrine of availability.

Mr. Pelton, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill, authorizing the President to cause to be procured a suitable steamer, to be stationed at New York as a revenue cutter, to afford relief to distressed vessels, their passengers and crews. Referred to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

On motion of Mr. Humphrey Marshall, the Committee on Foreign Affairs was instructed to inquire into the expediency of declaring the engagement of American vessels in the Chinese coolie trade to be illegal, and a cause of forfeiture to their captors of the ship engaged therein.

On motion of Mr. Pringle, the following resolution was adopted, and shortly after the House adjourned:

Resolved, That the President be requested to communicate what information he may possess in regard to citizens of the United States being engaged in the slave trade, or in the transportation in American ships of coolies from China to Cuba, and other countries, with the intentention of placing or continuing them in a state of slavery or servitude; and whether such traffic is not, in his opinion, a violation of the spirit of existing treaties, rendering those engaged in it liable to indictment for piracy; and especially that he be requested to communicate to this House the facts and circumstances attending the shipment from China of some five hundred coolies in the ship Sea Witch, of the city of New York, lately wrecked on the coast of Cuba.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Senate.—Mr. Pearce reported a bill to remit or refund the duties on goods, wares and merchandise destroyed by fire.

Mr. Seward said it was the same bill which passed the Senate last session but failed in the House for want of time—it was then passed.

Mr. Sumner introduced a bill supplementary to the act to limit the liabilities of ship owners.

Mr. Mason introduced a bill making further provisions for the satisfaction of Virginia land warrants.

Mr. Geyer resumed his remarks from yesterday on the subject of Kansas affairs. He expressed the opinion that had it not been for the emigrant aid societies, Kansas would have been a free State, as it takes slave owners so much longer to emigrate than the people of the North, who have no cumbersome property to carry with them; but, stimulated as they had been by the attempt of the North to shape the destiny of that territory, they would in all probability maintain their present ascendancy there. He quoted from the Massachusetts personal liberty bill, and contrasted the provisions of the same unfavorably with the laws of the Kansas Legislature, against which so much had been said by Senators on the other side.

When he had concluded Mr. Seward obtained the floor, and the Senate adjourned.

House of Representatives.—The deficiency appropriation bill was resumed.

Mr. Zollicoffer replied to his colleague, Mr. Smith, in justification of his voting for the new American platform in the Philadelphia Convention.

Mr. Hughston addressed the committee in opposition to the extension of slavery.

Mr. Waldron spoke in condemnation of the repeal of the Missouri Compromise.

Mr. Boyce discussed the question of our relations with England—the enlistment and Central American questions. In the former he said Great Britain had violated our neutrality laws, and in the latter given a construction to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty not sustained by the facts.

The House then adjourned.

The Independence Belge furnishes the following curious piece of intelligence:

A votive church is about being erected in the capital of the Austrian Empire. The architect has already gone to

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

IMPORTANT FROM CENTRAL AMERICA.

ARRIVAL OF THE EMPIRE CITY.

Dates from Nicaragua, California, Oregon, China.

The steamship Empire City, from New York, by way of Havana, arrived at an early hour yesterday morning. We are indebted to her obliging purser for the following memoranda:

The Empire City left New York April 2, at 2 P. M., and Key West on the 8th inst., at 2 P. M., passed the Island of Grenada on the 9th, and at 7 P. M., passed the Island of Curacoa. Remained at Laguayra awaiting the arrival of the Company's steamer George Law, from Aspinwall and Greytown. The United States steamer Saratoga entered the harbor on the morning of the 10th to sail next day. Left Laguayra on the 10th, with the George Law with the Pacific mails, and Aspinwall with Pacific Mail Steamship Company's steamer John L. Stephens, which arrived at Aspinwall on the 3d inst., at 10 P. M., bringing 500 passengers and $1,700,000 in treasure.

The Law sailed from Aspinwall for Havana, via Greytown, on the 4th, at 6 P. M., and from Greytown on the 5th, at noon. Her passengers include the officers and crew of the steamer Osprey, totally destroyed by fire in the Harbor of Kingston. No lives lost.

Nothing had been heard at San Juan del Sud up to the 5th of the steamer Cortez, that left San Francisco same day with the Sierras, and as a rumor prevailed that the Costa Ricans had possession of San Juan, she may probably have proceeded on to that port.

The Empire City left Havana on the 11th, at 9 A. M., for New Orleans, and had experienced pleasant weather on her passage to this port. She brings the Panama mail and 136 passengers—12 from New York, 25 from Havana and 99 from San Francisco.

Mr. Wm. Messenger from California, per Law, died on board of consumption, and was buried on the 7th or 8th of April.

Central America.

Although our expected letters have not arrived, still we have a number of information to which we would recommend our readers to give a great many grains of allowance, as it is from Spanish sources, and from quarters interested to cast Walker and his associates in the worst light.

All accounts have arrived in Punta Arenas on the 31st ult., by the steamer Emilie, from Punta Arenas, Costa Rica, and is to the purport that the force sent by Gen. Cañas, under command of Col. Schlesinger, had attacked and defeated by the Costa Rica troops under Gen. Mora, at the "Hacienda de Santa Rosa," in San Jose. We copy from the Panama Star.

Guatemala.

The notices about Costa Rica and Nicaragua in Guatemala to the 13th inst., were that the filibusters have made the first attack on Punta Arenas; they had allowed themselves with coffee and dry goods. Being now there therefore busy with 200 men fortifying the port; 2500 more men were arriving from San Juan, under the command of Gen. D. A. Joaquin Mora. The President, with his staff, to follow immediately.

The order for recruits was received with great enthusiasm by the Costa Ricans. More than a thousand volunteers presented themselves.

News up to the 30th ult. was that the adventurers had received no reinforcements, but were expecting them in the month of March.

The necessaries to maintain the filibusters were very dear. The cholera, small-pox, and fevers prevailed in the villages, especially in Masaya, Managua and Granada. Leon was more healthy.

San Salvador.

The action of the Government in regard to the General American dispute with Nicaragua is kept a profound secret, though it has leaked out that if Costa Rica takes an active part against Walker, Salvador and Honduras will join it. A thousand stand of arms and rifles have been ordered, and the Government is deliberating as to the proper officer to be placed in command of the army. Our correspondent says: "Cabezas has aided not a little in degenerating the officer. His return was anxiously looked for by the people, and when he did come, his denunciations of Walker's not only astonished the so-called filibusters, but changed their former sympathy for Walker into hatred."

Costa Rica.

The following documents we translate from the Gaceta of San José:

DEPARTMENT OF WAR AND MARINE, } Republic of Costa Rica, March 20, 1856. }

To His Excellency the President of the Republic:

Your Excellency: I have the honor to inform you that the Allies, whom I met with and routed on the 20th inst., which had taken possession of the Hacienda, and had established themselves behind the stone fences which exist there.

Our troops fought with so much valor and determination that the attack did not last over fourteen minutes.

We have to mourn over the loss of five or six excellent officers and various soldiers. As soon as accurately known, I shall communicate to your Excellency the details of this glorious day, as well as the names of the officers who have most distinguished themselves.

I have the honor to subscribe myself,

Your very obedient servant,

JOSEPH MORA.

P. S.—I am at present occupied in the pursuit of the filibusters, so that no one may escape. As this moment does not offer either convenience or water, I intend to march the troops back to Pelon at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The Commander-in-Chief of the Republic of Costa Rica.

HEADQUARTERS, LIBERIA, March 21, 1856.

To the Minister of War:

It is 4 o'clock of the afternoon, but no despatch has arrived of the triumph of our arms against these foreign invaders, and to which the adjacent communications refer. The assault of the fortress on Santa Rosa, a splendid military position, stormed and surrounded by walls of stone in all its sides, cost us many glorious for our army. Such were the strong fortifications which, though not completed, we relied upon. The attack was rapid and fierce between the stone fences; one discharge of fire-arms and then the payment in close combat. Fourteen minutes had scarcely passed when the enemy, 400 in number, were flying to the surrounding woods, terrified, without ammunition, almost dead of thirst, and no hope of finding any water to quench it, except at a league's distance, and that controlled by our valiant soldiers, who only thirst was that of the enemy entirely. The field is strewed with the dead, others are wandering wounded through the forest; twelve have been taken prisoners; on all sides they are surrounded and searched for by the 500 men who entered into action, united with parts of divisions which have arrived.

Such is the glorious result which the defenders of Costa America have obtained. In comparison with the great physical and moral results of this victory, the loss on our part is but small; some sixteen killed and thirty wounded, almost severely!

The honorable, valiant and loyal Capt. Jose Marin Cañas, Capt. Manuel Quiros, and Lieuts. Justo Cañas and Manuel Rojas, met a glorious death, as well as several other officers; whose names are not yet known.

In celebrating the triumph, in which all officers and soldiers have given innumerable proofs of valor, I cannot but mention the loss of so many braves.

I proceed to make this known to their families; it is painful consolation under such affliction to know they gained their wreaths under their colors, as well as merited the tears and admiration of their worthy chief and companions.

May God preserve you. RAFAEL MORA.

Private letters state that the President and his party had returned to Punta Arenas. Before his departure, the foreign residents gave him a public entertainment. The troops were in the highest spirits, and in good order. Considerable disappointment was felt on account of Guatemala not evincing more promptitude in coming to the aid of Costa Rica.

A variety of rumors were current and it was difficult to get at the truth.

All accounts that arrived in Punta Arenas on the 31st ult., by the steamer of Walker's men were found dead, and others are supposed to have perished in the flames. Nineteen prisoners were tried by court-martial.

The foregoing is Central American all over, and reminds us of the terrible bulletins put forth by Mexican Generals whenever they got up a pronunciamiento.

A correspondent of the Star, in the interest of Costa Rica, after referring to the battle above, declaredly says:

We said that the whole picture was not presented to the eye. The military genius of the race at Cerro Gordo, and other places in Mexico, against fearful odds, and the heroic conduct of Gen. Contreras and accordingly of the whole army, though not official, can be easily traced, "by their fruits," we find that Walker's party have been and themselves to be completely surprised—their arrests had been taken and made to capture, and the "dead lying around the field" are the sad witnesses of the fearful carnage that ensued, but also of a most fearful defeat of Walker's entered into action, united with parties of divisions which have arrived.

Such is the glorious result which the defenders of Costa America have obtained. In comparison with the great physical and moral results of this victory, the loss on our part is but small; some sixteen killed and thirty wounded, almost severely!

The honorable, valiant and loyal Capt. Jose Marin Cañas, Capt. Manuel Quiros, and Lieuts. Justo Cañas and Manuel Rojas, met a glorious death, as well as several other officers; whose names are not yet known.

In celebrating the triumph, in which all officers and soldiers have given innumerable proofs of valor, I cannot but mention the loss of so many braves.

I proceed to make this known to their families; it is painful consolation under such affliction to know they gained their wreaths under their colors, as well as merited the tears and admiration of their worthy chief and companions.

May God preserve you. RAFAEL MORA.

Private letters state that the President and his party had returned to Punta Arenas. Before his departure, the foreign residents gave him a public entertainment. The troops were in the highest spirits, and in good order. Considerable disappointment was felt on account of Guatemala not evincing more promptitude in coming to the aid of Costa Rica.

A variety of rumors were current and it was difficult to get at the truth.

All accounts that arrived in Punta Arenas on the 31st ult., by the steamer of Walker's men were found dead, and others are supposed to have perished in the flames. Nineteen prisoners were tried by court-martial.

The foregoing is Central American all over, and reminds us of the terrible bulletins put forth by Mexican Generals whenever they got up a pronunciamiento.

A correspondent of the Star, in the interest of Costa Rica, after referring to the battle above, declaredly says:

We said that the whole picture was not presented to the eye. The military genius of the race at Cerro Gordo, and other places in Mexico, against fearful odds, and the heroic conduct of Gen. Contreras and accordingly of the whole army, though not official, can be easily traced, "by their fruits," we find that Walker's party have been and themselves to be completely surprised—their arrests had been taken and made to capture, and the "dead lying around the field" are the sad witnesses of the fearful carnage that ensued, but also of a most fearful defeat of Walker's entered into action, united with parts of divisions which have arrived.

Such is the glorious result which the defenders of Costa America have obtained. In comparison with the great physical and moral results of this victory, the loss on our part is but small; some sixteen killed and thirty wounded, almost severely!

The honorable, valiant and loyal Capt. Jose Marin Cañas, Capt. Manuel Quiros, and Lieuts. Justo Cañas and Manuel Rojas, met a glorious death, as well as several other officers; whose names are not yet known.

In celebrating the triumph, in which all officers and soldiers have given innumerable proofs of valor, I cannot but mention the loss of so many braves.

The second in command of the Costa Rican forces, Don Juan Rafael Mora, is a native of Costa Rica, and is about thirty-five years of age. He is a man of great energy and decision of character, and is said to be very popular with the people. He is a brother of the President, Don Juan Mora.

The Costa Rican army is composed of the militia of the country, and is said to be well disciplined and provided with arms and ammunition. The whole force, we are told, has taken the field against the aggressions of Walker in Nicaragua and the other republics are hastening to unite with her against their common foe.

We never believed, in Walker, nor in his mission, because we cannot be led to think that the sword and revolver are the missionaries of civilization, or that, in this particular case, Walker and his party are influenced by any other motive than their own aggrandizement, and a desire to better themselves at the expense of others.

But leaving the consideration of the principle involved, let us look at the position of affairs as they actually stand. Walker, with a few hundred men, holds the State of Nicaragua by force of arms; it is absurd to suppose the people of the country are bound to him by any other tie than that of fear, or that he has any influence beyond what he holds at the point of his sword. He is cut off from communication with those who sympathize with him, and discountenanced by the Government of his native country.

The Aspinwall Courier entertains a different opinion. It thinks it will be no easy matter to drive Walker and his soldiers out of Central America. So do we. Says the Courier:

The news from Central America makes Walker's prospects look rather dark, and from the impression which they would convey, we might expect, by the next advices from that quarter, to hear of the attack of the Costa Rica forces upon his troops within the borders of Nicaragua, and perchance even at the capital itself. One thing is certain, they will try to accomplish all this. And they will not have the same trifling job on hand that their first battle is represented to have been. A man who stands by his friends as Walker has (in the very revocation of the Transit Company's charter, for which he is now every where so blamed,) and also stands by himself in the midst of such difficulties as those with which he has now to contend, is not easily whipped if he has any show at all. Without reference to his cause, the man Walker deserves to succeed in what he has undertaken. And if he succeeds in withstanding the first attacks, and holding out for a short time, we think he will have help. They'll not shoot him a prisoner.

We can glean nothing further of interest in regard to this matter; and in leaving it, we would remind those of our readers who have friends and relatives in Nicaragua, that "one story is very good until the other is told." We don't believe the news is authentic. There may be a grain or two of wheat in the bushel of chaff—but that's all. However, we shall await, with the whole community, the developments of the next arrival with intense anxiety.

Later from California.

The arrival of the steamship Empire City places us in receipt of San Francisco papers to the 20th of March; fifteen days later than those previously received.

The news of moment is very slight. A large number of clipper ships had lately arrived at San Francisco in very good time; one only ninety-seven days from New York and another but one hundred and eleven days from Liverpool—the quickest voyage on record.

The verdict in the case against Cohen was $269,040 18. In answer to a question put by Cohen the foreman said, "We find the verdict on the issue, and the amount is only of gold dust, bullion and coin, which went into your hands."

The agricultural and mining interests were depressed.

The Democratic State Convention had announced a preference for James Buchanan.

Copper containing 90 per cent. of metal had been shipped from the Gadaden purchase.

Several hundred Californians and Mexicans had emigrated to Mexico. A party of whites killed thirty-six Indians in Cow Creek Valley for a theft of stock.

A Republican party was being organized in San Francisco.

An express was robbed of $25,000 near Shasta, by a band of men in disguise.

At French Corral, a man named Thomas Orme was shot and killed by Richard M. Duval. Orme was the aggressor, being intoxicated. Duval was arrested by the Sheriff.

In San Francisco, two "pussuns oh color" had an affair of honor—fought with revolvers. One shot off the handle of his opponent's weapon, and both were placed in the station-house.

On the 1st of March there was a grand jubilee in Yreka in celebration of the introduction of water to the mines in and near that place by means of a mining ditch.

There has been great complaint among the miners from Scott's River on account of the drought. On the 16th inst. there was a lively shower, but it was not sufficient to do much good.

With the opening of the port of Manzanillo to American steamers has commenced a valuable fruit trade between that place and San Francisco. By every steamer touching there en route for California from San Juan del Sur, considerable quantities of oranges, bananas, and other tropical fruits are imported.

The Indians at Umpqua and Coos Bay have gone to the interior. All the miners had ceased work and armed themselves against the expected attack. The Indians have been supported by the Department for the last three months. The whole number of the Umpqua and Coos Indians amounted to about three hundred. They are mostly well armed, and probably excited to hostilities by the recent successes of the Indians along the coast and at Rogue river.

QUICKSILVER MINE.—A valuable quicksilver mine has been discovered at San Bernardino, that prospects very richly. Arrangements have been made to work it extensively. Lead and copper ore have also been found in that county, of superior quality. Large quantities of specimens of mineral have been collected by the U. S. Surveyors on the Desert, some of which have been found in inexhaustible quantities, which may at some future period prove of immense value.

The drouth that has prevailed at Los Angelos county, has been very destructive to cattle. It is estimated that no less than five thousand head have already died from starvation, and unless copious rains soon fall, the loss must increase with fearful rapidity.

Later from Oregon.

We have received dates from Oregon to the 8th of March. The Oregonian of the latest date says, that by an arrival from Walla Walla Valley, it is learned that the troops are in good health and only awaiting for supplies. The Indians are encamped on the Columbia river, near where the snake river flows in. About two thousand Indians intend to make a stand on the latter river. The Snake Indians have joined the conspiracy with one thousand warriors. About two thousand are located elsewhere.

It was expected that the great battle would occur on the 1st or 5th of March. The volunteers had obtained boats and cannon from the Hudson Bay Company, at Vancouver, to aid them; and a decided victory, it was thought, would end the war.

The steamer Wasco, while ascending the Columbia river, between the Cascades and the Dalles, was fired into by the Indians, who were collected in large numbers on the north side of the river, opposite the mouth of Dog river.

An express was sent to Vancouver for aid against the Indians, who were approaching the heart of the settlements. They had driven the settlers from their homes to take refuge at Olympia, which is barricaded.

A large body of Indians attacked the town of Seattles, on the 26th of January, but were repulsed after the death of two white men. The sloop-of-war Decatur, did considerable service by throwing shells into the Indian camp, and aided materially in holding the Indians at bay.

The U. S. steamship Massachusetts was at Steilacoom when last heard from. There are now three U. S. men-of-war on the Sound to aid in protecting the country from being overrun by the Indians.

Capt. Benjamin Wright, Indian agent at Port Orford, and some twelve or fifteen other white men, were massacred by the Indians, near the mouth of Rogue river.

In the South, the Indians are carrying everything before them. The volunteers have neither food, clothing, horses, ammunition or anything else.

At Puget Sound, a battle was had with the Indians, on the 22d, in which they were defeated.

Further from China.

We have received files of the North China Herald to the 8th of December, from which we make the following extracts:

THE REVOLUTION.—The Herald in a long article, reviewing the revolution, says: We find, then, that the provinces of Hoo-nan, Hoo-pih, Keang-soo, Keang-se, Kwang-tung, Kwang-se and Gnan-hwui have been literally overrun with rebels. Kwei-chow and Yun-nan provinces have also been much troubled—the coasts of Shan-tung, Pih-chih-le, Che-Keang and Fuh-kien have been blockaded by piratical squadrons, which may have some connection with the revolutions that pervade China; and the great highway of commerce, the Yang-tse-keang, has been like a road on which the bridges are broken.

There is scarcely one of the Generals of the Imperial forces that has not been degraded for cowardice, mismanagement, or perhaps misfortune. The richest provinces of the Empire have been drained of their resources to pay troops for their own protection. The Imperial treasury must be badly supplied, if not almost exhausted. The rebels hold the ancient capital of the Empire and the key of the Grand Canal, Chin-keang-foo, one of the greatest strongholds of China. They have the capital of Hoo-pih, with the adjoining one of Hoo-nan, of Honan, while Han-kow, the greatest commercial town of the Empire, has been almost entirely destroyed in the endeavors of the Imperials to retake it.

It is impossible to ascertain exactly the amount of force under command of the rebel leaders. There are the garrisons of Nan-king, Chin-keang, Lan-chow, Woo-chang and Han-yang—last summer there were 50,000 men in the neighborhood of Po-yang in Honan, and a large force is stationed near Teh-ngnan in Hoo-pih—there is a large force near the Po-yang Lake holding several places; then another force holds Keih-gnan-foo in Kenngse. The Pekin Gazette makes out that in 1854 no less than 128,000 were killed in battle, not including "heaps of slain," "countless multitudes," "miles of dead," "the whole exterminated," etc., but merely taking the actual numbers given, and the above result is arrived at.

In the addition to the adherents of Thae-ping-wang we must put in army against the Government, the rebels in Kwang-tung and Kwang-se, for that revolution is by no means stan end. There is a force under Ho A-luk in Hoo-nan—Chum Hing-long, Chum-Heiy, Le-mun Mow, and Ho-shang Lung (the Triad priests) who have yet their followers on the hordes of Kwang-Jung, and defy the Imperial forces. But the mandarins have not only these to fear. They have commenced a war of extermination which shows how wide-spread the revolt in Kwang-tung must have been.

Later from Havana.

The arrival of the steamship Empire City, Capt. Windle, has placed us in receipt of Havana dates to the 10th instant.

Our files are complete, but contain nothing of interest or importance.

The U. S. sloop-of-war Saratoga arrived at Havana on the 10th, and also the steamer Illinois on the same day. The George Law, with Pacific mails and $1,500,000 in treasure, arrived at the same time.

M. Godard was to make an ascent in the city for the benefit of a public charity.

A party took place on board H. B. M. ship Buscawen, at which all the authorities of the city were present, and which was also attended by the officers of other national vessels in port.

The Diario has an article concerning the measure introduced in Congress by Mr. James of Rhode Island, for the further regulation of our commercial affairs. The four interests intended to be created by Mr. James's bill are fully stated and pronounced unfair and injurious to Cuban commerce.

M. Boudries, who undertook an unsuccessful balloon ascent in this city, attempted one in Havana. After flying over a few houses, he had a timid descent, at which the populace were highly indignant.

Paul Julien and Amelia Patti had arrived in Havana, and were about to give a series of concerts.

Nothing of a political nature is transpiring upon the island beyond some speculations as to the success of the filibusters under Walker.

Later from Texas.

By the arrival of the steamship Mexico we have dates from Galveston to the 12th. There is nothing of much importance in their columns.

The Seguin Mercury and other papers are complaining of the myriads of grasshoppers which make their appearance in all quarters, and it is feared they will seriously injure the crops.

A fine new vessel, built on the San Jacinto river, has arrived at Galveston, designed as a Corpus Christi packet.

The San Antonio Ledger of April 5th, speaking concerning Indian outrages, says that depredations are being committed on the Medina, and many horses have been stolen. Parties had started in pursuit. A party from San Antonio, under Mr. Devine, went in quest of the depredators, but had not returned.

Another party shot two or three of the enemy whom they caught in the bush. Maj. Neighbors, Indian agent in the North-west, finds it necessary to keep a Company of soldiers constantly with him to guard against the Indians.

FROM SALT LAKE.—We have Salt Lake dates to the 30th of January. The snow in the vicinity has rendered earlier communication impossible. The mail which left on the 1st of January was obliged to return on account of its depth.

The winter has been unusually severe and numbers of cattle have died of starvation.

The Legislature adjourned on the 20th of January, after a session of forty days.

A mass meeting was held, over which Brigham Young presided, to consider the feasibility of establishing a daily express train to the Missouri river. Nothing was decided upon.

The colony is reported as flourishing, and large numbers of emigrants are expected from Europe and the United States this summer.

LATER FROM THE EAST INDIES.—By the arrival of the Race Hound, at San Francisco, news was received from the East Indies to the 20th of December. The news is unimportant; the only item of general interest worth recording, is the wreck of the Dutch bark Johanna, Captain Bik, on a voyage from Manilla to Shanghae. On the 6th of December, the vessel struck on the north-east side of the Pratas Shoal, and was totally lost. The crew abandoned her before she sunk, and were saved.

Items of Foreign News.

Peace is considered as virtually concluded, and the arrival of Baron Manteuffel, the Prussian Pleuipotentiary at Paris, is only awaited to sign the protocol. The birth of an heir to the Bonaparte line is the cause of much outward rejoicing in France, and even in England. The British Parliament is not in session. Nothing additional to report respecting American difficulties.

The French and English papers are equally full of details respecting the birth and baptism of the son of Napoleon and Eugenie.

According to official announcement the Empress was taken ill at 5 o'clock on Saturday morning, the 15th, and notice of the fact was immediately sent by orders of the Princess of Essling, grand mistress of the Empress's household, to all the members of the Bonnpnte family, the Ministers, Senato, Deputies, Council of State, and high functionaries of the government. The Senate soon afterwards assembled at the Luxemborg and the Deputies in their chamber, where they remained en permanence. The officers of State assembled and remained all day and night of Saturday, in a chamber close to that of the Empress. The Emperor, the Princess of Essling and Madame Montijo, the Empress's mother, remained in Eugenie's apartment.

The Municipal Council of Paris assembled in permanence at the Hotel d'Ville, and considerable crowds of citizens around the Tuilleries. At a quarter to 3 o'clock on Sunday morning, the 16th, the child made his appearance in this sinful world, and the Paris papers inform us, that "the Imperal Prince is of so robust a constitution that he is nearly as big as the child of his nurse, who is two months old (!)" All the officers of state above referred to were present at his birth.

A name was then bestowed upon the infant—Napoleon Eugene Louis Jenn Joseph, fils de France. This appellation was entered in the parish registers and signed by the Emperor, being witnessed by Prince Murat, the Duke of Alba, Marshal Vaillant, Minister of War, M. Troplong, President of the Senate, and Count de Morny, President of the Legislature.

On Sunday morning the Senate and Legislature met at 8 o'clock, and received the official announcement of the birth of an heir to the throne, an announcement which was received with every appearance of cordiality.

Addresses and congratulations continue to pour in to the Tuilleries. Paris has been generally illuminated, and the latest bulletin is in the recognized phrase; "Mother and child are as well as can be expected. Pope Pius is the prince's godfather, and the Queen of Sweeden is godmother—in return for which Napoleon and Eugenie undertake to act as godfather and godmother to all legitimate children born on Sunday, the 16th, throughout France. Flags were hung out and salutes fired in the principal cities of Britain in honor of young Bonaparte's birth.

THE CRIMEA.—News from Constantinople by telegraph is to the 8th inst.

The Divan, considering the remonstrances of commercial men, renounces the projected issue of one hundred millions of paper. Rustem Pacha, convicted of malversation, has been sentenced to a term of imprisonment, and to refund several hundred thousand francs. The Sultan had received the Hospodar Ghika. Five hundred Bashi Bazouks have been brought back from Adrianople. The state of the hospitals have improved, but we have to lament the death of two French surgeons. The dealers at Kalefsch are hoping to sell to the Russians during the armistice. Gen. Mitchell has replaced Gen. Vivian, who is still sick. New Russian troops have arrived at Bessarabia. The Tartars at Eupatoria fear the consequences of a peace. A great number of them will follow the Allies when they retire. Some bandits have been killed at Sarissa. News from Smyrna is to the 6th. An Anglo-Swiss battalion has arrived.

THE DEMERARA RIOT.—By an arrival at New York we have advices from Demarara to 22d Feoruary. The "Angel Gabriel" riot excitement continued, and six or seven hundred arrests had been made. The blacks who had been incited to deeds of violence against the Portuguese by this "Angel," (who is in prison) had pulled down, plundered and set fire to a good many Roman Catholic churches and Portuguese ships. The authorities had sent to a number of islands for vessels of war to protect the place. Business was dull in consequence of the riots.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE SUBSCRIBERS.—The railroads have resumed their regular trips.

A New Sugar.

A short time since we published, says the Washington Union, the extract of a letter from a gentleman residing in Provo City, Utah Territory, to Hon. J. M. Bernhisel, giving an account of the manner in which a new kind of sugar had been made in that Territory from a white sweet substance found on cotton-wood trees, and somewhat resembling honey dew. Since then, a cake of this sugar, which had been placed in Mr. B.'s hands for the purpose, was submitted to a chemist to be analyzed. We give below the result of this test:

"The physical characters of the substance resemble muscliable maple sugar of our country. It has however a dark layer on one side which is less sweet than the lighter-colored one, owing probably to the extractive matter evaporated with the leaves of the cotton-wood tree that have been boiled down with the liquor. The sugar is not chrystalized, but granular and porous, and appears to contain a considerable portion of molasses. It is of a clammy touch, unlike the cane or maple sugar, and its taste is second to that of the last two-mentioned kinds. The chemical characters of this sugar are as follows: I have ascertained, to my full satisfaction, that it is a grape sugar, or similar to that made from starch. From the copper test has proved beyond doubt that it is not a cane sugar. A solution of this sugar, with the addition of potash lye and sulphate of copper, will, after a few minutes boiling, change the green hydrate of copper thus produced into an orange sub-oxide copper, even in the cold at an extremely great dilution. (One grain to an ounce of water,) while for the sake of comparison, a solution of cane sugar treated in the same way with copper, no change of color could be detected, either by boiling or after standing some days. Regarding the origin of this sugar, which, from the details given by your friends, appears to be distributed over a large district in Utah territory, so that the inhabitants were able to produce several thousand pounds of sugar in a very short period, and by the most simple process, such as collecting the leaves of the cotton-wood, washing off the sediment, and concentrating and evaporating the liquor, I was much astonished at first when reading the account, and after some reflection as to the causes that had produced this sugar rain, which some of your friends appear to attribute to a manna similar to that upon which God made the Jews subsist while in the desert of Arabia, and which by special favor the same Being has granted to the Mormons, I found that the formation of this sugar could be explained, physiologically, upon natural principles, and in the following manner:

It is a well-known fact that the sap of trees will continue to circulate through the cellular tissue as long as the organic life is sustained by heat and light, while a sudden change in the temperature will produce an interruption in the circulation, and thereby a chemical metamorphose. It has been observed, also, that the leaves of many trees and shrubs will, in consequence of such sudden change as from a very hot day to a cold night, secrete and cover them with a sweet substance exactly in the manner described by the collectors in Utah. I have observed the same phenomenon in the south of Germany in many butternut, walnut and chestnut trees. Therefore, it is a disease in the trees, or an organic disorder called forth by the decomposition or secretion of those matters required for the nourishment and support of the vegetable life. As an illustration of the chemical change, I will mention the potato, which does not taste sweet nor contain in its natural state any sugar, yet becomes sweet when attacked by frost; the juice thereby becoming decomposed and converted into sugar. Properly speaking, it is the mildew which is so often observed on many trees, (such as the black alder, linden, and rose bush, occasionally on the beach and oak,) and which corresponds with the secretion of sugar on many leaves, which are less protected, although very tenderly constructed by nature, and are therefore affected easily on a sudden change, and are also exposed to this derangement; as regards the great quantity of the sugar gathered, which may be surprisingly large at first, nevertheless may be explained. The vegetable juice contains in the full of the year the greatest quantity of starch, which is so easily converted by the natural as well as well as artificial process into sugar.

"It may not be out of place here to remark that, in consequence of the formation of sugar mould, lice and other insects are created on those trees. If a steady rain does not soon after the secretion remove all the sugar from them, the mildew is therefore not the cause, but the result, from the creation of those parasites."

The sieve through which the man "strained every nerve," is for sale at half the first cost.

TO COUNTRY MERCHANTS.

H. D. McGINNIS, No. 36 Camp street, would respectfully call the attention of Country Merchants and others wishing BOOKS and STATIONERY to sell again, to his extensive assortment of SCHOOL BOOKS, of every description. Also, a large supply of French, English and American STATIONERY, BLANK BOOKS, of all kinds; and in fact, every article found in a first class Bookstore.

All of which he offers exceedingly low to those wanting to buy to sell again, as his object is to make his business a wholesale business.

Country Merchants laying in their fall stocks, will save money by giving him a call. H. D. McGINNIS, s2 tf 36 Camp street.

PLANTATION AND GARDEN FERTILIZERS.

The subscriber has constantly on hand the following concentrated manures, a single trial of which will prove to the most incredulous their value as a restorer of fertility to worn out soils, and their adaptation to increasing largely the products of the Garden and Orchard.

Numerous testimonials from gentlemen who tried them last season have been received, all of whom concur in saying that their experiments were satisfactory and profitable beyond their anticipation—

PHOSPHATED GUANO,
In barrels of about 200 lbs, at 2 cents per lb.
SUPER PHOSPHATE OF LIME,
In barrels of about 200 lbs, at 2 cents per lb.
COARSE GROUND BONES,
In barrels of about 175 lbs, at 1¾ cents per lb.
FINE GROUND BONES,
In barrels of about 200 lbs, at 1¾ cents per lb.
PERUVIAN GUANO,
In sacks of about 140 lbs, at 2¾ cents per lb.
PHOSPHATE,
Or de-odorized Night Soil, in powder, at $1 50 per bbl.
LAND PLASTER,
At $1 75 per barrel.

—ALSO—

ROCK SALT, in barrels of about 300 lbs, at 1 cent per lb.

☞ Orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to. A pamphlet, containing further particulars and directions for using the above fertilizers will be sent by mail, on the receipt of a postage stamp, to any one desiring it.

D. C. LOWBER, 93 Magazine street, New Orleans.

m15 6m

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

FACULTY—Rev. H. C. THWEATT, D. D. President and Professor of Mental and Moral Sciences, Belles-Lettres and Ancient Languages.

A. R. REMBERT, M. D., Professor of the Physical Sciences and Mathematics.

Professor of Music and Modern Languages.

Miss L. BATES, A. M. Instructress in English Literature, Modern Languages, Music, Drawing, Painting, Embroidery, etc.

Miss ISABELLA V. McCORMICK, Graduate of the State Normal Institute, New York, Instructress in Music, Drawing and Painting.

Mrs. ELIZABETH E. McCORMACK, Instructress in Primary Department.

Miss MARY E. CROWDER, M. E. L. Instructress in Academic Department.

, Assistant Teacher in the Elementary branches.

N. B.—In a few weeks, a gentleman of distinguished reputation will be added to the present corps, his name occupying the vacancy of Professor of Modern Languages.

RATES OF TUITION PER SESSION OF FIVE MONTHS.

Primary Department	$12 50
Academic Department	15 00
COLLEGIATE DEPARTMENT.
Freshmen and Sophomore classes	20 00
Junior and Senior classes	25 00
ORNAMENTAL DEPARTMENT.
Music on the pianoforte, harp or guitar	25 00
Use of instruments	5 00
Vocal music	1 00
Drawing, with use of copies	12 00
Water and chromatic painting, each	15 00
Oil painting	20 00
Embroidery	10 00
Incidental expenses	2 00
Fee for Graduation and Diploma	5 00

No extra charge made for Modern or Ancient Languages.

Payment to be made at the close of each term. Board, including lodging, washing, lights and fuel can be procured in the village and immediate neighborhood at ten dollars per month. Students will be received at any time during the session, and will be charged only from the time of their entrance to the end of the term. We would, however, respectfully urge all parents and guardians who design placing their daughters or wards in the institution, to do so at their earliest convenience, as it will tend much to the individual interest of the pupils, and the general prosperity of the school, facilitating, as it will, a proper arrangement of the various classes in their respective branches of study.

School books, stationery, etc., may be had at any of the various stores in the village at the usual rates.

The scholastic year, embracing ten months, will be divided into two equal terms of five months, one immediately succeeding the other.

The first session commencing on the first Wednesday in October, and closing the last week in February; the second commencing on the first Wednesday in March, and closing the last week in July; at which time the annual examination will be held, and the usual rewards and honors bestowed. The vacation will embrace the months of August and September.

All applications for admission of pupils, etc., to be made to the President of the College. m1 1y

A SOUTHERN REMEDY.

Made by O. O. Woodman, New Orleans, La.

HAS received the appointment from the proprietor for the sole agency of

Woodman's Cherry Expectorant,

the medicine that has created such an excitement at the North among the Physicians, and has been pronounced by all who have used it as being far superior to any Cherry Pectoral.

WOODMAN'S CHERRY EXPECTORANT

Obtains the active medicinal qualities of the pure decoction of Wild Cherry Bark, and unite other valuable lung-healing that reader it far better than any other cough medicine in this country.

RECOMMENDATION.

NEW ORLEANS, April 9, 1856.

Dear Sir—The public generally are fully aware of the thousands of remedies for diseased lungs, under the title of Sarsaparillas, Pills, Plasters, Liniments, etc., that are daily brought in their notice through the newspapers by way of advertisements. My object in writing this note for publication is to induce the public, or at least those who are afflicted, to use one that contains articles of real use in pulmonary diseases. I am conscious that in so doing, I am acting most unprofessionally and disreputably to the interests of Medical Science and the regular practitioners of Medicine. I refer to Woodman's Cherry Expectorant, which is a scientific remedy that I have used with more success than any of the usual prescriptions used by physicians.

J. M. MAITLAND, M. D.

This preparation has attained a wide celebrity from the universal success which has attended its use. For thorough coughs, colds, and in fact, any pulmonary complaints, this medicine, from its peculiar properties as a dissolvent, and its soothing power to all irritations of the throat, will probably be preferred to any other offered to the public. As an appetizer, or dyspeptic remedy, it will also be found excellent, its natural and genial warmth keeping the digestive powers in proper tone.

Remember that this is the only cough medicine that has stood the test of the medical fraternity. It is sanctioned by approved of, and recommended by leading physicians of New York City. Every bottle is warranted to give satisfaction or the money refunded. We guarantee it to be better than any Cherry Pectoral, Cod Liver Oil, or anything else now extant.

For BRONCHIAL AFFECTIONS it will be found superior to all other remedies

Sold by O. O. WOODMAN,

New Orleans.

And by all the Druggists in the South. s5 6m

DRUGS, CHEMICALS, PAINTS, OILS, WINDOW-GLASS.

O. O. WOODMAN, WHOLESALE DRUGGIST,

Successor to Jarvis & Woodman.

CORNER OF COMMON AND MAGAZINE STREETS, NEW ORLEANS.

IMPORTER AND DEALER IN

CHOICE DRUGS, SELECTED MEDICINES, PURE CHEMICALS, ESSENTIAL OILS,

Medicinal Extracts, Fine Perfumery and Fancy Soaps,

PATENT MEDICINES, SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS, DRUGGISTS' GLASSWARE,

BRUSHES,

FRENCH AND AMERICAN WINDOW-GLASS, PAINTS, OILS, DYE STUFFS, ETC.

☞ Druggists, Physicians, Country Merchants and Ioaters who purchase medicines, may rely upon being suited. Orders Promptly attended to.

300 DOZEN CHERRY EXPECTORANT—FOR THE CERTAIN CURE OF COUGHS, COLDS INFLUENZA, Croup, Bronchial Affections, Consumption, and all diseases of the lungs, in the incipient stage. Also for the relief of Consumption, in the advanced stages of the disease.

This is an Anodyne Expectorant, prepared on the plan of combining the most active and efficient remedies usually prescribed by the Profession, in all their purity, affording a remedy which is found to give energy and certainty of effect, which cannot be had by using the same remedies as usually prescribed by the physician or apothecary.

It is not designed that this shall be a secret remedy, and the formula, with the proportion of each ingredient, will be readily submitted to physicians.

The cost of the preparation is such that it will not warrant the small amount of Advertising and puffing resorted to by popular medicine dealers. It must make its way in public favor by its intrinsic merits alone.

The following is one of the many testimonials volunteered by physicians of the first standing:

FROM DR. W. M. DEASON.

GALLATIN, MISS., May 1, 1852.

O. O. WOODMAN—Dear Sir: I have given your Cherry Expectorant a fair trial, and am well pleased with its effects—better than any other article I ever met with. I would be pleased for you to send me a half a dozen bottles by the bearer.

Respectfully, W. M. DEASON.

Prepared and sold by O. O. WOODMAN, corner of Common and Magazine streets, New Orleans, La.; Also, by O. O. WOODMAN & CO., Wholesale Agents, Vicksburg, Miss.

DIRECT IMPORTATION FROM EUROPE—RECEIVING, BY LATE ARRIVALS, DIRECT FROM England, France and Germany, a large assortment of DRUGS, CHEMICALS, GLASSWARE, PERFUMERY, BRUSHES, etc. Among which are—

1050 boxes French Window-Glass, assorted sizes.	2 gross hf the assorted Pomatums, in tin cans.
100 lbs Conrad's Hydriodate Potash.	20 reams Filtering Paper.
500 ounces Pelletier Pr. Quinine.	12 dozen White Plaster Skins.
500 ounces

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY A COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS FOR THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH---H. N. McTYEIRE, EDITOR.

VOLUME VI—NUMBER 17.
WHOLE NUMBER 277.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 26, 1856.

$2 00 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.
OFFICE—36 CAMP ST.

Work for Heaven.

If thou hast thrown a glorious thought
Upon life's common ways,
Should other men the gain have caught,
Fret not to lose the praise.

Great thinker, often shalt thou find,
While folly plunders fame,
To thy rich store the crowd is blind,
Nor knows thy very name.

If thou art true, yet in thee lurks
For fame a human sigh,
To nature go, and see her works—
That handmaid of the sky.

Her own deep bounty she forgets,
Is full of germs and seeds;
Nor glorifies herself, nor eats
Her flowers above her weeds.

She hides the modest leaves between,
She loves untrodden roads;
Her richest treasures are not seen,
By any eye but God's.

Accept the lesson—took not for
Reward: from out thee chase
All selfish ends, and ask no more
Than to fulfill thy place.

Charity.

Prithee, what is Charity?
Is she one with heavy eye,
Weeping near to sorrow's bed,
Soothing sinners' hour of dread,
Fearing not that stain may light
On the spotless robe of white,
Though she treads the darkest scene
Where misery and sin have been?
She who points to heaven above;
She whose heart is filled with love;
She who feels no prudish fear,
When the child of shame draws near;
She who bids her not despair,
For God will hear repenting prayer;
She who does her alms unknown;
She who bends at mercy's throne;
Hidden all from human eye—
Trust me, this is Charity!

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

FEMALE COLLEGES.

NUMBER THREE.

In my last number I endeavored to indicate the true mission of the academy, and the most likely method of achieving it.

No one circumstance is a source of great annoyance to college professors and of regret to all enlightened friends of education, as the fact that academies will not "stick to" their own business. Instead of trying to impart to the minds of their pupils that strength and skill which will enable them to grasp and wield to advantage the truths of which the world is full. Instead of laying broad and deep the foundation upon which the college or the individual may continue to build, they vainly attempt to rear the edifice upon nothing. Failure is the result, of course. A "learned" boy or "learned" girl would be a living wonder. The unstrengthened, untrained mind, is incapable of entering successfully upon the study of the sciences; and those academies that essay, in total neglect of this truth, to "cram" their students with mental or moral science, political economy, logic, rhetoric, astronomy, geology, botany, chemistry, natural philosophy and the like, are perpetuating one of the greatest evils connected with our educational operations.

We next come to consider, very briefly, the business of the college. But upon this point it is more difficult to speak, that which will receive the assent of all college men. There is a diversity of opinion among them as to the amount of science which should be embraced in the curriculum. I believe, however, it is generally admitted by those best qualified to judge in the premises, that every modification of the thorough and extensive study of the ancient languages and mathematics is detrimental to sound education. Colleges have experimented upon this subject in various ways. Some have abandoned the curriculum almost entirely, and left every student to pursue such a course as he or his guardian might prefer. Others have adopted the same plan in part. The result has been, that these are excellent institutions for the instruction of men, but very poor ones for the education of boys. They seem to have missed their aim entirely, and to have contributed to a result the very opposite of that for which they were striving; which was, doubtless, to elevate the standard of American scholarship. Not more than one or two out of every hundred that resort to them ever arrive at their theoretical standard; and the great majority fall far below the standard of other colleges.

It may be remarked, just here, that a similar weakness is manifested among colleges to the one alluded to in connection with academies—an ambition to transcend their appropriate sphere, to cease to be colleges, and become universities and scientific schools. To such an extent is this true, that there are now more than thirty colleges in the United States calling themselves universities, of which not more than two or three have yet realized the full university idea—indeed, I know but one in which the three departments of theology, law and medicine are in successful operation.

In this manner the term university has been dragged down from its high import, and has become but another name for a college. The history of this transaction is indissolubly connected with the word, and hence there is in its sound a kind of emptiness and bombast very disagreeable to American scholars. It is hoped, however, that after a time it will be rescued from this odium by the advancement to the rank of real universities, of some of those institutions that now have merely the name; and by the establishment of new ones that shall do honor to a designation so comprehensive and imposing.

But, in the meanwhile, all colleges cannot be universities; and it is by no means necessary that they should be. Every university, to be successful, must have a thorough and faithful college for its nucleus—its corner stone; but a college may be as complete, as useful and as distinguished, by remaining simply a college, as by branching out into a university; for all men need to be educated, but comparatively few need to be professionally learned.

The specific office of the college, however, I have not yet undertaken to define; and it may seem presumptuous in me to speak freely upon a matter in which so many wiser and better men than I am are concerned; but I think I may venture to hope for their assent to the statement, that the college ought, first of all, to complete what the academy begins—education; and that there is danger, in this utilitarian age, and in this nation of swift-winged haste, that the old landmarks will be borne away, and the college course be flooded with a mass of science and literature wholly incompatible with its highest and noblest ends.

In view of this danger, would it not be well to throw a larger portion of the labor upon the academy, by requiring a more extensive preparation of those who would enter the freshman class in college? If it were insisted upon that they should be complete masters of algebra and geometry, and that they should have a considerably better acquaintance with the Latin and Greek languages than has hitherto been demanded of them; and if it were to be required, also, that they be at least seventeen years of age at entrance, or at least twenty-one at graduation, then, perhaps, the last two years of the course might, without disadvantage, be devoted chiefly to philosophy and the sciences.

Having thus hinted briefly at the relations of the different grades of schools, and at the individual functions of each, we are better prepared to enter upon the consideration of female colleges as they now are, and female academies and colleges, as we think they should be. This will be the subject of our next article.

MENTOR.

(To be Continued.)

FRANKNESS.

Frankness is supposed to be a common virtue. It is most uncommon. It is indeed an extraordinary thing. It requires truth, simplicity, love and genuine goodness. Many speak plainly when they do speak, but they are not open and free. Many speak truth very plainly when they are angry; many speak pleasant truth frankly. But few there are whose souls are so balanced in an atmosphere of love that they speak whatever needs to be said to each and all, plainly, gently, fully. The dearest friends live together for years without daring to speak things which they know, and which each party knows that the other knows. Parents live with a reserve years long towards their children. Children carry untouched, unsyllabled, thoughts and feelings that take hold of their very being. Friends meet and part day by day—friends so true, that they would almost die for each other, or what is harder than this, who are willing to live for each other—and never speak of things that each knows is passing in the other's mind. It is very strange to see people come up in conversation to topics that, by a tacit free-masonry, are sacred, and without word or look one glides past on one side, and the other upon the other side, and meet beyond, going down the common channel again. Was there ever a thoughtful, sensitive person that dared to be open, transparent, frank?

But however this may be, there can be no doubt that Christian people are not frank enough for each other's good. If men knew how to speak the truth in love, how rich might one become. A man might stand then in the focus of the wisdom of all his friends. But, refusing to let their light shine, men now grope in the partial light of their own wisdom, distempered by self-love.

[Independent.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

MAKING TRACKS.

Mr. Editor:—In my first epistle of travels, I forgot to say, in the right place, that the State Prison of Alabama is near Wetumpka, in which there are over two hundred convicts—some old, some young, some in for life, some for a term of years—all sinners before God and dishonored among men. And yet they are men, and have souls. Who careth for them? The chaplain ministers to them the word once on each Sabbath, and each cell is furnished with a Bible; but since the days of the chief magistracy of the excellent Governor Collier, If any one has given them so much as a tract or book, I know it not. Now, the point I wish to make is this—that if any person or if any number of persons will make special donations of money, with instructions to appropriate it to the purchase of some cheap religious books for the use of the convicts in the Penitentiary, I will take great pleasure in placing the books in the hands of Brother Lynch for distribution, and may be thereby a soul will be saved from death.

But to return to my narrative. The first Sabbath in March I ministered an application for aid to the tract cause to my old friends and neighbors, the brethren at Selma. This is a small city—used to be a second-rate village. What has made the difference? Public-spirited enterprise—two projected and progressing railroads. The Churches, however, have had a hard time of it, but they sowed and wept in hope; and, so far as the M. E. Church, South is concerned, there ariseth light—at least very encouraging signs. Under the leadership of the young pastor, (Bro. Connerly,) the Sabbath School is more than doubled during his short sojourn among them, and feeling the worth of that word, "The poor have the gospel preached unto them," what he could not do from the pulpit, he hath sought to do in the humblest family circles. As a consequence, already he hath written about sixty-new names on the church book, and is preaching every Sunday to a full house. One other sign, they gave me about fifty dollars, a considerable advance on last year; and then some of the giving men were not present, but will, I hope, attend to my wants during the year.

The next Saturday and Sunday found me at Union Chapel, Macon county, on or near the old Calcebee battle-ground. On this site, more than forty years ago, that dauntless "brave," Bill Weatherford, led the "native Americans to the mortal fray, disputing the further progress of Gen. Floyd and his invincible Georgians. It was a day of blood and of victory to the Anglo-American; not that the God of Battles hated his red children, but to prove that "whom he loveth he chasteneth"—for after forty years, what do we see? A Georgia Bishop holding conference in the midst and for the benefit of these sons of the forest and their descendants—consecrating some of them to the work of the blessed ministry, and wooing the whole of them to the better life. Through the courtesy of that model man of amiability, Bro. S. Armstrong, I made the appeal in behalf of the tract cause, and although they had just built a new church, and the claim was new, they made up the handsome sum of seventy-five dollars. I spent most of the week with Bro. R. M. Saunders, at the house of that distinguished writer and orator, Rev. Wm. M. Samford, with him, on his circuit; but owing to the bad weather small congregations made small collections.

The third Sabbath I stood before the congregation in Tuskegee, and announced the text, "The Lord gave the word; great was the congregation that published it;" and the result of the call was two hundred and sixty-five dollars. In the days of political grandiloquence and humbug, I used to hear of "banner States" and "banner counties," and for the present, the banner abides at Tuskegee. And, by the way, it is no vain boasting to say, they have the banner Female College, as far as house and fixtures go; and of the faculty of instruction, I have only to mention such names as Dr. Lipscomb, Rev. M. S. Andrews and G. F. Price. Of the prospects of success, within one month from the opening over one hundred young ladies.

But to return from this digression. It is but justice to say, that for much of my success at this place I am indebted to that soul of all generous emotions, Rev. E. J. Hamill. By the way, he is the author of half of a book just published, being a discussion between himself and Rev. S. Henderson, of the Baptist Church, on the Republicanism of Methodism. Of its merits, I have only this to say, that neither Bro. H. nor his friends will ever be ashamed of his part of the performance.

The fourth Sunday, at Auburn. And who has not heard of Auburn of college notoriety? On which subject they die hard so much so, they do not intend to die at all. For the third time they are renewing their subscriptions, and are sanguine of success. Some may blame their pertinacity, but all must admire their courage and zeal. It was Quarterly Meeting; but the Presiding Elder and stationed preacher, Rev. W. B. Neal, gave me the blandest welcome, and were forward in taking a good share in the pecuniary responsibilities of the day. The result was one hundred and twenty-three dollars. This was noble, considering causes known to them and myself, not necessary here to repeat.

The fifth Sabbath, at Summerfield. Bro. Bliss being absent, Bishop Andrew in charge, from whom I obtained permission to present the claims of my agency; and I assure you it took a ready writer to record the responses of the day. The summing up is two hundred and fifty-five dollars. Well, have I made a discovery? I think so. It is this: These colleges and high schools have a wonderful habit of making the dwellers thereabouts unusually liberal. All hail! Tuskegee, Summerfield, Auburn—a trio of noble sisters.

Two remarks and an exhortation, and I close:

1. In this notation of sums, there are some odd cents not specified in this showing, but will be on final settlement.

2. All the subscriptions made in any place were not cashed, (most were,) but good.

The exhortation is to the subscribers and the collectors to do their duty speedily.

Yours, truly,

F. G. FERGUSON.

April 10, 1856.

Social Value of Preaching.

Without unduly magnifying my office as a minister of the gospel, I may boldly, and without fear of contradiction, affirm that one truly faithful and zealous preacher of God's word, to what ever section of Christ's Church he may belong, does more to check the progress of vice and crime, to promote obedience to law, to aid the advancement of individual virtue and maintain social order, than a hundred political, moral and philosophical essays, or than the utterance of the strictest view of justice, or the severest inflictions of judgment. It is thus, that the beautiful imagery of the prophet is realized, "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and those who were once their country's terror and disgrace become its ornaments and defence. Blind is that country, and wretched must it be, where the worth of a faithful preacher is not known till the want of this, the friend of humanity, is proclaimed by the aboundings of iniquity, the prevalence of strife, confusion and every evil work. The pulpit—and let it not be considered a vain boast—next to the Bible, which is intended to explain and enforce, is the strongest pillar of human society: it is the great breakwater that keeps back the mighty surgings of ungodliness, and preserves the land from an inundation of ruin; it is that which alone can be depended upon amid the revolutions of human affairs and the clash of human passions, to preserve to the monarch his crown, to the noble his honors, to the rich man the enjoyment of his wealth, and to the workman the reward of his labor. What lover of his species, then, must not uphold the ministry of the Word—an institution which for eighteen centuries has taught the poor to suffer want, the afflicted in patience to possess their souls, the anxious to care for nothing, and the fearful to hope in God?—J. A. James.

A SOLEMN THOUGHT.—It has been observed, with much significance, that every morning we enter upon a new day, carrying still an unknown future in its bosom. How pregnant and stirring the reflection! Thoughts may be born to-day which may never die. Feelings may be awakened to-day which may never be extinguished. Hope may be excited to-day which may never expire. Acts may be performed to-day, the consequences of which may not be realized till eternity.

CONSECRATION.—Entire consecration to God fills the humblest life with sublimity. An unconsecrated mind will be perplexed between spiritual and secular things. It will have one idea of holiness for the minister and another idea for the people, secular and religious duties will be vastly dissimilar. It will be less holy to do work than to pray, to collect money for a mission, than to go out as a missionary.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

HER ORACLE.

BY CRISTIC RANGER.

About seven miles from the city of C——, in the State of Mi., there stands amid the shadowy oaks and tall pines a Methodist church.

It is a delightful place for worship so quiet, so shady; such a sweet solemnity hovers over the scene, with its humble graveyard on the hill-side, and its clear spring bubbling up and rolling its waters gently down the vale.

It is Sabbath evening, and a spirit of calm religion is breathing round the little church of N. H. There are horses tied to the trees, and a few vehicles standing near. I enter, as I have often done before, and find myself in a Sabbath school. I take my seat, and look around over the happy faces of children, gathered from the surrounding neighborhood. I hear the hum of cheerful voices, and see the sparkle of the bright eyes of little pupils, glad with the performance of duties rendered so pleasant. The teachers are earnest in their instructions; the pupils are eager and attentive; the spectators are quiet and respectful; and everything moves in the most delightful harmony.

But the ruling spirit of the scene, and the one which attracts my attention and elicits my deepest admiration, is the Superintendent. Imagine the most affectionate father in the midst of his family, whom he has rendered interesting by instruction and unceasing devotions, and you have him. He moves among the Sabbath School children as the kindest parent might do among his own; he notices every one; he has a kind and affectionate word of admonition for each and all. No wonder that harmony reigns there. I have seen him sit beside a little child whose parents never taught it to pray, and talk to it about Jesus and the angels, and heaven and the little children there, until, with tears of pleasure in its eyes, the little creature would promise to be good and try to go there too. And then the good man would go on searching out those who seemed the most needy, but with kind attention to all, until he had gone through the whole school. And when the recitations were over, before he read the closing hymn, he would talk to the little boys and girls so kindly, and tell them of some recent triumph of religion,—of some little schoolfellow, perhaps, who had died during the week and left a message for them all to follow on and meet him in the skies. I have seen him talk on thus until tears would gather in his eyes, and his voice would falter from emotion; while, every child was weeping, and many "children of an older growth" were not less affected, and I, too, felt a watery response trickling down my cheek. I left that house with a charity for human nature which I had not before—a love for my fellow-creatures that I had not known till then—an aspiration for the heavenly and holy—a desire to do good.

And this Superintendent is our Oracle—the Oracle of the whole community. For, should anyone desire instruction in an agricultural or mechanical scheme, or assistance in the accomplishment of it; or should he wish for spiritual advice, he seeks it, and is very apt to get it, of our Oracle. Has a sinner become concerned for his soul's welfare, he is not so apt to seek assistance from the circuit preacher as from our Oracle, who points him to a "mansion in the skies," and a "kind Physician" there. Is a neighbor sick or afflicted by disease, he sends not for the country doctor, but to the other white house on the hill, for our Oracle, who rarely fails to attend, and does all he can to render his poor neighbor comfortable, or restore him to health. And he generally succeeds, for he seems "posted" on every subject. If any are in distress, he is the first to find it out, and if possible, relieve; and if the poor are at any time in need, they know where to go for aid.

And this "Good Samaritan" is not wrapped up in the habitude of cant; nor does he move along with slow, scarce-moving steps and lachrymose physiognomy; but his face is always sunny with smiles, his bald head shines with good humor, and he has grown fat with healthy laughter and good deeds.

You should see him in a company of young boys and girls assembled to enjoy a social evening, at his own or a neighbor's house. See him move among them, the ruling, mirth-inspiring spirit of the evening—conducting their innocent and juvenile plays, drawing out the diffident and bashful, inspiring the timid with confidence, and spicing the amusements with rare anecdotes, till the whole house resounds with their hilarity, his own hearty, healthy laugh heard among the rest; for he is not one of your Christians(?) who consider laughter and good humor opposed to religion. Ah! 'tis no wonder we all love him, and make him our Oracle, for like dear Oliver Goldsmith, he can "laugh as well as cry," and he has the "milk of human kindness" in his soul.

When the Master shall come to make up his jewels, may our Oracle be among them, bright and shining.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

THE SYRO-PHOENICIAN WOMAN.

NEW ORLEANS, April, 1856.

As the Savior, in his journeying on his mission of love, came near the coast of Tyre and Sidon, a woman of Canaan came out of the same coast unto him. She is called a Syro-Phœnician woman, because she was an inhabitant of that country so denominated from its being included in the Roman Province of Syria. She is called in the text, a Greek; in the margin, a Gentile. She was not of the seed of Abraham, but one who was regarded as an alien and a stranger to the commonwealth of Israel. This woman had a daughter—whether more than one, we know not; as in the history there is no mention made of the husband or the father, it is most likely she was a widow.

This daughter had long been afflicted. Satan had possessed her, for she was "grievously vexed with a devil." This was one of the class of afflictions not in the ordinary sense medicable. This mother, however, had heard of the wonderful power and equally wonderful benevolence of the Great Teacher. She resolved to go to him. It is most likely that the daughter was too feeble to attempt anything of the kind. When she came into the throng that pressed about the Saviour, she began to cry; in this cry, like a mother, she makes her child's need her own, and exclaims, "Thou son of David, have mercy on me."

According to the custom of the East, when an inferior approaches a superior, she "fell at his feet." From all that she had heard of the saviour's benevolence, his sympathy with human sorrow, she had reason to expect the kindest reception. But, alas! what a disappointment awaited her. He seemed to pay her no attention; "he answered her not a word." His disciples, perceiving that he did not answer her, hastily concluded that he did not mean to help her at all, and, perhaps, somewhat influenced by their Jewish prejudices, besought him to send her away. To this the Saviour did not assent, but spoke to the woman, and said, "I am not sent but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel."

This was a cruel disappointment of her hopes. But she had set her heart too fully on the healing of her child to return without another effort to realize her hopes. She came near and worshipped him, saying, "Lord, help me." What earnestness and humility were here! Surely, that heart that never seemed hard before cannot withstand that touching appeal. Surely, he will help her. But no; he only replies, "It is not meet to take the childrens' bread and cast it to the dogs."

Oh, what an uncourteous and harsh rebuff seemed this! How strange that that great heart, which throbbed with love for all, should seem to contract itself to the narrowness of calling Jews "children," and all others "dogs." We might have supposed that the woman would now think the enterprise hopeless, and abandon it in despair—not only in despair, but with a feeling of wounded dignity, and humble sorrow insulted in its helplessness. To be called a "dog"—oh! how our pride would have resented such an indignity. But not so this sad and loving mother. It was no time for pride with her, no time to talk of offended dignity. Oh, no! she had left at home a sorrowing and suffering child. That child had long suffered; her case had seemed hopeless. But hope had at last poured its cheerful light into their sad hearts. They had heard of the fame and wonders of the Great Teacher; and, what was most cheering to them, that he was the friend of the poor and the sorrowing.

The mother had heard of his coming into their region. It was an opportunity not to be lost. She determined to go and see him. No doubt, with many cheering hopes and inspiring promises she had left the sufferer, to go and see the Great Physician. She had found, had fallen at his feet, and told her sad but humble story. She had begged him to help them; and though rebuffed, if not insulted, could she go back to that poor child and tell her that all her hopes were vain—that her young life must be wasted away in hopeless suffering—that there was no relief, but in the grave? Oh! it was too much. The mother had no place for pride in her sad heart. She could be, she would be anything, even a "dog," but she could not return to feel that earth had nothing more to live for. Oh! this was more than she could bear. She exclaimed, "Truth, Lord; yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their master's table."

Oh! here was the triumph of humility and the triumph of love. Jesus knew that this wealth of faith and love was treasured up in this humble woman's heart, and he meant to bring it forth for the edification of all after ages. His purpose was accomplished; and promptly and kindly he said unto her, "Oh! woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt." What could she will but the speedy healing of her child! "And her daughter was made whole from that very hour."

No pen has ever written the joy of the meeting of that fond mother and her happy child. The gushing tear, that half hides the smile of gladness—the quick and broken words of joy—none may tell. But let us learn the value and the power of humility and persevering love.

J. B. WALKER.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

METHODIST CHURCH LOTTERY,

AT CUTHBERT, GA.

Brother McTyeire:—I enclose you a handbill which speaks for itself. From this it will be seen that the Cuthbert Station, Georgia Conference, will for the future have business to transact which has heretofore been unknown in Quarterly Conferences.

I would suggest that, after they have transacted the ordinary business of a Quarterly Conference, they then adjourn to some "doggery," and request the barkeeper to open with prayer—and that they select a thorough graduate in the mysteries of gambling to turn the wheel for them. Of course, the P. E. of the District will preside on the interesting occasion, while the reverend Treasurer is on hand to make the disbursements.

But seriously, I presume this is a nice scheme of some unprincipled fellows to steal money from the credulous, whose morals do not forbid gambling in lotteries. But the cool impudence with which they use the name of the Methodist Church and her official board at Cuthbert station, is hard to beat. We presume, however, that they are careful not to do what they pretend is usually done—that is, to send their circulars principally to the ministers and official members of the Methodist Church. The copy I enclose you was sent to an irreligious young man in this village; the Methodist minister here was not favored with a copy.

During the late session of our State Legislature, a cool fellow, just fresh from Yankeedom, asked for a lottery to enable him to erect a monument to the Hon. Wm. H. King, late Vice President of the United States. This, of course, was done without consulting the relatives of the deceased statesman. It was certainly a rare specimen of Yankee coolness. But those fellows who are secretly sending round their circulars for a lottery to be drawn in Cuthbert, Ga, for the endowment of a Methodist Female College in that place, and representing the whole business as being under the "direction of the Quarterly Conference of the Cuthbert Station, Georgia Conference," are a long distance ahead of our Alabama Yankee.

Those fellows must belong to the same family with the shrewd man, recently arrested in Mobile, who sent letters to many of our business men in the interior, informing them that "a box of their goods" had been shipped to his care, the charges upon which were five dollars—a number were caught, but the rogue was soon found out and arrested.

By publishing this you may prevent some "green ones" from being caught.

Yours, J. E. NEWMAN.

MERIT.—The labor of a whole life directed to the object of establishing a merit of our own, will only widen our distance from peace; and we know of nothing that will send this visitant to our agitated bosoms but a firm and simple reliance on the declarations of the gospel.—Dr. Chalmers.

MIRACLES.—It is a significant fact that in the regions were Christ's miracles were wrought their reality was not denied, though they were ascribed to other than divine agency.

The ordinance of the Lord's Supper is like a tree hung full of fruit; but none of this fruit will fall unless shaken by the hand of prayer.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The N. O. Christian Advocate.

WHERE—go on per annum, in advance.

NEW ORLEANS:

SATURDAY, APRIL 26, 1856.

HARPER FOR MAY.—We are indebted to H. D. McGinnis, 86 Camp street, for this always welcome Magazine. It presents an attractive table of contents. We have some new books from the same house, too late to notice. They will appear next week.

WHAT NAME?—A subscriber of Columbus, Miss., sends us six dollars, without his name.

A Day of Fasting and Prayer.

By the resolutions appended, it will be seen that the Louisiana Conference, at its last session, recommended the observance of the first Friday in May as a day of fasting and of prayer. This recommendation is usual, and for this reason it is often forgotten. We cannot think that it was designed as a mere display of wordy piety, but an earnest expression of the importance of special prayer to specific objects.

These objects are two: First, for an increase of laborers. We need them; and it is Scriptural to pray the Lord of the harvest to send them forth. And, second, that "the work of God may be revived." "Oh! Lord, revive thy work," is to be one of the burdens of our special prayer.

We sincerely hope that the coming Friday will be devoted to this purpose, and that services will be held in all the churches within the bounds of the Conference. Let the preachers and the people offer their prayers and supplications at the public altars and in secret:

1. RESOLVED, That we find cause for joy and gratitude to God for the harmonious session we have enjoyed and the gracious influences that have attended our religious exercises during the Conference, and that we will look hereafter to our Conference session with expecting to be re-baptised with power from on high, that we may be better able to go to our several fields of labor in the fullness of the gospel of Christ.

2. That we are grateful to God for an answer to our prayers for the increase of laborers; but as the field is large and more laborers needed, we will set apart the first Friday in May next for fasting and prayer, that the work of God may be revived, and that more laborers may still be sent to this part of his vineyard.

Model Preacher and Model People.

Under this heading we find the following, in a late number of the Christian Advocate:—

I place at your disposal an extract of a letter received a few days ago from a member of the Western Virginia Conference of the M. E. Church, South. The letter refers to the work of last Conference year—

Number received into the Church—
White	237
Colored	37
	274
Number baptised—
Adults	48
Infants	30
Colored	8
	86
Number of marriages, 9; fees	$45
Quarterage claim; received in full	300
Table expenses, received in full	200
Presents received by myself—
One suit of clothes, L. D. B.	40
Sundry smaller presents	10
Presents received by my wife—
7 dresses	$15
Sundries	8— 23
One pair of canary birds, by Mrs C. W.	5
Presents received by the babe—
32 dresses	$16
1 cradle, by Mrs. K.	5— 21

The babe, Mary Mildred, was made a life member of the Missionary Society at Conference.

Amount of missionary money $262 50

The condition of the circuit is good; and we commence the present year under flattering auspices. Up to this time we have received fifty-one into the Church. We have had two gracious revivals. I have married three couples—fees, $35—and expect to marry another couple in a few days, for which I expect to get a good fee. We are keeping house, and have everything that is good. I have taken an orphan boy to educate. He has no relations in the United States. He has had the misfortune to lose his left arm, and is a sprightly boy. I hope God will convert and call him to the ministry. If so, I shall be more than paid for my trouble and expense.

The Colored Man at the South.

The New York Observer publishes the following, from a letter received from Rev. E. J. Pierce, a missionary of the American Board, at the Gaboon Mission, in Africa. Speaking of Dr. Adams' "South Side View of Slavery," he says:—

"Doubtless you hear from many with respect to this book, and from many parts of our country, and it may be, from different parts of the world; but I will venture to say, not from many parts of Africa. I think, at times, my companion (Rev. J. Best) and myself are ready to exclaim, 'Would that all Africa were at the South!' Would that tribes and villages of these poor people could be induced to emigrate to our Southern country, and be placed under the influences which the slaves enjoy. My brother thinks that he would rather run the risk of a good or a bad master, and be a slave at the South, than to be as one of these heathen people. He refers, when he thus speaks, both to his temporal and eternal welfare. If the North and South would only work together in love, and adopt the plan of colonizing this part of the country with free blacks from the North and freed men from the South, and for the colored man at home how good it would be! We must change our manner and tone in regard to the South, and study ways to accomplish it. May the Lord make that book the instrument of doing much to effect this change."

GENTILITY.—Gentility consists not in birth, wealth, manners or fashion, but in a high sense of honor and a determination to do what is right to the best of our ability, under all circumstances—that is, "to do justice, to love mercy, and walk humbly before God."

METHODIST PRESS.

The Memphis Advocate has a leader upon Christian holiness, and the connection of this doctrine with revivals. We cordially agree with the writer. Nothing would give greater impetus to revivals than the frequent statement and vindication of this doctrine. As a peculiar and distinct work Christian holiness is losing the prominence which it held with us, and our standard writers during the early time of our history.

Revival influence invariably follows the clear and pointed preaching of entire sanctification.

What this doctrine is, every Methodist preacher ought to know, when it is so explicitly taught in Fletcher and Wesley, and so pointedly set forth in the question to candidates for ordination: "Do you expect to be made perfect in love in this life? Are you groaning for it?" My dear brother, after answering that question in the affirmative, how can you so mystify the old Wesleyan doctrine of perfect love by characterizing it as only a gradual dying unto sin? How can perfect love dwell in the heart which is not entirely dead to the least and last remains of sin?

The doctrine of entire sanctification teaches that after we are justified and regenerated there still lingers (in most cases) the remains of pride, anger and lust in the soul; that these will also be purged away by the Holy Ghost, on the simple condition of faith in the blood of Christ, and that the believer will also receive the Spirit's testimony to this fact of entire purification. Sin then no longer finds a place in the soul, which is sweetly filled with the perfect peace and love of God.

My brother, do you want a revival? That is the doctrine you ought to preach and urge upon every individual of your charge. Let it be an earnest, constant object with you to number, as the seals of your ministry, well-defined cases of entire sanctification, as well as of conversion.

A man is most likely to reap what he especially sows for. If in making up your calculation of results to your year's labor you do not embrace the work of entire sanctification as a prominent item, looking upon it as an incidental matter, which is welcome if it comes, but will not be sadly missed if it comes not, of course you will not be disappointed if you come upon no cases of entire sanctification in your ministerial calls.

If you would see the work of entire sanctification in active progress, you must detote yourself to it. You must not make it a mere doctrinal theme, a point in your creed to be defended when Methodism is assailed on account of it. Here indeed lies, we fear, the secret of the infrequency of this blessed work, at this day, in the Church. There are too many who are more ambitious of showing their polemical skill in defending the Wesleyan doctrine of holiness than of proving their piety by advocating its practical experience in the Church. Others, again, there may be, who subscribe to it in order to complete their body of systematic theology, and then give themselves no further concern in regard to its practical results.

In all this there is a gross inconsistency. Those guilty of it may apply to themselves the declaration of Paul, "Though I have all knowledge," and yet "lack charity, it profiteth me nothing."

Would you have a revival? Present and enforce the doctrine of the distinct blessing of perfect love, needed by all, and to be obtained by all, by a simple act of faith, claiming that God can, will and does cleanse and thoroughly sanctify, for Christ's sake.

In another column is a communication on the Church lottery. The editor of the Southern has a long article on the same subject. Here is an extract:—

The plan is this. Six thousand agents are apdointed, (by receiving the circular,) who are requested to raise $20 each. This makes $120,000. Of this $45,000 is to be retained by the college, and $75,000 to be returned as premiums—the highest, $5,000; then three, two and one thousand dollar premiums, and so on down to five dollars. The number of premiums is 5,999; and that each of the 6,000 agents may receive something, $1,000 is given to him or her (for the ladies are invited to aid) who gets no one of these premiums. Who is to have these premiums is to be determined by the amounts remitted by the 15th of next August. The largest remittance commands the $5,000, and so on down until the 5,999 agents are rewarded; and the $1,000 extra premium is then to be given to him who has received none, provided he has sent in as much as $4 79. The committee of award is to be selected by a Quarterly Conference of the M. E. Church, South! Whatever is left to the college is to form an endowment fund to be invested for sustaining and educating ten daughters of Methodist itinerants, to be chosen by annual conferences—the institution being under the care, it is said, of the Georgia Conference. If so, we beg that Conference to take better care of her institutions, and not let them fall upon any such wild and inexcusable schemes for raising money as this is. We have nothing to say about the financial weakness of the plan, though we might urge much. It is the moral influence of it we are concerned with, and we must condemn it in toto.

There is no valid excuse for this thing—though we are satisfied that our brethren thought there was. We hope they will announce publicly, at once, that they have reconsidered the matter, and withdraw the circulars. We protest against it, in the name of the Church—as a member of the Georgia Conference, we repudiate it.

J. E. Ferguson, writing to the Texas Christian Advocate, calls for recruits. Will not this call reach the consciences of some young men who have but lately entered upon the work of the ministry?

WHO WILL GO FOR I'S?

MR. EDITOR:—In the year 1849 Rev. N. A. Cravens was sent by one of our bishops to Brownsville, on the Rio Grande, and under his ministry many were gathered into the Church and a house of worship built. At the end of two years he was removed, and the place was left unsupplied for two years. The sheep without a shepherd did not do well. Some moved away, and others joined other churches, and some went back to the way of sin. In 1854 the place was supplied by Rev. O. M. Addison; under his administration the church was reorganized, the house repaired, but no preacher was sent to succeed him, and the place has no Methodist preacher. Now who will go for us, to build up the church again, and prepare himself to enter Mexico with the gospel? This is one of the most favorable points for future operations in Mexico. We want a young man, or men, to go out there, to stay until they learn the language and become familiar with the manners and customs of the Mexicans. And not only prepare to preach the gospel to the natives, but to the Americans, who are there in considerable numbers, in the valley of the Rio Grande at various points. This matter has been before the public before, but we want it kept before the public till they see and feel its importance. And we especially commend it to the serious consideration of our bishops, and the General Mission Committee to meet at Nashville in April. And we request all our Church papers to give this one insertion, that our Zion, in all her borders, may pray the Lord of the harvest for laborers to occupy this truly moral waste.

Methodist Tract Society of New Orleans.

We are indebted to the President, W. H. Foster, Esq., for the Annual Report of the Tract Society of New Orleans. The period embraced in the report is less than a year—extending from June 1, 1855, to April 1, 1856.

The Society was organized in March of last year, but did not get into operation until the date mentioned. From the report we notice that this society has employed two colporteurs, who have been actively engaged in the distribution of tracts, books and bibles within the limits of the city.

Besides these regular colporteurs, many voluntary distributors, from the several Methodist Churches, have been engaged in the work. Altogether, 244,908 pages of tracts have been distributed. Books have been sold to the amount of $462 02, and donated to the amount of $42 03. Bibles have been sold to the amount of $80 20, and donated to the amount of $13 51.

The colporteurs and distributors report having visited 7,850 families. This, we presume, is the number of visits, and that some families have been visited more than once. Three hundred and fifty families have been prayed with, 67 persons induced to attend church, and 106 Sunday School children secured. The report upon the last points is imperfect. Probably a good deal more has been done than the figures indicate.

This report is rather gratifying—not that the results are satisfactory, but that it shows that something has been done, and is still doing. The society, thus far, has been cramped in its operations, for want of money and books. The President informs us that it is impossible to obtain the latter in quantities to meet the demand. Cannot the Tract Department at Nashville help this? And will not the liberal friends of the very best of enterprises see that the funds are replenished? New Orleans is the best field in the world for tract distribution, and this mode of evangelical culture is the most efficient that can be adopted.

We have before us a copy of the Constitution and By-Laws of the Society. It is thoroughly and efficiently organized, with a competent Board of officers and managers. At some future time we shall take occasion to present our readers the Constitution and By-Laws. Meanwhile, let us remember the cause.

Centenary College, Jackson, La.

Rev. W. H. Watkins writes as follows of the meeting of the Joint Board, on the 10th inst.

The members of the Board from Mississippi were all present, and three from Louisiana.

We found the excavations all made for the centre building, and the workmen busy hiding our brick away in the foundation of the southwest wing. This looked a little premature—still it was well; for, seeing the good work commenced, the Board authorized its Building Committee to confirm the contract and expend, if need be, fifty-seven thousand dollars in completing the building.

Nine thousand dollars were at once subscribed in aid of the work and the Board seemed in good earnest to prosecute it to its completion.

The plan was drawn by Mr. Simpson, who is employed to superintend the erection of the building, and Messrs. Wall & Thomson have contracted for the work.

The Board appointed a committee to prepare an address to the friends of education, setting forth the claims, necessities and promises of the college.

They also authorised the Building Committee to procure a corner stone, which is to be laid during the commencement exercises, and elected Rev. C. K. Marshall to deliver an address on that important occasion.

They also elected Rev. J. C. Keener to preach the next annual sermon. You will remember that Rev. Wm. Hyer, since deceased, was chosen by the Board in July last.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

LETTER FROM BISHOP KAVANAUGH.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18, 1856.

Rev. H. N. McTyeire—

DEAR BROTHER: I did not reach this place until on the afternoon of the 1st inst., and then learned for the first time that the Conference had closed its session on the evening of the previous Tuesday. Though I had occasion to suppose that this would be the case, yet I felt sad to know that I was too late.

I had the satisfaction, however, to learn that the session of the Conference was harmonious, pleasant and profitable. Brother Gober was elected to preside over the deliberations of the Conference, which he did to the general satisfaction of that body. There was a more than usual spiritual enjoyment among the ministers and people; the former, especially, were refreshed and encouraged.

I presume that ere this you have met with the appointments of the Conference, as they were very courteously published in the paper of our Northern brethren of this city, who, during the Conference and since, demeaned themselves towards us as brethren in Christ.

There were admitted on trial at this session of the Conference six preachers, and but one location. The nett increase of members is a little less than two hundred. Some portions of the work had been very much refreshed during the past year. The great desideratum is a good church edifice in the city of San Francisco. It is hoped, on the part of some, that this object may be attained the present year.

I have been but too recently in the country to be entitled to a satisfactory judgment as to the general aspect of the work here. I have spent one week in San Francisco, one day across the bay in Oakland, and nearly a week in the Santa Clara Valley, dividing the time between Santa Clara and San Jose. Preached three times in the former and twice in the latter place. Here as in every place that I have been in California, the attention of the people is as steady to the discourse of the preacher, and their manners in the congregation as good, from the opening of the service to the last word of the benediction, as I have ever seen in my life. Where wickedness is so general and rife, these facts are remarkable.

In the Valley of Santa Clara I had the refreshing privilege of meeting some of my relatives in the family of Dr. A. B. Caldwell, and of mingling in the family of Dr. Lewis Bascom, the youngest brother of our lamented Bishop. There is much in Dr. Bascom, in person and manners, to remind you of the Bishop, and especially in the enunciation of words and the intonation of voice. A man has to be dull indeed who is not well entertained by the Doctor and his gifted wife. The valley here is generally without timber, level, and very fertile. I was quite surprised to find the plain very full of gray squirrels, and that they burrow in the ground; and occasionally you come to numerous holes, where they appear to burrow in neighborhoods; and what added to my astonishment was the guardianship which a little owl takes over the squirrel, and which also burrows with the squirrel. While the squirrel is out, indulging in his sports or gathering his food, the sage-looking little owl (and it is not unusual for two to be together) takes his stand by the side of the hole, and watches the safety of the rambler; and, on the appearance of danger, will give the alarm by a scream, and fly up and flutter over the hole; and if this does not call the squirrel to his place, the Doctor says that he has seen the owl go after the squirrel, and with his wings whip the incautious fellow to his hole. I always admired the sagacious looks of the owl, but did not know whether he maintained his reputation for thoughtfulness by a dignified silence, or whether he had ever really developed so much sagacity as this dominion over other animals has disclosed. And the squirrel is not the only animal, I am told, that he has succeeded in controlling. He dens with the prairie dog and the rattlesnake, and it is said, that he also associates the rattlesnake with the squirrel. And he proves himself entitled to all the confidence reposed in him by those whom he governs. It is said that the prairie dog, with his associates, lives in towns of little hillocks and holes. Whether this is the taste of the dog, the owl or the snake, or the result of consultation, I am not informed.

Mrs. K. and our traveling companions all reached here in health, though we suffered much from heat in the tropical regions. More anon.

As ever, yours,

H. N. KAVANAUGH.

TO SHAKE OFF TROUBLE.—Set about doing good to somebody; put on your hat and go and visit the poor; inquire into their wants and minister unto them. Seek out the desolate and oppressed, and tell them of the consolation of religion. I have often tried this, and found it the best medicine for a heavy heart.

Howard.

Notices of New Books.

THE NORTH BRITISH REVIEW, FOR FEBRUARY—Leonard Scott & Co., New York: 1856.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

1. France and Scotland.
2. Dr. George Wilson and Colour Blindness.
3. Scottish Schools for the Middle Classes.
4. Bunsen's Signs of the Times.
5. Mettray and Red Hill.
6. Ben Johnson.
7. Recent sermons—Scotch, English and Irish.
8. Hotels.
9. Italian character and Italian prospects.

THE ELEMENTS OF NATURAL PHILOSOPHY. Copiously illustrated by familiar experiments, and embracing descriptions of instruments, with directions for using. Designed for the use of schools and academies. By A. W. Sprague, A. M. With 280 engravings. Boston: Phillips, Sampson & Co., 1856.

This is a 12mo. of 363 pages, well bound, clear, large type, and copiously illustrated. For sale at B. M. Norman's, 14 Camp street.

THE WESLEYAN SACRED HARP—A collection of choice tunes and hymns for prayer, class and camp meetings, chorus and congregational singing. By Rev. W. McDonald and L. Hubbard, Esq. Boston: J. P. Jewett & Co., 1856.

This is a work every way desirable. The lovers of Methodist Psalmody will be gratified by it. See the publisher's advertisement, in another column.

MEMOIR OF REGINALD HEBER, D. D., Bishop of Calcutta. By his Widow. Abridged by a clergyman. Boston: John P. Jewett & Co. 348 pages, 12mo.

The name of Heber is of itself sufficient to secure for this book an extensive sale. It is made up, for the most part, of his own choicest letters and poetry. For sale at B. M. Norman's, 14 Camp street.

MUSIC.—The Modern School for the Piano-Forte. Composed and compiled from the works of the most eminent modern and classical authors and teachers; comprising a complete course of instruction, based upon a new principle, progressive in its character, with anatomical illustrations of the hands, showing the use of their muscles and tendons in playing the piano. By Nathan Richardson.

The First Book for the Piano Forte, written expressly for the use of beginners, and fingered upon the European principle, as found in Richardson's celebrated Modern School for the Piano Forte. By Adolphe Le Carpenter.

The Juniata Ballads—by Marion Dix Sullivan.

Manual of Harmony—being an elementary treatise of the principles of Thorough Bass, by J. C. D. Parker, A. B. All published by Nathan Richardson, Boston.

BOOK EDITOR'S DEPARTMENT.

NEW BOOKS.

SUCCESSFUL MEN OF MODERN TIMES.—Revised by Thos. O. Summers, D. D. Nashville: Stevenson & Owen. pp. 186—price 30 cents.

The sketches of successful men drawn in this volume are judicious, and deserve more than a cursory notice. The young especially should study the examples here brought to view, in order that they may be induced to enter upon and prosecute to a successful issue some honorable and useful vocation in life. To promote this end, this work, originally published by the Religious Tract Society of London, has been carefully revised for the present edition. The contents are as follows: A few words about success in general—Successful Merchants, Tradesmen and Manufacturers—Successful Engineers and Inventors—Successful Artists, Painters and Sculptors—Successful Poets, Scholars and Men of Science—Successful public Men—Successful Warriors and Philanthropists—Conclusion.

GLANCES AT THE BALL WE LIVE ON.—By Miss Emily Taylor. Revised by T. O. Summers, D. D. Nashville: Stevenson & Owen, 1856.

Whether or not any other "ball" be inhabited by intelligent beings, we cannot say. A "ball" called Earth is inhabited, and that by some ten hundred millions of human beings, and we are of that number. Can anything be more reasonable than that we should make ourselves acquainted with our own home and with our fellow-lodgers? Can anything be more interesting? We can well surmise what is the answer which our young friends will give to these questions, and we can assure them that if they want a guide in their travels over this "terestrial ball," they will find a very safe and pleasant one in the author of this book. This work, by the way, has gone through a great many editions both sides the water; but we have carefully revised it, making some slight additions, and enhancing its interest by pictorial illustration. It is too cheap at twenty-five cents, but it is put at that price in order to take rank with The Desert, Prairie, Mountain, Valley, River and Sea, a series of seven beautiful and interesting volumes which ought to be in every child's library.

THE THREE SISTERS.—A brief sketch of the lives and death of Ann Eliza, Hester Jane and Laura Washington, daughters of Rev. Hartwell J. Perry of the Kentucky Conference of the M. E. Church, South, who were burned to death in May, 1854. Edited by T. O. Summers, D. D. Nashville: Stevenson & Owen, 1856. pp. 135.

This is a tribute of parental affection to the memory of three lovely daughters, who in a most tragical manner were hastened from earth to their mansions in heaven. The reader will not only sympathize with the stricken and bereaved father, but also admire that grace which enabled the three sisters, under circumstances so fearful, to "pass through death triumphant home." In preparing this brief sketch for the press the editor has made no material changes in the language of the author, coming as it does from the depths of his heart. We hope the valuable lessons inculcated in this volume will not be lost on the reader—particularly the youthful reader, for whose special benefit it has been prepared.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

An Error—Its Correction.

MOSCOW, ALA., April 3, 1856.

Mr. Editor:—I have just received the Minutes of the Alabama Conference, held in Eutaw, Ala., December 5, 1855, and in looking over the Report of the Treasurer of the Alabama Conference Missionary Society, I see under the caption, "From Circuits," "Glennville—by Rev. J. W. Shores, $10." Now that is an error. How it happened I know not, but I can conjecture. I think the amount paid by me for Glennville was included in the reported amount from Hatchetchubbee Colored Mission, by Rev. L. Patterson. The amount I paid to the Treasurer, O. R. Blue, was $170 40. This amount subtracted from $337 90—the amount reported from Hatchetchubbee mission—would leave $167 50, which, I think, was the amount paid to Rev. L. Patterson on the mission. This explanation I deem due to Glennville Circuit.

While upon the subject, I would remark that $96 of the amount paid Rev. L. Patterson, and $110 of the amount paid Rev. W. H. Carter, on Glennville Colored Mission, were paid by members of the Glennville Circuit; which, when added to $170 40, reported by me, make $376 40 paid by the Glennville Circuit for the missionary cause.

Respectfully, J. W. SHORES.

The Test of Adam's Obedience.

Why did God test the fidelity of Adam by prohibiting the fruit of the "tree of knowledge of good and evil?" This inquiry is so often put by inquisitive minds, is pertinently answered by Dr. Simon Patrick, in his note on Genesis ii, 17. He says:—

"But still some ask, why should his disobedience be tried in such an instance as this? Not considering that the experiment of it could scarce have been made in any of the moral precepts; which there was no occasion to violate. For what shall tempt him to idolatry or to take God's name in vain, or to murder his wife? How was it possible to commit adultery, when there was nobody but he and she in the world? How could he steal, or what room was there then for coveting, when God had put him in possession of all things? It had been in vain to forbid that which could not be done; and it had not been virtue to abstain from that to which there was no temptation, but from that which invited him to transgress."

Embalming.

The habit, custom, or art of embalming the bodies of the dead, was one of the first and most notable of all the old Egyptian practices. References in the Scriptures induce, if they do not fully authorize the belief, that even then the remains of friends were so preserved. Pettigrew who, in 1834, published at London a long account of Egyptian mummies, has endeavored to give some account of the method by which it was accomplished, so that those who saw the sun when Thebes was as great and as gay a capital as Paris now is, have all their features preserved; and, when unwound from the cerements that wrap them, have a look of torpid humanity. Not long ago one of these antediluvian memeatos was carried through our country as a show.

The old secret for wrestling with decay and keeping the particles of our earth-shell together, has died out, but in our own city a new inventor has sprung up—Mr. Casanave—who claims to have discovered a means by which decay can be prevented. The method is by injecting the veins and arteries with some peculiar preparation that he has found out. We saw yesterday at his establishment, No. 37 Marais street, the body of a gentleman who died on the 6th of April, as shown by a certificate of Dr. Cenas, and it was as fresh and clean as though but a day old. The method of Mr. Casanave is the same as that of Dr. Holmes, of New York city, and has been highly commended there. We have before us a small pamphlet, containing the certificates and recommendations of physicians and undertakers, and stating that bodies thus embalmed will keep free from decomposition in any place or climate. Those whose friends or relatives have died here, and who wish to transport their bodies for burial elsewhere, can do so with ease by the instrumentality of this process; and those bodies which, having been embalmed in this manner, are deposited in the vaults of our city cemeteries, will almost outlast their tombs. No living creature can prey upon them—not a fly, without paying the penalty of death for disregarding its awful sacredness.

It is said that Mrs. Stowe, the author of Uncle Tom's Cabin, will soon put to press a work illustrating the alleged degradation of the poor white population of the South. She expects to make it appear that Uncle Tom's miseries are but part of the results of slavery, his white brethren keeping him company in the same.

THE CURRENT WEEK.

Glittering as it goes, and shining with increasing lustre as it rises, the year mounts upward. Every leaf is greener and more gorgeous; every bud swells with a fuller animation; every bird sings a sweeter song. The miserere for the dead past has died in a cry of triumphale for the living present and the prophetic future.

Monday, April 21.—Sts. Anselm, Anastasius II and III, are the patrons of the day, which for its bosom ornament and decoration, wears the cyprus narcisse, dedicated to the first-named saint.

In 753, B. C., Romulus commenced the building of Rome to which he gave his name; and on the day slew his brother Remus for ridiculing the slightness of his walls.

In 323, B. C., Alexander the Great, died: whose life and achievements are too well known to need even an outline of them; who conquered all of the then known world, sought out and defeated unknown nations, and finally died at the early age of thirty from a drunken orgy.

Peter Abelard, celebrated for his platonic correspondence with Heloise, which ripened into an illicit intercourse as famous as any great deed of fame, died in 1142. He was aged sixty-three.

Tuesday, April 22.—The list of saints for the day would fill a column. St. Theodorus and his host seem to be the most important.

The wood crowfoot, dedicated to St. Rufus, is the plant.

The world's chronicles record no great nor peculiarly brilliant achievements to illustrate the four and twenty hours lying within the limits of the day.

In 1793, the President of the United States issued his proclamation of neutrality with regard to the war existing between France and England.

Wednesday, April 23.—St. George, the martyr England's patron saint, St. Gerard and St. Ibar or Ivor, are the patrons of the day.

The harebell, dedicated to St. George, is the plant.

The great query, who was St. George? has never been answered, and his existence, like that of Arthur and his round table knights, is a myth not offering many opportunities for solution.

In 1616, Miguel Cervantes de Saavedra, author of Don Quixote, died.

On the same day and in the same year with Cervantes, William Shakspeare died in England. It was the anniversary of his fifty-second birthday.

In 1838, the steamships Sirius and Great Western arrived at New York. Both left Europe on the 4th of April—one from Cork, the other from Bristol.

Thursday, April 24.—Sts. Fidelis, Mellitus, Bona and Hoda, between 624 and 1067, are the guardians of the day.

The blackthorn, dedicated to St. Fidelis, is the emblem.

In 1846, Gen. Arista, commander of the army of the North in Mexico, announced to Gen. Taylor that "he considered hostilities had commenced, and that he should continue them."

On this day, in 1845, Capt. Thornton and his command, consisting of sixty-three dragoons, were all hushed. Sixteen were killed and wounded, and the remainder were taken prisoners.

Friday, April 25.—St. Mark, Evangelist, and a number of others are the day's saints.

The clarimond tulip, dedicated to St. Mark, is the emblem.

In 1595, Torquatus Tasso, an Italian poet and author of an epic poem entitled "Jerusalem Delivered," as well as of "Aminta," and many small poems, died. He was born at Sorrento, in 1544.

In 1800, William Cowper died at Norfolk, England. He was born Nov. 26, 1731, and commenced writing poetry at the mature age of 50. The gentle sadness and philosophy which distinguishes all of his writings as well as the piety that breathes through them, has caused him to be endeared in many a household.

In 1813, Gen. Dearborn embarked with 1700 men in a flotilla, under the command of Commodore Chauncey, from Sackett's Harbor, New York, to attack the city of York, the capitol of Upper Canada, where was the great magazine of British stores for the supply of Western forts and forces.

Saturday April 26.—Sts. Clitus, Marcellinus, Richarius and Pascharius are the guardians of the day.

The yellow erysemum, dedicated to St. Richarius is the emblem.

In 1716, Lord Somers, Lord Chancellor of England, who, at various times, held many important posts and offices of high trust, died. He has been called the great Lord Somers in order to distinguish him from others of the same family. Macaulay alludes to him in an eulogistic manner.

The flotilla of General Dearborn, in 1813, arrived at York in Canada and commenced debarkation.

Sunday, April 27.—St. Anthimus and many other martyrs at Nicomedia, A. D. 303; St. Anastasius, Pope, A. D. 401; and St. Zita, A. D. 1278, are the accredited and acknowledged tutelar deities of the day.

The great daffodil, dedicated to St. Anastasius is the emblem.

Prince Leopold, of Brunswick, was drowned by the waters of Frankfort-upon-the-Oder, in 1785, while engaged in the uncommonly princely act of succoring the inhabitants of an overflowed village.

Sir William Jones, the eminent orientalist and great scholar, died in 1794, aged 48.

James Bruce, the Abyssinian traveler and explorer, died in 1794, by falling down the stairs of his own house.

General Dearborn's flotilla, in 1813, debarked at two miles west of the enemy's works, at York, Canada. The British, under Gen. Sheafe, were driven into garrison, which Gen. Pike proceeded to attack. Pike and one hundred of his men were killed by the explosion. The troops, however, moved on and took the place.

Jackson Railroad.

The great event of the season—one which has consumed considerable ink and many quires of paper—one that has drawn largely on the public for some weeks past—came off yesterday. From the great experience, sagacity and keenness of the opposing parties, we confidently relied on something approaching a contest worthy the plains of Chalmette or the field of Waterloo. We are grieved to be compelled to admit a great disappointment. We are at a loss to reconcile the boldness and fierceness of the besieged, with the very weak defense they made against the assaults of the besiegers. In fine, it was no battle at all. We were congratulating ourselves at an early hour yesterday on the great and masterly achievement we would have to chronicle this morning, whether by the outs or the ins it was a matter of only momentary consideration, so long as the great object at stake should be carried out and completed. We cared but little which of the rival parties should have the honor of completing the Herculean task of opening the road to Jackson, Mississippi. We honestly and conscientiously believe that both parties have the general welfare and prosperity of the city at heart, and have, with much grief and sorrow, witnessed the acrimony and ill-feeling which have arisen within the last two years, relative to this great undertaking. We trust now all asperities will cease, and that every one who takes an interest in the prosperity of New Orleans will lend a helping hand towards the desired object. We consider the Board of Directors of the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad, which was elected yesterday, as under an implied obligation to have the road completed to Jackson by the first of July, 1857; and, considering them as almost personally responsible, we give the result of the election as held yesterday. It will be seen they are all good and true men—all old and respected residents; and we trust they enter on their duties with full knowledge of the responsibilities they assume, and with a full determination to carry out the mandates of the stockholders, the desires and wishes of the community.

[Daily Crescent.

MERRIMAC.—The war steamer Merrimac, on her late trial trip from Boston to Norfolk, exercised her 8 inch guns, (200 pounders) of which she carries forty. Shells were fired at two miles range, and nearly all exploded about two feet under water, producing terrible commotion. Three shots out of four it is estimated by the ordnance officers, would sink any ship at that distance. In order to obviate the local attraction of the iron guns, the compasses of the Merrimac are fitted with the "improvement" of Capt. Morris.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Notice.—Second Round of Quarterly Meetings on the Lake Providence District—

Waterproof and St. Joseph circuit, at St. Joseph, May 3, 4.
Trinity circuit, at New Chapel, May 17, 18.
Bend Prairie circuit, at Hurricane Meeting-House, May 24, 25.
Lake Providence circuit, at Lake Providence, May 31 and June 1.
Swan Lake circuit, at Swan Lake, June 7, 8.
Richmond circuit, at Milliken's Bend, June 28, 29.
Monticello circuit, July 5, 6.*
Bend River circuit, July 12, 13.*
Lake Providence, La. N. A. CRAVENS.

* Places not yet appointed.

Notice.—Mr. Editor: As I have been interrogated upon the subject by one who expects to be before the Committee of the Third Year at the next session of the Alabama Conference, in the absence of the rest of the committee, for the sake of uniformity and convenience in this examination, allow me to recommend to the class of that year the use of Whatley's Rhetoric as the the text book upon that subject. J. L. COTTON, Chairman.

Eufaula, Ala. 1t.

Notice.—To the Members of the Mississippi Conference.—Dear Brethren: Will you take pains to get the names of all the life members in the bounds of your respective charges, as soon as possible, and send me a list of them? I have no other means of complying with Dr. Schon's request. It is a matter of some importance, and requires dispatch. I hope soon to be able to supply you with certificates. Send, also, the names of any who have died since being made members.

W. P. BARTON,
Secretary Missionary Society, Miss. Conf.

Yazoo City, April 3, 1856. 1t

Notice—Second Round Quarterly Meetings, Opelousas District, Louisiana Conference:—

North Rapides Circuit, at Wiley's School-House, May 10, 11.
Harrisonburg Circuit, at Harrisonburg, May 17, 18.
Columbia Circuit, at Black Bayou Church, May 24, 25.
Chicot Circuit, at Bayou DeGlaise, June 7, 8.
Opelousas Circuit, at Plaquemine Brulie, June 21, 22.
New Iberia Circuit, at Queue de Tortue, June 28, 29.
Franklin and Pattersonville, at Pattersonville, July 5, 6.

P. M. GOODWYN, P. E.

MARRIAGES.

On the 9th April, by Rev. H. Avery, on Gros Tete, Mr. S. B. BAILEY to Miss MARGARET HUTCHES, all of this State, and parish of Iberville.

On the 1st April, by Rev. J. D. Stewart, of Tennessee Conference, Rev. H. A. BOURLAND, of Ballard county, Ky., to Miss E. A. JOHNSTON, of Hardin county, Tenn.

On the 25th March, by Rev. John B. Bowen, in Covington, La., Mr. ARTHUR K. ISOM to Miss C. C. DEVENPORT.

On the 20th April, by Rev. John B. Bowen, in Covington, La., Mr. F. W. CARR to Miss JULIA ALICE GAUSE.

On the 15th April, by Rev. Calvin McGee, J. S. RASH, M. D., originally of Lunenburg county, Va., to Miss ELIZABETH ELLIOTT, of Pike county, Miss.

☞ Richmond Christian Advocate please copy.

DEATHS.

Died.—On the 24th March, after a lingering illness of several years, Mrs. E. M. PATTON, consort of Robert Patton.

The deceased was born in North Carolina; from thence her parents moved to Tennessee, where she married. From thence she removed to this place, where she professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, in which she lived an ornament until her death.

Her death was the most triumphant I ever witnessed. The heavenly world was near her at her departure. We mourn, but not as those who have no hope. Well may the Church at this place put on her mourning; for her place will be hard to fill. Few of her members walk as circumspectly as Sister Patton.

A FRIEND.

Elyton, Ala.

Died.—On the 11th March, after a very sudden illness, Mrs. AMANDA S. ROBY, second daughter of Francis and Sarah Rose.

She was a member of the M. E Church, and up to the period of her death led the life of a most exemplary Christian. Few knew her better than the writer, and her many noble and generous virtues won for her the universal regard of those around her: and it may be truly said of her that "none knew her but to love her, none named her but to praise." D.

For Mothers' Eyes.—Mothers who encourage their daughtees in superficial accomplishments and bold display, are often preparing for them a lifetime of chagrin and misery. On the other hand, when they are trained at home, by precept and example, in retiring, industrious, studious, virtuous habits, they are prepared to be useful and happy throughout life.

☞ If you are sick, the probability is that the root of your sufferings is in the stomach. From a weak stomach proceed dyspepsia, languor, oppression in the diaphragm, jaundice, headache, aches, bodily weakness, dimness of sight, heartburn, costiveness, dysentery, and a legion of other tormenting diseases. Indigestion produces thin blood, and therefore destroys the strength and vigor of the system. To restore the strength of the stomach, and enable it to throw off and dissolve forever all these tormenting and dangerous complaints, nothing is necessary but a persevering use of Hoofland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, Philadelphia. There is no mistake, no failure in their sanative effects. See advertisement. a7 1m

☞ A Masterpiece Outdone.—We have lately supposed that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was the Ultima Thule in its line, and that nothing real keen or would be invented which could at all surpass it in its fine points of excellence as a medicine. But we are confidently assured by those competent to judge on the subject, that Ayer's new Pills excel in high medical artistry even that widely celebrated embodiment of his skill. He has succeeded in making them not only pleasant to take, but powerful to cure the large class of complaints which require a purgative remedy. Lancaster Argus, Ky.

They are for sale by J. WRIGHT & CO.,
a19 2m and all city druggists.

☞ Hostetter's Bitters.—Since the award of numerous diplomas in favor of these celebrated Bitters, imitations have made their appearance, which we caution the public against, as they are represented to be the same in their medicinal effects as a trade, for which properties a committee of physicians gave the above award. Dr. J. Hostetter's Bitters, as heretofore, stand unrivalled for their medical powers in giving strength and vigor to a debilitated constitution; and, during this warm weather, we would advise every family to keep a supply on hand. Children, as well as adults, will find the benefit of a trial. For sale by John Wright & Co., 21 and 151 Chartres st., and O. D. Woodman, corner Magazine and Common streets.

a26 1t

The XXII Volume of the Southern Christian Advocate (improved and enlarged) will commence June 1st, 1856. Now is the time to subscribe. Terms, $2 per annum, paid in advance. If payment is delayed six months, $2 50—if one year, $3. When enlarged to the contemplated size it will be the largest religious weekly published in the South.

All Ministers of the M. E. Church, South, are empowered to act as Agents. They are allowed 12½ per cent. on all collections made and the paper is put to them at $1 25 per annum. The collection and forwarding of $10, entitles an Agent to the paper one year. Address H. E. MYERS, Editor,
Charleston, S. C.
a26 1jel

Winer's Canadian Vermifuge.—When a swarm of voracious creatures are in motion in the stomach and intestines, the sensitive lining of those organs is necessarily in a state of intense irritation. This irritation extends, sympathetically to the nerves, the brain and the skin, and affects the organs of respiration, and the condition of the blood. Terrible must be the mischief ensuing from the neglect of such a disease. Worms of all kinds, from the enormous Tape Worm to the Thread Worm, are dangerous to health and life. Remove them, then, and restore the organs they inhabit and irritate to a thorough condition, by using that the ultimate Specific WINER'S CANADIAN VERMIFUGE.

Be prompt and remember the name—"Winer's Canadian Vermifuge." This is the only article that can be depended on.

For sale in New Orleans, wholesale and retail, by
J. WRIGHT & CO.,
Nos. 21 and 151 Chartres street, sole proprietors.
☞ Sold by all the Druggists.

Three Days Later from Europe.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMER CAMBRIA.

Peace Treaty not Signed.

COTTON QUIET—BREADSTUFFS DROOPING.

The Royal mail steamship Cambria, from Liverpool March 29th, arrived at Halifax on the 14th of April, and left for Boston the same day.

The Cunard steamship America, from Boston, arrived at Liverpool at midnight on Wednesday, the 26th ult., and the Collins steamship Baltic, from New York at 7 A. M., on Friday, the 28th inst.

There is no news of the missing steamship Pacific.

The Peace Conference.

The Peace Conference met again on the 27th. The deliberations were said to be of an important character. It was confidently believed that a treaty of peace would be signed on the 29th, the day the Cambria sailed.

Napoleon had expected that the final settlement of the difficulties would have taken place sooner, and had ordered the guns of the Invalides to announce the conclusion of peace at the same time a Te Deum was celebrated for the birth of the Prince of Algiers, but Prussia's claim to the same footing of the other powers which was earnestly resisted by Lord Clarendon, caused delay. Lord Clarendon prevailed, and it was arranged that the allies shall sign one protocol and that the second protocol shall be drawn to be signed by the allies jointly.

The London Times dislikes the demonstrations in favor of peace, and intimates that the people of England will be discontented with the terms.

The armistice is not formally prolonged, but telegraphic dispatches have been sent not to renew hostilities without express orders.

The Crimea.

Advices from the Crimea to the 13th ult. state that the health of the French army had improved.

Several conflagrations had occurred at Eupatoria.

Turkey.

Omer Pacha had a long interview lately with the Turkish Ministry. He determines to resign if satisfaction is not accorded to him.

England.

The interest lately excited in regard to the difficulties with the United States has almost become extinct.

France.

The crew of the Russian frigate Diana, captured in the China Seas, had arrived in France.

A grand review of 100,000 men in Paris has been arranged to celebrate the signing of the treaty of peace.

It was rumored that the Emperor of Russia and Austria would visit Paris soon after the conclusion of peace.

Napoleon has determined to send an extensive expedition to colonise Madagascar, which England dislikes.

Italy.

The American Mediterranean squadron remained at Genoa at the latest accounts.

Germany.

The Assembly of Hamburg had rejected the project for a new constitution to be drawn up by the Germanic Diet.

Austria.

The differences between Austria and Rome had been mutually arranged.

Later from Texas.

By the arrival of the steamship Nautilus, Capt. J. L. Thompson, we have later dates from Brazos St. Iago and Galveston.

The news is comparatively unimportant.

The Indianola Bulletin, of the 19th, says that considerable stock has been taken in the Powderhorn Dredging Company, and that a speedy completion of the work is looked forward to.

Cotton is coming in well, although an immense quantity yet remains to come. Hides have arrived so freely as to cause a decline in prices. The weather is dry, with indications of rain, now very much needed.

The Mexicans are stated to be organized into bands of robbers and several of their depredations are mentioned.

Texas Items.

The San Antonio Ledger of the 12th says:

The weather continues to be delightful, and we trust that it will yet atone for the severity of the past winter. We have of late observed numerous cart loads of hides passing through town to the coast, and as many thousands of cattle have perished from cold and want of subsistence, we much fear that stock-raisers have suffered severely.

Black Cat, the only living child of the far-famed Tecumseh, says the Washington American, is now encamped, with a few followers, near that place.

Capt. Keeoly, of Brazoria county, is trying sea Island cotton as an experiment, and has planted seventy-five acres with seed from Florida.

The cotton crop, says the Columbia Democrat, is promising excellently well, but rain was much wanted.

At an election in Austin, on the 7th inst., for one Magistrate and two Aldermen, the American candidates were elected.

Ex-Governor Horton, and many others who have traveled over Texas, think there will be no sugar crop there this season. The sudden transition from winter to summer, without any intermediate pring weather, has been fatal to the cane.

Ashore.—A report is brought by a vessel from Sabine, that a brig was seen ashore on the coast, about twenty miles East of Point Bolivar. It is feared that this is the brig Mary Hamilton, from New York.

Trinity River.—Letters from Magnolia, of the 10th inst., represent the Trinity river as down low.

The amount of cotton yet to be forwarded from the Trinity valley is estimated at about 15,000 bales, and a rise in the river is very much desired, but many persons think there is little hope for one this season.

San Antonio and Mexican Gulf Railroad.—From the Indianola Bulletin Extra, of the 19th inst., we copy the following concerning the San Antonio and Mexican Gulf Railroad:

We have just learned, from the most undoubted and authentic source, that the railroad terminus of the San Antonio and Mexican Gulf Railroad, has been located at Indianola. Powderhorn, the lower part of the city, will be the locality for the depot. Col. Osgood has taken the contract from Indianola to Victoria at the rate of $19,250 per mile.

That the Directors have acted with discretion, and fully weighed the matter, is beyond doubt. The location that has so long fettered us is removed, and we may now look forward with confidence to the building up of a great commercial emporium. Business will concentrate, and we are bound to prosper.

Mr. Everett's Oration in Brooklyn.—We had the pleasure of hearing the Hon. Edward Everett deliver his oration or lecture on the character of Washington, in the Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, last evening. A finer, more intellectual and appreciative audience we have never seen, of such magnitude. The immense building was filled, although the committee, with the design of preventing an overcrowded auditory, fixed the price of tickets at a dollar. The Mayor presided. Upon the platform we noticed some of the most distinguished citizens of Brooklyn, both lay and clerical. Mr. Everett was enthusiastically greeted. He introduced his subject by some very felicitous allusions to the site of the "City of Churches," and many others were happily introduced in the course of the lecture. It is unnecessary to say anything of the lecture itself. Mr. Everett must have been gratified as a man by the cordial reception given to him, but still more, we can well conceive, as a patriot, by the glow of enthusiasm which ever and anon broke out into flame, which the noble sentiments he uttered enkindled in the breasts of his audience. At one time the emotion was so strong—for it was more strictly emotion than excitement—that it overleaped all restraint. Sedate clergymen on the platform, and young men and old in the audience, simultaneously sprang to their feet, and cheer after cheer resounded through the building. We know one at least, who felt it, in no irreverent sense, "good to be there." At the close, by a rising vote, a resolution of thanks to Mr. Everett was passed, and we have no hesitation in saying that a patriotic devotion to the Union of the glorious confederacy was awakened last night by that one voice of an intellectually and morally great man, that a thousand demagogues can never destroy or fritter away. And the twenty-five hundred sons and daughters of Washington will, from last evening, more than ever love and revere the memory and heed the counsels of their immortal father. [N. Y. Com. Advertiser, 14th.

Wool.—During the year 1855 there was imported into this country foreign woolen manufactures valued at twenty-four million four hundred and four thousand dollars. The duties paid on them would amount to over five million dollars. Could that wool have been brought into the country in the raw state, and duty free, and then manufactured here, more than sixteen million dollars would have been saved to the country, and while the wool growers would not have been injured by it, the woolen manufacture at home would have been greatly stimulated and benefitted. Employment would have been provided for thousands of hands, our indebtedness abroad diminished, and the amount of money in the country proportionably increased.

It is a singular fact that, with abundance of cheap lands, good breeds of sheep, and every facility for growing wool cheap, we have to pay to other countries from twenty-five to thirty million dollars every year for wool and woolens. In the year 1854 it was over thirty-five million dollars. The importation of wool and woolens is fast increasing. There is very little gained by selling provisions to other countries, if their price, and more than their price, is to be every year expended in buying woollens and silks. [Pittsburg Post.

Foreign News by the Washington.

The United States mail steamship Washington arrived at New York, on the 13th, bringing intelligence from Europe, via Southampton, to the 26th of March.

The British Admiralty have, in accordance with an appeal addressed to them through the Times, decided upon sending two steamers in search of the missing mail steamship Pacific. The ships are the Desperate and Tartarus, and were immediately dispatched.

Accounts from the Crimea states that the Allies have commenced the demolition of the inclosure around Sebastopol.

Ismael Pasha was said to be increasing the army of Anatolia. Gen. Mourakiff had received reinforcements by way of the Caspian Sea and Tiflis.

The Copenhagen correspondent of the London Times states that the Danish Commissary had submitted to the Copenhagen Conference the proposal for the capitalization of the Sound Dues, fixing the sum of 35,000,000 rix dollars as the minimum of the indemnity which Denmark claimed. The writer states further that the United States having declined taking any part in the Conference, the question would in all probability be resolved without their co-operation.

Advices from Persia state that Dost Mohammed had taken possession of Candahar, and that Persian troops were marching against him.

A telegraphic dispatch from Jassy states that a courier, who was the bearer of a formal demand for the union of the Principalities, addressed to Count Walewski, had been arrested at Czernowitz.

Advices from Nicolaieff state that a Commission had arrived there from St. Petersburg on the 6th of March, and immediately commenced operations for the abandonment of that place as a military depot. It was stated that it would be a free port.

Intelligence from Paris states that the City of Parma and the surrounding country has again been laid under a state of seige, which arose from renewed attacks of assassination. The Auditor of the War Department had been stabbed in the back while walking with another officer. The Government had become greatly alarmed at cattle murrain which was said to be spreading over the Continent.

The Times' correspondent, writing from the Crimea, says:

"The war party still cherishes hopes that the negotiations may break down. It may suit the French to make concessions, but it ought not to suit us. They doubtless consider that they have done enough for honor and glory and to avenge the reverses of 1812. Moreover they cannot afford war as England can, and their army, however numerous they may show it to be upon paper, is dwindling sadly. Scurvy and fever are playing havoc in its ranks. The mortality in the French is positively asserted to be 120 a day and generally more."

Mr. Buchanan, ex-Minister of the United States to the Court of St. James, was to leave England for New York by the Arago, which was to sail from Southampton on the 8th inst. He left London on the 20th ult., for Paris, where it was his intention to pass a few days before visiting the Hague, previous to his partage for the United States.

The French army in the Crimea is being expended at least as rapidly as it was by shell and shot during the severest part of the siege. A sanitary commission's investigation of the French camp would reveal a startling amount of suffering. Insufficient shelter and covering, and a deficiency of vegetable food, readily account for the sickness that prevails. Of course, everything we can spare is freely placed at their disposal.

Marriage of the Princess Royal.—Victoria Adelaide Maria Louise, Princess Royal of England, who was born at Buckingham Palace on the 21st of November, 1840, is about to marry Prince Frederick William Nicholas Charles of Prussia, who was born on the 18th of October, 1831. He holds the commissions of major, a la suite of the 1st Foot Guards, and chef and proprietaire of other regiments in the Prussian service. He is the oldest son and heir of Frederick William, Prince of Prussia, brother to the King, and heir to the throne. Consequently, if the projected marriage shall become un fait accompli, it may be anticipated that the time is not far distant when the throne of Prussia will be occupied by a Princess of England.

Peace.—The probabilities of peace have received a check which it was feared would delay the conclusion of the negotiations for some days. It was presumed that the meeting of the 22d ult. would have been the last, but unanimity did not prevail and the discussion was not so amicable as had been anticipated. There is every probability, however, of the differences being arranged, although it is not positively known by what they were caused. The Times defines the cause to a demand put forth by the Prussian plenipotentiaries to be admitted to sign the treaty of peace on the same footing and in the same character as if Prussia had been a party to the alliance throughout, as if she had accepted all the obligations involved in it, had joined in the ultimatum and declared that she would abide by all its consequences. It is also said that Russia supports Prussia in these pretensions. Another meeting of the Conference was held on the 24th, but nothing had transpired with respect to the nature of the deliberations. Nothing was hinted with reference to the differences of the previous meeting, but it was reported that the signing of the treaty of peace was daily expected. The opinion that the Conference would ultimately resolve itself into an European Congress was greatly believed. A telegraph from Berlin speaks satisfactorily of the Conferences, and states that Austria, while being distrusted by the Western Powers, is detested by Russia.

The London Times says, it seems as if the armistice were likely to expire before its terms are settled. The first difficulty arose upon the demand of the allies to embark things in boats from the South side of the harbor, the object being to ship the cannons, anchors, etc. captured in Sebastopol. But to this the Russians demurred, saying that the seaboard was not ours, and that we could not use it. This is perfectly true, and is a striking commentary upon the oft repeated vaunt that Sebastopol is captured. We have certainly got the town, but the North forts command it, and not a cock-boat can put off from the shore without imminent danger of being sunk.

However, the allies agreed to waive the stipulation, and the delay now arises from certain questions relating to the blockade of the Black Sea and the Sea of Azoff. It is probable that there will be another meeting of Generals at Traktir-bridge soon.

The New Mexican Tariff.—We learn at the Statistical Office in the State Department, says the National Intelligencer, that the new Tariff of Mexico, promulgated a few months since, has been incorporated in the report on our commercial relations with all foreign nations. The importance of giving the latest changes in the commercial legislation of foreign nations was one of the reasons which influenced the Committee on Commerce in recommending that the report be printed under the superintendence of the office whence it emanated.

We extract, from the Digest on Mexico, the following tariff duties on some of our leading exports:

Candles, spermaceti	$12 00 per 100 pounds.
Candles, common	6 00 " "
Unbleached cotton	03 per yard.
Shirtings, bleached	03 "
Sheetings, unbleached	03 "
Colored ticklings 1¼ yards wide	05 "
do 2 yards wide	10 "
Plain and twilled cottons, for linings	03 "
Colored ginghams ⅞ yard wide	05 "
Cotton hose, men's and women's bleached	45 per dozen.
Cotton hose, children's, small sizes	30 "
Spool thread, 300 yards, Nos. from 22 to 40	45 "
Hat	6 "
Codfish, in boxes of 100 pounds	2 00 per box pounds.
Oysters, in tin cases	3 00 "
Herring, large size	2 00 "
Hoop iron	1 00 "
Nails, assorted sizes	2 50 "
Hams, &c	5 00 "
Cheese	3 00 "
White lead	40 per cent ad valorem.
Steel	$ 1 25 per 100 pounds.
Brandy, in bbls. of 30 gallons	7 00 "
Brandy, in bottles	8 00 "
Teas	25 per pound.
Tobacco, chewing, first quality	75 "
Cigars	2 50 "
Snuff	1 00 "
Wine, champagne	5 00 per 100 pounds.
Wine, claret	3 00 "
Wine, cherry	5 00 "

The report from which we extract the above will prove of inculculable value to the mercantile interests of the country.

Two Men Killed and a Third Seriously Wounded.—On Saturday afternoon two men named Matthew Brady and Michael McKegney, laborers on the canal, were instantly killed, and Lawson Campbell, a coal boatman, resulting in this city, was dangerously wounded under the following circumstances: A coal boat had got aground at the head of the canal, and a line from it was attached to a capstan on the wharf for the purpose of pulling it off. While the men were at work the line parted, and the bars in the capstans struck Brady in the back and broke the neck of McKegney, causing instant death. Campbell was so seriously injured that his recovery is doubtful. Brady has been employed on the canal for fifteen years. His family reside in Tenth street. McKegney's family resides at Shippingport. Campbell has also a family, and resides near the hospital. [Louisville, Journal, 14th.

Appearances.—Upon the subject of dress and appearances, the New-York Times thus remarks:

A coat that has the marks of use upon it is a recommendation to people of sense, and a hat with too smooth a nap and too high a lustre is a derogatory circumstance. The best coats in Broadway are on the backs of penniless fops, broken down merchants' clerks with pitiful salaries, and men that don't pay up. The heaviest gold chain dangle from the fobs of gamblers and gentlemen of very limited means; costly ornaments on the Ladies indicate to the eyes that are well open, the fact of a silly lover or husband cramped for funds. And when a pretty woman goes by in a suit of plain and neat apparel, it is a sign that she has fair expectations and a husband that can show a balance in his favor. For women are like books, too much gilding makes men suspicious that the binding is the most important point.

WOMAN, HER EDUCATION AND HER DUTIES.

BY PRESCENTA.

Do not laugh, Crescent, at the herculean task I have set myself. I well know how arduous I shall find it, but my motto is—Try—therefore, though I have but little hope of doing my subject half justice, I shall try.

We hear, daily, a variety of opinions upon woman and her mission. Some men seem to think women are a necessary, nay, an indispensable yet a somewhat troublesome ingredient in nature. Others, again, grow quite transcendental upon the matter, and declare she was God's last, best gift to man; goddesses fit only for worship and adoration; whose path should be strewn with roses from which every thorn had been plucked.

Woman's manners, habits and customs are varied; according to her country are you apt to find her. Nor will we, in referring to history, find any greater change in the human race than what has occurred to the female part of it. The Queen of the Tournament, or the slave in the field, we find women in olden times housed, petted and caressed by their rough, liege lords, or worked abreast with the oxen; there was but slight medium between the extreme. To look after the wounded, nurse the sick, overlook the household, and work her interminable tapestry, was the employment of the female of rank during the time of the Crusades. Now, to flit from pleasure to pleasure, from fully trouble, like a giddy butterfly, completely ignoring all domestic knowledge, we find the usual employment of those who have not to earn their bread by mental or manual labor.

The education of women is lamentably deficient; so they have a few superficial accomplishments and their heads crammed with high-sounding names of scientific pursuits, there is little attention paid to their being grounded in a knowledge of anything useful. Turn one-half of our botanical graduates into a field or forest, and their knowledge of herbs would not suffice to prevent them poisoning themselves with plant or berry; and the same in other matters. Talk with nine-tenths of our educated young ladies and they will turn off a string of rhodomontade calculated to astonish those who are quite as ignorant as themselves; but question them closely and the cloven foot of superficial knowledge will soon thrust forth. Teachers who teach for pay alone, not from a love or desire of benefitting youth, care little, save that their pupils may make a show. They have no further interest in the matter than putting them as rapidly as possible through their hands, and receiving their remuneration from their employers. One half of our boarding-schools pay more attention to the turning out of toes, graceful courtesies, sloping shoulders and taper waists of their pupils, than they do the contents of their heads.

Girls return from school and their parents, satisfied if they can thump the piano, sketch, and smatter French, make few inquiries as to the solidity of their education, and their capacity, if necessity should arge, to earn a livelihood by it. Men, in a great degree, are the cause of this. With a puerile fear of female superiority, they sneer at women who educate their mind, and dubb with the ill-name "blue-stocking," all who train their intellect instead of their beauty. Men need not fear rightly educated females; there is little danger of a woman whose heart as well as mind has received proper culture ever trespassing upon the rights of man or overstepping the bounds of woman's duty.

Mind should not be cultivated at the expense of heart, nor yet heart at the expense of brain; either extreme will produce unnatural beings. 'Tis the former course that has produced those hybrid monstrosities which now attract attention to our country, and we certainly do nothing by halves in Jonathan's land.

The wife, the mother who calmly moves on the even tenor of her way, keeping her duty steadily before her, rearing her children in principles of truth and integrity, creating a happy, peaceful home around her, a love nest of quiet—supporting her husband by kind glances and cheering words in the hour of adversity—and whose whole life seems a desire so to live that her husband and children may see and feel that there is a truth in what she professes; a reality in her belief in the commands and promises of God; in such women we have a close picture of a woman's duty.

Woman's duty does not consist in donning man's garb, usurping his duty, nor in unsexing themselves in striving to assert the equality of sexes. There is no denial on the part of sensible, well educated men, as to the equality; then why strive to triumph over the ignorant boor? 'Tis time lost. God neither took Eve from Adam's feet, nor yet from his head, but from his side, to be his companion and friend—and if man is more fitted for the sterner duties of life, equally so are women for the quieter obligations that rest upon the human race; for woman can alone rear her children to fill the gaps left by the loss of great and good men. A mother's influence, whether for good or evil, is never lost upon her child; a little word of kindly counsel from a tender mother will in after years haunt his heart, and great deeds may spring therefrom, as we see the tiny acorn fall and lie hidden through winter's frosts, then spring up to become the far-spreading oak. A mother has lessons of purity truth and charity—charity of thought as well as charity of alms—to inculcate; she has vascillating dispositions to strengthen, rough points to smooth down, and despondent heads to raise up.

We need not search far for a very extended course of duty; it will readily fall in our way, do we but wish it. Then let women cast to the "roaring winds" as so many waifs, their idle fancies as to their rights, and find their rights in the duties so clearly laid before them by their Creator—let them cease

"To murder impossibilities; to make
What cannot be, slight work."

[Daily Crescent.

Men of America—Men of the Age.—The greatest man, let the sag-nichts say what they may, "take him all in all," of the last thousand years, was George Washington—an American.

The Greatest Doctor of Divinity was Jonathan Edwards—an American.

The greatest Philosopher was Benjamin Franklin—an American.

The greatest living Sculptor is Hiram Powers—an American.

The greatest living Historian is Wm. H Prescott—an American.

The greatest Ornithologist was J. J. Audubon—an American.

The greatest Medical Chemist of modern times is an American.

The greatest Lexicographer, since the time of Johnson, was Noah Webster—an American.

The greatest inventors of modern times were Fulton, Fitch, Whitney and Morse—all Americans.

Kind Words.—They never blister the tongue or lips. And we have never heard of any mental trouble arising from this quarter. Though they do not cost much, yet they accomplish much. They help one's own good nature and good will. Soft words soften our own soul. Angry words are fuel to the flame of wrath, and make it blaze more fiercely.

Kind words make other people good natured. Cold words freeze people, and hot words scorch them, and bitter words make them bitter; and wrathful words make them wrathful. There is such a rush of all other kinds of words, in our days, that it seems desirable to give kind words a chance among them. There are vain words, and idle words, and hasty words, and spiteful words, and silly words; and empty words, and profane words, and boisterous words, and warlike words. Kind words also produce their own image on men's souls. And a beautiful image it is. They smooth, and quiet, and comfort the hearer. They shame him out of his sour, morose, unkind feelings. We have not yet began to use kind words in such abundance as they ought to be used. [Pascal.

Do Good.—Thousands of men breathe, move and live—pass off the stage of life, and are heard of no more. Why? They do not a particle of good in the world, and none were blessed by them, none could point to them as the instrument of their redemption; not a word they spoke could be recalled, and they perished; their light went out in darkness, and they were not remembered more than the insect of yesterday. Will you thus live and die, O man immortal? Live for something. Do good and leave behind you a monument of virtue that the storm of time can never destroy. Write your name in kindness, love and mercy, on the hearts of thousands who come in contact with you year by year; you will never be forgotten. No, your name, your deeds, will be as legible on the hearts you leave behind, as the stars on the brow of evening. Good deeds will shine as the stars of Heaven.

[Dr. Chalmers.

A high propeller, weighing eleven tons, was recently cast at the foundry of Messrs. Merrick & Son, Philadelphia. It is composed of copper and tin—25,000 pounds of the former and 2,500 of the latter—the well-known gun metal. It has two blades, has a pitch of 23 feet, and is 13 feet in diameter. It is the largest propeller in the world, and was cast for the new steam frigate.

Dr. Baird's Lecture.

Premising that a residence of twenty-one years in Europe, spent in travelling over all portions of it, had rendered him familiar with the subject; and that, in agreement with the recommendation of others, he had undertaken his discourses, Dr. Baird commenced his lecture, evading before last, by stating that the Russian war would be the subject of the present address.

One-fourth of the human race resides in Europe. Nearly the whole people are of Caucasian origin; but they are distinguished by dialects and dress. The Latin, Teutonic and Sclavonic are the prevailing languages. Eighty millions speak each language, and there is a similar distinction in religions. There are no less than sixty-four governments in Europe, although our own country is equally large.

The French, trying to obtain liberty, goes too far. No revolution is made in vain, but Europe will see many before she reaches our own degree of liberty.

Europe's civilization is on the western side. Russia, Turkey, and Greece, are kingdoms occupying two-thirds of Europe.—The western side is almost insignificantly small.

Nearly all of Russian civilization is in Poland and around the great cities. The Greeks are fast coming up, and will, doubtless, by-and-by, equal their ancestry. England, France, Denmark, Holland and Sweden, have the present wealth, literature and science of the continent. Europe's civilization commenced in Greece and spread into Russia; but it was checked by Asiatic influences. Greece gave civilization, but what would that country be had it not been for our own ancestors? It has advanced and it is probable that the Mahometan religion will finally go down.

In the central part of European Russia there are no hills, nor hardly any ridges. On the Neva, Dneister and Dnieper, there are many steamers. Most of the cities are one-half built of wood. Riga is almost wholly brick. The stone is granite; or gneiss—too hard to be used for building. Schastopol and Simpheropol were of stone, however. An American is reminded of home by bad roads, hospitality and slavery in Russia. A Russian nobleman is much like a Southern slaveholder. In the rear of the nobleman's house stands his theater, his bathing house and his dispensary. Every Saturday evening the inhabitants have a general washing; whether they wash again or not during the week is immaterial. Half the houses in St. Petersburg and Moscow have no front doors, but fully one-half have domes—an idea of Asiatic origin. Neither the Russian nor Polish languages are European. Napoleon said that to pronounce Polish, one must sneeze, then cough, then say tsche—which is a very good rule.

Czar is pronounced Tsar—pronouncing all the letters. In Russia, they drive tandem teams, four horses abreast, and perhaps two more attached to the axles. The Russians drive as hard as a horse can run; never walk nor trot. They wear their beards down to their waists. In the Greek church there are no stoves and very short sermons. No one but nobles are allowed to drive a team like nine of our stage teams. The riding boys wear dresses like our equestriennes. Russian funerals and marriages may be Asiatic; they certainly are not European, and look extremely curious to an American. The funerals seem funny to a stranger, and generally, those present get drunk. The marriages are equally strange and somewhat silly.

The dinner parties have actors and actresses in some portions of the country. If any one says the wine needs more sweetening, the master and mistress, who act as servants at the feast, are bound to kiss one another. If any one thinks the Russians wish to conquer Europe, they are much mistaken. They desire to take Greece and Poland, because they consider them Asiatic.

Russia is not what it will be. Russia in Europe, Asia and America, contains 7,500,000 square miles. Very little of it lies South of 42 deg., none South 41 deg. excepting Georgia. The only portion that can have any population lies between 42 and 60 deg., running through a part of Europe, Asia and America. Alexander won a part of Prussian Poland by stating that he would join Napoleon on his return from Elba, unless that land was given him, and so won it.

The Russian population is about $71,000,000.—Poland, Finland and other Baltic provinces are hardly ever included by a Russian as a part of the Empire. An American Senator once said that there were 54,000,000 people, of whom 53,500,000 are serfs.—There are, however, only 48,000,000 serfs in all.

There is no early history of Russia. It was known formerly as Scythia. The Greeks planted Sebastopol and other Southern cities, and in that lies the secret of the Russian regard for Greece. In 900 to 1200 A. D. the Russians only sought to travel to Greece or Italy, caring nothing for Western Europe. Novagorod was settled by Harold Hardikannte, from Sweden, much as Walker has settled Nicaragua.—When Vladimir lived, Russia was nearly what it now is in Europe. When he died, the kingdom was broken into pieces and easily conquered by the Tartars. After two centuries, the priests and princes saw their fault and the Greek church raised Ivan the First, and the Tartars were cleared out. Czarism is the offspring of the Greek church, through the doctrine then taught, and the Greek church has 50 out of 70,000,000 of the people.

The fraudulent dynasties of Ivan's successors are mentioned by Milton, who records the discoveries of that country near Archangel. The priests are obliged to be married in order to be teachers. When the wife dies, the preacher has to turn tradesman. The army and the priests are both sovereigns over the Czar.

Charles XII was six feet nine inches high, and Peter the Great was almost as large.

In 1840 the lecturer went through the various military schools; and learned there were 300,000 soldiers in the country. The military schools are much like West Point, and both in the military and naval schools English and French are taught and spoken. Elizabeth punished a nobleman by making the offender sit in a great nest and cackle like a goose. Princess Daschkoff wrote an admirable book concerning Russia. She used to ride around, straddle back, among the soldiery. She was a terribly immoral woman, but did much for the Russian Empire.

St. Petersburg is the finest city in the world for public edifices, although only one half the size of Paris. The accession of Nicholas and his character were described: haughty and cold, but brave and bold.

The history of Nicholas' reign was briefly given, and the Polish fights detailed. Nicholas would review a single company as well as whole armies. The present ruler was brought up to be a ruler, and is a man of fine talents, aged about 37. He is an able, powerful man. His mother has a great mind, and is a noble woman. The present Emperor will, probably, pardon all the discontents in Siberia. He has a great regard for the United States, as had his father before him.

The lecturer concluded by saying that Russia now has 1,000,000 of soldiers. She is as yet undeveloped, but very rapidly growing and developing.

The lecture was an exceedingly able, comprehensive and instructive one, and was listened to with the closest attention, notwithstanding its length.

Paternal Duty.—The father who plunges into business so deeply that he has no leisure for domestic duties and pleasures, and whose only intercourse with his children consists in a brief word of authority, or a surly lamentation over their intolerable expensiveness, is equally to be pitied and to be blamed. What right has he to devote to other pursuits the time which God has allotted to his children? Nor is it any excuse to say he cannot support his family in their present style of living without this effort. Task, by what right can his family demand to live in a manner which requires him to neglect his most solemn and important duties? Nor is it an excuse to say that he wishes to leave them a competence. Is he under obligation to leave them that competence which he desires? Is it an advantage to them to be relieved from the necessity of labor? Besides, is money the only desirable bequest that a father can leave to his children? Surely, well-cultivated intellects, hearts sensible to domestic affection; the love of parents, and brethren, and sisters; a taste for home pleasures; habits of order, regularity and industry; a hatred of vice and vicious men; and a lively sensibility to the excellence of virtue—are as valuable a legacy as an inheritance of property—a simple property, purchased by the loss of every habit which could render that property a blessing.

[Wayland.

Wolf and Lamb.—A late Illinois paper contains the announcement of the marriage of R. W. Wolf to Mary L. Lamb. "The Wolf and the Lamb shall lie down together, and a little child shall lead them"—after a while.

Account Books.

Tare and tret;
Gross and net,
Box and hogshead, dry and wet:
Ready made,
Of every grade,
Wholesale, retail—will you trade?

Goods for sale,
Bill or bale,
Ell or quarter, yard or nail;
Every dye,
Will you buy?
None can sell as cheap as I!

Thus each day
Wears away,
And his hair is turning gray!
He nightly looks
O'er his books,
Counts his gains and bolts his locks.

Bye and bye,
He must die—
But the ledger-book on high,
Will unfold
How he sold,
How he got and used his gold.

Paper from the Bark of Cotton.

We called attention some months ago to specimens of hemp made from the bark stripped from cotton stalks and left at our office for public inspection. We now learn from the New York Day Book, that specimens of the bark have been exhibited to paper manufacturers at the North, which is found to be of a fibrous character, and is considered to be well adapted for the manufacture of good paper. The best period for preparing this cotton hemp will be as soon as practicable after picking of cotton has been finished. The plants should then be pulled up and

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

(From the Chicago Times.)

NAVAL WAR OF 1812.

Engagement Between the Shannon and the Chesapeake.

Having been an actor in that terrible battle, nearly forty-three years ago, and having carefully read the accounts of Great Britain and the United States, James' Naval History of Great Britain, and Cooper's Naval History of the United States; and knowing that all had made each of these authorities abound in errors respecting the engagement, and especially wishing to pay his mead of tribute to illustrious worth, the writer of this is induced to throw some light on that scene in the following disjointed reminiscences:

On or about the 1st of March, 1813, the British frigates Shannon and Tenedos were ordered to cruise off Boston. Each of these ships rated thirty-eight guns. The Shannon mounted fifty guns and two twelve-pounder stern chasers—in all fifty-two guns. Among the fifty guns were two nine-pounders and two twenty-four pounders; the remainder were long eighteen-pounders and thirty-two pounder carronades. The Tenedos mounted forty-nine guns. The U. S. ships President and Congress were laying in their anchorage in Boston harbor at the same time. The President was the flag ship of Commodore Rodgers, and Congress, commanded by Captain Ludlow, was cruising around the Isle of Shoals, Portsmouth, Long Island, and Cape Cod, Massachusetts Bay.

On the 3d of May, in a dense fog and heavy gale of wind, the frigates President, Commodore Rodgers, and Congress, put to sea and sailed for the Banks of Newfoundland, and from thence to Greenland, and made several prizes of British whalers, but left the two British frigates blockading the port. At the same period the frigate Chesapeake, Captain Evans, arrived in the harbor of Boston, with the loss of a topmast in the same gale. Captain Evans was disabled from command by a severe disease of the eyes, and Captain James Lawrence was appointed in his place to the command of the Chesapeake.

Shortly after the arrival of the Chesapeake in Boston harbor the Captain of the Shannon, P. B. V. Broke, ordered the Tenedos off the station, and wrote by fishing boats to Captain Lawrence, that as there was only his frigate now blockading the port he expected Captain Lawrence would come out and try the ordeal of battle in honor of their respective countries. Some of the fishing boats brought word that he would come as soon as he was ready.

The month of May had nearly elapsed when Captain Broke, apprehensive that the Chesapeake would not venture out, for fear that other British vessels-of-war might be lurking in the neighborhood, wrote another challenge and sent it by a fishing boat, proffering to sail with the Chesapeake five hundred miles under a flag of truce, and commence an engagement at a given signal to be mutally agreed upon by both commanders. This last letter was sent about the 30th of May, and it is believed that Captain Lawrence never received it.

On the morning of the 1st of June—the Shannon being close to the Boston light-house—at 8 o'clock A. M., the Chesapeake got under way and came out of the harbor, wind light, in breezes, making a slight ripple on the water. Meanwhile the Shannon under easy sail, made an offing from the coast, thinking that privateers or gun-boats might come out and assist the Chesapeake.

At 4 o'clock P. M. the Chesapeake hove to and fired a gun, being then about four miles distant from the Shannon. The Shannon immediately fired another and hove to; upon which the Chesapeake made sail and hove to, to shorten the distance between the rival vessels.

The Chesapeake approached with five large splendid ensigns flying, one of which was an immense white silk flag with "Free trade and sailors' rights" inscribed thereon in large letters, which could be read by the naked eye at a considerable distance.

The Chesapeake came within about two miles, and was swiftly approaching the Shannon. Captain Broke now turned the tender up, and made a short oration to the men, nearly as follows:

"Brother and boys! bear in mind, that the Americans are a proud nation—that they have sunk or taken several of our ships of war; and they say that English sailors have forgotten how to fight! Remember that they are Anglo-Saxon blood in their veins; and you have not French, nor Spaniards, nor Dutch to fight to-day! You must either take her or go to the bottom!"

Upon which the crew gave three cheers, and simultaneously the crew of the Chesapeake cheered.

The Chesapeake came on beautifully under her royals, top-gallant sails, topsails and courses, and when within less than half a mile gradually shortened sail, steering in the wake of the Shannon until she approached so close that Captain Broke supposed she was going to lay athwart the Shannon's stern and rake here fore and aft. Deeming this to be the object of Captain Lawrence, he ordered the man to lie down. During the whole of these proceedings the perfection of naval discipline was so complete that you might have heard a pin drop.

The Chesapeake came so close that her flying jibboom nearly touched the taffrail of the Shannon, when Captain Lawrence immediately luffed up on the weather quarter of the Shannon, and at the same moment Captain Broke whispered to the quarter-master at the wheel to put the helm down; when the Shannon shot suddenly round—the awful command by Captain Broke was given, "Fire when your guns bear!" and the whole broadside of the Shannon, at half-pistol shot distance, was poured into the Chesapeake more destructively than if it was exactly raking, the Chesapeake being unable to return a single gun. The broadside was very destructive. One hundred men were killed and wounded; most of the officers belonging to the Chesapeake were struck down, either killed or wounded, and five guns on the side of the Chesapeake engaged were dismounted and rendered hors de combat.

Under these serious disadvantages the Chesapeake ranged alongside and delivered her broadside, one half of which was pointed at the water line, and the other half at the rigging and masts of the Shannon.—Several shot penetrated below the water line, and every shroud of the fore, main and mizen rigging of the Shannon was cut to pieces. The Chesapeake was then veering ahead, when the best bower anchor of the Shannon caught in the lanyards of her main rigging; grappling-irons both vessels were thrown aboard, and the two ships were fast locked in each other's embrace!

The starter-deck guns and part of the main-deck guns of the Chesapeake played upon the bow of the Shannon, and the forecastle guns and part of the bow guns of the main-deck of the Shannon played upon the afterpart of the Chesapeake. The second, third and fourth broadsides of the Chesapeake were very destructive. Numbers fell on board of the Shannon, and the guns in the bow had to be manned several times from the aftermost guns, caused by the number killed and wounded. The fourth gun on the bow of the Shannon, where the writer was stationed, was left, in a moment of time, with only one man standing out of twelve; the remainder were killed and wounded.

The engagement had lasted now about eight minutes, and four rounds were the most that had been fired by either vessel; when the order of Captain Broke called the boarders away, and about twenty or thirty followed him and First Lieutenant Watt on board the Chesapeake. A few seamen and marines fought gallantly on the forecastle of the Chesapeake, until they were overpowered; some were supposed to have been last overboard, and some gained the main-chains through the bow-ports. Captain Broke was severely wounded on board the Chesapeake.

Then a number of the Shannon's crew huddled around in the stern of the Chesapeake; and in undertaking to hoist the British flag over the American, they made a mistake, and hoisted the American flag over the British. In the meantime, Second Lieutenant Wallis, who commanded the Shannon in the absence of his Captain and First Lieutenant, ordered the firing of two thirty-two pounder carronades, loaded with grape, which killed his own First Lieutenant and ten or eleven of his own crew. A short time previous to this the vessels had separated.

At the expiration of eleven minutes from the commencement of the engagement, the Chesapeake was taken complete possession of. At the same time, the Shannon had about six feet water in her hold, and in five minutes more would have sunk, had the battle lasted so long.

At about the second or third broadside, First Lieut. Ludlow, of the Chesapeake, had called boarders away and boarded the Shannon, expecting to have thirty or forty men at least under his command, when a Portuguese boatswain's mate ran down below like a friend, and the men following his example, only one or two accompanied Lieut. Ludlow, who was wounded on the deck of the Shannon by a bayonet stab in the face, which afterward proved fatal at Halifax. It is confidently believed that at the time Lieut. Ludlow boarded the Shannon, had he been supported by his boarders, he would have taken the Shannon in the same manner as he paralled on board in consequence of the number of killed and wounded.

Lieut. Wallis was promoted for his gallantry to be a post captain and commander. He commanded the La Hogue subsequently, which was taken, after a short engagement, by a United States brig-of-war of inferior force. So much for the brave Second Lieutenant Wallis, who was promoted for killing his own First Lieutenant and his own men.

Master's Mate Entough, a Dane, commanded the first division of guns in the bow, upon the main deck; and when they began to fall, killed and wounded, he dodged under the lee of the foremast. Being recommended for his bravery, in the official account, he was also promoted.

Capt. Lawrence was slightly wounded by the first broadside, and mortally wounded about the third broadside. The last word he spoke was to be a rallying cry of seamen while time lasts—"Don't give up the ship!"

The writer of this was severely wounded about the time Capt. Lawrence was, and no disgrace on account of the loss of the Chesapeake, especially taking into consideration the unequal practice caused by the first broadside of the Shannon. The losses of thirty-two officers and seamen were killed as follows: A round shot, a stand of grape, and a keg of musket balls, each containing about one hundred in number, three bar shot, and similarly loaded were the long 12 pounders, and the long 18 pounder balls consisted of four round shot and fifty. There were four of these guns in the bow, and fifty rounds for every gun in the ship.

Upon the arrival of the Shannon in Boston harbor with the prize, she was brought in-line-of-battle with three hundred and thirty-five men and boys. Thirty or forty of these were boys or old men.

The Chesapeake, according to the muster rolls found on board, had three hundred and ninety men, of which only one or two were boys, and the remainder in the prime of life. She mounted long twenty-four pounders and thirty-two pounder carronades, and had twenty-five guns on the side she engaged the Shannon. Every shroud in the fore, main and mizzen rigging was stoppered, dismond fashion, from the chain-plates to the catharpings. The bulwarks on the quarter deck and forecastle, were secured by a strong spun yarn, nailed in small squares and beautifully painted—to save the officers and crew from flying splinters, which are very destructive in battle.

There were far more rejoicings in Halifax when the prize was brought in than if ten sail-of-the line of the French fleet had been captured, and England herself could hardly contain herself for joy. A Yankee frigate of equal force, was taken—at last.

The destruction of human life was awful, considering the short time the engagement lasted, and the number of men engaged upon both sides. The battles of the Nile, Trafalgar, Waterloo, Sebastopol or Mexico, are no comparison. The only modern battle, by sea or land, which approximates nearest on the scale, is the battle of Bridgewater, where about one-fourth of those engaged on both sides were killed and wounded. It is said and believed that eighty-four of the Chesapeake's crew were here aboard dead; and four British deserters, who were in the maintop when the ship was taken possession of, ran out on the mainyard and drowned themselves, sooner than be taken prisoners; and one hundred and ten were received into Halifax, wounded. Total, one hundred and ninety-eight, out of a crew of three hundred and ninety—more than one-half of the crew. The Shannon had thirty-five killed, or died of their wounds, and seventy-six wounded. Total, one hundred and eleven, or about one-third of her crew.

The wounded of both crews were mingled indiscriminately in the hospital, and were actually like brothers. Were any nice delicacies received by one class, they were shared by the others. Speaking the same language, worshipping the same God, the wounded seamen were endeared to each other. The attention of the surgeons—civil, military and naval—and the hospitality of the citizens of Halifax were beyond all praise. The writer of this had been impressed into the British navy and certainly has no affection for her government. A leading object of his, in giving these disjointed reminiscences, is to place beyond the vile reach of reproach and insinuation the name of Capt. James Lawrence. A more chivalric and gallant officer never lived. He was accused of coming out before the ship was ready—of mustering a heterogenous crew—of being drunk. No ship was ever better prepared for action; no crew excelled them in youth, manhood and bravery; (always excepting the cowardly Portuguese boatswain's mate;) and the lie about drunkenness ought to have blistered the tongue that uttered it, and if it was ever penned, withered the hand that wrote it. He was buried, with honors of war, at Halifax.

Captain Broke was almost adored by his crew for his humanity and kindness to his men.

Very few of the actors in that scene survive.

From the public prints I perceive a speck of war in the horizon, between both nations, which may the Almighty avert! Should war commence, I would recommend that Palmerston, Clarendon, and the nobles of England in favor of it, lead the van on their sides; and that our legislators, etc., in favor of it, lead the van on our side. In that case we should have no war, or a mighty small one. "SHANNON."

Our Sea Coast Defences.

An elaborate article in Putnam's Magazine for March contains some interesting facts relative to our sea coast defences. Beginning in the eastern part of the United States, the writer of the artle alluded to gives us the designation and location of each fortification upon the coast around to the Mississippi, together with the lake defences on our northern boundary. In addition to this we have an account of the number of men necessary to garrison each fort, the total number of guns now mounted in each, the amount of money already expended upon and the amount necessary to complete each of the forts enumerated.

The first fort enumerated in the article in Putnam is Fort Knox, at Bucksport, Maine. Situated at about twenty-five miles from the mouth of the Penobscot, at a "narrow" in the river, it completely precludes the possibility of passage of a hostile ship. There have been expended already $130,442, and $500,000 more are required to complete it according to the original plan.

Portland (Me.) harbor has been prepared for partial defence by the two forts Scammel and Preble, built at an expense of $111,137, and mounting 111 guns. To complete these works $7,500 is needed.

Forts McCluney and Constitution command the harbor of Portsmouth, New Hampshire. They mount in the aggregate but 73 guns, and were completed at an expense of $38,275.

Boston harbor and city are defended by three forts and two batteries, mounting in all 539 guns. On these an amount of $1,688,163 has been expended, and $124,573 are yet required to complete them.

New Bedford (Mass.) has one fort of 14 guns, completed at an expense of $5,000.

Fort Adams commands Newport, Rhode Island. It mounts 464 guns, has already consumed $1,661,343, and requires $30,000 to finish it.

Fort Trumbull is the defence of New London, Connecticut, mounting 88 guns, and completed at an expense of $250,941.

New York is defended by seven forts and four batteries. These in all mount 1,000 guns. To carry these works as far towards completion as they at present are carried has cost $2,511,464. To perfect them $394,526 more are required.

Forts Delaware and Mifflin, on the Delaware river, are provided with 204 guns. There has been expended on them the sum of $621,913, and $582,000 will be required to complete them.

Fort Monroe, at Old Point Comfort, and Fort Calhoun, Hampton Roads, have 595 guns, have cost $4,067,467, and require yet $804,332 to complete them.

Forts Washington, on the Potomac, and Severn and Madison, at Annapolis, mount in all 133 guns. They have cost $596,853. The first two are completed; the last requires yet an expenditure of $30,000.

There are two forts prepared in part for the defence of Baltimore—Carroll and McHenry. They mount 253 guns, have cost $281,663, and require an outlay of $865,000 yet.

There is a fort (Macon) on the coast of North Carolina, at Beaufort. It mounts 61 guns, and has cost $460,790. To finish it $3,000 are needed. There is another at Oak Island, Smithville, Fort Caswell, mounting 87 guns. It has been nearly completed at an expense of $571,221. It will require $7,000 to complete it.

Charleston, South Carolina, has three forts—Pinckney, Moultrie, and Sumpter. They have 225 guns, and have been thus far completed at an expense of $795,718. It will take $150,000 to fill out this original plan of these three forts.

Forts Pulaski and Jackson dominate the Savannah river. They have 164 guns, and have cost $1,003,859, and need an expenditure of $80,000 more.

On the coasts of Florida are seven forts from Camberland Sound around to Pensacola. On the ramparts of these are 1,041 heavy guns. These forts have cost $2,410,321, and yet require for their completion the sum of $2,213,862.

Forts Morgan, at Mobile Point, and Gaines, at Dauphin Island, coast of Alabama, have 221 guns. They have cost $1,232,556, and need yet an expenditure of $210,000.

There are seven works of defence on the coast of Louisiana. They have in all 446 guns, have cost $2,385,101, and require $115,500 to complete them.

Forts Wayne, at Detroit, Porter, at Buffalo, Niagara, on Niagara river, Ontario, at Oswego, and Montgomery, on Lake Champlain, have an armament of 342 guns. They have cost $612,650, and require now $353,640 to complete them.

Thus we have of batteries, castles, and forts on our whole coast, sixty-one. For a war garrison for all of them they require 30,400 men; they mount 6,180 guns; they have cost $21,272,186, and the amount required to complete them is $6,436,732.

A NOVEL INVENTION.—We were present yesterday afternoon at a private exhibition of a musical and scientific wonder, in the shape of an automaton performer upon the clarionet and cornet-a-piston. It is the invention of Mons. Van Ockelen, of Java, was made in Holland, and has been six years in maturing and the manufacture. In superficial appearance it resembles a full-sized man. In the body lies concealed a multiplicity of delicate and complex machinery, which, upon being wound up, is made to act upon a pair of bellows for the production of wind, and numerous springs, which represent the muscles of the arms and hands. The same machinery affects the actions of the eyes and lips, and the motions of the head and body. Upon touching a spring, the gentleman makes an obeisance to the audience, his eyes and lips following the natural inclination of such an act. Mr. Van Oekelen then seats himself at the piano, and accompanies him through the performance of some of the most difficult compositions of Bethooven, Von Weber, etc. These the figure executes with a facility and nicety, giving each note a cadenza, and making long trills that would almost persuade the hearer he was a thing of life. His performance extends to thirty-two pieces upon the clarionet, and sixteen on the cornet-a-piston. It is one of the most remarkable inventions of the age, and must have required an amount of patience and perseverance beyond the capacity of ordinary mortals. [Boston Journal.

ST. MARY.—We clip the subjoined items from the Franklin Journal of the 17th instant:

NO RAIN!—No rain yet. Our planters are very much discomfited at the long dry spell we have recently experienced, and which has proved any thing but propitious to the crops. At the present writing the heavens are overcast, and we have some indications of rain.

Since writing the above, we have had a gentle shower.

Much Ado About Nothing.

In December, 18—, we were traveling through one of the New England towns in an old fashioned stage coach, with a friend, whose powers of making fun from the slightest cause were manifest from any passing object that he chose to attack. It was midnight, and as we approached the village of R——, he espied a large mansion close by the road. When we arrived opposite, he asked the driver to stop a few minutes; the request was cheerfully complied with, although we were almost freezing with cold—but what new trick he had in view, none could guess.

The funny gentleman marched directly up to the front door of the mansion, and knocked with his cane loud enough to awake all the inhabitants. Immediately a window sash was raised, and out popped a red night-cap, containing the head of the proprietor, who in a great alarm exclaimed:

"What's the matter? What's wanted at this time of night?"

"Pardon me, sir, for this intrusion; but I have a communication to make to you personally, and as the stage is waiting rather impatiently for me, you will be so kind as to hurry to the door for a moment's interview."

The old gentlemen's red night-cap, with its owner in a garment curtailed of its fair proportions, were almost immediately at the door, politely bowing to the funny stranger, who again apologized for disturbing his slumber, and thus unavoidably exposing him to the chilly winds of a December night.

"My dear sir," interrupted Mr. Night-cap, "don't mention it, but pardon me for appearing before you in the plight in which you see me."

"You are certainly quite excusable, and more especially as my great haste prompted this courteous response to my call upon you."

"Be pleased to step into the house, as I notice some ladies in the coach are attracted by my appearance."

"Never mind them, my dear sir; your finely located mansion has arrested the attention of us all—it makes a truly beautiful appearance in the bright moonlight. Speaking of the moon, brings to my mind the question which has recently agitated the scientific world, and in which you undoubtedly have been interested, viz: Is this luminary lahabited or not? The telescope"—

"Excuse my interruption, sir, but allow me to get a cloak, for I am almost frozen, and"—

"Ten thousand pardons, my dear friend—but the stage is waiting for me, and I must lose no time, for of all things in this world, time that"

"Allow me to remind, you, sir, that you desired to make a communication to me. I am now ready to receive it," said Night-cap, impatiently.

"Ah, me! how unmindful I am in the discharge of duty incumbens upon me, and which has been already too long protracted, I must acknowledge."

"Oblige me, sir, by coming directly to the communication which you desire to make to me."

"Again, I beg you to forgive my apparent tardiness in doing so. The fact, my dearest sir, which as a scientific man, I felt it my duty to divulge to you, for your own benefit, for I need not inform you that men endowed with scientific attainments"—

"But, sir, I demand, without further delay, what is the important fact you desire to communicate?"

"It is simply this: Your house being situated on the apex of the hill, with sides sloping sufficiently to allow water to flow therefrom, I have stopped the coach this cold night, and aroused you from your slumbers, to apprise you of the fact that you can, with the greatest ease, drain your cellar from four different directions!"

"You infernal scoundrel!" shrieked the astonished and infuriated proprietor, "I'll teach you a trick worth a dozen of this," as he seized the funny gentleman's cane, who had commenced a rapid retreat for the coach—the red night-cap and abbreviated garment after him, as fast as two spindle shanks could carry him. But the funny gent gained on his pursuer, jumped into the coach, which was at once put in full speed upon adjoining hill, with the enraged country gentleman, in a curtailed garment fluttering in the breeze, in cold pursuit, but whose hot imprecations against us all were enough to stifle the mirth of a live Yankee.

On arriving at the top of the hill, by one of those singular coincidences which sometimes occur at the crisis, to mar or heighten one's happiness, we suddenly came in contact with two open carriages abreast, louding to overflowing with ladies and gentlemen, who were returning from a country ball. The attention of the whole party was soon turned to our red-capped, white-garmented pursuer,—who, not liking so many lady spectators, hurled his cane at us, (which, however, glanced by, and struck among a family of pigs by the road side,) and commenced a rapid retrest for home, followed by a dozen squealing pigs, barking dogs, and a flock of squacking geese. The scene presented was the most ludicrous imaginable, and such a wild outburst of uncontrollable merriment is seldom heard; indeed, it was a fit subject for the pencil of Hogarth.

Louisiana Items.

The Shreveport News, of the 12th, contains the following sad item:

We are pained to learn that on last Sunday evening, whilst the steamer Financier was effecting a landing at this place, a young men by the name of Charlton Dickinson, an attachee of a circus company, was instantly killed by the accidental discharge of a shot gun, which he was endeavoring to remove from among a lot of trunks and other baggage. An inquest was held over his remains by the coroner, and a verdict rendered in accordance with the above facts.

The following "good 'un" is from the West Baton Rouge Sugar Planter of the 10th:

THE CROPS—SCENE ON ——'s PLANTATION:—Five negroes in a cane field, sitting in a circle, and armed with shot guns and brickbats.

Enter SPORTSMAN—"Hello, boys! whot are you all doing here?"

Negro—"Watchin' de crop, massa."

Sportsman—"Watching the crop! where in thunder is the crop?"

Negro—"Dar it is, massa."

Sportsman looks and discovers a solitary stubble sprout just appearing above the ground.

Sportsman—considerably astonished—"Do you call that a crop?"

Negro—Yes, massa; dat's all we got dis year."

Sportsman—still more astonished—"And is that all you're watching?"

Negro—"Hi golly, massa; got to watch even dat now, to keep de neighhors from stealing it."

Exit sportsman, marvelling at the number of hogsheads that plantation will make next season.

Speaking of sugar prospects, the same paper says:

Rain, rain! we want rain. Every one is complaining of the dryness of the weather. What little chance we have had of getting cane enough for seed next year is likely to be lost from the fact that the ground is so parched and dried that nothing can come up. So we go! We are always in the extremes! The ground is either so hard and dry that plowing is impossible, or so wet that you are in danger of being hogged.

The Shreveport News of the 19th says:

The river at this point still continues to fall rapidly. Several boats are hard aground above, without any prospect whatever of getting out until there comes another rise.

This steamer St. Charles, on her last trip up, when a few miles above Bayou Sara, was discovered to be on fire in the hold. By the timely exertions, however, of the officers and others, the fire was extinguished. The amount of the damages to the freight has not been ascertained. No damage to the boat whatever.

The Shreveport Gazette, of the 19th, contains the annexed item of river intelligence:

A private letter which we received from Minden on Thursday morning, contains the following distressing news:

"The water is falling here, or, in other words, navigation is drying up, and the furners begin to fear that corn and cottou won't sprout in red-hot sand."

WIT CONTEST BETWEEN FATHER AND SON.—R. B. Sheridan had a great distaste to anything like metaphysical discussions, whereas Tom had a liking for them. Tom one day tried to discuss with his father the doctrine of Necessity. "Pray, my good futher," said he, "did you ever do anything in a state of perfect indifference; without motive, I mean, of some kind or other?" Sheridan, who saw what was coming, and by no means relished such subjects, even from Tom, or any one else, said, "Yes, certainly." "Indeed," said Tom. "Yes, Indeed." "What! total indifference—total, entire, thorough indifference?" "Yes, total, entire, thorough indifference." "Well, then, my dear father, tell me what is it you can do with (mind) total, entire, thorough indifference?" "Why, listen to you, Tom," said Sheridan. The rebuff, as Tom told me, so disconcerted him, that he had never forgotten it, nor had ever again troubled his father with any metaphysics.

Another amusing incident is the following, in which Prof. Smyth, the tutor of Tom, is concerned:

An incident occurred just as I parted with Mr. S., not a little descriptive of him. "I wrote you a letter lately," I said, "it was an angry one; you will be so good as to think no more of it." "Oh, certainly not, my dear Smyth," he said; "I shall never think of what you have said in it, be assured," and putting his hand in his pocket, "Here it is," he cried, offering it to me. I was glad enough to get hold of it; and, looking at it as I was going to throw it in the fire, lo, and behold, I saw that it had never been opened.

Now.—What is it? That point in duration which links the two eternities; that fitting moment which, as it emerges into the present, vanishes into the past. A beat of the pulse measures it; a heart-throb—a breath. While one utters the word, it comes—is gone.

What of it? Especially this; It is the accepted time—the day of salvation. As it flies, God waits to be gracious. Listen! Divine love speaks. "Unto you, O men, I call. The great expiation has been made. The fountain is open. That blood is sufficient. Whosoever will may live; from death in sin rise to glory. I am a just God and yet a Saviour. But delay not. Now; not to-morrow. Time rushes. Life ebbs. Death hastens. What men are at that last now, they are forever. Its mortal hue colors the illimitable ages."

Will you waste it? What! this breath into which such interests crowd; on which hangs eternity! Waste it! Are you mad? Must truth be unheeded? love rejected? heaven lost? Waste it! Ease, pleasure, gold, fame—throw them all away, if need be; not moments. Seize them—hold them! That undying soul is to be saved, if ever, now!—[Presbyterian.

Ode on Spring.

BY GRAY, AUTHOR OF THE FAMOUS ELEGY.

Lo! where the rosy-bosomed hours,
Fair Venus' train appear,
Disclose the long expecting flowers,
And wake the purple year!
The attic warbler pours her throat,
Responsive to the cuckoo's note.
The untaught harmony of Spring:
While, whispering pleasures as they fly,
Cool zephyrs through the clear blue sky
Their gathering fragrance fling.

Where'er the oaks' thick branches stretch
A broader, browner shade,
Where'er the rude and moss-grown beach
O'er occupied the glade,
Beside some water's rushy brink
With me the muse shall sit and think,
(At ease reclined in rustic state.)
How vain the ardor of the crowd,
How low, how little, are the proud,
How indigent the great!

Still is the toiling hand of Care—
The panting herds repose,
Yet hark, how through the peopled air
The busy murmur glows!
The insect youth are on the wing,
Eager to taste the honied Spring,
And float amid the liquid noon;
Some lightly o'er the current skim,
Some show their gaily-gilded trim,
Quick glancing to the sun.

To Contemplation's sober eye,
Such is the race of man:
And they that creep, and they that fly,
Shall end where they began.
Alike the busy and the gay
But flutter through life's little day.
In fortune's varying colors dressed:
Brushed by the hand of rough Mischance,
Or chill'd by age, their airy dance
They leave, in dust to rest.

Methinks I hear, in accents low,
The sportive kind reply,
"Poor moralist! what art thou?
A solitary fly!
Thy joys no glittering female meets,
No hive hast thou of hoarded sweets,
No painted plumage to display,
On hasty wings thy youth is flown;
Thy sun is set, thy Spring is gone—
We frolic while 'tis May."

Barnum had two suits of clothes and $25 in his pocket on Saturday.—[Boston Post, 18th.

Perhaps it might prove a good plan
For Barnum, so famous for shows,
To exhibit this wonderful pocket
In which he had two suits of clothes.
[Truascript.

IMPORTANT TO THE METHODIST DENOMINATION.

NEW EDITION. Just published, containing Twenty New and Popular Denominational Tunes.

The Wesleyan Sacred Harp,

a collection of choice TUNES and HYMNS, for Prayer, Class and Camp Meetings, Choir and Congregational Singing. By Rev. W. McDonald, of the Maine Conference, and S. Hubbard, Esq., author of several Musical Works.—Price, 50 cents, single; $4 80 per dozen.

This Work is destined to become a very popular Music Book for social meetings with the Methodist Denomination. Rev. W. P. Farrington, Pastor of the Pine Street Methodist Church, Portland, Maine, a man of fine musical taste, writes thus to the Editor of Zion's Herald, Boston;

THE WESLEYAN SACRED HARP: A collection of choice Tunes and Hymns for Social and Congregational Singing. By Rev. M. McDonald and S. Hubbard, Esq.

BRO. WISE: I wonder that no more has been said publicly in favor of this excellent work. It must be that it has not been examined by a practical test, generally, or that it is thought to possess sufficient merit in itself to recommend it wherever it is known. The selection, composition and arrangement of the music and hymns—the latter principally from our standard book—evince a taste and skill which ought to give it an extensive circulation. It is also the book for our family circles and social religious meetings. Having the hymn and music before us, on the same page, it will help to correct the time and harmony, who join in this delightful portion of religious worship, and prevent those grotesque and grating sounds which often assimilate melody, and sometimes the devotional feelings even of those whose ears and voices are scientifically cultivated. Cannot the compiler add, in another edition, some fifteen or twenty carefully selected tunes and hymns, suitable to be used in our public congregations, where congregational singing has been adopted? And we fondly hope that this method of singing will speedily obtain throughout our New England Churches. It is the most conducive to spirituality and union of any mode yet adopted. Success to the "Harp," and let every Methodist Vestry, especially, be generally supplied with it.

Portland, Nov. 6, 1855. W. F. FARRINGTON.

☞ Published by JOHN F. JEWETT & COMPANY, Boston; and JEWETT, PROCTOR & WORTHINGTON, Cleveland, Ohio.

☞ For sale at all the Methodist Book Depositories, and by all Booksellers. a19 4t

TO COUNTRY MERCHANTS.

H. D. McGINNIS, No. 36 Camp street, would respectfully call the attention of Country Merchants and others wishing BOOKS and STATIONERY to sell again, to his extensive assortment of SCHOOL BOOKS, of every description. Also, a large supply of French, English and American STATIONERY, BLANK BOOKS, of all kinds, and in fact, every article found in a Book or Stationery establishment.

All of which he offers exceedingly low to those wishing to buy to sell again, as his object is to make his business a wholesale business.

Country Merchants having in their stocks, will save money by giving him a call. H. D. McGINNIS, s2 1f 36 Camp street.

PLANTATION AND GARDEN FERTILIZERS.

THE subscriber has constantly on hand the following concentrated manures, a single trial of which will prove to the most ingredulous their value as a restorer of fertility to worn out soils, and their adaptation to increasing largely the products of the Garden and Orchard.

Numerous testimonials from gentlemen who tried them last season have been received, all of whom concur in saying that their experiments were satisfactory and profitable beyond their anticipation—

PHOSPHATED GUANO,
In barrels of about 250 lbs, at 2 cents per lb.
SUPER PHOSPHATE OF LIME,
In barrels of about 250 lbs, at 2 cents per lb.
COARSE GROUND BONES,
In barrels of about 175 lbs, at 1½ cents per lb.
FINE GROUND BONES,
In barrels of about 200 lbs, at 1½ cents per lb.
PERUVIAN GUANO,
In packs of about 140 lbs, at 2½ cents per lb.
POUDRETTE
Or de-odorized Night Soil, in powder, at $1 50 per bbl.
LAND PLASTER,
At $1 75 per barrel:
—ALSO—
ROCK SALT, in barrels of about 300 lbs, at 1 cent per lb.

☞ Orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to. A pamphlet, containing further particulars and directions for using the above fertilizers will be sent by mail, on the receipt of a postage stamp, to any one desiring it.

D. C. LOWBER, 98 Magazine street,
m15 6m New Orleans.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

FACULTY—Rev. H. N. SWEATT, D. D., President and Professor of Mental and Moral Sciences, Belles-Lettres and Ancient Languages.

A. R. REMOERT, M. D., Professor of the Physical Sciences and Mathematics.

——, Professor of Music and Modern Languages.

Miss L. BATES, A. M. Instructress in English Literature, Modern Languages, Music, Drawing, Painting, Embroidery, etc.

Miss ISABELLA V. MORRIS, graduate of the State Normal Institute, New York, Instructress in Music, Drawing and Painting.

Mrs. ELIZABETH E. McCORMACK, Instructress in Primary Department.

Miss MARY E. CROWDER, M. E. L. Instructress in Academic Department.

——, Assistant Teacher in the Elementary branches.

N. B.—In a few weeks, a gentleman of distinguished reputation will be added to the present corps, his name occupying the vacancy of Professor of Music and Modern Languages.

RATES OF TUITION PER SESSION OF FIVE MONTHS.

Primary Department	$12 50
Academic Department	15 00
COLLEGIATE DEPARTMENT.
Freshmen and Sophomore classes	20 00
Junior and Senior classes	25 00
ORNAMENTAL DEPARTMENT.
Music on the pianoforte, harp or guitar	25 00
Use of instruments	5 00
Vocal music	1 00
Drawing, with use of copies	12 00
Water and chromatic painting, each	15 00
Oil painting	20 00
Embroidery	10 00
Incidental expenses	2 00
Fee for Graduation and Diploma	5 00

No extra charge made for Modern or Ancient Languages.

Payment to be made at the close of each term. Board, including lighting, washing, lights and fuel can be procured in the village and immediate neighborhood at ten dollars per month. Stamps will be received at any time during the session, and will be charged only from the time of their entrance to the end of the term. We would, however, respectfully urge all parents and guardians who design placing their daughters or wards in the institution, to do so at their earliest convenience, as it will tend much to the individual interest of the pupils and the general prosperity of the school, facilitating, as it will, a proper arrangement of the various classes in their respective branches of study.

School books, stationery, etc., may be had at any of the various stores in the village at the usual rates.

The scholastic year, embracing ten months, will be divided into two equal terms of five months, one immediately succeeding the other.

The first session commencing on the first Wednesday in October, and closing the last week in February; the second commencing on the first Wednesday in March, and closing the last week in July; at which time the annual examination will be held, and the usual rewards and honors conferred. The vacation will embrace the months of August and September.

All applications for adqission of pupils, etc., to be made to the President of the College. m11y

A SOUTHERN REMEDY.

Made by O. O. Woodman, New Orleans, La.

HAS received the appointment from the proprietor for the sole agency of

W. Woodman's Cherry Expectorant,

the medicine that has created such an excitement of the North among the Physicians, and has been pronounced by all who have used it as being far superior to any Cherry Pectoral.

WOODMAN'S CHERRY EXPECTORANT

Contains the active medical qualities of the pure decoction of Wild Cherry Bark, and many other valuable ingredients that render it far better than any other cough medicine in this country.

RECOMMENDATION.

NEW ORLEANS, April 9, 1855.

Dear Sir—The public generally are fully aware of the thousands of remedies for diseased lungs, under the title of Sarsaparillas, Pills, Plasters, Liniments, etc., that are daily brought to their notice through the newspapers, by way of advertisements. My object in writing this note for publication is to indorse the public, so at least those who are afflicted, to use one that contains articles of real use in pulmonary diseases. I am conscious that in so doing, I am acting most unprofessionally and derogatorily to the interests of Medical Science and the regular practitioners of Medicine. I refer to Woodman's Cherry Expectorant, which is a scientific remedy that I have used with more success than any of the usual prescriptions used by physicians.

J. M. MAITLAND, M. D.

This preparation has attained a wide celebrity from the universal success which has attended its use. For though colds, coughs, and in fact, any pulmonary complaint, the medicine, from its peculiar properties as a diaphoretic, and its soothing power to all irritations of the throat, will probably be preferred to any other offered to the public. As an expectorant, or dyspeptic remedy, it will also be found excellent, its natural and genial warmth keeping the digestive powers in proper tone.

Remember that this is the only cough medicine that has stood the test of the medical fraternity. It is sanctioned by approved of, and recommended by leading physicians of New York city. Every bottle is warranted to give satisfaction or the money refunded. We guarantee it to be better than any Cherry Pectoral, Cod Liver Oil, or anything else now extant.

For BRONCHIAL AFFECTIONS it will be found superior to all other remedies.

Sold by O. O. WOODMAN,
New Orleans.
And by all the Druggists at the South. a5 6t

DRUGS, CHEMICALS, PAINTS, OILS, WINDOW-GLASS.

O. O. WOODMAN, WHOLESALE DRUGGIST,

Successor to Jarvis & Woodman

CORNER OF COMMON AND MAGAZINE STREETS, NEW ORLEANS.

IMPORTER AND DEALER IN

CHOICE DRUGS, SELECTED MEDICINES, PURE CHEMICALS, ESSENTIAL OILS,

Medicinal Extracts, Fine Perfumery and Fancy Soaps,

PATENT MEDICINES, SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS, DRUGGISTS' GLASSWARE,

BRUSHES,

FRENCH AND AMERICAN WINDOW-GLASS, PAINTS, OILS, DYE STUFFS, ETC.

☞ Druggists, Physicians, Country Merchants and hunters who purchase medicines, may rely upon being suited. Orders Promptly attended to.

300 DOZEN CHERRY EXPECTORANT—FOR THE CERTAIN CURE OF COUGHS, COLDS INFLUENZA, Croup, Bronchial Affections, Consumption, and all diseases of the lungs, in the incipient stage. Also for the relief of Consumption, in the advanced stages of the disease.

This is an Anodyne Expectorant, prepared on the plan of combining the most active and efficient remedies usually prescribed by the Profession, in all their purity, affording a remedy which is found to give energy and certainty of effect, which cannot be had by using the same remedies as usually prescribed by the physician or apothecary.

It is not designed that this shall be a secret remedy, and the formula, with the proportion of each ingredient, will be readily submitted to physicians.

The cost of the preparation is such that it will not warrant the usual amount of Advertising and puffing resorted to by popular medicine dealers. It must make its way in public favor by its intrinsic merits alone.

The following is one of the many testimonials voluntereed by physicians of the first standing:

FROM DR. W. M. DEASON.

GALLATIN, MISS., May 1, 1852.

O. O. WOODMAN—Dear Sir: I have given your C

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY A COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS FOR THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH—H. N. McTYEIRE, EDITOR.

VOLUME VI—NUMBER 13.
WHOLE NUMBER 273.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 3, 1856.

$2 00 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.
OFFICE—36 CAMP ST.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate,

THE MISER.

The Miser sat in his hovel old,
Feasting his eyes on his yellow gold.
A goodlier sight was never seen,
Than met his gaze on that night, I ween.
His fingers thin are buried deep,
Slowly moving the glittering heap;
His aged head was bowed to hear
The syren voice of his idol dear.

The wind was sweeping that hovel round—
It came to his heart, a lonely sound;
For horne on its wing, above the gale,
Rose the widow's shriek, the orphan's wail.

The old man paused, through mem'ry viewed
The track of years—then once more he stood
A laughing child, at his mother's knee,
Brimming with mirth and innocent glee.
His youth had passed, and life seemed fair,
His future bright, devoid of care.—
Manhood dawned—but with it came,
That blighting curse, a thirst for gain.

The wind was sweeping that hovel round,
It came to his heart a lonely sound;
For it bore on its wings above the gale,
The widow's shriek, the orphan's wail.

The past grew dark—and he gloatingly told
His chiming hoard of blood-stained gold—
His jewels rare, and many they be—
Gems from the mine and pearls from the sea;
But o'er them all that crimson stain,
That no'er for vengeance cried in vain.
That no'er for vengeance cried in vain.
His hour had come—grim Death stood near!
His summons rang in the Miser's ear.

The wind was sweeping that hovel round,
It came to his heart, a lonely sound.
He heard o'er the gale, above its roar,
A warning knock at his bosom's core.

His victims all came gliding back,
Their lowering brows are wreathed in black.
And to his side approaches near
A thin, pale shape—no quakes with fear.
With noiseless speed, now the ghostly band
A circle form round the doomed man.
To break the spell he vainly tries—
"Help! Save me!" he shrieks, and dies!

The wind was sweeping that hovel round,
It swept o'er his heart with a chilling sound,
Like demons' laughter, mocking and shrill;
But he hears it no more—his pulse is still!

EMMA.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

FEMALE COLLEGES.

NUMBER FOUR.

In the beginning of these articles, I stated, for my proposition, that there is at this time a real necessity for a higher order of female schools than exists.

Having taken a rapid view of the premises, we now come directly to the question, what is the position and what are the merits of the existing female schools?

I have already asserted that they are not academies, and that they are not colleges, only in an unwelcome sense. What, then, are they? Let us candidly review them.

To aid us in this undertaking, I will copy from the catalogue of one of the most prominent and successful of these institutions its

COLLEGE COURSE.

First Class.—Arithmetic (continued.)
Algebra.
Use of the Globes.
History.
Botany.
Latin.
Ages, from 11 to 14.

Sophomore Class.—Algebra (concluded.)
History.
Natural History.
Geometry.
Natural Philosophy (lectures.)
Rhetoric.
Latin.
Ages, from 12 to 15.

Junior Class.—Geometry (concluded.)
Logic.
Evidences.
Natural Philosophy (lectures.)
Chemistry (lectures.)
Latin.
Greek.
Ages, from 13 to 16.

Senior Class.—Trigonometry.
Astronomy.
Mental Philosophy.
Moral Philosophy.
Chemistry (lectures.)
Geology.
Latin.
Greek.
Ages, from 14 to 17.

The above ages of the members of the different classes I have added, as the result of careful observation.

Now the first remark I have to make upon that course is, that there is no female school that insists, in practice, upon a full preparation of those who enter upon it. There are very few of the female colleges that have any Senior, Junior, Sophomore and First classes. I have the catalogues of a large number of them before me, and only a single one gives any evidence of such a classification, except in the "Course of Study." But even those few that are sufficiently mature in their system to adopt this division into classes, find it next to impossible to be rigid in requiring all the necessary preparation. "Arithmetic" is to be "concluded" in the first class! How does this work, practically? A young lady comes and reposes, very often, to enter the junior class. She has studied "rhetorie," and "natural philosophy," and "astronomy," and "Watts on the mind," and several other subjects far beyond her apprehension, and the teachor asks he,

"What algebra did you study?"

"Oh, I have never studied algebra."

"Indeed!" replies the teacher, half amused. "And what arithmetic did you study last?"

"I studied——I have done forgot the name."

"Well," pursues the teacher, "how far did you advance in it?"

"How far what, sir?" queries the fair candidate, evidently balked by the teacher's dissyllable.

"I say," he persists, "how far did you go in arithmetic?"

"Oh! I went over——I believe I went over——most to fractions!"

"You did? Well, can you tell me what the answer is called, in multiplication?"

"I reckon it is called the multiplicand, aint it?"

"Hardly!"

"Well, our teacher did'nt never make us git the questions. We only done the sums."

And so the examination passes on without material improvement in grammar, geography, spelling, reading and penmanship. And yet this young lady is a candidate for the junior class. Her parents have brought her with the understanding that she has already studied several of the "higher branches," and with the impression that she is "pretty good in the "common branches." They assure the faculty that they cannot possibly keep her at school more than two years; and, as they have looked over the "Course of Study," they are satisfied that "she can go through very creditably in that length of time."

What is to be done? If this were an isolated case, they could pursue any honest course and be safe; but is a frequent occurrence at all the best female colleges; and as they are without endowment, and therefore wholly dependant upon the good will of the public, they cannot afford to be regardless of that good will in these cases. It will not do for them to inform the young lady that she must go into the preparatory department. The most that the faculty can do, if they wish to keep her, (and they generally do,) is to recommend her to "enter the sophomore class for the time being, and rise as fast as possible." Thus, you see, arithmetic is not likely to be "concluded" in the first class, nor in the sophomore; and, if the truth were confessed, in a majority of instances, it never is concluded as it ought to be. Yet this is a branch that ought to be completed in the common school. It ought never to be regarded as academic, much less collegiate.

The next branch in the above course is algebra. This study is academic. But, in my judgment, it ought never to be undertaken until arithmetic is completed. A good arithmetician can learn more of algebra in four weeks, than a poor one, of the same ability, can learn in four months. It is a sad misdirection and waste of effort when a pupil is doomed to a year's labor upon a study for which previous discipline has not prepared her. Her head is in the mist continually, and clear light never falls upon her path.

But we must hasten our review of the above "course." The next item is, "Use of Globes." I suppose that this was put in for buncombe; for, although I am aware that globes are very useful in connection with the study of some branches, as astronomy, for instance, yet I have never understood them to be a distinct science.

"History" comes next; and upon this point I can only speak my individual sentiments, not knowing whether they will meet the views of others or not. I am decidedly of opinion that there are but two places in the educational system where this branch is admissable, and those are in the common schools and in the very last part of the college career. I will not say that it is essential in the latter place.

"Botany," the next in order, ought to be among the latest of the college studies, and should be pursued by young ladies, and not by little girls.

"Latin" and "Greek" are both academic and collegiate; but the idea of obtaining even a clever smattering of them in the time allotted to them in the above "course," is preposterous.

Most of the other branches are collegiate; and not only so, but entirely beyond the reach of those youthful, untrained minds that are called upon to study them. Of this in my next.

MENTOR.

(To be Continued.)

Odd Amusement.—The ladies of New Zealand, according to an English missionary, have a way of their own to divert themselves:

The chief amusement of the females was, and still is the tangi, or crying. The ladies pride themselves on their doing this in the most affecting way, so that a stranger would be deceived, and not think it possible that it could be mere mockery of woe, and yet it is nothing more; tears are shed in abundance, and the hands are wrung, as if suffering the most poignant grief, whilst the most heart-rending cries excite the sympathy of the company. The ladies have their heads adorned with fillets of leaves, or of dog's hair, and so much joy do they experience in this exciting amusement, that they look forward to a good crying with the same desire a young lady in England does to a dance or ball.

DETACHED THOUGHTS.

BY REV. WILLIAM S. PLUMER, D.D.

As good men sometimes have very great faults, so wicked men, in the midst of their crimes, often show a strange regard to some of their obligations. In a duel, J. A. Haldane raised his pistol saying, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit."

Looso doctrinal views sooner or later weaken men's regard for the commandments. Macknight, with his lax views of St. Paul's writings, persuaded Dr. Adam, while they were traveling in England, that, as they were now out of the bounds of Presbytery, and under no obligation to countenance prelatic worship, it would be very absurd to allow their journeying plans to be deranged by the intervention of the Sabbath.

In power, nothing equals remorse. Herod, though, a Sadducee, and disbelieving the truth respecting angels and spirits and the resurrection, yet found himself firmly believing that John the Baptist, whom he had beheaded six months previously, was risen from the dead.

When God chooses to work, he is at no loss for means. One of the brightest lights of modern times was aroused from the sleep of death by the excitement of the French Revolution. A few years ago I knew a man to be brought into deep distress, about his salvation by the profaneness of the men around him. Their conversation was the mirror in which he saw his own heart.

The longer I live, the more am I ready to adopt the language of a great man: "When I set out in life, I regarded the inaccuries of conversation between people of character as proofs of a lying disposition; but when I make due allowance for inattention, forgetfulness and misapprehension, I ascribe much that is incorrect to human infirmity rather than human wickedness."

I greatly like that saying of the Rev. Charles Simeon, in a letter to a friend: "If I can have my God to go before me in the pillar and the cloud, I long exceedingly to visit you once more; but if I cannot see my way clear, I am better where I am." Running before Providence is very perilous.

Let us no more think pleasantly of our own works, sufferings and engagements; but only of what Christ has done, suffered and promised. In him we are complete.

Are we not in danger of disparaging the external evidences of Christianity in our endeavors to give prominence to the internal evidences? Jesus Christ often appealed to his miracles; so did the early Christians.

Love of ease is one of the last sins we get rid of.

"In this life," said one, "I shall never get beyond the prayer of the publican, 'God be merciful to me, a sinner.'" Suppose one should get beyond that prayer, how absurd would all Christian religion be.

"He hath ill repented whose sins are repeated." If so, how many professions of religion are in vain.

Every wicked man lays down rules for others, which, applied to himself, would prove him vile, ungrateful and worthy of death. "Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant."

If ignorance were the sole cause of error and wickedness, then in Christian countries all men would soon be sound in faith and righteous in all their ways.

Plato confessed there was no more efficacious way of instructing youth than by odes and songs; but said that those of a right kind must be the work of God, or of a divine man. The songs of Zion are the very thing.

There never was a truly happy self-seeker. There never was a philanthropist who did not augment his enjoyment by his self-sacrifice.

That affliction which brings us to the mercy-seat cannot long be esteemed undesirable.

That joy that makes us slight prayer will, in the end, fill us with sadness.

Many a man has rejoiced more in a dungeon than his persecutor in his palace.

No man living would be pleased to see a correct account of his whole life published to the world; and yet a well-written life of himself would be to each man the most interesting book he ever read.

The pleasures of self-gratification are coarse, feeble and short-lived; those of self-denial are refined, powerful and enduring.

The most exalted worth is stripped of its glory when it glorifies itself.

Though vanity is not commonly esteemed malignant, yet it has none of the benevolence of true humility.

There is as much difference between genuine patience and sullen endurance as there is between the smile of love and the malicious gnashing of the teeth.

If Christians believed that the work of the Spirit was as necessary to bring sinners to Christ as the work and sufferings of Christ were necessary to bring in righteousness, would there not be more earnest prayer?

If men forget God, it will be but just in God to forget them. If they are deaf to his calls, he will be deaf to their cries.

Many argue thus, "Our Maker will not damn us." But they forget what God has spoken of the wicked, "He that made them will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them will show them no favor."

All pious ministers deplore their want of fervor in setting forth the love of Christ.

Heaven is holiness perfected, sin conquered, the tempter vanquished, and Christ seen.—N. Y. Observer.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

AND

"A Member of Mississippi Annual Conference."

If you were at our last session in Vicksburg, and were awake, as you should have been, you would remember that I was appointed agent of the Book and Tract Society of the Mississippi Annual Conference; and had you been an attentive reader of the articles addressed by me to the preachers of our Conference and friends of our cause, and the superintendents of Sunday schools, you would have seen that it was by the directions of the Board of Managers I had established a depository of books and tracts in Vicksburg; and had you read carefully the proposition from which you make a garbled quotation, you would have understood the whole subject clearly, and, I trust, become an active colporteur.

That proposition was made to induce local and itinerant preachers to become colporteurs. They are expected to labor in the work by selling and giving away books. They are allowed, according to my instructions, to have 30 per cent. on what they sell, nothing for what they give away.

It is only to colporteurs that I propose to take back, at the end of the year, such books as are on hand and uninjured. They are not to be left on the circuit or mission, or elsewhere but at the depository.

If you want to work on your own hook," and on the independent line, you can get books from me on just such terms as at Nashville.

There is what we call the tract list of books. Those have been reduced in price from 20 to 35 per cent.; and will be so put to those wishing to act as colporteurs.

To enable us to do this, we have to call on those who have the means to help us in a good cause. By reducing a book to 40 cents which usually sells for 60 cents, will enable some poor person to buy; and to put others at 20 cents which usually sell for 30 cents, will enable others to buy. Now, in view of these facts and considerations, will not "A member of the Mississippi Annual Conference" exert himself to get us a few donations from some of his Louisiana sugar or cotton planters? He might send us a hundred or two. Will he try? If he can get persons to give ten dollars or more they will be entitled to receive back one-half the amount in books and tracts. Give them a talk, my brother, and see how many will respond to the call. I am receiving donations of one, two, three, five, ten, twenty, twenty-five, fifty, up to one hundred dollars.

Hope to hear from you soon. Just say in your letter, I am willing to take books according to your proposition, and you shall have them on such terms.

Colporteurs are expected to report monthly:—

1. How much sold.
2. How much given away.
3. How much stock on hand.
4. How much received as donations for the society.
5. How many subscribers obtained for our periodicals.
6. How many families visited.
7. How many are without Bibles.
8. How many are without religious books.

Also, to make remittances with their reports.

I trust this explanation, is explicit enough, with this item added: You are allowed to give only one-fourth as much as you sell, unless in extra neighborhoods, about which we must have an understanding when the books and tracts are sent.

H. H. Montgomery, Agent.

P. S.—We have Bibles, Testaments, List and Psalms in almost every variety of binding and size; the reply to Grave's "Iron Wheel," also.

LATER FROM CALIFORNIA.

Fearful Riots at Panama.

AMERICANS KILLED.

PASSENGERS ROBBED AND MURDERED.

Important from Central America.

British Correspondence with Costa Rica Intercepted.

The steamship Granada, Capt. Griffin, arrived yesterday morning from New York and Havana, having left the former city on the 17th, and the latter on the 24th inst. The Granada reports having seen a large American ship on Bay Blanco, near Cardenas. Men were at work on board, dismantling her. It was ascribined at Havana that she was bound for New Orleans, and had been ashore on the Bahamas, and paid salvage at Nassau. The ship's name is unknown.

The steamer Philadelphia arrived at Havana on the 23d, with passengers from steamer Cortero; left Aspinwall on the 25th. Steamer Illinois arrived at Havana on the evening of the 24th, with passengers from steamers Golden Gate and Uncle Sam, leaving at Aspinwall some 400 passengers of the latter ship for want of accommodation. A serious riot occurred at Panama on the eve of the 15th, when a large number of passengers bound for and from California (Americans) were killed and wounded. All the Express mails were destroyed, and a number lost all their baggage. The Panama Railroad was torn up some two miles, and the company's books destroyed.

Among the passengers on the Granada is Parker H. French, Esq., former Nicaraguan Minister to the United States, who reports the capture of the English mail for Costa Rica, wherein dispatches were found from Lord Clarendon, charging and against Walker. The dispatches have been forwarded to Washington in charge of a special messenger.

Important from Panama.

The most important intelligence brought by this arrival, relates to the bloody and destructive riots that occurred at Panama, on Tuesday afternoon and night, 15th instant. We condense from the account furnished by the Panama Star and Herald of the 16th:

On Tuesday afternoon, as we stated before, the 270 passengers, per Illinois, arrived from Aspinwall at the station, for the purpose of embarking on board the John L. Stephens, for California. Owing to the state of the tide, they were detained on shore until a late hour. A little before dark, whilst most of the passengers were around the railroad station waiting to get their tickets registered, others were at the Ocean Hotel, and in the other hotels and eating houses in the Chenega.

Whilst Messrs. McLane, Center and Nelson were standing on the wharf, they perceived a commotion among the passengers, many of whom commenced running towards the town. Sending a messenger to enquire what was the matter, they were informed that a native had tried to steal a watermelon—a pistol had been discharged, and a man slightly wounded. Almost at the same time, and before the party left the wharf, the bells of the Church of Santa Anna commenced to ring the alarm of fire, and immediately after, the natives were seen running along the beach and through the Chenega, and then followed the attack on the Ocean Hotel, McAllister's store and the Pacific House. From the time the first difficulty arose until the attack on the houses, not more than fifteen minutes elapsed. During this time a few shots were fired. Capt. McLane immediately sent a messenger to town for Col. Garrido and the police, and then all three proceeded to the railroad station.

Many of the passengers ran down to the wharf to embark, and others at the depot were anxious to go out to rescue the women and children in the hotels, and a few went, the rest crowding into the railroad office, asking for arms and ammunition. All the arms in the office were a double barreled gun, a pair of pistols, a sabre and fourteen old flint muskets, all private property, which, after some delay (believing there would be no attack,) were given out and loaded for defence, but a sentry was placed at the door to prevent any one from going out and joining in the fight.

At this time Mr. Center sent and had the women and children removed from the Ocean House.

Colonel Ward, U. S. Consul, and Mr. Sabin, his secretary, just then arrived at the scene of action, and endeavored, along with the other gentlemen, to restrain the passengers, some of whom were anxious to go to the rescue of the women and children in the Chenega, and could with difficulty be kept back, although at this time the work of plunder had almost ceased and things were comparatively quiet.

An old cannon belonging to the company was dug out of the sand and loaded, being charged with rivets instead of ball, but Col. Ward, Mr. Center, and all who had authority, gave positive orders that it was not to be fired unless an advance was made by the mob.

The Consul then sent his secretary to see if the police were coming, but as he did not return (having been shot in the leg by a revolver ball,) the Consul himself and Mr. Nelson went forward to see how things stood. They had not advanced beyond the Pacific House, when a crowd of natives advanced through the cane huts, and Mr. Nelson called out to them in Spanish not to fire—that they were friends; but they disregarded the notice, and a number of shots were fired, some of which hit Col. Ward's horse, which caused it to become restive. In vain Mr. Nelson expostulated with the people; they told him to keep out of the way, and not to return to the station, if he did not want to be killed. Seeing that Mr. N. persisted in advancing to the station, a man called out to him to keep to the left, which he accordingly did, and got to the track about a hundred yards above the depot, and then walked down to the building.

In the meantime, most of the passengers and persons at the station had got inside the Company's fonce, and sheltered themselves, as well as possible, from the bullets that now flew about fast, a regular fire being kept up upon the building, and, at this time, many were killed and wounded.

A report was then spread that the natives were coming down the track to attack the depot; and from the direction of the balls, it was evident they were changing their positions. There was no firing at this time from the station or passengers. Col. Ward, Capt. McLane, Mr. Nelson, and Mr. Corwine, then changed their position, and moved to the old mess house, whilst Mr. Center went into the depot to see after the passengers—all of them believing that when Col. Garrido arrived with the police, the whole matter would be speedily terminated.—Presently, the bugle of the police was heard, but by this time the natives had advanced on the freight house and commenced pillaging. One or two shots were at this time fired by the passengers. Still no attempt was made by the police to restrain the mob; but, on the contrary, they joined the people and commenced firing on the depot.

Col. Ward, Capt. McLane, Mr. Nelson, and Mr. Corwine, then returned to town to induce the Governor to come down and stop the massacre. On their way up, they were stopped by a party of armed natives, but allowed to proceed. Reaching the Government House, they found that the Governor was not at home, whilst a crowd around the house, armed with guns, demanded that powder and ball should be given to them.

At last, the Governor was found in Juan De Dios street, and, agreed to return to the station, but said that he had been there, was fired at, and received a ball through his hat. At length he set out, accompanied by Capt. McLane and Mr. Nelson.

Reaching the scene of the riot, they found the people still plundering the Ocean Hotel and McAlister's store, whilst on the beach a man named Dolores Urriola had a cannon loaded, pointed at the steamer Taboga, and could, with difficulty, be induced not to fire it.

They then learnt that Col. Garrido had gone or sent on board the Taboga, disarmed the passengers, and taken away the ship's gun.

When Mr. Nelson and Capt. McLane were thus employed, Mr. Center entered the depot where he saw the natives advancing down the track to attack it. Entering the freight room, he found it filled with men, women and children, trying to screen themselves from the firing, which was then brisk, and all in the wildest state of excitement. From thence he entered the office, (the one nearest the beach at the left hand corner of the depot,) and found many persons there trying to keep the door closed; the room was filled with smoke. Whilst there aiding, he saw one man killed before him, and three more killed or wounded on the floor; there was no firing from the room. Leaving this scene of slaughter, he next managed to get to a plank over the beams of the freight door, and looking out to the Chenega, through a large open door, he distinctly saw the police outside close to the house firing deliberately into it, Col. Garrido, with his sword drawn, cheering and urging on his men. Proceeding to one of the rooms on the upper story, he found two passengers trying to hold the door; he helped them, but in a moment they were both shot—one died instantly, and the other in a few hours. Passing to another place where he could see into the freight room, he saw the natives enter. The passengers cried out for "mercy" and "quarter;" but the people still continued plundering, rifling the persons of the passengers, and cutting open their carpet bags and trunks. About this time the firing ceased, but the plundering continued.

When Mr. Nelson and Capt. McLane reached the station, after leaving the Governor, they found the police outside in a very excited state, and wanting to fire into the upper story of the depot, declaring that they had been fired upon. Promising Col. Garrido to stop the firing, they got from him a lantern and proceeding up stairs found the room filled, chiefly with women and children, the few men that were there declaring that they had never fired.

Mr. Garrido and Capt. Molano then went up a second time to release the women and children, Mr. Nelson remaining with the police to prevent them from ascending the stairs, which they seemed anxious to do. At one time, they raised their muskets, and were with difficulty prevented from firing. Finally, about seventy women and children were brought down and taken on board the steamer.

In examining the offices afterwards, a horrid sight presented itself, many dead and wounded, horribly mutilated, lay all about; the floor was covered with blood, all the furniture, books, papers, etc. of the Company were destroyed, and an attempt made to break open a large iron safe, a hole being actually made on the door, in the outside plate. All the property of the Company was destroyed except that in the room of Mr. Johnson, and the telegraph office. Some of the cars were injured, a rail or two taken up, and the telegraph wires cut, and an attempt was made to fire the depot, but providentially it did not succeed.

A party was then sent out along the beach on the North side, to bring in the stragglers who had taken to the bushes. One party were met, who said they had been robbed by men calling themselves policemen. Fifteen lives were known to be lost, all passengers per Illinois, except two. Five lie still at the station, badly wounded, two at the American Hotel, and some, slightly wounded, went on board the steamer John L. Stephens, and one or two returned next day to Aspinwall. In the whole matter the conduct of the police and the people was most blameable, and the whole difficulty might have been settled without loss of life if the police and the authorities had done their duty.

We are, unfortunately, unable to give the names of the murdered passengers, as the bodies were not recognized. We only know of Robert Marks, from Pennsylvania; Octave Dubois, Frenchman; Stokes, passenger on the Cortes; and Alex. Sweet, of Maine. Twelve others unknown. Nathan Proble, relative of the distinguished American commodore, of that name, was lying mortally wounded in the Railroad Company's Hospital. Patrick J. O'Neil, of New York, was severely wounded, as were also W. A. Fonner and Rev. John Sellwood. Dr. T. C. Barker. Physician to the Railroad Company, had rendered noble service to the suffering.

Col. Totten, the Chief Engineer of the Panama Railroad Company, addressed, on the 18th, an indignant communication and protest to the Governor of Panama, who appears to have acted, from all accounts, the part of a scoundrel and coward. After forcibly reciting the circumstances, a history of which is given above, he concludes in the following scathing manner:

Your Excellency well knew the character of the people composing that mob. You knew that their design was robbery—and robbery through blood—and you permitted an indiscriminate massacre and pillage of defenceless strangers, and helpless women and children, which would have disgraced the most savage country on earth, and which it was your duty and in your power to prevent.

Two days have passed since the committal of these outrages, and I have yet to learn whether your Excellency has taken any steps to arrest those who were engaged in them, or purpose any.

Wherefore, in the name of the Panama Railroad Company, whose agent I am, I do hereby solemnly protest against the outrages committed by the mob, composed of citizens of Panama and its vicinity, on the evening of the 15th inst.

I protest against the massacre and pillage committed on the persons and effects of the passengers.

I protest against the attack and pillage committed by the mob and police on the buildings and property of the Panama Railroad Company.

And, I protest against the conduct of your Excellency, the Governor of the State of Panama, in ordering the police to fire upon the Railroad Depot, and the passengers contained therein; in not taking measures to avert the riot, and in not affording protection to the lives and effects of the passengers, and the property of the Panama Railroad Company.

And, I do hereby give notice to your Excellency, that this Government will ho held responsible for the murders and outrages committed on the evening of the 15th, on the persons of the passengers, and for the robberies and damages committed on their effects and on the property of the Panama Railroad Company.

Very respectfully,

G. M. Totten.

On the same day Col. Totten addressed another letter to the Governor, asking whether protection would be extended in future, and requesting an early answer, as the steamer Golden Age was expected that night, "with a large number of passengers and an amount of treasure, which, if your Excellency cannot protect with the police or other force, it will be necessary to protect by other means."

The Governor returned a very civil answer, in which promises were freely indulged.

From the Star—second edition of the 10th—we clip the following:

Later from San Juan del Sur.

The pilot boat Joseph Howett, Capt. Clapp, from San Juan del Sur, April 3d, arrived here this morning (19th) with Mr. John Fretz, Mr. Garrison, Jr., and two other passengers. We have been able to learn but little news; but it is said that Gen. Walker is still in Rivas, and that he intends advancing on Honduras.

The Costa Rica army had not advanced beyond their frontier since the battle of Santa Rosa. The place was perfectly healthy, and everything quiet in San Juan del Sur.

Later from California.

By the arrival of the Granada on Monday, our files of California papers are completed to the 6th of the present month. The summary is not so interesting as usual.

A. A. Cohon, whose connection with Adams & Co.'s affairs, as receiver, is a matter of unenviable notoriety, is still in prison. His bail was reduced by the court to $150,000, but, thus far, he has not been able to find acceptable securities.

The Limantour decision, by which the Land Commissioner confirmed his claim to all the southern part of the city, and an immense tract of adjacent lands, is now, by appeal, before the U. S. District Court, in which A. Jouan, the ex-agent and confidential friend of Limontour, is giving evidence to show that the whole claim is one of fraud and perjury! The witnesses are undergoing a severe cross-examination.

The sentence of death upon Adalbert Hoepke, a native of Germany, who was recently convicted of the murder of another German, has been commuted by Gov. Johnson to one year's imprisonment in the State Prison.

The winter, if winter it may be called, may be said to be over, and we are about, to use the quaint language of a friend, entering upon the monotonous days of fine weather! The rains however, never entirely cease until the middle of May.

After an unusually long interval of dry weather, during part of which the thermometer occasionally reached 80 to 82 deg. Fahrenheit, we have been favored with some refreshing showers, and, fortunately, more copious in the country than in the city. The miners are rejoicing thereat, and well they may, for already they are furnishing us with proofs of their indomitable industry, and from all accounts we have reason to anticipate an excess, instead of a diminished product from the placers and mines this season.

Another great real estate case is before the courts: that part of the Folsom property derived by purchase from Wm. A. Leidesdorff, a portion of which has been sold by the executors of Folsom, is now claimed by certain persons of the name of Leidsdorff, in Denmark, on the ground of the illegitimacy of said W. A. L., and their own nearest propinquity.

News reached San Francisco on the 3d inst., of fresh and fierce attacks by the Indians upon the settlements in Oregon and Washington. The town at the Cascades was destroyed and twenty whites killed. The Indians captured and destroyed the steamer Mary. They are eight hundred strong. At Connell's Prairie, in Washington Territory, the volonteers, one hundred and ten men, had a fight with the Indians, whom they routed, killing thirty or forty of them; only four volunteers being wounded. At Crescent City the Indians have also been troublesome, and a Mr. Wright was killed.

For the City six per cent. Bonds, 62½ cents on the dollar were offered on Thursday, April 3.

An effort is being made in the Legislature to obtain an act for building a State Capitol at Sacramento.

The Mission Railroad is begun, in compliance with the charter.

Rich Dirt.—The proprietors of the Bassette Tunnel, in Webber Hill, the Placerville Democrat says, reached the "basin" after having driven their tunnel 2,000 feet into the hill. One pan of dirt, obtained immediately after breaking through, yielded the snug little amount of $400, and from two other pans they took $300—making $1,100 to three pans of dirt.

Henry S. Foote, Esq., the Know-Nothing nominee for the U. S. Senate, has formally withdrawn his name, under the plea that the Legislature will not go into a joint convention whilst he remains a candidate.

A week since, strawberries, new potatoes and green peas made their "first appearance this season." Of course they are not to be bought at "unprecedentedly low prices," but they will soon come within the reach of all men's pockets. The recent rains have greatly relieved housekeepers in the price of milk, butter, etc. Oregon apples are, however, still abundant at the moderate prices of 25 cents all the way up to $2 each.

Troops are being drawn from California and sent to Oregon to act in the existing war.

The Daily News of April 1, says: We are happy to notice the return of Dr. Scott, after a brief absence of several days into the interior for the benefit of his health, which is much improved.

Gen. John A. Sutter has commenced sinking an artesian well at Hock Farm, and already it has been sunk to the depth of 225 feet.

An immense nugget of gold and quartz, of equal proportions, the whole about 14 inches long and eight or nine inches thick and wide, was found lately, which is valued at $1,300.

Further from Europe.

By the New York papers of the 21st, we have the full detail of news brought by the Africa, which we condense into the following account.

Accounts from Cronstradt assert that a squadron was ordered to be got ready for the Middle of May, but for what purpose was not publicly known. It was rumored that its object was to convey the Emperor of Russia and one of his brothers on a visit to France and England. This report was strengthened by the fact that orders had been given to engage pilots well acquainted with the coasts of both those countries.

A Brussels journal says that the coronation of the Czar will take place about the 31st of August, and will be great pomp.

Advices from the Crimea state that the weather had become so intensely cold that the troops found it absolutely necessary to shut themselves up in their tents and huts.

The rejoicings at the conclusion of Peace are general and hearty in France. Paris was illuminated on the occasion as it had not been for years; even the most obstinate Legitimists and Orleanists joining in the display. Mr. Buchanan was at Paris, where it is said that the very first visit he paid was to Mrs. James Gordon Bennett, of New York. At St. Petersburg peace was proclaimed on the 1st inst., the Imperial manifesto declaring that the object for which Russia had urged the war was now attained in the guaranty, by the treaty of peace, of the rights of Christians in the East.

In England there is no general satisfaction at the peace; some classes are glad to have it, but the country at large would rather have fought on in the hope of retrieving England's lost prestige. The military commission, to enquire into the results of the former enquiry into the misconduct of certain aristocratic Crimean Generals, has commenced its sittings.

Spain.

The Madrid Journals of the 28th ult., have arrived. They state that the French Ambassador had given a magnificent ball, in honor of the birth of the Prince Imperial, and that it was attended by the Infantas Isabella and Louisa, the principal ladies of the court, and the greatest political personages.

Sweden.

The Swenska Tainingen, the semi-official journal of Stockholm, contains an article maintaining that the idea of fortifying that city cannot be looked on as a political demonstration against Russia, and that it has not had its origin in present circumstances.

The Baltic.

Kiel, April 1.—The news of peace was not received with much satisfaction. To-day it was announced that the screw line of battleship Majestic and Cossack had received orders to return immediately to England, and that the only other vessels now here, the Cuckoo of three guns, should at once proceed to the Gulf of Finland with dispatches for Capt. Watson of the Imperieuse, containing instructions for the return of the advanced squadron to England without delay. When the squadron calls here on the way home, the last of the British fleet will have been seen here for the present.

London, April 5, 9 A. M.—The Baltic fleet no longer exists in official recognition. It was merged into the home fleet yesterday.

Immediately after the review it is rumored that 10,000 seamen will be discharged from the fleet; these will consist for the most part of the men drawn from the Coast Guard at the outset of the war, and such others as have served fully and longer than the usual term of commission. It is said that there will be a permanent Channel fleet of exercise and training, consisting of twelve sail-of-line adjuncts.

It may be confidently expected that the year 1857 will be far advanced before the last man and the last cargo of shells can pass the Dardanelles on their way homeward.

France.

The details connected with the Danubian Principalities and the liberties of the Christian subjects of the Porte, are the points to be arranged in the renewed Conferences. The Porte objects to any occupation of Turkey by the allied forces, and it is possible that the point will be waived, if the Powers are satisfied as to the safety and privileges of the Christians. If the return home of the Allied armies is performed leisurely, the feeling in official quarters is that a sufficient force will remain for many months to keep fanaticism in check. It grows confirmed that the situation of Italy will form a subject of deliberation before the Conference dissolves.

The French army will return from the Crimea in bodies of 20,000, with corresponding materiel. About six months will be occupied in the evacuation. It will begin in May and last over October. The 2d, or Gen. Bosquet's corps, as having most suffered, will arrive first; the 1st, or Gen. D'Autemarre's, next; and then the 3d, or Gen. M'Mahon's. Sailing vessels will be employed for the materiel. A dispatch has been received from Marshal Pelissier, which announces an improvement in the health of the army.

The presence of the Western forces in the East is now only a question of months. The British army is said to be provided with food and necessaries for nearly twelve months.

St. Petersburg, April 2, 1856.—By an imperial manifesto peace is proclaimed, "the object of the war having been gained by the security acquired for the privileges of Christians in the East." To avoid future collision, it is added, a fresh frontier line for Bessarabia has been conceded.

England.

Relations with the United States.—Lord Goderich asked Lord Palmerston whether a document that had recently appeared, purporting to be a dispatch written by the British Minister at Washington, acknowledging his having forgotten to submit the British proposal for arbitration to the Secretary of State of the United States, on the 17th of February last, with reference to the existing disputes on the subject of Central America, was authentic?

Mr. Gladstone, before the question was answered, called attention to the delay which had taken place in the production of the papers relative to Central America.

Lord Palmerston replied that the papers relating to Central America were nearly complete, and they would, he trusted, be laid on the table in the course of a very few days. As to Lord Goderich's question, he replied that the dispatch in question was a correct copy of a letter sent by Lord Clarendon to Mr. Crampton; but it must be obvious, from the whole dispatch, that no inconvenience to the public service had ocurred from the accidental delay of Mr. Crampton in presenting the letter, because the same offer of arbitration had been communicated to Mr. Marcy by Mr. Buchanan, the United States Minister to this country.

The U. S. Mediterranean squadron was about to cruise off the coast of Spain.

Vicksburg and Shreveport Railroad.—We call attention to the card of Mr. Mallory, the collecting agent of the Vicksburg and Shreveport Railroad Company, in another column. Mr. M. will call on the stockholders, as speedily as possible. He informs us that the company had 1,500 tons of railroad iron afloat, for which they have received the bills of lading, and that it will be dispatched to the end of the road opposite this city, with all possible celerity.

[Vicksburg Whig, 24th.

Broke Jail.—We learn from passengers who came in on the cars yesterday, that the prisoners confined in the Hinds county jail at Raymond, made their escape night before last. James H. Nusom, charged with being implicated in the murder of Maj. Sharkey, to be hung on the 14th day of May, for murder of Mr. Irish, indicted for the murder of his brother, and Jacob Vogh, indicted for the murder of his wife, all escaped. We have no particulars as to the manner in which the escape was effected, nor do we learn that there were any other prisoners made free by the nocturnal enterprise. This is the second time that Nusom has escaped from the same prison. [Ib.

Fire in Jackson.—We learn from a gentleman in from Jackson yesterday, that the out-buildings attached to the State Asylum for the blind, were destroyed by fire on Thursday night. The main edifice was in great danger, but by the exertions of the firemen and citizens, it was preserved without receiving much damage. [Ib.

A Singular Discovery.—A correspondent in Virginia, says the Dayton Empire, writes us that some hands employed by Mr. Wm. Kearon, were digging out a cellar in Botetourt county, Va., at a depth of sixteen inches below the surface, struck upon a pot containing a quantity of iron implements of ancient manufacture, and before unseen shape. Several scientific gentlemen have examined into the matter, and have come to the conclusion that the coins, together with the articles of curiosities, must have been placed there at a remotely early date, and hence has given rise to much curiosity throughout the country.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

NEW ORLEANS:

SATURDAY, MAY 3, 1856.

God Husbandry.

There was a husbandman that always [illegible] good seed but never had good [illegible]. A [illegible] neighbor came to him and said, "Shall I tell you what probably [illegible] the cause of it. It may be," [illegible] you do not sow your seed!" "Why," replied the other; "nor [illegible]." "Yes, surely," said his neighbor, "and I will tell you how: It must [illegible] prayer." When the party [illegible] he thanked him for his counsel, reformed his fault, and had as good [illegible] as other persons. May not this little anecdote afford a useful hint to those whose office it is to sow the good seed of the divine word? Too frequently it is found that but very little good fruit is produced within the limits of their exertions. What can be the cause? Alas! the seed which they sow, although of the best quality, even of heavenly origin, is not steeped in prayer. To the want of scrupulously attending to this practice, may be traced that barrenness of our favored land. Let, then, the spiritual husbandman, in the future, be more diligent in his attention to that important duty, and then may he hope to see the vineyard committed to his care abounding with all the fruits of righteousness.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

LETTER FROM HOMER.

Homer, La., April 30, 1856.

Dear Advocate:—Believing that you would like to hear something of the prospects of Homer College, I take the liberty of sending you some cheering information.

For some time fears have been entertained that the citizens of Homer would not display that perseverance necessary to the success of the enterprise. But I am happy to be able to say that they have taken such steps as will prove to the friends of the undertaking that they are in earnest, and will succeed. Fifteen thousand dollars have been subscribed by responsible men.

At our First Quarterly Conference we resolved to lend our best efforts towards completing the college. The day after the Board of Trustees met, and resolved to let out the contracts for building the edifice. They are determined to let the people hear the workmen driving the nails, &c. The ground selected for its location is in the best part of town.

The Preparatory Department has commenced, under the charge of Mr. J. Young, a gentleman fully competent to discharge the duties incumbent upon him. These measures, though but recently taken, had encouraged the people of the surrounding country very much.

Another movement made by the citizens, though not connected with the college business, will tend greatly to its success. They have employed Mrs. T. J. Jackson, of Georgia, to take charge of the Homer Female High School. Mrs. J. has long been favorably known to the people of the South, and the reputation that she has brought has given to Homer a name that nothing else would have given it.

I neglected to mention that the Board has opened a correspondence with distinguished gentlemen of other States, in order to procure by January next a President and Board of Professors for the college.

From this statement you perceive that the Homer people have gone to work, and intend to keep on working till they accomplish their object. All that is now necessary to make Homer College a school that will do honor to our State and Conference, is the hearty co-operation of the brethren in the lower part of the State. This we expect; and we have no doubt but that they will aid us as much as is in their power. F. T. R.

The Redeemer's Tears.—Although the critical philosopher might dare pronounce it weakness in the Son of God to weep, yet the compassionate Jesus thought it not a shame to suffer his benevolent heart to be touched by feelings of pity, and gave vent to his pent-up sorrow by a gushing of tears.

He that is not against his sin, in a [illegible] resistance, is for it in his affections.

Very few men, properly speaking, live at present; but they are preparing to live at another time.

Life is the day of salvation, the golden season when grace may be obtained, the period when the ship of the soul lies in our harbor, bound for [illegible]. Never to be remembered, never to be recalled, never to be [illegible] it by applying [illegible].

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Nashville, April 22, 1856.

My Dear P.—The Missionary Board, whose annual meeting begun yesterday, is still in session, and for several days will be. Attendance full. Bishop Kavanaugh is absent, doing missionary service on the Pacific.

Bishop Soule is failing fast. Sunken features and the tremulous, giving away signs of age, show themselves. Yet he is present and participating: I have heard that he is writing an answer to Dr. Elliott's book, called "History of the Great Secession." He and Dr. Elliot are, perhaps, the only persons that ever read that voluminous story through. Bishop Soule may feel called upon, on account of the official character of that book, (its author's would not challenge his attention,) to supply a refutation of its falsehoods, which are many. He told us, in social converse yesterday, that his fifty-seventh year in the itinerant ministry was completed on the 5th of last January. For over thirty years he has been bishop; and in all that time never missed one of his Conferences; and on three occasions, only, arrived too late to open it. This example is not the least valuable of his excellent life.

Mrs. Soule is in very feeble health, and Bishop S. spends every night at his country home, about six miles from the city.

Bishop Andrew has renewed his youth. For these years I have not known him more vigorous in mind and body.

Bishop Pierce is a little fatigued by excessive travel and labor. But his buoyant spirit and well-knit frame require but a few days for recuperation. Demands for his special services are pouring in from every quarter. I hear some from the Crescent City, which I have not yet broken to him, waiting to see how far ahead he is engaged. If not further than next year, I shall put in.

Bishop Paine is in fine health. Most of his time at command is spent on the forthcoming life of McKendree—a treasure in store for the Church.

Bishop Early took, on his way here, a trip down among the rice plantations of South Carolina and Georgia, visiting the negro missions. As usual, on my arrival, Saturday, he had been on the ground two days in advance of me—and I was among the first here!

THE TREASURY.

The Church may get ready to hear of a deficit of about forty-thousand dollars. The receipts of last year were meagre, where full measure had been calculated on in the appropriations. Now the rivers are up, the crop in the market and money plenty, let us look for a general uprising of benevolent feeling and liberal doing. Will the preachers move? If every blank place where no missionary collections were taken up last year, had sent up a contribution, then had not the Lord's treasury been empty. But—you will hear more on this point.

BOOK CONCERN.

I regretted, on my arrival, to learn of the resignation of one of the agents, Rev. F. A. Owen. His health is feeble. I seldom see him out. This fact and his private business deprives the Church of his services in that capacity. He retires with that same reputation for fidelity and devotion to Methodism, and that spotless good name, that brought him into office. His successor is now being determined upon by the Book Committee, the Bishops advising. Dr. Stevenson has five presses going, and three more coming. Orders pouring in.

Considering the number of persons brought here together, from various parts, working complicated interests, men in the habit of having a will of their own, there is a delightful harmony maintained among them. Agents, clerks, editors, secretaries, treasurers, &c., dwell together in unity.

EDUCATIONAL CONVENTION.

This is the beginning of a movement. In obedience to the invitation of this Conference, (Tennessee,) and to carry out the recommendation of the general Conference, a convention of those engaged in teaching in our various denominational schools and colleges met here on Monday, in the basement of McKendree Church. Dr. Henkle, of Huntsville, Alabama, Chairman; Professor Bonnell, of Frankfort, Ky., Secretary. It is a significant initial meeting, and while I write they are laying out work.

In the convention are: Prof. Dodd, of Transylvania; President Smith, of Macon, Ga.; Prof. Sasnett, of Emory College; Prof. Church, of Tennessee; Prof. Callendar, of Murfreesborough; Prof Darby, of Auburn, Ala.; Prof. Hamilton, of Shellbyville, Tenn; Professor Kirkpatrick of Strawberry Plains; Prof. Casey, of Florence; Dr. Elliott, of this city, and others.

Bishop Andrew and Bishop Early were among the speakers of the convention yesterday. Drs. Green, McFerrin and others made speeches. Professor Sasnett contributed to the light and heat of discussion, as also President Smith.

Steps have been taken for a permanent organization—to have an annual meeting. A uniform course of study will be recommended for the various grades of educational institutions and suitable text-books, from spelling-book and grammar up to editions of the classics and the higher mathematical books. These can be furnished by our Publishing House—at once suitable and profitable.

The dependence of the South and West has been in nothing more felt than in school books. From primmer to the end of the course we send to the North and East. It is a vast drain of wealth. Then the text-books are often offensively unsuitable. Moral philosophy is taught in our colleges out of a text-book that has a strong anti-slavery chapter — the basis of its argument having long been repudiated at the South, morally and politically. Certain geographies are open to the like objections. Certain reading books are objectionable for their ethics. The great Commercial Convention that met at Memphis first, then at New Orleans, and last at Richmond, has been trying to do something in this direction, but thus far has affected nothing. I think this convention, if wisely wielded, can lead off this Southern movement, and realize its object. I will give you more details on this point hereafter. A judicious committee appointed to recommend a suitable text-book on any subject, would, in the run of a year, have every specimen before it from which to choose; or, under this encouragement and opening, Southern talent might essay to furnish the book wanted. At subsequent conventions, amendations, alterations and changes might be discussed and adopted, the subject being annually open to improvement.

Not a trifling consideration in favor of a uniform course would be the saving of money to parents and pupils. On every change of schools, now and different text-books must now be provided.

PLAN OF EPISCOPAL VISITATIONS FOR 1856–'57.

By the kindness of Bishop Early, I have been furnished with a copy of the "plan" just agreed upon for holding the ensuing Conferences.

By resolution, Bishop Kavanaugh has been requested to remain on the Pacific till that Conference is over.

First District—Bishop Andrew.

Tennessee Conference, at Huntsville, Ala., Oct. 15, 1856.
Holsten Conference, at Knoxville, October 29, 1856.
South Carolina Conference, Yorkville, November 19, 1856.
Georgia Conference, Americus, December 3, 1856.
Florida Conference, Alligator, December 17, 1856.

Second District—Bishop Early.

Western Virginia, Guyandotte, September 4, 1856.
Kentucky Conference, at Winchester, Sept. 17, 1856.
Louisville Conference, at Elizabethtown, October 1, 1856.
Memphis Conference, at Jackson, October 15, 1856.
North Carolina Conference, at Greensboro', Nov. 12, 1856.
Virginia Conference, at Richmond, Nov. 26, 1856.

Third District—Bishop Pierce.

Missouri Conference, at Louisiana, September 24, 1856.
St. Louis Conference, at Charlestou, Oct. 8, 1856.
Arkansas Conference, at Batesville, Oct. 29, 1856.
Ouchittas Conference, at Princeton, November 12, 1856.
Mississippi Conference, at Kosciusko, Nov. 26, 1856.
Alabama Conference, at Tuskegee, December 10, 1856.

Fourth District—Bishop Paine.

Kansas Conference, at Kicapoo, October 10, 1856.
Indian Mission, at Chickasaw Academy, Oct. 30.
East Texas Conference, at Paris, Nov. 19, 1856.
Texas Conference, at Gonzales, December 10, 1856.

Fifth District—Bishop Kavanaugh.

Pacific Conference, at Gilroy, November 12, 1856.
Louisiana Conference, at Waterproof, Feb. 11, 1857.

Yours, H. N. M.

P. S.—On yesterday, the 25th, the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Rev. F. A. Owen, Book Agent, was filled by the election of Rev. James E. Evans, of Georgia Conference. Mr. E. was one of the late Book Committee. He is an energetic man, of business qualifications. He was next to Mr. Owen in the vote of the General Conference for the hard and responsible office to which he now succeeds. I doubt not he will do well. He is in the prime of life, and a prime man.

The Missionary Board are just concluding their appropriations for the ensuing year, amounting in all to $129,400. Of this amount $10,000 are for missions in Kansas; for China, $9,500; for California, $6,000.

It has been determined that no Superintendent of a district or mission has any authority to sell a draft of the Society until it comes to maturity; and Treasurer and Assistant Treasurers are instructed not to accept such drafts, if presented for acceptance before maturity. Let those interested take notice.

The next Missionary Anniversary to be held at Petersburg, Va.

H. N. M.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

"Go Preach My Gospel, Saith the Lord."

New Orleans, April, 1856.

"I write unto you, young men," because I think it more than probable some of you have heard the "still, small voice" of God saying in your hearts, "Go preach my gospel."

We know full well, from some experience, the class of emotions which such a conviction wakes up in the soul. A severe contest ensues between antagonistic aspirations. As young men, we are ambitious, and our country and its institutions hold forth the brightest hopes of a splendid realization. In many paths of enterprise you see the shining footsteps of the glorious dead, who have won immortal names. Your bosom heaves to emulate their glorious example, and achieve the same glorious successes. But when you contemplate the career of the gospel minister, it seems so quiet, so removed from the stirring and exciting pathway of the statesman and the warrior, that your glowing ambition shrinks away chilled and discouraged.

Again, almost every profession offers to you reasonable hopes of an easy and honorable independence; but the life of the gospel minister is one of toil, sacrifice and self-denial. All the motives of worldly wisdom counsel you against a life of little worldly promise.

Then the infidelity of the world coldly sneers at the Utopian idea of the world's conversion, and tells you that prophecy is but a splendid Oriental dream, never to be realized in this utilitarian world; that to become a minister of the gospel is throwing life away in a vain attempt to accomplish an impossible enterprise.

Such are some of the hindrances from without. Within have arisen doubts of moral and mental fitness for the claims and duties of so great a work. But we would say to you, if the conviction has fastened upon your mind that God has made it your duty to preach the gospel, stop not to "confer with flesh and blood." Leave your fortunes to the gracious care of that Providence that feeds the young ravens when they cry. God will see to it that all your real wants are met.

Stop not to ask whether you can reason like Paul, persuade like John, or thunder like Peter. If God has called you to the work, he will give you grace to do such work as it is his will you should perform. If you have such a persuasion, trifle not with it—think not lightly of it. Be assured no happiness can be solid or lasting but that which is based upon consciousness of duty done. How vain is wealth! And who would weigh his immortal hope in the scales with money? How unsubstantial is the light of fame, and how incompetent to fill the measure of an immortal mind! How soon will its brightness fade from the horizon of life; and if we have no other work, how dark will be all that remains! Without the approbation of a good conscience, how poor and evanescent is earthly pleasure, and who that is wise would seek to allure you from the safe and blessed path of duty?

We know that the merchant, the farmer and the soldier have their pleasurable and honorable rewards, But remember, as a minister of Christ you will trade for immortal gain, sow for an eternal harvest, and fight for a crown of unfading glory. True, you may go forth weeping, but you shall return again rejoicing, bringing your sheaves with you Great and more glorious than kingly pomp is the destiny that awaits you when you and the souls you have won shall appear with the risen dead before the bar of God. When the Great Eternal shall say, "Well done!" and all the sainted host respond—"Amen! enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

We repeat, then, if the conviction has fastened upon you, heed the heavenly call; for lo! "the fields are white to the harvest, but the laborers are few." Let us exhort you to enlist in virtue's holy war, for the combat thickens, and the strife extends, and shall until Christ the Lord has conquered a glorious peace, and the song of holy triumph comes up from a thousand lands, "Hallelujah! the Lord Omnipotent reigneth."

Young Christian brother, listen to the call of God; regard the prayer of his Church, and look to the moral and immortal needs of perishing millions. Live for the interest of your immortal nature, this should be the grand concernment of your life. Every other interest, like a lamp before the splendors of the rising sun, falls into insignificance, The largest fortune seems poor, the highest station humble, and the proudest name a vanity, when contrasted with the "exceeding and eternal weight of glory" which is the heritage of the good.

J. B. WALKER.

GO TO RIPTON.

SOMETHING FOR YOUNG MINISTERS.

Rev. Jedediah Bushnell, formerly the pastor of the Congregational Church in Cornwall, Vt., now in glory, was in his day a man of abundant labors, much usefulness, and of corresponding influence. His parish lay at the western base of the Green Mountains, in the neighborhood of the flourishing towns on both sides of Lake Champlain; and throughout this region he was in high repute as a holy and wise counsellor. Of course, applications for his counsel and influence were frequent. He was a shrewd discerner of spirits, and without any foolish eccentricity, had a way of saying things, which was his own.

An accomplished licentiate, fresh from the school, came into his room one morning, and said:

"Father Bushnell, I have called to consult with you respecting a field of labor."

"Right!" said the old gentleman, with emphatic approbation. "Right, James! Ready to roll up your sleeves and go to work—anxious to be at it? Well, I do rejoice to see the boys turning out from the seminary in that temper."

"I am certainly anxious to lose no time," the young man replied; but I suppose you are aware that young ministers need a little assistance from older brethren in finding a place for their labors?"

"Certainly, boy, certainly! We'll find you a place, never fear for that. We'll find work for you—the Lord's work—plenty of it."

"I understand Windsor is vacant. I think I should like that charge. It is a fine parish."

"Can't have it, James. Windsor is in negotiation with a minister in the Bay State. I hope he will come, for he has a family who need the advantages of such a place."

"How about Plattsburg? A classmate told me it was whispered around that there would soon be an opening there."

"Whew! waiting for dead men's shoes? I thought better of you James. Never do that, boy, or your head will be gray as winter before you get to work. Besides, this whispering about that certain places will be vacant soon, is mean. Pay no attention to it; despise it. Plattsburg has a good man now, and there I hope he will remain."

"What do you think of Burlington? There is a vacancy, and the position is eligible?"

"Too late there. Burlington made out a call last week for Mr. ———."

"Well, I am sorry. Things look rather unpromising for me."

"Sorry! Well, now, that is strange talk. Sorry to see the posts of Zion manned! Sorry that the watchmen are taking their places on the towers, each with his trumpet at his mouth!"

"No, Father Bushnell, I did not mean that. But I have strong attachments to this part of the country, and I hope to find a location somewhere among you, but——"

"And what's to hinder? Plenty of work all about us—vacant churches—missionary corners—work enough for your whole class! Starks wants a minister very much; a minister is greatly needed over the lake, at Skeensboro; another at Ticonderoga. They are in demand all around. Plenty of work—plenty—plenty!"

"But you are aware, Father Bushnell, that much expense and long study have been devoted to my preparation, and I hope you will not think me vain and unreasonable if, in view of qualifications so hardly earned, I should wish to look about for some eligible position."

"'Some e-l-i-g-i-b-l-e position!' Ah, well! I understand, now. You want a town church, and large and genteel, at that. Probably you would not object to a tall steeple, and an organ, with salary in proportion. Well, then, James, if my advice can help you to an eligible position, you shall have it. You know Ripton, up the mountain?"

Now, Mr. Editor, if you have any Vermonter at hand, he can tell you what Ripton was twenty or thirty years ago, and why a slightly disdainful pout was on the licentiate's lip when the place was mentioned in connection with his present errand. James had been a Middlebury student, and he knew Ripton. Father Bushnell proceeded:

"Now, pack your satchel, and up to Ripton with yourself! Tell them that you have come to blow the gospel trumpet, and then go to work. Clear away the rubbish and break up the fallow ground. Pray for the Holy Ghost. I know two there who will pray with you. Call down the fire. Set it all in a blaze. Light up the mountain, until the flame shines over the lake and the hills beyond. The people of the villages will run from their houses, calling to each other, 'Look! look! Why, what's all this? Who has set the mountains on fire? We never saw such a blaze before. Why, it looks like glory, and makes Champlain appear like a sea of gold.' Some one will come along and tell them that James ———, a young minister, went up to Ripton, and he commenced working for the Lord, and preached and prayed, to get others to pray; and then the fire came down from heaven, and covered the mountain and lake and shores with its light. When, in such places as Rutland, Middlebury, Burlington and Keeseville, the people will run out and look again, and exclaim, while they cover their foreheads with their hands, 'What a glorious fire! It's just what we want here—why can't we have it here, too?' And if any of them are without a minister, they will say, 'There is the man for us. Call the committee! Tell them to make haste, before we lose him; for there will be enough after him when they see such a blaze on Ripton Hill.'"

The licentiate endeavored to frame some jocose reply to what he was pleased to term the pleasantry of Father Bushnell, But the old gentleman added, with great gravity:

"Seriously, James, if you want an eligible position, I advise you to go to Ripton."—Christian Observer.

A Good Letter.

HELP FOR CHINA.

We have received, with the following letter, a draft three-hundred dollars. It comes in good time—just as the Editorial Correspondence discloses a deficit of forty thousand dollars in the Treasury. Will not that fact—for it is a fact, and a startling one—induce others to imitate the example of our correspondent?

Dear Sir:—Having never had the pleasure of being personally acquainted with you, but believing that we are both enlisted under the same banner, and endeavoring to promote the cause of our Redeemer, in doing all the good we can for our fellow-beings, that they may be made partakers with us of the same grace that is able to save them from their sins and prepare them for the kingdom of heaven.

I have for some time thought it my duty to contribute something more to the cause of religion than I am doing. My mind has been frequently absorbed in reflecting upon the idolatrous worship of the Chinese, and the obligation that rested on the Christian to make use of greater exertions to enlighten their minds with the knowledge of the one true and living God, and the provision he has made in giving his Son as a preparatory sacrifice for their sins. It is true that we have missionaries among them; but from a letter written by D. C. Kelley, one of our missionaries there, and published in the Christian Advocate of February 23, it is evident that their usefulness is much curtailed for want of means. Little is to be expected until a suitable house is provided for the minister and his congregation to worship in. I have therefore enclosed you a draft upon Messrs. Buchanan Carroll & Co. for three hundred dollars, which I wish you to have applied to the use of the Chinese mission. Should my life be spared another year, you may expect as much, if not more, for the same purpose.

I remain yours,
In Gospel bonds,
JOHN DUNWODY.

Notices of New Books.

Sketches and Adventures in Madeira, Portugal and the Andalusias of Spain—By the author of Daniel Webster and his Cotemporaries. New York: Harper & Bros. 1856.

This book is in the best style of the publishers. Like all books of travel, it opens off Southampton with a storm—weak stomach—a plank between the writer and eternity. The work is not without interest, and will repay perusal. It is about the vine-land and the country of Gil Blas and Don Quixote.

Physiology and Calisthenic Exercises—Illustrated. By Miss Beecher. Harper & Bros. 1856.

This is a small 12mo., of 58 pages, for the use of schools and families. It is adapted to the young—specially to young females. Its general circulation and study would be of incalculable benefit to American women.

Harpers' Story Books, No. XVIII.—The Museum. Harper & Bros. 1856. All for sale by H. D. McGinnis, 36 Camp street.

Courtship and Marriage; or, The Joys and Sorrows of American Life. By Mrs. Caroline Lee Hentz. Philadelphia: T. B. Peterson.

The Roman Exile—By Guglielmo Gajani, Professor of Civil and Canon Law, and Representative of the people in the Roman Constituent Assembly in the year 1849. Boston: J. P. Jewett & Co.

Immersionists Against the Bible; or, The Babel Builders Confounded, in an exposition of the origin, design, tactics and progress of the New Version movement of Campbellites and other Baptists. By Rev. N. H. Lee, of the Louisville Conference. Edited by Thos. O. Summers, D. D. Nashville: Stevenson & Owen.

Letters from Europe—Being Notes of a Tour through England, France and Switzerland. By E. Thompson, D.D., LL.D. With a Preface by Bishop Morris. Edited by Rev. D. W. Clark, D. D. Cincinnati: L. Swormstedt & A. Poe.

THE CURRENT WEEK.

Brighter and more glorious, sunnier and [illegible] than their predecessors, are the days that [illegible] certains which veil us from the coming week; many angelic scene-shifters are they, if rightly understood, ever laboring to wrest from Nature a broader view for our gratification. Their fair faces shine in an immortal youth, wreathed with the smiles and dimples as when first they, wondering, [illegible] the world. Let us hope that the cornucopia [illegible] slide may pour forth an abundant fortune.

Monday, April 28.—Sts. Vitalis, Didymus, Theodore and Patricius, the latter a Prussian, and the [illegible] Prussian, are named for this day.

The cuckoo-pink, dedicated to Sts. Didymus and Theodore, is the emblem.

During the expedition against the Pequots, in olden colonial times, the English discoved New [illegible] Conn., which, in 1637, was settled by a colony from the Bay State, who kept this day, which happened to be their first Sunday, under a large oak tree. Mr. Davenport, their pastor, preached to them.

In 1760, M. Levi approached Quebec from [illegible] with six frigates, to recapture it from the English. Gen. Murray marched out with 3,000 men, and this day, the battle of Sillery—three miles above the city—was fought, and the English were defeated with a loss of 1,000 men. The English retreated to Quebec, which place the French besieged. An English squadron arrived in the middle of May, the French squadron, and raised the seige.

In 1788, the Convention of the State of Massachusetts assented to the Constitution and joined the American confederation.

Tuesday, April 29.—Saints Peter, Robert, and Fiachna are the saints, from 630 to 1220. The herb Robert, dedicated to St. Robert, is the flower.

In 1779, Dr. John Ash died, whose [illegible] English Dictionary, until the appearance of Todd's Johnson, was the best extant.

In 1822, Sir Isaac Heard, garter king-at-arms, aged 91, remarkable for his knowledge of heraldry from the earliest times.

In our own country, no great event has been chronicled.

Wednesday, April 30.—Sts. Catharine, Marcellus, James and Marian, from 250 to 1380, are the saints.

The cowslip, dedicated to St. Catherine, is the emblem.

Louisiana was admitted into the Union in 1812. Its name was given to the territory in honor of Louis XIV. It was discovered by DeSoto in 1541, being owned by several European powers, it was [illegible] to the United States by France, in 1803, for $15,000,000. Several States have been formed out of it. It was the old territory of Louisiana.

This day paves the way into May—the most beautiful of all the spring months; celebrated in [illegible] land, sung by every poet. The month takes its name from Maia, the brightest of the Pleiades. The Anglo-Saxons used to call it Trimilki, from its [illegible] to one grave author, for that they then began to milk their kine three times a day! Milton has an [illegible] the month, in which he speaks of "The flowery May, who, from her green lap throws

The yellow cowslip and the pale primrose."

Tennyson, too, sings his sweetest strains in the universal ballad:

"I'm to be Queen of the May, mother,
I'm to be Queen of the May."

The references to the month are, however, [illegible] merous to be repeated, and all as graceful as the pleasant time of which they treat.

Thursday, May 1.—Sts. Philip, James the less, Sigismund, King of Burgundy, are the saints. The tulip, dedicated to St. Philip; the red [illegible] and the red bachelor's button, dedicated to St. James, are the flowers.

The observances with which May day has been the world over, from time immemorial, are too numerous to be repeated. Every one's own reading will suggest the May pole and the May flower, the Morris dance and the thousand pleasant [illegible] that welcome in the breathing period of [illegible]. Of the events which have occurred in the month the most accurate dates attached, or within our reach can mention a few. In 1497, John Cabot, a Venetian by birth, sailed under the patronage of [illegible] VII, and discovered a land which he termed [illegible] Vista, judged to have been the island of Newfoundland.

In 1810, Congress passed an act excluding [illegible] and French armed vessels from American [illegible]. In 1811, a naval engagement occurred between the frigate President and the British sloop-of-war Little Bolt, in which the latter had eleven killed and [illegible] four wounded, and the former lost but one.

Friday, May 2.—St. Athanasius, Patriarch of Alexandria, A. D. 373, is the patron of the day. Saint Charlock, dedicated to him, is the flower.

In 1519, Leonardi da Venci, the painter, died.

In 1780, a committee from Congress visited the army and reported to Congress that the "army was unpaid for five months; that it seldom had more than six days' provisions in advance, and was, on several occasions, for sundry successive days, without meat; that the medical department had neither sugar, coffee nor tea; wine, nor spirituous liquors; that the [illegible] partment was without money, and had not even the shadow of credit left.

Saturday, May 3.—The invention of the Cross, of the Holy, Cross. 326; and St. Alexander, [illegible] 119, are the observances of the day.

The poetic Narcisso, dedicated to the invention of the Cross, is the flower.

The invention of the Cross, explained by [illegible] mentator to signify the finding of the Cross, [illegible] as a festival, to both the English and Romish [illegible].

In 1845, Florida was admitted into the Union.

Sunday, May 4.—St. Monica, 387, and St. Godard, 1036, are the patron saints.

The stock gilly-flower, dedicated to St. Monica, is the emblem.

In 1471, the battle of Tewkesbury, Gloucestershire, England, was won by Edward IV, over the Lancastrians.

In 1677, Dr. Isaac Barron, an eminent mathematician and learned divine, died.

In 1795, John James Barthelmy, author of the travels of Anacharsis, died.

Business.—Last Tuesday's operations were much impeded by showers of rain. A fair amount of business is still in progress on the levee, particularly at the upper landing. The boats arriving from the West bring full cargoes, and those departing are carrying away a goodly number of transient passengers, which causes considerable activity. At the lower landing there is a marked falling off, though the [illegible] appears to be well stocked with sugar and molasses, which articles meet with a ready sale and at full rates of prices. It is not quite so pleasant a place for promenade, among those hogsheads of sugar and barrels of molasses after a shower of rain, as a person [illegible] desires to see.

We think it was rather unfortunate the city did not have purchased the Pontchartrain Railroad sugar depot, as there is plenty of room to remove the depot one or two squares further back from the [illegible]. Then, again, there might have been objections about the landing of steamboats at that point. However, we suppose the sugar interests are in the hands of the committee appointed at the convention held in this city.

There is considerable activity in the discharging and loading of vessels, although produce is not being carried for nothing. Ship masters that are loading appear to be anxious of getting away as speedily as possible. The cotton presses and [illegible] houses are fast being cleared of their contents of heavy Western produce, including tobacco, is arriving in large quantities, and the present low freights will bring enormous quantities to our city, there being no immediate prospect of a change in the general [illegible] ing business, for the present at least.

The general city trade begins to shew the [illegible] cline at this season, though the results of this [illegible] business are so much more favorable than last [illegible] that all comparisons are lost. There has been [illegible] merchandise sold this season in New Orleans [illegible] ever sold in any one year before. Real estate [illegible] to feel the effects in some locations. Though [illegible] some kinds of property are very low, perhaps [illegible] too low for the valuation of property, yet we [illegible] will encourage more permanent residents [illegible] fronts. Encourage manufactures of every [illegible] country for our consumption, and we will [illegible] great city, increasing and enhancing [illegible] trade and commerce. Think more of [illegible] and Louisiana, less of Northern cities or [illegible] and we shall do well enough.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

LIST OF REMITTANCES

Received at the Office of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, for the month of April, 1856.

A.		J.
B F Alexander	$10 00	S M Jenkins	2 50
E Ashley	2 00
H Avery	2 00	K.
H Avery	2 00	Dr Kilgore	2 00
R H Armistead	2 00	Col Kilgore	2 00
		J Knight	9 50
B.		L.
W P Brower	2 00	J Lancashire	5 00
T N S Brothers	3 80	Col Long	2 00
J B Bowen	2 00	W E M Linfield	10 00
J M Burgess	2 00	J & T Lewis	2 00
J R Balance	10 00	S H Little	2 00
H D Berry	7 00	T J Lacey	5 00
Wm Buckner		L Luckett	5 00
C.		M.
W C Crawford	2 00	P Myers	2 00
A H Chappelle	2 00	J McGill	5 50
A Castle	5 00	W M Motley	2 00
J H Cox	10 00	W A Montgomery	4 80
L Cately	5 00	J L McDonald	2 00
D P Cullin	2 00	N Morrison	2 00
J L Cotton	2 00	G T Mason	2 00
E J Chatham	3 00	W Murrah	15 00
T P Crymes	4 00	W Mooring	5 00
J A Clement	5 00	N McLeod	5 00
John Coudey	1 00	G J Mason	5 00
F McCrain	2 00	E McMeans	10 00
D.		N.
H Dixone	3 00	W H Nelson	5 00
Z Dowling	6 00	W B Neal	5 00
S H Dabney	6 50
C F Drews	2 00	P.
H Dews	4 00	M G Palmer	5 00
P H Duffenworth	2 50	A F Plowmen	2 00
R R Dickinson	2 50	W N Peavy	3 00
		T M Penick	6 00
E.		L P Peacock	2 00
J Edwards	2 00	E H Pitts	3 05
S P Everett	2 00
W H Ellison	15 00	R.
L Escanbract	1 00	L Roberts	2 00
		J B Russell	2 00
F.		Mrs M B Rives	3 50
W Ford	5 00	B B Ross	2 00
C Foster	2 50	H Roberts	2 00
		R R Richardson	2 00
G.		S.
L Gardner	6 00	S B Sinnott	5 00
F M Grace	6 00	L J Schooler	4 00
Wm Gilbert	2 00	J E Scurlock	2 00
E W Griswold	5 00	J Stewart	2 00
J Gally	2 08	J Shores	2 00
D S Goodloe	5 00	W Stephenson	5 50
J Y Griffing	4 00
A G Goodloe	2 00	T.
R E Goodwin	19 50	H Turney	5 00
		C W Thomas	6 00
H.		J W Thompson	2 00
A W Hand	6 50	W A Turlton	2 00
W Hannington	36 00
Dr Holmes	5 00	V.
J W Halston	5 00	W G Veal	2 50
H Hanmer	2 00
Miss Harris	2 00	W.
Miss Hunt	2 00	William Wasson	8 50
C E Harris	2 00	T J Wemberly	2 00
C Hoover	2 00	W Wadsworth	5 00
J F Hause	3 00	W H Watson	2 00
D Hunsicker	3 50	J L Wright	6 00
R B Hardesty	2 00	J Watson	2 00
G Hamilton	3 05	J G Whitehead	2 00
E Hawes	6 00	J Webb	2 00
G Hawkins	20 00	B Woodward	2 00
E F Heard	10 00	J Williams	6 50
J M Hughes	3 00	W K Wilson	3 00
I.
J T P Irvine	0 00

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Notice.—The German Beer Garden Chapel will be dedicated to the service of Almighty God on the 4th of May, at 4 o'clock P. M.

The Chapel stands on the right hand side, in Union Street, between Morelles and Urquhart streets, Third District. By taking the Rampart street and Mexican Gulf Railroad omnibus, on Canal street, and geting out on Union street, persons can ride to within two end a half squares of the chapel.

Notice.—There will be a meeting of the Trustees of the East Alabama Male College at Auburn, on Thursday next, the 8th day of May, and the Trustees are earnestly requested to be present, as business of importance will be transacted.

Committee { JOHN B. GLENN, ISAAC HILL, J. B. OGLETREE.

Auburn, Ala., April 14, 1856.

DEATHS.

Died.—On the 5th April, 1856, after suffering a short time with pneumonia, Mrs. MARY M. HOWYE, wife of James Howye, of Clark county, Ala., aged 32 years and nine days.

She joined the M. E. Church about the year 1843 at a camp-meeting near Grove Hill, in Clark county, Ala., and from that time to her death it appears that she lived a consistent Christian life, exemplifying the reality of vital religion in her daily walk.

The state of her feelings at the time of her death is not known, from the fact that she was in rather a delirious state of mind, but her conversation after she was taken sick, previous to her delirium, was calculated to produce the impression that she was perfectly resigned to the will of God, and was willing not only to do, but also to suffer his will, even though she should be called to pass through the dark valley of the shadow of death.

WILLIAM A. SAMPEY.

Died.—On the 10th March, 1856, in this place, Mrs. MARY BELL, in the 97th year of her age.

The subject of this notice was born in Richland District, S. C., in 1760, consequently lived through and witnessed the struggles of our forefathers for that glorious liberty which we now enjoy. She combined in her person the faithful wife, kind mother, the patriot and Christian—for those were days that tried the patriotism of every heart, of whatever sex, that panted for emancipation from a British yoke. Her anecdotes of that period, as of latter date, if collected, would form quite a large volume; for she was a woman of no ordinary mind. She professed religion and connected herself with the M. E. Church about the year 1820 or 20. She lived and died faithful to the cause of her Redeemer.

H. D. B.

Died.—On the 16th April, after a few hours' suffering, JOHN SAMUEL JACKSON LAUDERDALE, son of J. S. and Agatha Lauderdale, of Lowndes county, Miss., leaving behind him a twin brother.

M. M. GRAHAM.

Columbus, Miss., April, 1856.

☞ Candor compels us, when considering the wants of the afflicted, to recommend that which is best known and tried, and to recommend Dr. J. Hostetter's celebrated Stomach Bitters, would only be adding to what has already been heralded far and wide, not only by a few isolated certificates, but by the people of the land, endorsed by the Physicians and the Press, that Hostetter's Bitters have no equal in restoring and imparting health to enfeebled men. Ladies and children find this medicine invaluable in many of their ills of debility, to which they are subject, especially during the summer season; in such cases it should be taken in small quantities before meals. For sale by Druggists and Dealers generally, everywhere. Wholesale by E. J. Hart & Co., 79 Tchoupitoulas street; Cady & Holmes, 7 Gravier street. my3 1t

☞ If you are sick, the probability is that the root of your sufferings is in the stomach. From a weak stomach proceed dyspepsia, langnor, oppression in the diaphragm, jaundice, headache, nausea, bodily weakness, dimness of sight, heartburn, costiveness, dysentery, and a legion of other tormenting diseases. Indigestion produces this blood, and therefore destroys the strength and vigor of the system. To restore the strength of the stomach; and enable it to throw off and dismiss forever all these tormenting and dangerous complaints, nothing is necessary but a persevering use of Hoofland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, Philadelphia. There is no mistake, no failure in their sanative effects. See advertisement. my1 1m

☞ A Masterpiece Outdone.—We have lately supposed that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was the Ultime Thule in its line, and that nothing had been or would be invented which could at all surpass it in its fine points of excellence as a medicine. But we are confidently assured by those competent to judge on the subject, that Ayer's new Pills excel in high medical artistry even that widely celebrated embodiment of his skill. He has succeeded in making them not only pleasant to take, but powerful to cure the large class of complaints which require a purgative remedy [Lancaster Argus, Ky.

They are for sale by J. WRIGHT & CO., and all city druggists. ap19 2m

EDITORIAL LIFE.

One of the subjects frequently alluded to, but little known—of great importance, and of some, though not sufficient, esteem, is that one with which we have prefaced these remarks—the life editorial.

In a country like our own, where the newspaper is, perhaps, the most omnipotent and omnipresent of all agencies—where it stands as preacher, chronicler, friend, politician, agent, king, and judge; rewarding the good, punishing the bad; encouraging progress, and stating the path and the goal of that progress,—it has the highest crown of any in the royal congress of labor. That it is without reproach, no one will assert. There are bad men, who subvert it to the lowest purposes; ambitious men, who direct it to mere political or pecuniary objects; insane men, who direct it towards what is impracticable and unattainable, as well as to what is undesirable. But the rule, by the verdict of that great jory which comprises our whole country and all of our countrymen—aye, even by the world at large—has been endorsed; so that now it is honorable, as well as responsible, and as influential as it is powerful. The very men who transform it from its true intents, and wrench it into wrong, pay the homage vice must ever render virtue, in so doing.

If an individual has made a grand discovery in mechanics, in philosophy, or in any other department of learning, what is his first stop but to secure the herculean agency of the press? If a grand deed has been accomplished, or a high thought evolved—if progress has been made in any department soever, from abstract philosophy to a patent rat-trap—the world knows that the discoverer is never content with his laurels, unless they are placed upon his brow by the press. It is, in our grand human democracy, a Nemesis to the sinner, but Minerva, with all her glories, to the good, and a great stay and solace to the suffering.

What an illimitable field of labor is opened to it; and with how much zeal, how much ability, honesty, and fidelity—through adversity, against opposition, without reward—does it march on towards the mark of its high calling; like an olden knight, panoplied all in steel, whose progress no power may prevent. There is suffering in the way for those by whom it is served—weak and weary in their everlasting work, to which that of Sisyphus was but a prologue and adumbration. There is more than weakened nerves, wearied brain and a down-letting of all the physical agencies; for a thousand lions, and dogs and hyenas lie in his path, wreathing the banner-man as he marches—ready at all times to besmear his golden standard, though they may not face his trenchant falchion. There is the unending wrestle with the world, in all the mental and material shapes in which it can be presented, and with those shapes subdivided into personal and antagonistic ones. Friends must be defended to the death, though their thanks are more than they will repay for the labor. Foes must be fought, who will come to the encounter, armed with every weapon, to win their cause; and when the terrible combat is ended, does the hero-fighter lie down to repose and rest? New labors and other contests are waiting his taxed powers. He turns only to meet a fresh foe, on as bitter a field as the former, who must be hurled down by his arm—because the good, easy world, knows that he can do it, and gives no quarter if he yields once where he has conquered a thousand times.

And more is demanded the more is done. A piece of unseasonable news—an erroneous chronicling of one man's given name, or of one horse's best time—an inference which, for want of exact knowledge concerning all the promises, happens to be wrong—is visited with reproach and severe censure. The impossibility of perfection below is forgotten, and the Editor is expected to comprehend all the virtues, all the graces, all the heroism and all the goodness of the world. A thousand merciless censors sit around with jagged sticks, to torture him for the slightest failure.

So onward—ever toiling, learning, striving and seeking to improve himself and others, the Editor goes; crowded hard by importunities always—sometimes crippling, but leaping manfully to the front again, and marching resolutely, flag and sword in hand, into the coffin. And as the clods rattle over him, the world says—"Another Editor's dead—a decent fellow—wonder who'll take his place?" Wonder away! Who can fill the vacant seat? Not you—nor you—nor you—unkind, unchantable, ungenerous, on whom his life has been bestowed. For the true Editor is not the thing of a day, but one who has been taught by time, by thought, by bitter pain and experience; and the crucible through which such go is so severe, that many perish in it where one lives—to die. [Crescent.

Later from Mexico.

In addition to what we have already published concerning matters and things in Mexico, we glean from our exchanges, some additional items of interest to those who have relations with that country.

The house of Baron, Forbes & Co., of Tepic, has suffered the displeasure of the government and Mr. Forbes, U. S. Consul at Tepic, has been sent out of the country. Mr. Collin, the manager of their factory, was arrested and kept in confinement four days. These outrages will, probably, induce the interference of our government, as they are constantly occurring, and are such as no nation can overlook.

The most important matter that reaches us from Mexico, by this arrival, is the news of a difficulty between the government and the Catholic clergy, which is complicated with the difficulties of the foreign ministry. The course of conduct pursued by President Comonfort towards the clergy of Puebla, offended the Sardinian minister and the representatives of Catholic countries, so far that all, with the exception of the French minister, only, had demanded their passports. It is stated, as a reason why the French minister was not involved in the trouble, that he had been previously instructed to protect the Pope's Nuncio.

The Picayune has some private information from Vera Cruz, on the 19th, which we copy:

"Order reigns in the Republic. The bands of disaffected in the states of Mexico and Michoacan have been overcome. Something, however, has just occurred, which may have important results. The Government has ordered the holders of bonds of the Spanish debt to deliver them up, or should give security for their value, under pain of embargo. The bonds were surrendered by a convention equivalent to a treaty. It is feared that if this Government does not yield, as is just, since it has no right to act in this manner, difficulties may arise between Spain and Mexico."

It is stated that a decree is about to be issued, commanding the Board of Public Credit to issue bonds to the amount of $12,000,000, and providing that with these bonds alone, payments shall be made in the customs and other government offices; that the said Board shall pay into the public treasury from $400,000 to $000,000 per month, out of the proceeds of the sale of the said bonds, and that the balance shall be placed to the public credit.

Gen. Vidaurri is said to have declared against the government, and 4,500 men have marched against him from the Capital. Vidaurri declares that every merchant, national or foreign, who shall import merchandise into the Republic, by way of Matamoros, or by or through the frontier customs of the North, shall pay into the treasury of the state of Nueva Leon and Coahuila, two-thirds of the import dues to which the imported goods are subject under the tariff; and in case of failure, the cargo shall be seized, without any formal process and without any right to reclamation.

The Government has called for a revision of the Spanish Convention, which was resisted by Mr. Lazas, the Spanish Minister, on the ground that the treaty did not authorize it. The Government ordered many Spanish creditors to return the bonds and the dividends they had received on them, in order that they might remain in deposit during the revision to which the Spanish Government would not assent. The creditors refused to comply with the order to deposit them and the government has laid an embargo on them.

Charles Elsbury, a week ago, went out on Skeneateles Lake in a potash kettle, and paddled in it several rods, winning a wager and the applause of a great crowd.

A LESSON OF ECONOMY.—A woman died in Boston who sold apples by the penny-worth at the corner of the public streets, and who left behind her the snug sum of $1400 in the Savings Bank.

SUICIDE.—Mr. Allen Stevens committed suicide at his boarding-house in St. Louis, on the 21st, by shooting himself in the head with a pistol. He was between forty and forty-five years of age, and had been a pilot on our Western waters for the last twenty years.

Magnetic Telegraph.

ONE WEEK LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE PERSIA AT NEW-YORK.

ADVANCE IN COTTON.

DECLINE IN BREADSTUFFS.

ADJOURNMENT OF PEACE CONGRESS.

THE TROOPS FOR CANADA.

BY THE SOUTHERN AND NATIONAL LINES.

NEW YORK, March 20.—The Royal Mail steamship Persia, Capt. Judkins, from Liverpool, on the afternoon of Saturday the 19th inst., arrived at this port early this morning.

European Markets.

COTTON.—LIVERPOOL, March 19.—The Broker's Circular says that the last advices from the United States had a favorable effect on the market, and an advance of ⅛d. was experienced, which afterwards partially receded, but again partially recovered, and the market closed firm at an advance of ⅛ to ¼d. The following are our quotations: Orleans Fair, 6¾; Orleans Middling, 6¼; Uplands Fair, 6¾; Uplands Middling, 6⅛d.

The sales for three days amounted to 20,000 bales, of which exporters took 500.

The whole stock in port amounted to 534,000 bales, of which 392,500 bales were American.

HAVRE, April 15.—Sales of cotton for the week, 24,000 bales. Orleans tres ordinaire 93.

Our advices from Manchester state the market firm.

Breadstuffs.

Breadstuffs have declined considerably. Wheat shows a decline of 3d. Flour is 1s lower, and Corn is a trifle lower.

Provisions were generally unchanged.

The money market was more stringent. Consols for money were quoted at 93¼ to 93¾.

General News.

The Peace Conference closed its sessions on Wednesday, the 16th.

Mr. Dallas has had a civic banquet in London, at which Lord Panmure declared that the sending of troops to Canada is not intended as a demonstration of hostilities towards the United States, but was to replace the forces withdrawn from there during the war.

The Markets.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Flour is a trifle lower. Southern is quoted at $9 50 to $8. Wheat is a little lower. Mess Pork, $19.

CINCINNATI, April 28.—Flour, $5 40 to $5 68. Whisky, 19¼ to 19¾c. Molasses held at 45c.

River Intelligence.

LOUISVILLE, April 28.—The river is rising, with six feet six inches on the falls.

Thirty-Fourth Congress—First Session.

WASHINGTON, April 18, 1856.—Senate.—On motion of Mr. Seward, a resolution was adopted, directing the Committee on Post Offices to inquire concerning the expediency of establishing uniformity in the rates of postage throughout the United States.

On motion of Mr. Sumner, a resolution was adopted, instructing the Committee on Patents to consider the expediency of amending the patent laws so far as to allow the inhabitants of the neighboring British provinces to enjoy the benefits of those laws on an equal footing in all respects with the citizens of the United States.

The Senate went into an Executive session, and when the doors were opened,

The bill to authorize and facilitate the construction of a railroad and magnetic telegraph through the territories of the United States, from the Mississippi river to the Pacific ocean.

Mr. Weller made a long speech in favor of the bill; saying, in the course of his remarks, that the Committee have not designated any particular route. That is left to the decision of the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Postmaster General, under the direction of the President. He showed the particular advantages and necessities of such a means of intercommunication between the two oceans. A number of private bills were passed, and the Senate adjourned till Monday.

House of Representatives.—Mr. Haven caused to be read two letters addressed to Mr. Benson, the Chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, inviting, through him, the members of both Houses to visit Annapolis to-morrow, for the purpose of seeing the new war steamer Merrimac, and saying that the President and the Secretary of the Navy will leave Washington this afternoon, and will wait until after the arrival of the morning train at Annapolis tom-orrow, before proceeding to the ship.

The letters were laid on the table; when it was resolved that when the House adjourned, it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The House took up, in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, the Senate's amendments to the deficiency appropriation bill. The bill was reported to the House, when the House adjourned till Monday.

WASHINGTON, April 21, 1856.—Senate. On motion by Mr. Brown, the bills relating to the District of Columbia were made the special order for next Friday.

A resolution was adopted, calling on the Secretary of War to transmit to the Senate copies of all letters addressed to him during the present year, by Governor Stevens, of Washington Territory, respecting the exciting difficulties with the Indians in that territory; and, also, all other correspondence relating to the Indian difficulties in the territories of Washington and Oregon, not heretofore communicated.

Mr. Toombs, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported back the bill to amend the naturalization laws, with a recommendation that it do not pass.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bounty land bill, but at one o'clock it was laid aside, when

Mr. Clay, of Alabama, the Kansas bill being under consideration, replied to Messrs. Seward, Sumner, Wilson and Harlan. He maintained that so far from there being any truth in the alleged "aggressions of the slave power," the South had been ever since the foundation of the government, yielding gradually to the encroachments and usurpations of the North. Owing to ill health, he said he should print the remarks which he intended to submit.

The Senate adjourned.

House of Representatives. The House proceeded to act upon the amendments of the Senate to the Deficiency Appropriation bill, as reported from the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union; and by a vote of yeas 59, nays 86, rejected that of three hundred thousand dollars for a continuation of the water works.

Without concluding action on the amendments, the House adjourned.

THE ENGLISH POST SERVICE.—We copy the following from the National Intelligencer, being a note addressed, with enclosures, to that journal. We extract it for the sake of suggesting a comparison between our own post-service and that of a country we call old fogyish, behind the times, etc. In very many respects she is infinitely ahead of us, with all our smartness—particularly in the very important matter to which reference is had. Would it be possible for Brother Jonathan, Uncle Sam, Young America & Co., to do something in this line:

I am a regular subscriber to the London Athenæum; but it, happened, on a recent occasion, that instead of that paper, I received a number of the London Times, evidently by mistake. Accompanying the said Times was the following printed note, which I send you for publication, simply for the purpose of showing to your readers, by a single example, how perfectly arranged is the whole postal system of Great Britain,

C. L.

GEORGETOWN, April 22, 1856.

"Several newspapers having escaped from their covers in the Newspaper Office this evening, from the imperfect manner in which they were enclosed in them, they have been replaced as correctly as possible; but, as the accompanying paper may not be the one originally intended for you, I beg to explain that the inconvenience you may be subjected to, has not been occasioned by this Department.

ROWLAND HILL, Secretary.

GENERAL POST OFFICE, London."

THE OLDEST MAN DEAD!—"Doctor Jim," a well known colored man, in this parish, aged upwards of 125 years, died in this place on last Saturday morning. The old man boasted much of having been the play-fellow of General Washington, and could relate many circumstances connected with the American revolution. He was perfectly familiar with the names of the ancient families about Fredericksburg, Va.; such as Spotswood, Dangerfield, Thornton, Lewis, Willis, Throckmorton, Berton, French, Wellford, Chew, Fitzhugh, etc. Dr. Jim retained, until the day of his death, the full use of all his faculties, and walked several miles daily, and often spoke of getting a young wife. [Shreveport Southwestern.

THE CANADAS.—Quebec has been at last decided upon as the permanent seat of government for the Canadas. The reasons for this are said to be partly military and partly economical; at all events it is a victory for the French Catholic interest of the provinces over the larger, growing and more important interests of the British settlers. Among the on dits from the same quarter it is reported that, when the news of the birth of the King of Algeria was received in the Canadian Parliament, in session at Toronto, the English members sang "God save the Queen," and the French "Partant Pour la Syne." The Speaker led off, singing bass, alternately in French and English.

LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE ARABIA AND ARAGO.

By the arrival of the steamer Arabia, at Halifax, we have dates from Liverpool to the 12th inst.

The Arago left Havre on the 9th, and Cowes on the 10th. The news is not of great importance.

Capt. Dunlop, of the British steamer Tartar, which went in search of the Pacific, had furnished a detailed report of his cruise to the Admiralty. His search was principally directed to the space between the 40th deg. of north latitude and 51st deg. 20 min. longitude. The Tartar having a strong south-east gale in her favor, proceeded as far west as 25 deg. longitude on the parallel of 55 deg. Guns were fired every two hours during the night, and a vigilant lookout was kept during the day. Unfortunately, the search was totally unsuccessful—nothing whatever was heard or seen of the Pacific. The Tartar passed many outward and homeward bound vessels, and spoke two. Capt. Dunlop is confident that the Pacific cannot be south of latitude 53, or else she must have been fallen in with. The Tartar has again to put to sea to continue the search.

THE CONFERENCES.—The Paris correspondent of the Post says the telegraph is constantly employed on the Italian question between Rome, Naples, Vienna and Paris. Count Cavour's propositions having been referred to those Courts, and an answer received, France and England will make a decision.

The festivities of the Plenipotentiaries continue. Ali Pasha was to give a grand ball in Christian style. A banquet by the Emperor to all the Plenipotentiaries is appointed for the 12th. The Paris authorities state that a journal of the proceedings in the Congress is to be published.

The Commission of Austrian and Russian officers to rectify the Moldavian frontier are in Paris awaiting orders.

The Crimea.

The dates received from Constantinople are to March 31. The Russian Palace there, at present occupied as a French hospital, was being cleared for the return of the Embassy. The health of the French troops, both in the hospital and the Crimea, had improved.

It is now said that Austria, which has hitherto shown reluctance to evacuate the Principalities, has yielded to the remonstrance of the Congress.

The Turkish Government expresses its anxiety to be relieved of the presence of the Allies, and says it is quite able to maintain internal order and the defence of the frontier without the aid of foreign troops. The Divan is planning for the erection of permanent garrisons at important points of the Empire.

Lord Stratford de Redcliffe will continue as the British Minister at Constantinople. Omer Pasha is restored to favor and resumes the command of the army of Anatolia.

Great Britain.

A British Order in Council raises the blockade of all the Russian ports, and permits the free resumption of commerce in all articles.

Steamers are being fitted out to bring home the army from the Crimea.

France.

Expeditions against the Madagascar and the Kabyles are decided upon. Permission will be sought to send troops through Egypt to the former, and the latter will serve as a cause of the Emperor's visit to Algeria, although he will not himself command the army.

A considerable reduction of the French army, as soon as all matters pro arranged, is contemplated. There were still in the possession of France 610,000 effective men. This number will be brought down to 400,000 directly the treaty of peace is ratified.

The Moniteur contains the following:

In consequence of the unfavorable accounts from Paraguay relative to the treatment of emigrants, the French Government has suspended the granting of passports thereto, and colonists are recommended to wait until the situation of the foreigners there shall be placed under better regulation."

Denmark.

Copenhagen advices state that the English Cabinet have officially notified to the Danish Government their refusal to agree to the capitalization of the Sound Dues, and the determination of Great Britain to await other and more acceptable propositions. Russia and Oldenberg set the example a few weeks since. The question of the settlement makes no progress, and will probably stand over till it is seen what action the United States will take.

Russia.

The naval armistice was officially published at St. Petersburgh April 7. After rectification, all ships seized will be released.

The energies of the Russian Government is said to be now devoted to three objects, viz: First, Alliance with France. Second, Completion of the great railways. Third, The manufacture of Russian feelings on the Continent, especially in Germany.

It was believed that Russia would send an Embassador to Turin as soon as the ratifications of peace were exchanged. As Russia always looked, or professed to look upon the native participation of Sardinia in the war as a wanton outrage, this fact was thought to evince a cordial acceptance of the peace.

A ukase has been issued by the Czar to the effect that the two fleets hitherto maintained by Russia in the Black Sea and the Sea of Azoff are not to be reinstated. The whole naval administration for that quarter seems to be suppressed.

Intelligence has been received at Odessa that many vessels lying there had received orders by way of Trieste, to set sail for Marseilles immediately with their cargoes of corn. A considerable fall had taken place in the corn market at Marseilles in consequence of the great quantity of wheat offered for sale.

A dispatch from Paris states that the Allied Governments had sent orders to raise all measures of blockade which kept Russian commercial vessels in neutral ports; and from Hamburg it was stated that in consequence of instructions from the Governor-General from the Baltic provinces, the departure of the news destined for the row-boat flotilla of Riga had been postponed, and the superior staff of the army of the Baltic removed to Riga.

The Russian Minister of Finance notified, on the 5th inst., at St. Petersburg, that a treaty of peace having been signed, the merchant vessels of the Western Powers will be admitted to Russian ports. The blockade of the Russian ports has been raised.

An article in the Russian Northern Bee has created a sensation in Berlin, in consequence of its virulence against England. "Albion," it says, "has lost its prestige, but Russia is the most vigorous of all empires. Simply its productive powers are not sufficiently developed, and that makes it poorer than other countries."

The new levy in Poland for the Russian army was stopped at the last moment. A telegraph dispatch from St. Petersburg announced it as the first benefit conferred by peace.

Le Nord thinks that the exchange of ratifications would be effected on the 20th.

Austria.

A Grand Council of Bishops will assemble in a few days to discuss the Concordat. The Council represents twenty-nine millions of Catholics, Latin, Greek, and Armenian. The principal object of the Council is to restore the Clerical Marriage Courts according to the Canon law, and to recognize the whole body of the clergy on fundamental church principles. The Concordat abrogates the lower clergy's right of appeal from the Bishop to the Emperor, and hence it is not popular with the inferior priesthood.

Spain.

Disturbances had occurred in Valencia respecting the conscription, and the city and province in consequence had been placed under martial law.

Germany.

The Citizens' Assembly of Hamburgh have for the third time rejected the new constitution proposed by the Senate.

The Terms of the Treaty of Peace.

The Opinione of Turin gives, upon good authority, the conditions contained in the treaty of peace, lately concluded at Paris. They are affirmed to be as follows:

First—The neutralization of the Black Sea; Russia not to keep there more than ten ships of war armed, for the defence of her coasts.

Second—Nicolaieff is to be reduced to a merchant port, with an engagement that no ships of war shall be constructed beyond the number agreed to as above.

Third—Russia is to allow Consuls from all the Powers in the ports of the Black Sea and the Baltic.

Fourth—The fortifications of Bomarsund are not to be reconstructed.

Fifth—Russia cedes part of the territory of Bessarabia, comprising the fortress of Ismail.

Sixth—Russia renounces the exclusive protectorate of the Danubian Principalities.

Seventh—Russia equally renounces the Protectorate of the Greeks in the Ottoman Empire.

Eighth—The free navigation of the Danube is guaranteed to all the States, without exception.

Ninth—This article refers to a commission which is to be sent into the Principalities to study the questions of the frontiers and the mode of government.

The Opinione denies that any stipulation has been made in favor of Sardinia, and that the Italian question will be discussed at large by the plenipotentiaries in their supplementary sittings.

Russia will, it is said, send an ambassador to Paris, after the ratification of the treaty.

TIFLIS, April 8th.—The Persians have taken possession of the island of Karak, in the Persian Gulf.

Great dissatisfaction exists among the natives of Oude in consequence of the annexation of that kingdom to the British possessions. The King threatens to visit England and lay his complaints in person before the throne.

Portugal.

Galignani publishes a letter from Lisbon, in which it is said that the object of the visit which, as has been announced, the King Don Fernando, is about to make to Brussels, is to arrange a marriage between his son, Don Pedro V., the reigning sovereign, and the Princess Charlotte of Belgium. It adds that orders had been given to prepare the steamer Mindello for him. According to the same letter, it was very confidently believed in Lisbon that a visit from the Queen of England has been definitely resolved on, and will take place within the next two months.

Italy.

It is thought that the Abbe Bonaparte, says a letter from Rome in the Independence Belge, will be promoted to the rank of Cardinal at the next Consistory. He has been ordained priest. On Holy Thursday he received the communion from the hands of the Pope, with Cardinal Antonelli and the twelve poor men who represent the Apostles at the washing of feet and the Lord's supper. The Abbe is frequently confounded with his brother Giuseppe Bonaparte. It is Lucien who has devoted himself to the ecclesiastical state. Two of his sisters, the Countess Campello and the Princess Gabrielli, are here at present.

A fine American clipper, the Hurricane, Capt. Varney, arrived at Havre, on the 5th instant, from Calcutta, having made the run in 81 days including the call at Falmouth.

Russia.

The exportation of corn from Russia is now permitted by that Government. The Russian Government will also, in all probability, be the chief exporter. The stores that have been collected in Poland and Bessarabia from its own subjects as war contributions will now be converted into specie for the behoof of the Government, while at the same time it will get clear of all its liabilities towards its own and foreign subjects on the score of the grain on the coast of the Black Sea, the exportation of which it prohibited at an early period of the war, and for which it was under liabilities it could not nor would not fulfil. It is endeavored by many persons to represent this measure of the Russian Government as a concession made by Russia to the Allies, in return for the removal of the blockade; but in fact the permission of the export is as much called for now by her own interests, as its prohibition was formerly by her own necessities.

A letter from St. Petersburg, under date the 31st of March, says as follows:

"A telegraphic dispatch from Paris, received at 11 o'clock last night at the Imperial Chancellerie, brought us the pleasing tidings of the conclusion of peace.—The Journal de St. Petersbourg published about midnight an extraordinary supplement to this effect: "A telegraphic dispatch from the Aid-de-Camp General Count Orloff, has announced to the Emperor that a treaty of peace was signed at Paris on the 18th (30th) March, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon."

"The clubs, the cafés, the public thoroughfares, were during the whole of the day encumbered by an immense crowd, all anxious to learn particulars. The sensation is immense and profound. All the journals of this morning have published the news in large letters at the head of their columns. At mid-day I assisted at one of the finest military spectacles that could be given to the public. A grand review took place of the whole of the reserve corps and the Guard, the crews of the fleet, and the active divisions of St. Petersburgh, to which were added the cadets and the militia. The Emperor arrived on the ground, accompanied by the Grand Dukes, his brothers, and rode slowly along the lines of the troops, who amounted to at least 75,000 men. The guns of the fortress and the bells of the churches hailed the official announcement of the treaty of peace. His Majesty and the Grand Dukes were received with real enthusiasm, and when the cortege had returned to the Palace the soldiers had much difficulty in keeping back the crowds that gave expression to their joy and gratitude by the loudest cries. This evening there is a reception at the Water Place, and to-morrow a Te Deum will be executed in the chapel. You will see, then, that peace has been hailed by the people of St. Petersburgh with great demonstrations of joy."

The Patrie says:

It is positively stated that Count Orloff has received dispatches from St. Petersburgh, informing him that the Czar considers his presence necessary in the grand diplomatic councils which will be held at St. Petersburgh before the end of the month, and that he will be replaced in the Conferences by M. Titoff.

Louisiana Items.

The Clinton Democrat, of the 26th, says:

During the week we have been blessed with copious showers—the weather is mild and pleasant and the planters' prospects highly encouraging at the present.

We clip the following from the Thibodaux Minerva, of last Saturday:

We have had another delightful rain on Wednesday last, which has served to gladden the faces of our planters. The Lafourche is now several feet below high water mark, and still has a downward tendency.

FIRE.—The work shop of Mr. M. Robichaux, on Canal street, together with its contents, was entirely consumed by fire, at an early hour on Monday morning last. Loss estimated at about $600. It is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary. Much praise is due to our citizens for the zeal they manifested in preventing the flames from spreading to the surrounding buildings. The escape may be considered almost providential.

The West Baton Rouge Sugar Planter, of the 26th, says:

RAIN AT LAST!—On Tuesday evening last the heavens grew dark with heavy and ominous looking clouds which seemed to forbode heavy and violent showers. Sure enough on Wednesday morning it came, and we venture to say nothing lately has pleased our planting friends so much as this truly refreshing rain. The ground was dry and parched to that extent, that but little was expected to come up, or if so, to be killed by the fierce rays of the sun. A truly welcome shower.

The Natchitoches Chronicle has the subjoined items:

Our planters are suffering from the want of rain. We have not had a single refreshing shower for a month, and as a natural consequence, vegetation of every description is backward. The corn which is up, is greatly parched, and without a rain shortly, corn and cotton will have to be replanted.

The river continues to fall. We doubt if another trip through Cane and Little rivers can be made by any of our packets.

The Shreveport News, of the 19th, says:

The river at this point still continues to fall rapidly. Several boats are hard aground above, without any prospect whatever of getting out until there comes another rise.

THE WEATHER—Crop.—Since our last we have been blessed with a magnificent rain, which, from the appearance of the clouds, has been general. Such a rain as has been needed by our planters for some time. All the cane that will come up, is greatly assisted by the rain; but we fear that it is quite all up. So far as our observation extends, the prospect for a stand is as meagre as we have ever seen it. The fields are interspersed with small patches of cane, and extensive gaps without a stock to cheer the vision. [Franklin Journal, 24th.

CONCORDIA PARISH.—We clip the subjoined items from the Concordia Intelligencer of the 25th:

The Weather.—The rain of last week Thursday morning was so light and so limited and partial in quantity, that but little benefit was derived by the planters from its fall.

On Tuesday night of the present week a much more abundant fall of rain took place, accompanied with thunder. It continued showery on Wednesday, much to the delight of the planters.

Destruction of the Corn Crop.—We are truly sorry to record the partial destruction of the young corn on some of the best plantations in Concordia Parish by the chintz bug. We have specimens of corn so destroyed in our office. The bug makes its attack both upon the root and chief stalk, which it cuts completely off close by the ground. Whitehall plantation, a few miles below Vidalia and the plantation of J. T. McMurran, Esq., in this parish, have particularly suffered. We learn from planters in the neighborhood of Natchez, that the hill plantations of Adams county are suffering from the same cause.

Telegraphic Items.

BALTIMORE, April 25.—John A. Washington has addressed a letter to the editors of the National Intelligencer, in which he states that he was willing to sell Mount Vernon either to the United States Government or to the State of Virginia, but that as they both have declined the purchase, the place is no longer for sale.

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—The city councils, after a long and exciting debate, refused to pay the Hon. James Buchanan the compliment of a formal civic reception.

He was met at Trenton this morning by a large committee of citizens. On his arrival here the wharves were crowded with an eager multitude of people, who welcomed him with the most deafening cheers. His reception has been most cordial and gratifying.

THE EDITOR TOASTED.—At a printers' festival at Boston a short time since, the following capital toast was drank:

The Editor—The man who is expected to know everything, tells all that he knows and guess at the rest; to make oath to his own good character, establish the reputation of his neighbors, and cheat all candidates to office; to blow up everybody, suit everybody, and reform the world; to live for the benefit of others, and have the epitaph on his tombstone—"Here lies his last." In short, he is a locomotive running on the track of public notoriety—his lever is his pen, his boiler is filled with ink, his tender is his scissors, and his driving wheel is public opinion—whenever he explodes it is caused by non-payment of subscription.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

CREOLE RAIN.

[illegible] on Sunday, April 27, and [illegible]

[illegible] wonder!
[illegible] thunder,
[illegible] source a warning
[illegible] morning!
[illegible] early looming,
[illegible] heavy booming;
[illegible] shelter,
[illegible] seeking shelter
[illegible] and traveling scenes!
[illegible] how fine the evening!
[illegible] a tiny shower,
[illegible] fall,
[illegible] pouring
[illegible] roaring;
[illegible] gushing,
[illegible] current,
[illegible] river,
[illegible] and gulfs!
[illegible] night
[illegible] rain!
[illegible] and Mayflowers
[illegible] and April showers,
[illegible] away
[illegible] the first of May!

[Crescent.

[illegible] How do you feel to-day, [illegible]
[illegible] I am, thanks; [illegible]
[illegible] Tm [illegible]
[illegible] to be very better.

[illegible] Ohio!
[illegible] who go to church
[illegible] angrily lurch,
[illegible] becomes a sinner
[illegible] his cut-off dinner,
[illegible] ugly frowning,
[illegible] it growing;
[illegible] upward pitching,
[illegible] with catching;
[illegible] with their task;)
[illegible] reckless wading,
[illegible] dainty dry-foot sliding;
[illegible] and worthless crimes,
[illegible] and plunging fusses,
[illegible] and [illegible]
[illegible] in aquatic joys!
[illegible] at last, the closing flood
[illegible] anything bedizened with mud,
[illegible] in that quarter,
[illegible] as I've told, the mud and water
[illegible] the men all rubber-booted,
[illegible] all rubber-booted.
[illegible] we raining still,
[illegible] through the streets to fill,
[illegible] to stop),
[illegible] crops
[illegible] syringe,
[illegible] and Mayflowers
[illegible] and April showers,
[illegible] away
[illegible] the first of May!

[Crescent.

[illegible] Ohio!
[illegible] who go to church
[illegible] angrily lurch,
[illegible] becomes a sinner
[illegible] his cut-off dinner,
[illegible] ugly frowning,
[illegible] it growing;
[illegible] upward pitching,
[illegible] with catching;
[illegible] with their task;)
[illegible] reckless wading,
[illegible] dainty dry-foot sliding;
[illegible] and worthless crimes,
[illegible] and plunging fusses,
[illegible] and [illegible]
[illegible] in aquatic joys!
[illegible] at last, the closing flood
[illegible] anything bedizened with mud,
[illegible] in that quarter,
[illegible] as I've told, the mud and water
[illegible] the men all rubber-booted,
[illegible] all rubber-booted.
[illegible] we raining still,
[illegible] through the streets to fill,
[illegible] to stop),
[illegible] crops
[illegible] syringe,
[illegible] and Mayflowers
[illegible] and April showers,
[illegible] away
[illegible] the first of May!

[Crescent.

[illegible] How do you feel to-day, [illegible]
[illegible] I am, thanks; I must
[illegible] Tm [illegible]
[illegible] to be very better. I'm

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY A COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS FOR THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH---H. N. McTYEIRE, EDITOR.

VOLUME VI—NUMBER 14.
WHOLE NUMBER 274.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 10, 1856.

$2 00 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.
OFFICE—36 CAMP ST.

From the Independent.

The Morning Moon.

In the dim and silent morning,
Ere yet the stars grow pale,
Or the rosy dawn has lifted
The night's o'erhanging veil,

I often wake from slumber,
That I can woo no more,
To see the moonbeams resting
Upon my chamber floor;

And gaze until I fancy,
Each beam an angel's smile,
That's stolen down from heaven
To keep my heart from guile.

The wind in thoughtful whispers
Is faintly moaning by;
Its lightest swell or cadence
I echo with a sigh;

While darkness closes round me,
And nothing cheers the gloom,
But the placid moonlight sleeping
Within my quiet room.

Oh! how I love its shining,
Its calm and tranquil ray,
That soothes my heart's repining
And charms my grief away.

And o'er the deepest shadows,
A lightsome beam can throw,
As dreary waters brighten
When snowy lilies blow.

The rounded moon of evening
May seem a peerless queen,
When over woods and waters
She casts her silver sheen;

And her mellow radiance gleaming
May be beautiful to see;
But the pure and holy beaming
Of the morning moon for me!

DEAN.

BROOKLYN, March, 1856.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

FEMALE COLLEGES.

NUMBER FIVE.

One of the most patent faults of our female colleges is their disposition to yield to the popular haste by advancing the girls to studies which they are not prepared to undertake with profit.

Teachers usually are not the ones to blame in reference to this matter. The patrons demand it, and as they and their children are the chief sufferers from it, the teacher, after protesting against the course as unwise, feels at liberty to yield to the preference of his employers.

I will not say that the patrons are worthy of blame in the matter, but they are certainly responsible for the existence of the evil. It is a fault which inheres in the system, and which, therefore, can only be reached by those who maintain the system, and have the power to demand and secure a change.

Will not the parents of the land and the friends of education and of social progress, take this subject into thoughtful consideration? We are too willing that our daughters should graduate at the early age of sixteen or seventeen.

A majority of those who graduate at the Centenary Institute and at the Judson Institute, two of the oldest and most approved of the "Alabama Female Colleges," are seventeen or eighteen years old, at the time of their graduation. A few are older, but a much larger number are only sixteen.

What is the inevitable result of this pernicious haste? What effect has it upon the teacher in the classification of his pupils? The answer is, that it leads him to push them on more rapidly than they can go with thoroughness. He looks at his pupil, and reflecting upon the little advancement she has already made, and the very brief period allowed him in which to take her over so long a stretch as the "college course," he at once concludes that nothing short of extraordinary measures will reach the end. Hence we often see girls studying algebra before they possess even a tolerable understanding of arithmetic, or studying geometry before they have much knowledge of either. We see them, too, studying rhetoric and logic before they have more than a passing acquaintance with the principles of grammar, and studying philosophy, chemistry, &c., before they can understand the meaning of half the words employed in the text book. The consequence is, they never see daylight in any of their intellectual pursuits. Darkness becomes their habitual element, and the grateful fruits of science seldom gladden their mental vision. I assert, moreover, that this is not merely an occasional occurrence, but that it is the history of a majority of the so-called graduates of our female colleges. To a certain extent it bears upon them all, but to the fullest extent it bears upon a large proportion of them. The teachers toil assiduously, early and late, wear out their throat and their lungs, and reduce themselves, at the close of each session, to the merest shadows, in the vain endeavor to impart to their pupils an understanding of the various branches which they are pursuing; but they never can succeed while the present system remains unchanged, nor while girls are expected to get through at the early age of seventeen or eighteen. The best system that could be devised would fail to prepare them at that age to undertake successfully, and with a comprehensive grasp, the more difficult subjects of a college course. There must be a change in this respect, or teachers cannot be held responsible for the results of their labors.

Girls ought to be kept in the common school from eight or ten years old to thirteen or fourteen—then in the academy till sixteen or seventeen—then to college. They cannot be well educated in a less time. There are pretenders in every age and clime, and in every profession; and accordingly we sometimes hear men boast that by their system or in their school a "complete education" may be obtained "in a very short time." In every instance the authors of such professions may be set down either as incompetent persons, or as deliberate humbugs. Patience is an indispensable element in every educational system. The mind cannot be developed and matured with modern despatch, by steam or electric processes. Its growth may be regulated and greatly assisted; just as you may contribute to the growth and maturity of vegetation by proper nutriment and cultivation; but once take hold of the sprout and undertake by main strength to hurry it up, and, of course, you do harm rather than good.

But it is objected that young ladies will not wait until they can obtain an education before they marry, if it is to be so slow and tedious a process as to last until they are twenty-one or twenty-two years of age.

I answer, that a proper system of education would do much towards correcting this weakness. It is an evil against which society should direct some powerful engine. Nothing short of a prodigious and wide-spread influence can effect the cure. In Germany it is a fixed law, rigidly enforced, that no young lady shall marry under twenty years of age, and no young man under twenty-five! In this country an enlightened public sentiment in regard to such matters must take the place of law; but certainly Germany possesses no statute that reflects more credit upon her law-makers, more credit for true wisdom, than that.

MENTOR.

(To be Continued.)

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

EAST FELICIANA COLORED MISSION.

April 25, 1856.—Whole number on this mission, in full connection and on probation, 829; of that number 58 have joined this year. Not unfrequently from one to six conversions occur at a single meeting. Some as clear as I have ever witnessed among the whites. I have many helps on this work—some very able exhorters and many that are very able in prayer, who show by their daily walk and conversation that they are what they profess to be. The interest through the mission is on the increase. I receive frequent calls from owners to come and catechise their servants and preach to them. Some are even willing to give their servants time in the week to come and hear the word of God. One very important duty of the missionary is to visit the owners, and should he have a good supply of books and tracts along with him, much good could be accomplished in this part of the work. The missionary should ever bear in mind that God is no respecter of persons. He should feel as solicitous for the salvation of the poor African slave as for the wealtey white man, and come down to his capacity and converse with him familiarly upon the great subject of his soul's salvation. It is not enough for the preacher to pretend outwardly to feel for the cause, but he must actually feel as anxious for the eternal welfare of the blacks as for the whites. He must enter into it, head heart and soul—ever bearing in mind that Jesus has died for this poor class of people. Then he may expect that God will save them through his instrumentality. As I go forward in this work, the Lord opens the way. Although I find obstacles before me, they vanish like the morning cloud.—At present I have fourteen appointments, all very well attended. I feel very happy in this work, and should it be my lot spend the remainder of my days in pointing this benighted people to the Lamb of God, I shall not murmur, but ever rejoice that I am permitted to labor in so worthy a cause. To God be all the praise.

Your brother in Christ,

WM. S. TOWNSEND.

RAIN, HAIL, WIND AND THUNDER STORM.—Last Wednesday night we had one of the heaviest rains, accompanied with wind, hail and thunder, that we have had for a long time. The bayou is at full banks. The prairie west of town presented the next morning the appearance of nothing but a sheet of water. For the last few days, we have had enough rain in this parish for all intents and purposes, and in fact a little too much. [St. Martinsville Constitutional, 3d.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Reminiscences of John S. Goodman, of Mobile.

At the session of the Alabama Conference in the town of Auburn, in 1851, I was ordained deacon by Bishop Capers, and appointed to the charge of Toulminville and Westward Church, in the city of Mobile, and here I made the acquaintance of this excellent young man—an exemplar of piety and goodness—who was at that time residing at Toulminville with his widowed mother, a pious Methodist lady, the relict of a Methodist preacher, primarily from Charleston, South Carolina. He being near my own age and similar in temperament and predilection, a pure and generous friendship soon sprung up between us, which warmed into an ardent flame of fraternal love which the cold waters of death have not quenched. The result of this friendship was great intimacy in our social and Christian relations, he frequently came into my study for a pleasant interview, at which time I had various and favorable opportunities for observing the different phases of his social and Christian character; and I must say that I have rarely met with such a young man in the ranks of the laity—so generous, so pure, so holy. He is worthy of all imitation, both among the laity and clergy. That his virtues may be imitated, a friend pays this humble tribute to his memory.

He was eminently social in his habits and disposition, an attribute by no means incompatible with the highest attainments in the grace of God; and he enjoyed social intercourse with his brethren in the ministry with exquisite zest. He was not of that class of frigid and cynical Christians who seem to have been born with the tropic of Cancer, and who imagine that an elongated, Pharisaical face, and cold, forbidding manners, are indispensable prerequisites to the development and perfection of Christian character. As some poet has said, "a man may smile and be a villain," so he thought one might smile and be a Christian. Nor did he repudiate as sinful a little pleasant wit or an innocent jest, because foolish talking and foolish jesting has been quarantined by the sacred dictum of divine inspiration. Rightly judging that the Creator maketh men to differ—that the potter hath power over clay to make one vessel of one character, and another different—that all pipes and harps do not give the same sound, but there is a distinction in sounds, that it may be fully known what is piped or harped. So the Head of the Church has called into his vineyard men of all grades of talent, mental culture, temperament and phase of manners, so that through his ministry he may be "all things to all men," that he may "win some." No one who knew Brother Goodman intimately ever questioned his piety. His religion was not confined to creeds and confessions of faith, nor to the conscientious observance of the external rights and ceremonies of Christianity; it did not rest in his brain, but extended down to his moral powers, and took in the heart with its passions and affections; he needed no interpreter to explain to him what was meant by being "born of the Spirit," and a new creature in Christ," and being made "partaker of the divine nature" for the "love of God shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost given unto him" made all these mysteries plain. He had an unction from the Holy One, and needed not, that any should teach him.

Nor did he rest in the principles of the doctrines of Christ," but went on to perfection," he "crucified the flesh with its affections and lusts, until he was enabled to say, with the great apostle, "I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me, and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me." He "cleansed himself from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, and perfected holiness in the fear of the Lord." He "sanctified the Lord God in his heart," and daily naming the name of Christ departed from iniquity. Having "presented his soul and body a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God," he felt that he was not his own, but that he belonged to God"—time, talents, person, fortune, all were God's property, had been bought with a price, not gold and silver, but with the precious blood of Jesus Christ, and henceforth he neither lived nor died unto himself, but unto the Lord who had bought him; and living or dead, he was the Lord's property. And I confidently trust that his whole soul and body, and spirit was preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ," and that he is now wearing the robe of righteousness, bought and made white by the blood of the Lamb, and that his voice is mingling with the heavenly choristers in swelling the anthem of redeeming grace and love amid the jubilant host that march around the throne of God.

How strange and inscrutable that the hand of Providence should pluck this fresh and fragrant flower, shedding its sweet odor upon the atmosphere all around it. Bereaved friends, Jesus says, "what I do thou knowest not know, but thou shalt know hereafter." He was only an exhorter and class-leader, but eminently useful in his sphere, and his death has produced a vacuum in the Church which I fear will not soon be filled. There is now less love and less faith in Mobile than when he lived, but although the Church is poorer, heaven is richer—another jewel sparkles in the diadem of life. From a boy he had led a class in the city, with eminent usefulness, and loved the class-room as the nursery of grace. He was nearly always present and took part in the religious exercises at Toulminville; and who that ever heard him can forget his earnestness and power of exhortation? He plead with sinners as one who fully realized the imminent peril to which they are exposed, and as though he would lay hold upon the skirts of their garments and pull them out of the fire. It will be a fearful thing for the young men about Mobile who die impenitent, the colemporaries of John S. Goodman, to meet him at the future Day of Judgment, as his soul was deeply imbued with the spirit of Christ, or the fruits of that spirit were fully manifested in his heart and life. Humility, faith and love were prominent characteristics of his Christian character. Raised in the city, his dress was elegant and his manners those of a polished gentleman; yet there was no foolish pride or ostentation about him. On the contrary, he was clothed with humility as with a garment, and often illustrated by his words and acts what the heathen poet expressed, "nil ago nil habea, sumnil; in pulvere sespo"—I do nothing, I have nothing, I am nothing; I creep in the dust. He was eminently like his master, "meek and lowly in heart." Nor did he consider it beneath him to shake or grasp the hand of the meanest servant, especially if he was a child of God. His heart being filled with the love of God, as a natural result, he loved his neighbor as himself; and his affection and sympathies flowed out towards all men. He put on bowels of mercy, which yearned for the salvation of his fellow-men. He had the badge of discipleship, love to the brethren. But the Methodist preachers especially were nearest his heart. These he loved supremely, nor was it only "in word and in tongue," but in deed and in truth." He was not satisfied until he gave some testimonial of his warm regard. As an illustration, the first sermon the writer preached in Toulminville, on coming out of the church, he said to him, "I will give you the finest white hat in Mobile"—nor did he forget to redeem his promise. He loved to contemplate the words of the blessed Jesus, that it is "more blessed to give than to receive." In private conversation he told me that he had stood on the corner of the street, with his hand upon his purse, earnestly desiring that some object of charity might pass along, that he might have opportunity to give something—that he had bought provisions and fed the poor; to appreciate his benevolence, it must be remembered that he was himself poor, was a clerk in the city, and supported a widowed mother and family on the proceeds of his labor. I can never forget his loving letters, exhorting me to faithfulness in the ministry, mingling warm words of encouragement from his own heart with the sweet promises of Christ, in which he had implicit confidence. I have gone with him to prayer meeting, when all was dull and flat, when clouds and darkness had gathered around my own soul, and I felt with the Psalmist, "All thy waves and thy billows have gone over me," and after a few introductory remarks he would read his favorite Psalm, "As the hart panteth for the water brooks, so panteth my soul for thee, O God," and then kneel down and pray with such earnestness of supplication that every Christian heart would be melted into penitence and love and sinners gaze on with interest or turn restlessly upon their seats. Hundreds now live who could testify to his great power in prayer. Truly, when his hands were uplifted to God "Israel prevailed," and the spiritual Amalakites of the church were routed and put to the sword. He prayed as one asking a favor from a faithful and opulent friend whose word was pledged to grant it, and the delay of its coming did not weaken his confidence. He remembered the unfortunate widow and the final success of the Syrophenecian woman, and imitated their perseverance. Placing the right foot of his faith on the promises of Christ, he stood like the "men of Galilee gazing up into heaven," confidently expecting to realize the full fruition of all that was promised. He laid hold upon God through his promises, like Jacob upon the angel, and wrestled with him, "I will not let thee go until thou bless me;" and waxing warmer he would earnestly cry out like Esau, "O my Father, hast thou not a blessing for me also?" And ere he closed "the place was not shaken, nor did cloven tongues of fire rest upon the disciples," but they were equally filled with the Holy Ghost." More than four years have whiled away into eternity since I heard him, but the tones of his voice deeply impassioned in prayer, still linger upon the ear of memory; and his face when he rose from his knees, radiant with the outbeamings of indwelling grace, is still ingurrentyped upon my mind. But he is gone, he only lit upon earth long enough to re-plume his wings for a loftier flight of immeasurable altitude. His soul is imbosomed beyond the clouds. He died in the Lord and his "works do follow him." He needed no monument pointing its marble shaft to the skies, exegit monumentum perenius are in the hearts and minds of his friends. Pure, generous, lofty spirit, requiescat in pace until the resurrection morn, when the clangor of the Judgment trump shall peal upon the ear of thy sleeping dust, and the voice of the son of man

"Shall bid thee arise
To fall him in triumph descending the skies."

Farewell, my beloved friend and brother, I shall meet thee again on the eternal shore.

T. F. C.

LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMER PERSIA.

The Royal mail steamship Persia, Capt. Judkins, arrived at New York on Thursday, the 20th, after a rapid passage of less than ten days. She left Liverpool on Saturday, the 10th inst.

She made the passage to the bar in nine days, ten hours and fifteen minutes.

The Paris Moniteur announces that the Conference closed its sittings on Thursday, and that the ratifications will be exchanged ere the close of the month. Immediately after the promulgation of the general treaty, the protocols will be published and the labors of the Conference will be made known in detail. The questions considered at the last sessions were—

One—The free navigation of the Danube.

Two—The interior Regime of the Principalities and the arrangement of the Frontiers.

Three—The situation of the Christians in Turkey.

For those purposes three Commissioners were appointed.

It is reported at Paris that diplomatic movements of importance are on foot with respect to Italy.

The Austrian Ambassador is to go immediately back to Rome on a special mission.

It is rumored that this mission refers to the Concordat, but the Italian journals say that it relates to the general state of Italy.

Count Orloff goes to Naples immediately after the exchange of the ratifications, to see his son, who was wounded in the Crimea.

England.

CIVIC BANQUET TO THE AMERICAN MINISTER.—On the evening of Thursday, the 17th, the Lord Mayor of London entertained Mr. Dallas at dinner, at the Mansion House, in honor of his arrival in England, as the representative of the United States.—About 200 guests were present.

After the removal of the cloth the usual loyal toasts were drank and responded to.

The Lord Mayor then said he rose to propose the health of one of his honored guests that evening, his Excellency the representative of the United States. (Cheers).

Mr. Dallas, on rising to respond, was greeted with cheers. He said:

My Lord Mayor, Ladies and Gentlemen: The very kind and complimentary manner in which your Lordship has prefaced the last week, and the cordial manner in which it has been received by this distinguished assembly, are entitled to, and, I hope, will receive my return of gratitude. In truth, I am almost bankrupt in the language of thanks; for ever since I landed in the dominions of your illustrious Queen, as the representative of the American Government and people, I have met with nothing but a series of the most flattering demonstrations of welcome and hospitality. (Cheers.) I perfectly well know that these manifestations are not addressed to an individual so utterly unworthy as myself, and that they are the profound and generous tribute to a nation whose messenger I am. But on its behalf, with a sensibility that I know it would unanimously feel, I beg this distinguished company to accept the assurance of my profound acknowledgments. There are some subjects on which it would be ill-timed, and more enterprising than wise, for me to touch on this occasion and in this presence. Indeed, my arrival is so recent, that I scarcely can pretend to know the subject which would be most acceptable to you. I dare say, however, I shall incur but little hazard if I venture, according to a provincialism natural to a Western tongue, to "guess" that the spirit and purpose of a new comer may have excited at least some little curiosity. (A laugh.)

Well, my lord, let me say that I am not authorized to feel, and do not feel, any desire other than that of giving my energies and exertions unreservedly to the restoration of the most harmonious sentiments and friendly relations. (Cheers.) Animated by this spirit, and aiming at such a purpose, if I fail—and I may fail—it will be because of some inexorable overruling State policy, or some foregone conclusion not to be undone by uniform, steady, persevering, frank and honorable conciliation. (Renewed cheers.) My lord, permit me, in conclusion—for my object is to be brief—to tender to your lordship, and the guests here assembled, my congratulations on the great event consummated, since my arrival among you—the restoration of peace to Europe. (Cheers.) War, although undoubtedly accompanied by its moral benefits or alleviations, is at best, an evil; and the vast powers of this empire, although for a time, and however gallantly enlisted and ably directed, will find more genial and fruitful employment in those channels, agricultural, commercial and manufacturing, and those pursuits which have hitherto so signally illustrated the exertions of her people. (Loud cheers.) My lord, I again thank you.

The Lord Mayor then gave, "The House of Lords."

Lord Stanley, M. P., briefly acknowledged the compliment. It was bold, he said to undertake in any company, still more in their presence, to be the spokesman of Parliament. But there was one idea which predominated in all their minds, and on that subject he thought he might venture, without presumption, to say that he could express the unanimous feeling, not only of the Legislature, but what was quite as important, of those far whom the laws were made. (Hear.) He thanked the Lord Mayor for having given him the opportunity—an opportunity of which others had availed themselves—of expressing aloud that which was in the thoughts of all, namely, their deep, earnest, and almost passionate desire that, be the chances and changes of political events what they might, England might retain inviolate that national alliance of which they had among them at that moment the living representative—an alliance which had its root in no consideration of temporal or political expediency, but which, on the surer basis of the common origin, the common language, the common laws, the common energies, and the common aspirations of two mighty empires, and even in that which they must all acknowledge—a common family likeness in common faults and failings. (Cheers and a laugh.)

Upon the union of these two nations depended the hopes of mankind and the peace of the world, and if they went on as they had done for a long time past, within a century from the present time the earth would be inhabited by three hundred millions of the Anglo-Saxon race—the most energetic, industrious and enterprising people that ever tilled its soil. It was upon the cordial union of that vast multitude of men, our descendants, that the future hope of mankind rested—a future of rational progress and well-ordered freedom, in which the knowledge of man should be extended, his power over nature increased, and his command of the appliances of civilization multiplied, and it rested with England and the United States to act on that principle. (Cheers.)

Mr. Cardwell, M. P., in acknowledging the toast of "the House of Commons," said he was sure the Commons of England would not fail to reciprocate those fraternal feelings which had been expressed by the American Minister. They could not forget that free institutions, whether in America or England, were alike derived from Anglo-Saxon ancestors. Mr. Cardwell then proposed the health of the Lord Mayor.

The Lord Mayor briefly acknowledged the compliment.

Mr. Dallas then, in graceful terms, gave the health of the Lady Mayoress, which was drank with acclamation.

The Lord Mayor, in responding to the toast, told Mr. Dallas he was authorized by the Lady Mayoress to say, that if his diplomacy was equal to his gallantry there could be no fear of the success of his mission. (A laugh.)

Troops for Canada.

In the House of Lords, the Earl of Elgin would put a question to the Government. A report was current to the effect that large bodies of troops and great quantities of ammunition were about to be dispatched to Canada. The report had caused a great deal of anxiety to the public mind; and he desired to know whether there were any foundations for the report.

Lord Panmure replied—There is a general impression, out of doors, that a very large force is about to embark for British North America. It is quite true that it is our intention to send back to North America a certain number of regiments which were taken from that part of the Queen's dominions for the purpose of carrying on the war, and it is not improbable that in the new organization of the army, by division and brigades, which is contemplated, there will, over all the North American provinces, be a small addition to the British army; but an impression that we are about to send thither a large force, for the purpose of aggression, is entirely without foundation. It is also stated—and I am glad to have the opportunity of explaining that too—that large quantities of munitions of war are being sent to British North America. The fact is, that during the war we drew from the British North American stores almost all the munitions of war, in the shape of gunpowder and other materials, which they contained. All that is now being done is to replace the stores that were drawn thence.

The American Papers.

In the House of Commons, on Monday, Mr. Henry Baillie asked Lord Palmerston if he could give an assurance that the American papers would be forthcoming within a reasonable defined period. Lord Palmerston said he had only just received the groundwork of the reply to the last communication from the United States. It required to be carefully considered, so that its terms should neither envenom the discussion, nor omit anything essential to the case of Her Majesty's Government. It was satisfactory, therefore, to know that Lord Clarendon, although absent in Paris, had yet been able to bestow some attention to this and other important subjects, and in a few days Lord Clarendon would have finally settled the reply to be handed to Mr. Dallas. In all probability he would have returned to London by the end of the week, and no doubt the papers would be produced early next week. Mr. Baillie said, under these circumstances he should postpone his motion condemning the recruiting in the United States.

Miscellaneous.

The Queen held a levee at St. James's Palace on Tuesday. Among the members of the diplomatic circle present was Mr. Dallas, the American Minister.

France.

A very splendid fete was given on Monday night, at the Hotel de Ville, in honor of the Plenipotentiaries. One-third of the Galerie de Fetes was cut off and converted into a temporary theatre, in which the actors of the Opera Comique performed a piece entitled the "Concert a la Cour."

Italian Affairs.

The following is an extract from the Paris correspondence of Le Nord, the Russian journal of Brussels: Dining, a few days ago, with a high personage of the court, Count Cavour did not conceal his complaints against the Conference for refusing to interfere in the affairs of Italy against Austria, which power had in its favor the majority of the plenipotentiaries. He ended with saying there will be revolutions in Italy before the year is out. The minister of Victor Emmanuel, adds Le Nord, uttered his prophecy with some show of reason—the moment a Piedmontese army from the Crimea is about to enter the Papal States, Austria brings her troops to the frontier of Piedmont. It is easy to foresee the possibility of a conflict. England will sustain Piedmont. France also would cordially interfere with the object of reconciling the revolution with the interests of the Pope. Austria, who left Russia to combat singly with the allied powers, could not, in the case of a conflict in Italy, rely upon Russia.

A Paris correspondent says: All the talk of the diplomatic and political circles is at this moment about the speech which Lord Clarendon delivered on the state of Italy, in a recent sitting of the Congress. In this speech his lordship denounced, in very vehement terms, the system of government which prevails in Naples and Rome, declared that it is a danger, not only to Italy, but to Europe, and that it is impossible for any government, in the present advanced state of civilization, to disregard altogether the popular will, and to govern according to its own arbitrary pleasure. His lordship, it is said, required that his speech should be mentioned in the minutes. It is said also that the speech caused great offence to Austria, as was natural, not a little to Russia, and some to France.

"It is affirmed," says the Steele, "that with the unanimous consent of the plenipotentiaries, the treaty of peace signed on the 30th of March, expresses in the most flattering terms, the high esteem of Europe for King Victor Edmond, and for his Government and army. According to the terms of the convention signed between the Porte and Austria, the evacuation of the Danubian Principalities is to follow within forty days after the exchange of ratifications."

Russia.

A letter from Berlin, of the 13th ult., says: "The grand dinner which the Minister of Commerce, M. Von der Heydt, gave in honor of peace, was very brilliant. The Ambassador of Russia proposed, in eloquent and cordial terms, a toast to the Queen of England, the Emperor of the French, and the King of Prussia. The propositions made by Russia, relative to the extension of the commercial and customs treaties of 1818 and 1825, have reached the Government, but the concessions of Russia are much less important than had been expected."

A letter from St. Petersburg, of the 7th ult., says: "A Te Deum was sung yesterday afternoon, in the chapel of the Winter Palace, in honor of peace. All the court, and a number of superior officers and high functionaries were present. All the foreign embassies were also represented, and there were a great many other persons."

A letter from Warsaw, of the 4th, in the Hamburg News, says: "Prince Gortchakoff has informed the principal capitalists that vast enterprises are projected in Poland and Russia, and that they will act in their own interest, and at the same time give proofs of patriotism, in arranging matters so that money will not be wanting when required. He mentioned at the same time that the Emperor wished that the manufactures of Russia should be no longer worked by foreigners, and that he Majesty desired to bring into play the abundant resources of the country."

Spain.

THE INSURRECTION AT VALENCIA.—The Madrid journals of the 9th and 10th of April contain details of the insurrection at Valencia.

On the morning of the 6th, whilst the municipality was proceeding to draw for the conscription, numerous body of insurgents rushed in, crying: "Down with the authorities! No conscription!" and amidst threats of death to the members of the municipality, proceeded to break the urns. The alcalde, M. Escribe, who attempted to restore order, was fired at several times, and was miraculously preserved by a sergeant of the civil guard. The insurgents were headed by firemen and national guards, but were for the most part laborers from the railway. After expelling the mayor and his colleagues from the building, the insurgents proceeded to the Plaza San Francisco.

The captain-general, hearing of what had taken place, published a bando, but as it produced no effect, he marched against the insurgents at the head of a column of 200 infantry, 50 cavalry and 4 pieces of artillery. The insurgents, who were in the balconies and the windows, received him with a sharp fire, which caused him some loss, and he fired his cannon against them; but the insurgents resisted desperately, and bands of them spread over the city and attacked several guard houses. After three hours combat, in which the cavalry took part, the insurgents were dislodged from the houses, and were compelled to retreat. The number of killed and wounded on both sides was about forty; and it is now said that amongst the slain were six, not as first stated, three, soldiers and a lieutenant.

The last telegraphic accounts published in the Gazette announced that tranquility continued, but that groups, displaying considerable agitation, persisted in remaining in the streets. The Gazette publishes the decree, dated the 9th, which, as stated by the telegraph, removes Gen. Villalonga from the Captaincy-General of Valencia, and another which appoints Gen. de Zabala, Minister of Foreign Affairs, to the post, with powers of a special commissioner of the Government, Marshal O'Donnel, Minister of War, being charged with the administration of the Foreign Department during his absence. A report was current in the capitol that the troops of the garrison of Madrid had been kept in their barracks owing to the fear of disturbances; but the Epoca says that it was not true. A grand review of about 30,000 of the garrison and National Guard of Madrid had been ordered.

The Epoca says that the movement of Valencia had ramifications at Murcia, Carthagena and Barcelona.

THE U. S. STEAM FRIGATE MINNESOTA.—Navul Workshops.—We paid a visit to this new frigate on Saturday, and were surprised to find that steam would be got up on board of her this week. The machinery is all in place, and it reflects the highest credit upon the engineers and workmen employed in its construction. The work was all performed at the Washington Navy Yard, under the direction of government officers. The hull having been built at the same yard, the Minnesota will be from keelson to truck—from propeller to piston, a Washington ship—and her constructors may well challenge the world to produce her superior. Her anchors, tanks, etc., etc., were also made at the Washington Navy Yard.

The foremast of the Minnesota is already in place, and in thirty days she will be ready for sea. Her destination is the Brazil station, and it is reported that she will be assigned to the command of Captain Forrest, now commanding on this station.

A large number of workmen are now employed at the Navy Yard, and when the bell strikes at 6 P. M., they emerge from its walls like an army of the bone and sinew of the land. Several new buildings of extraordinary dimensions, are in course of completion, and in the shops will be considerably augmented.

[Washington Organ, 28th.

GUANO.—The American Guano Company, says the New York Tribune, have received further and important evidence of the almost inexhaustible deposits of guano on the island which belongs to them. Three or four captains of whalers have recently exhibited to the officers of this company their log-books, showing that they landed at this island and saw the grave of the American seaman buried there. The existence of the island and that it is really covered with guano, appears to be placed beyond a doubt. One of the captains alluded to, offered to abandon the voyage upon which he was bound and take charge of a ship to load with guano at this island. This is one of the most important discoveries for this country that has ever been made, as it makes the United States entirely independent of Peru for this valuable fertilizer.

Mr. Thomas Rogers, the celebrated locomotive builder, died at Paterson, N. J., May. He began life in New York, as a carpenter, in poverty. At the time of his death he had in his employ seven hundred and fifty men, working one of the largest locomotive manufactories in the world. He was sixty-five years of age.

SHOOTING AT MILLIKEN'S BEND.—We learn that Sexton Ingram, of Claiborne county, Miss., who was very dangerously wounded by a shot from Cherry, at Milliken's Bend, La., last Thursday, is dead. Ingram and Cherry had some angry words on the evening previous, and as soon on Thursday, as Ingram was passing to his dinner, Cherry fired, charged a double-barrelled shot gun from a place where he had secreted himself. Notwithstanding the severity of his wounds, Ingram was considered out of danger yesterday morning, and his physician had some hopes of his recovery. Cherry was immediately arrested, and is in jail. [Vicksburg Whig, 30th.

TOBACCO.

The Lynchburg Virginian reports the tobacco market in that vicinity as being quite animated. Large quantities have been coming in, it says, since the late rain. Qualities are fair and prices high.

MAY PARTY AT ODD FELLOWS' HALL.

The advent of the floral month, we are sure, was never more beautifully celebrated than it was on Friday night, at the Odd Fellows' Hall. As our readers already know, it was gotten up by a committee of our gallant young citizens, in compliment to the young ladies of the First District High School; and the result, we are assured, exceeded even their most sanguine anticipations. The attendance was very large, and was not limited to any particular section of the city. Each of the four districts was represented by bevies of its brightest belles and gayest gallants; for, in addition to the attraction that the Odd Fellows' Hall holds out to the lovers of dancing, on any and every occasion, there was the additional allurement, on this occasion, of the ancient and charming ceremony of crowning and paying court to a Queen of May: the High School girls, to whom the party was given, furnishing the Queen and conducting the coronation.

At the head of the hall, an elegant throne, parlatically and poetically canopied with flags, flowers and evergreens, stood on a carpeted stage, with a broad flight of steps ascending to it from the floor. Tasteful inscriptions in evergreen proclaimed the purpose of these preparations, before it was made apparent by the arrival of the Queen and her train. This event came off at nine o'clock, all the side-seats in the vast hall being crowded with lady spectators, and gentlemen standing about in lieu of seats. A troop of little Floras appeared at the main entrance, supporting an arbor of roses and evergreens, beneath which walked the Queen and her attendants, followed by a procession of young ladies in various poetical characters—the whole forming a most charming spectacle. After marching around the hall, singing, in chorus, the song of "Charming May," the procession ascended to the stage. There the Queen, kneeling, received the crown, and a poetic address from each of her followers. The addresses and the costumes of the young ladies were very appropriate to the parts they represented in the ceremony, and were equally pretty to listen to and behold.

The Queen of May was personated with great taste and dignity by Miss Margaretta Law. Miss Isabel Otway placed the crown upon her head, and Miss Atalie Batet bore her sceptre. Misses Mary J. Reynolds, Annie Taylor, Mary Turner and Annie Etter, acted as maids of honor. The poetic characters were very charmingly represented by Miss Emma Faysoux, as Sunshine; [Miss Alice Solomon, who had been appointed to represent the Morning Star, was unfortunately absent from indisposition;] Miss Rosa Benjamin, as Storm; Miss Sallie Collier, as Rainbow; Misses Mary Almuduger, Mary McStae, Charlotte Boullidlet and Virginia Redwood, as the Four Seasons; the little Misses Virginia Nichols and Minnie Levy, no Fairies; and Misses Caroline Lutt, Lucy Campbell, Angusta Boullemet, Lucy Broadhead, Fannie Benedict, Mary Stringer, Julia Blakesley, Clementine Schneider and ——, Brodie, as Floras.

The Queen, having been duly crowned and installed upon the throne, issued her mandate, that thenceforth music and dancing should be the order of the evening. The band of music at once struck up a lively air; and in a short time the Queen and her train were scattered about amidst as bright, beautiful and gay a multitude as ever tripped it over the floor of that hall of gay multitudes.

A great many of the young ladies who attended as spectators of the coronation, were so gaily decked with ribbons and flowers, in honor of the occasion, that it was difficult to distinguish them from the school girls when they became mingled together in the mazes of the dance.

It is not necessary to dwell upon the hall which followed the coronation and annihilated the night. It seemed to us, as if all the pretty faces that we have encountered at all the balls we have attended the past season, were there, conspiring to render this ball a grand climax to all its predecessors; and this, with the good management that was visible, as well as the abundance of temperate refreshments that counteracted the warmth of the weather, rendered it a ball to be lovingly and regretfully remembered, until such time as a hope of its repetition may be indulged in. We are quite certain that another such party will be generally clamored for in May next.

We had the pleasure of recognizing, in the crowd Miss Lochrey, the Principal of the High School, to the pupils of which the party was given; Miss McTler, the Principal of the Third District Girls' High School; and other accomplished ladies, whose rare attendance at balls in general, renders their presence an additional charm to the few balls they do attend.

[Crescent.

Miss Florence Nightingale has been gazetted officially as Directress-General of all the hospitals in the British Dominions. No nurses can, for the future, be appointed in any public hospital without her sanction.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The N. O. Christian Advocate.

Published for the proprietors, in advance.

NEW ORLEANS:

SATURDAY, MAY 10, 1856.

Rev. James A. Miller, of the New Orleans Circuit, informs us that a good meeting is in progress at Algiers. Some twelve have professed religion, and others are seeking. The interest is increasing, and the congregations are good.

Scandalous.

Two marriage notices, published in the Advocate of April 19, have proved to be hoaxes, palmed upon us by some witless villain. The parties to the marriages as given were: "April 1, by Rev. James W. Glenn, of Alabama Conference, Mr. H. W. Purnell, of Noxubee, Miss., to Miss Julia C. Cummins, of Alabama." "April 1, by Rev. J. D. Stewart, of Tennessee Conference, Rev. P. S. Bourland, of Ballard county, Ky., to Miss R. A. Johnson, of Hardin, Tenn." The notice, in both cases, is a hoax, fabricated by some base and brainless individual, whose exposure we shall take pains to make as soon as possible. We are sorry to believe that so mean and vile a thing was perpetrated by any white man or boy south of Mason & Dixon's line.

Fellowship in Prayer.

No thoughtful observer can fail to see that men who stand together in the same Church and often mingle in the same acts of holy worship, have in many instances no more living relation to one another than particles of sand upon the sea-shore; indeed, spiritual communion is a thing so little known or regarded in the more popular sections of the Church, that the very idea of it seems in danger of being totally lost. Could this state of things continue if the Church were fervently prayerful? No. Prayer, in the freedom and fulness of more abundant life, would include the fellowship of believers, and be accompanied with such manifestations of fraternal love as would bring joy and strength to many hearts. Christians would then rejoice to carry out the much-neglected precept of Church life, "look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others." Many a devout man who, though in the Church, now walks to heaven by a solitary path, would be claimed by his brethren as a fellow-traveler, and cheered in his journey by the sweet society of those whom he expects to meet in the far-off home. Every one might then lean on his brother for help, while every one would most thankfully endeavor to "comfort the feeble-minded and support the weak"—thus turning church membership into a thing of life, and significance, and blessing. What happy Sabbaths the Church might then spend with God! How hallowed and attractive all her seasons of social worship would then become, and what a privilege men would find it to belong to a praying Church!—Gleanings's Praying Church.

Fruit Unto Holiness.

"Walking in the country," says the Rev. W. Jay, of Bath, "I went into a barn, where I found a thrasher at his work. I addressed him the words of Solomon: 'My friend, in all labor there is some profit.' But what was my surprise when, leaning on his flail, he said, with much energy, 'No sir; that is the truth, but there is one exception to it. I had long labored in the service of sin, but I got no profit by my labor!' 'Ah, then,' answered I, 'you know somewhat of the Apostle's meaning when he asked, "What fruit had ye in those things whereof ye are now ashamed?" 'Thank God,' he replied, 'I do; and I also know that now, being freed from sin, and having become a servant unto righteousness, I have my fruit unto holiness and the end unto everlasting life.'"

Anecdote of Mr. Wesley.

A lady once asked him:

"Mr. Wesley, supposing that you knew that you were to die at 12 o'clock to-morrow night, how would you spend the intervening time?"

"How, madam?" he replied. "Why, just as I intend to spend it now. I should preach this evening at Gloucester, again at 5 to-morrow morning. After that I should ride to Tewkesbury, preach in the afternoon, and meet the society in the evening. I should then repair to friend Martin's house, who expects to entertain me, converse and pray with them as usual, retire to my room at 10 o'clock, commend myself to my heavenly Father, lie down to rest, and wake up in glory."

"Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing."—Luke, xii. 43.

It is cause enough for humility to know that we are not humble.

Country Christians in the City.

Amongst many subjects of reflection which these present, one has more frequently pressed itself upon us than any other. We allude to a proclivity for worldly amusements, and the general and thorough worldliness which characterises the deportment of many of them whilst sojourning in the city. It is held by most Christian denominations, and by Methodists in especial, that theatres, operas, and resorts of kindred nature are not to be attended or patronized by professors of religion, and that such indulgence is highly inexpedient, if not sinful. Pastors in the city are at much pains to warn their flocks against the evil of it, and persistance in it is considered ground of disciplinary action. The argument, in its breadth, against these amusements, is admitted by most, and the policy of Church restraint, as enforced upon home communicants, as well. The point which many of our country brethren have practically determined involves a principle in Christian casuistry that is far from clear—to wit, that the circumstance of their being strangers and visitors releases them from the obligations of home Christians.

This circumstance does not affect the general argument against these amusements. That their tendency is bad, is evident to those who have lived where their influence is seen and felt. It is highly demoralizing, and often ruinous to the young, and it always leads to backsliding or apostacy in church members, when the habit of attendance upon these amusements is formed. Perhaps no one thing operates more against religion in the city. By it more are kept out of the Church and out of heaven than by almost any other cause. This of itself nearly accounts for the scarcity of young persons in the several churches, and for the fearfully large number of persons who have been members elsewhere, but are not here. It is worldliness, but eminently this seductive form of worldliness.

If it be an evil so monstrous, and so surely felt by our resident Christians and by the churches, can its indulgence on the part of visiting Christians be vindicated by any circumstance whatever? The fact that they are visitors does not lessen the stubborn fact that they are patronizing and sustaining what does the cause of God amongst us incalculable mischief. What we are preaching against and praying against, they are countenancing and paying for. If they are doing no harm to religion where they live, does that justify the withering influence of their example here?

Giving the advantage of the admission, which cannot be held, that it is no injury to their personal piety, the example is baneful in the highest degree. It is sometimes urged that as strangers, their example is nothing. But in reality it is a great deal. They help to swell the great aggregate of worldly influence—an influence which is felt by those who do not know the individuals whose combined character and actions make it up. There is an influence of example that every one has, not as he is a Church member, or Mr. A. or Mr. B., but as a man. The units of our humanity are so many examples. Whoever goes to the theatre, if he does not go there as a known Christian, goes as a known man! In most cases the religious profession is known by some. Few come here who are not known by at least a small circle; and, so far as that circle is concerned, the example has the force not only of a man's but of a Christian man's influence.

There is in this objection, a radical lameness at best. But it is; besides, a confession which, in the light of religious duty, condemns him who pleads it. In our character as Christians it is doubtful whether we have any right to travel incog. We are commanded to let our light shine, to shine as lights in the world. The obligation of positive religious example and activity is made imperative. If the religious profession of theatre going Christians is not known, it ought to be. They have a right to conceal everything rather than this. The circumstance of being a visitor does not release us from that unshrinking avowal of faith which the gospel commands. The responsibility of the Christian man is not of this flexible nature. The character is his—it is himself—not a cloak that he can put on and off at pleasure, but a character to be maintained and illustrated everywhere. Were this character maintained boldly and consistently; were they to consort with God's people here who are struggling against every odds, our religious friends of the country, instead of unconciously helping to crush, would do much to sustain the cause and the character of the Church, and to encourage and aid those who labor for its welfare.

Christian parents come themselves and bring their children. They must at least go to the theatre once or more. It is important that they should see the world. Their visit would be incomplete without it. Besides, the young people, the girls and the boys, whilom dedicated to the Lord, and the subject of many anxious prayers, have never seen the world—they must see for themselves. The attendance but once of all the Christian parents and their children would keep our theatres going forever. Neither the managers nor the devil would ask any more. The reasoning is so absurd that it will hardly bear analysis. Do evil that good may come. And yet the evil done only leads to coming evils of greater magnitude. But suppose that good were to come of it—how, a more acute casuistry than we are master of can show—is that good a sufficient reason for the evil entailed upon the cause of religion here? It is a gratifying acknowledgment we make, that our country visitors afford many exceptions to the examples which have directed these observations, and that amongst the latter are very many of the good and useful. We beseech you, brethren, suffer the word of exhortation, and so much the more as you see the day approaching.

The Lamb of God.

The most signlficant and remarkable type introduced into the divine ordinances, as well as into Israel's history and ritual, was the lamb. It even meets us at the threshold of Paradise, in the sacrifice of Abel, as an object particularly acceptable in the sight of God. Later on, the lamb, with its blood, consecrates the commencement of the history of the Israelites. The sprinkling of the door-posts with the blood of lambs was the means of Israel's preservation in Egypt from the sword of the destroying angel, and the departure of the people from Pharoah's house of bondage. From that time the Lamb continued to be the most prominent figure by which God typified the future Messiah to the children of Abraham. Henceforward it acquired an abiding footing in Israel's saorificial rites in general, and in the yearly passover in particular. In the latter, each house was enjoined by the Mosaic law to bring a male lamb, without blemish or infirmity, to the sanctuary, there solemnly confess their transgressions over it, then bring it, typically burdened with their sins, to the court of the temple to be slain; and after it was roasted, consume it entirely in festive communion, with joy and thanksgiving to Jehovah. That which was so prophetically typical in this ceremony was so apparent that even the most sinful mind could not mistake it. Every one who was only susceptible of that which was divinely symbolical, felt impressed with the idea that this divine ordinance could have no other aim than to keep alive in Israel, along with the remembrance of the promised Deliveror, the confidence and hope in him.

John the Baptist appears in the wilderness; and the first greeting with which he welcomes Jesus, which was renewed whenever he saw him, is, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin, of the world!" thereby directing the attention of the whole world to Jesus, as if there were thenceforth nothing else worth seeing in heaven or on earth than this Lamb of God; and by so doing he certainly directs us to the greatest and most beautifying of all mysteries, and to the pith and marrow of the entire gospel. For if Christ had been only the "Lion of the tribe of Judah," and not at the same time the "Lamb," what would it have availed us? As the Lamb, he is the desire of all nations, the star of hope to the exiles from Eden, the sun of righteousness in the night of sorrow to those whom the law condemns, and the heavenly lamp to the wanderer in the gloomy isle of death.—Krummacher.

GOLD IN THE GREAT SAHARA.—According to the Center Algeria, the great desert of Sahara, which it states is not so uninhabitable as has been described, is rich in gold dust. In the month of January last, the Touregs, a race inhabiting the desert, sent a deputation to Governor-General Randon, proffering their friendship and their protection to trading caravans coming to their country, or passing through to the Soudan or to the land of the Niger. Among the articles which they named as inducements for trading caravans to visit them were gold dust, ivory, fragrant gums, etc.

Another Algeran journal, the Akhbar, in confirmation of the report of auriferous deposites in the Sahara, quotes the following passage from the works of Ebu-Khaldon, the historian of the Berbers:

"The King of Mailli (city of the Eastern Sahara) arrived at Cairo with eighty loads of gold dust, each of three hundred weight. A well-informed man of Sedschelmassa related to the king's interpreter that in the county of Kaakas (among the blacks) the Sultan Dahata, successor of Mousa Mussa, sold the famous rock of gold, which was the most remarkable treasure of the sovereign of Mailli. It weighed twenty hundred pounds, and was kept in the same condition as when first discovered.

AMERICAN TOBACCO IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.—It appears from official documents just prepared by the State Department at Washington, that the duties on American tobacco, in various foreign countries, are as follows: Bremen, 2-3 of one per cent. per pound; Great Britain, 72 cents per pound, and 5 per cent. additional; Holland, 28 cents per 221 pounds; Belgium, $1,86 per 221 pounds; Sweden, 5 5-6 cents per pound; Norway, 4 1-2 cents per pound. In France, Spain, Portugal, Austria and Sardinia tobacco is a government monopoly.

The following statement exhibits the quantity of American tobacco exported from the United States to the countries designated, with the duties paid thereon, during the commercial year of 1855:

COUNTRIES.	QUANTITY—Lbs.	AMT. OF DUTIES PAID.
Bremen	36,058,000	$ 16,652
Great Britain	24,203,000	$18,297,468
France	40,866,000	$16,800,000 annual rev. to Fr. Gov. for monopoly.
Holland	17,124,000	$ 21,405
Spain	7,524,000	$ 4,000,000 annual rev. to Spanish Gov.
Belgium	4,610,000	$ 15,749
Sardinia	5,311,000	$ .....
Austria	2,945,000	$ 129,585
Sweden and Norway	1,713,000	$ 68,505
Portugal	536,000	$ .....

Mansfield Female College, De Soto, La.

A letter from the President of this institution, Rev. H. C. Thweatt, informs us that it is now more prosperous than ever. We clip the following notice of it from the De Soto, Columbian.

"It is with considerable satisfaction, that we announce the arrival of M. C. Plagge, and lady, who are now connected with our Female College. They are in every respect competent to discharge the duties that devolve upon them as teachers in our school. Mr. Plagge is a regular graduate, and was for three years professor of music in the Russian College, Buren, and was for more than six years engaged in the public schools of Cambridge Massachusetts, besides organist in several churches, and leader of two large musical societies. Mrs. P. is a thorough, and efficient, teacher of the piano, guitar, and the French language,—having had ten years experience in teaching the above branches under the special supervision of her husband. All of the professorships of the Mansfield Female College, are now filled with professors who would be bright ornaments to any College in the Union. The large and splendid brick building will be ready for the reception of pupils by the commencement of next session, at which time, the trustees confidently expect to be able to place upon the pages of the catalogue, over two hundred pupils, the number having already exceeded one hundred and twenty five. They will certainly procure the extensive apparatus already appropriated for, in the completion of the college building. Mansfield is decidedly one of the most rotired and beautiful towns, and presents more ample facilitie for the erection and support of high public schools, no doubt, than any other village or town in the entire state of Louisiana. The press and the whole people of the State, should speak out and respound with a spirit of laudable liberality to the enterprise so cheerfully manifested by the founders and supporters of the Mansfield Female College."

John Knox's Call.

Knox's call to the ministry is thus related by McCrie:

These persons were so well pleased with Knox's talents and his manner of teaching his pupils, that they urged him strongly to preach in public, and to become colleague to Rough. But he resisted all their solicitations, assigning as his reason that he did not consider himself as having a call to this employment, and he would not be guilty of intrusion. They did not, however, desist from their purpose; but, having consulted with their brethren, came to a resolution, without his knowledge, that a call should be publicly given him, in the name of the whole, to become one of their ministers.

Accordingly, on a day fixed for the purpose, Rough preached a sermon on the election of ministers, in which he declared the power which any congregation, however small, had over any one in whom they perceived gifts suited to the office; and how dangerous it was for such a person to reject the call of those who desired instruction. The sermon being concluded, the preacher turned to Knox, who was present, and addressed him in these words: "Brother, you will not be offended, although I speak unto you that which I have in charge, even from all those here present, which is this: In the name of God, and of his Son Jesus Christ, and in the name of all that presently call you by my mouth, I charge you that you refuse not this holy vocation; but as you tender the glory of God, and the increase of Christ's kingdom, the edification of your brethren, and the comfort of me, whom you understand well enough to be oppressed with the multitude of labors, that you take the public office and charge of preaching, even as you look to avoid God's heavy displeasure, and desire that he shall multiply his graces unto you." Then addressing himself to his congregation, he said, "Was not this your charge unto me, and do you not approve this vocation?" They all answered, "It was, and we approve it."

Overwhelmed by this unexpected and solemn charge, Knox, after an ineffectual attempt to address the audience, burst into tears, rushed out of the assembly, and shut himself up in his chamber. His countenance and behavior, from that day until the day he was compelled to present himself in a public place of preaching, did sufficiently declare the grief and trouble of his heart, for no man saw any sign of mirth from him for many days together.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD—Dividend Declared.—At a meeting of the board of directors of this road, recently held, a dividend of three per cent. was declared on the capital stock, payable on and after the 15th of May. The books were closed on the 5th of May. The vote for a dividend stood, nineteen for to seven against it.

EXPORTS AND IMPORTS AT NEW YORK.—Since the commencement of the present fiscal year, July 1, 1855, there has been a total of foreign merchandise imported at New York amounting to $159,978,226. During the same time there has been exported of produce and miscellaneous goods $65,514,366, and of specie $16,689,729.

WHAT HARM IS IT.

One often hears this question asked for the purpose of settling decisively the fitness of particular actions. It is asked by that pretty numerous class of worldly people who have some degree of conscientiousness, and a general intention to do about right, according to their mode of judging. These do not mean to allow themselves in any thing which is clearly wicked; and they are so little enlightened in regard to their real responsibilities, that they take to themselves no small credit on the score of this virtuous purpose.

It is asked, too, by many professing Christians. Such persons must feel, of course, that any bad action would, in them, be unbecoming and improper. Even the most inconsistent and imperfect, however they may fail in practice, are sufficiently correct in theory not to defend, or to claim the right of doing, any act that is palpably immoral. All are agreed that wrong actions are inconsistent with Christian obligations, and are not to be indulged in; and there is, unfortunately, but too much evidence that the views of many professed disciples extend but little beyond this. They are to be careful to commit no crime. This seems to be about the whole of their ethical system.

Indeed by both these classes, the question to which we have referred, is asked as though it were undeniably a test question in regard to the rightfulness of actions. It is taken for granted, in propounding it, that if there is no harm in any course of conduct, that is to say if it be not in itself and necessarily sinful, it may be beyond a doubt innocently and properly adopted. But is it so? Ought it, in every case, to satisfy an enlightenrd conscience, that an action done, or proposed to be done, is not in its own nature criminal? Are the demands of duty, especially of Christian duty, merely negative? Do they rise no higher than the non-commission of crime, so that they may be quite fulfilled by merely abstaining from what is evil? Certainly there are right things to be done, as well as wrong things to be avoided. The grand inquiry with every Christian man or woman ought to be, not simply, What evil shall I shun? but What good can I accomplish? Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?

But even this is not enough. It does not follow of course, that one is in the way of duty because he is engaged in doing things which in themselves are right. It is the simple truth, and no strange paradox, when we say, that one may be doing only lawful things, and yet be acting in a very criminal manner. For what can be plainer than that among many good things which, at a given time, it may be in my power to do, I am bound to choose the best? Who will not allow that I am bound, in general to do those things, in preference to others, which promise to be most useful to myself, most advantageous to my fellow-men, and most honorable to religion and to God? Who will venture to deny, that since in the wide range of possible right actions, some one thing which I may do will accomplish a thousand-fold more good than something else, I may not incur the most heinous guilt by doing the latter, when I ought to do the former? It is doubtless a good deed to give a sixpence to a deserving blind man; but if I should busy myself with this, while a child was drowning at my side, the whole world would reproach me, and that justly, I must take care not only that what I do shall be a good thing, but that it shall be the best thing that is, at the time within my power.

When, therefore, you ask, Disciple, in regard to any action, any indulgence, any occupation, or any course of life, what harm there may be in it, the answer plainly is, that is not the question to be determined, if you wish to know your duty. Admit that there is no harm. That will decide nothing. It may be very criminal in you to do it notwithstanding. It is harmless! Very well; but can you not do something positively good instead? Something which may yield real profit to yourself or others? It is useful, you are able to affirm perhaps. Yes, but you are bound to look further still. Is it the most useful thing that, in the circumstances, can possibly be done? In reading that book, in keeping that company, in indulging in that amusement, in conforming to that fashion, in adopting that course of life, are you doing the very highest and most noble thing, the thing most worthy of yourself and most pleasing in the sight of God that lies within your power? If not, then you are doing wrong; incurring guilt, more or less aggravated as the case may be. Your powers and opportunities are not given you without the obligation to use them in the wisest and best manner. You are bound to make the very most of them; and for all that you fall short of this, you will be held delinquent at the bar of Eternal Justice.

Let it not content you then to ask about the harm involved in this or that. To look no further than this, argues a melancholy want of proper moral feeling, a sad lack of spiritual discernment and affection. Paul would never have thought of asking such a question. His soul was alwys full of loftier views and more exalted aspirations, than are implied in the mere desire to do no mischief. How did he burn with holy ardor to achieve the greatest possible things, at whatever personal sacrifice and even suffering! How small a thing did it seem to him to please himself, in this or that particular, might he but show himself a man, and win the prize of his high calling in Christ Jesus! You see that this was right, was admirable in him. You cannot withhold your homage from that self-forgetfulness which counts all things but loss for Christ, and can be satisfied with nothing short of self-crucifixion for his sake, and a supreme and unceasing devotion to his glory. Go thou and do likewise. Keep far within the dubious, twilight region that lies along the line that separates between good and evil. Attempt the best things. Live to the highest ends. The reward will be a conscience void of offense, a character of solid excellence, and the perpetual consciousness of God's approval here, and then at last the reward of the faithful servant. This is the true idea of Christian living.

[Independent.

Dedication of the Beer-Garden Chapel.

Those interested in the German Mission of New Orleans will be gratified to learn that this edifice is completed, paid for and dedicated. It will be remembered that the enterprise was initiated, by planting a Sabbath School in a Beer Garden, near the swamp, in the rear of the Third District. The Chapel is several squares from the Beer Garden, but in an eligible position, for usefulness amongst the German people. It is right in the midst. This is carrying the gospel war into Germany, the opening of a fountain of truth where it is most needed. We were at the opening and dedication on last Sabbath evening. The capacity of the house is for about three or four hundred. It was more than comfortably full, and many went away who found no room either to stand or sit. The Scriptures were read in German, and the singing was in German. The latter was excellent; better we think than the music of some of our more protending choirs. These Germans are hearty in their worship. Strong in praise and strong in the amens. The sermon was in our tongue, by Rev. J. B. Walker, "God is a Spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in Spirit and in truth." The text was expounded with special reference to the nature, obligations, and benefits of public and religious worship. The cost of Chapel and ground is eighteen hundred dollars, six hundred was unpaid at the close of the sermon—but the amount was raised on the spot, before the benediction was pronounced. It took some special and rather hard begging but it was done, and the house was given to the Lord clear of incumbrance. This is a good example. Is it not a mockery to go through the form of dedication when the premises are but half paid for? A thought was brought out and dwelt upon during the raising of the collection—the difficulty of giving to the Lord, and of persuading even Christian men to give. Other enterprises are easy. Docks, ships and hotels are built readily. Men spend their dollars, fives, tens, twenties and fifties. They risk and lose these amounts, and rest under the loss. The building of a little chapel is greatly more difficult than the most costly worldly enterprise. The talking, writing, managing, praying, to accomplish substantially so little, is amazing. The Church dollar is the largest dollar—its magnitude grows upon the gaze of considerate and pious stinginess. It is like a full moon on the edge of the horizon. It is the biggest, brightest dollar—the hardest dollar to let go. This illusion must be dissipated. Fifty dollars given in such a cause is only fifty dollars. Just the same that it is when expended upon lust, extravagance or worldly enterprise.

This is not a comment upon the six hundred dollar collection of the occasion. The givers were few and poor. It was the widow's mite acted over again, illustrated and enforced upon our attention. It was a rich paragraph of living, practical gospel. We hope the friends of missions will ponder it well.

But the chapel is a fact. It is a mark made where a mark is needed. It is a step forward, and something to encourage hearts and strengthen hands. And yet is this and all that has been done but an earnest. The field is expanding and weightier designs are on foot. Five chapels already; a handsome and commodious brick edifice is to be commenced immediately—something worthy the name of a church. As Americans, we should feel honored by the privilege of ministering and providing for the spiritual wants of the Germans, a people who claim the national kindred of Luther and Melancthon, and to whom Methodism, indirectly, owes a debt which she can discharge in no other way.

☞ The Convention to form a State Government for Utah is to meet soon. The estimate of Judge Drummond that the Territory has a population of 100,000 is thought to be nearly correct.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

PASTORAL VISITING.

MINDEN, LA., April, 1856.

It is only by knowing, from constant observation and painful experience, that the importance of any enterprise does not always secure for it that attention which it deserves, that we can restrain our astonishment at the lamentably common neglect among ministers, of pastoral visiting. To set forth all the motives to this from duty, interest, pleasure and success, would suffice for a volume instead of the space for a newspaper article. A glance, however, at some of them, may serve to "stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance."

It is necessary to attend to this in order to fulfill the command of Christ to Peter, "Feed my sheep." Some can not be fed at all, unless they are sought at their homes. It is not unfrequently the case that those who are "bound in affliction," and thus kept from the house of God, are the most pious of the flock. Their piety yields a purer and stronger light to the little circle about them than that of the more favored children of health. It is impolitic as well as unjust to neglect these; for often and often the discouragements the minister feels, and to these he is no stranger—he will be more comforted by a single interview than by any other means. The careless will feel a new interest from such a visit, and, girding on the armor afresh will strike with new energy.

The acquaintance he will obtain with his people is another strong motive to the performance of this duty. He thus becomes acquainted with their real wants. He learns their cares and troubles, and can adapt his preaching to them—binding up their broken hearts with the hand of felt sympathy, and soothing their woes with the balm of religion. This important advantage is entirely lost without pastoral visiting. A bond of attachment too is thus formed between the minister and his people that death cannot sever.

Its advantages extend also to the unconverted. He is brought into contact with them at their homes, and an influence is exerted upon them to be Christians. He knows how to approach them, and how they will be most easily moved to action—ascertains their difficulties and hindrances, and is prepared to remove them. His associations with them gives him a claim on their attention, and they pay him a deference which they will by no means accord a stranger.

In addition to this, the minister furnishes convincing credentials of his call. The world is prone to regard the ministry as a mere profession. They are apt to suppose that he entreats men to repent because it is "in his line." And it must be admitted that, when the zeal of the minister is exhausted in reading a lecture on some abstruse point of theology, the pretext for such a conclusion is too plausible. But, let him seek the humble, converso with them closely—comfort and pray with them when none but God can hear—as they will confess—unwillingly it may be—that he is a true minister—that truly the love of Christ urges him forward and sustains him in the conflict. His influence will be powerfully controlling.

As a further motive, his own success will show the benefits. Nothing will tend more to increase his own stock of "wisdom's costly merchandise" than faithful attention to this duty. Preaching may stir his soul with emotion, thrill it with triumph, but it is intimate communion with the pious and the heart-searching conversation that, most surely of all indirect means will deepen his piety, settle his peace and establish his faith. How often would the storm be hushed, and the dark cloud caused to roll away by a timely call on some pious member, or a religious interview.

All this is confirmed by the distinct voice of history. Pastoral fidelity has always been an important element of ministerial success. Those who have faithfully prosecuted it have reaped abundant harvests. God has especially honored their drafts on his converting grace. Witness the astonishing prosperity of Mr. Caughey—a most indefatigable pastor—and the far-famed usefulness of Payson, one of the most successful ministers of his school, whose was an untiring and efficient pastorate. Look about you and see, by a law of nature as well as of grace, "fruit unto eternal life" rewards the labors of those who are faithful in this respect. Duty calls loudly, and with the retributions of eternity in view, enjoins this work. Interest, happiness and honor, time and eternity, echo the sound. Affection, friendship, the pains of the lost and the songs of the ransomed, strangely join in unison to lead you onward in this all important work.

ZION PILGRIM.

LOVE.—Love is happiness. He who grows, in love grows, therefore, in happiness. God is love; and love is his image within us. If I would resemble him, let me strengthen love, never allowing a degrading selfishness to reign in my heart.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

PLAN OF EPISCOPAL VISITATIONS FOR 1856–7.

First District—Bishop Andrew.

Tennessee Conference, at Huntsville, Ala., Oct. 15, 1856.
Holsten Conference, at Knoxville, October 29, 1856.
South Carolina Conference, Yorkville, November 19, 1856.
Georgia Conference, Americus, December 3, 1856.
Florida Conference, Alligator, December 17, 1856.

Second District—Bishop Early.

Western Virginia, Guyandotte, September 4, 1856.
Kentucky Conference, at Winchester, Sept. 17, 1856.
Louisville Conference, at Elizabethtown, October 1, 1856.
Memphis Conference, at Jackson, October 15, 1856.
North Carolina Conference, at Greensboro', Nov. 12, 1856.
Virginia Conference, at Richmond, Nov. 26, 1856.

Third District—Bishop Pierce.

Missouri Conference, at Louisiana, September 24, 1856.
St. Louis Conference, at Charleston, Oct. 8, 1856.
Arkansas Conference, at Batesville, Oct. 29, 1856.
Ouchittas Conference, at Princeton, November 12, 1856.
Mississippi Conference, at Koscinsko, Nov. 26, 1856.
Alabama Conference, at Tuskegee, December 10, 1856.

Fourth District—Bishop Paine.

Kansas Conference, at Kicapoo, October 10, 1856.
Indian Mission, at Chickasaw Academy, Oct. 30.
East Texas Conference, at Paris, Nov. 19, 1856.
Texas Conference, at Gonzales, December 10, 1856.

Fifth District—Bishop Kavanaugh.

Pacific Conference, at Gilroy, November 12, 1856.
Louisiana Conference, at Waterproof, Feb. 11, 1857.

MARRIAGES.

On the 10th ult., by D. M. Wiggins, Esq., at the residence of Mrs. Mead, Dr. HORNE to Miss MARY B. NASH, all of Clinton, Hinds county, Miss.

On the 15th ult., by Rev. S. J. Kelley, in Warrington, Fla., Mr. J. E. WOOLSEY to Miss SUSAN STEARNS, all of Warrenton, Fla.

On the 28th ult, by Rev. S. J. Kelley, in Warrenton, Fla., Mr. WM. SEALS, of Butler county, Ala., to Miss HENRIETTA STEARNS, of Warrington, Fla.

On the 29th ult, by Rev. D. F. Lewis, Mr. WM. H. LEMON, of West Feliciana, La., to Miss ELLEN N. NEWMAN, of Wilkinson county, Miss.

DEATHS.

Died.—At the residence of her father, in Greene county, Alabama, Mrs. BEATTY W. IRBY, consort of Richard T. Irby, of Noxubee county, Miss.

She was the eldest daughter of H. L. and E. J. Kennon; was born on the 25th of April, 1832, and died the 17th of April, 1856. In the summer of 1846 she embraced religion and attached herself to the M. E. Church, of which she remained an acceptable member until called to her reward.

From a long and intimate acquaintance with the family, I had it fairly in my power to make a proper estimate of the virtues of the deceased, and without partiality or flattery can say, I have rarely known one who possessed more excellencies. Though dignified and pious, she was not austere, and while all loved her and sought her company, because of her cheerfulness and vivacity, she was free from a spirit of levity. She was a dutiful daughter, an affectionate sister, and a most amiable and interesting companion. She had just taken her position in society with the most flattering prospects, when the dread spoiler came, whose touch blights the fairest flower and converted the happy dwelling into the house of mourning. But the awful summons did not find her unprepared, for laying made her peace with God, her confidence in the Saviour's merits was unshaken. She expressed a willingness to depart, in the full assurance of a blissful immortality. Her last words were, "give my love to all my friends and relatives, and tell them to meet me in heaven." Our feelings of selfishness may cause us to mourn her absence, and we cannot but deeply sympathize with the bereaved family, especially the heart-stricken and disconsolate husband—yet believing it to be better" to be with Christ, we could not wish her return to the world of woe."

Too mean for her, a world like this,
She's landed on that happy shore,
Where all the saints partake of bliss,
And Christians meet to part no more.

L.

Died.—In this city, on the 27th ult., after a painful illness of six months, Mrs. ELIZABETH BREWSTER, aged 56 years.

This notice will inform the friends of the deceased that she has "finished her course," and departed to realize the "rest that remains for the people of God."

Mrs. Elizabeth Brewster was born in the year 1800, in the Eastern part of Tennessee. She was for thirty or more a resident of this city. Her disease was a cancer of the breast, and her sufferings were of the most distressing character. She possessed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist E. Church South in August, 1840. Sister Brewster's Christian character was marked by zeal accordiug to knowledge—by unwavering consistency and cheerful resignation.—Though her last sufferings were great, her patience, cheerfulness, and strong confidence, never failed her for an hour. Her afflictions were sanctified to the strengthening and comfort of many. The church has lost a saint, but heaven has gained an angel of purity and love.

J. B. WALKER.

☞ Hear what the Medical Faculty say of Dr. J. HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS: LANCASTER, Pa., January 1, 1854—Dr. J. Hostetter, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Sir: From my experience with the remedial qualities contained in your inimitable Bitters in chronic diseases, such as Rheumatism, Gout, Dyspepsia, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, etc., also as a preventive of disease and toste, I have no hesitation in pronouncing it the best medicine with which I am acquainted, and take pleasure in recommending your valuable Bitters to dyspeptics particularly, and to the profession generally. Yours, very respectfully, H. A. SMITH, M. D.

For sale by John Wright & Co., 21 and 151 Chartres street, and C. C. Woodman, corner Magazine and Commeus streets.

my30 1l

Interesting from Nicaragua.

We copy the following from El Nicaragnense of the 19th:

"He that taketh the sword shall perish by the sword." War is at all times, and under all circumstances, a terrible calamity, a fearful evil, a great national misfortune. A war of aggression, of invasion and destruction, is ten times more disastrous to the invaders than to the invaded, unless the cause be a just one and the act justifiable before God and the world. We are in a state of war—our State is invaded, the enemy are at our doors, and threaten to utterly exterminate a portion of our people—and wherefore? Why are the Costa Rica men on the soil of Nicaragua? Have we been faithless to treaties? Have we broken the word of nations?—annoyed the citizens of that State, or in any other manner, denounced the peace of States, and violated the faith of governments? No, nothing of this kind is complained of by Costa Rica. But she has declared war upon us, nevertheless; and upon the illusive pretence of restoring order in Nicaragua, she sends her army here to burn our towns, destroy our property and murder, in cold blood, our citizens who happen to be of American origin. Costa Rica has assumed a fearful responsibility, and invoked a dreadful arbitrament. Has she fully calculated the chances? Has she measured the results, in all their extent? Has she considered the end of all this blood and desolation which she has called down upon her own head, provided she cannot thus cast them upon us? We believe not. We believe that her rulers and statesmen are but the tools and instruments of another and a greater power, cunning, faithless, bloody and unscrupulous in her policy, as ever nation was. England is the real enemy in the field against Nicaragua, and Costa Rica will ere long see how fatally she has been misled, deceived and ruined by listeaing to the advice of that ever-scheming, ever-treacherous government. * * *

England has long had her hand upon these States, making of this or of that party, the tool with which she has overturned these governments, until poverty and desolation reigns where riches and prosperity ought to smile on every hand. People who ought to be united as one, are kept divided into parties and factions, each striving to conquer and suppress the other, instead of directing their energies for the general good, and striving for the public weal. Cannot the statesmen and leading soldiers of these States see the effects of their discords and divisions? * * *

Be this as it may, the star of destiny is in the ascendant, and it leads forth a bright and glorious train, pointing out a brilliant future for Central America. Costa Rica will be the first to join the procession, keeping step to a new and lively march. Thoughtlessly has she entered the ring, and her conquest will be as sure as the coming day. A momentary success has heated the imagination of her soldiers and swelled her anticipation into unwonted proportions. The man of destiny is at the head of the Nicaraguan troops, and, ere the Costa Ricans are aware, he will be upon them with the avenging sword, and the deadly rifle, to wipe out all disasters and sweep away every foe. There is no such word as fail with Gen. Walker; and the brave troops under his command are all confident of the victory. From this time forward there will be no halting, no holding up, no resting for the enemy, until his country is overrun, and his capital bows to the flag of Nicaragua. Costa Rica has taken the sword and the sword shall be her portion.

THE WOUNDED.—We are gratified to announce the good condition of the wounded. Major Markham, Capt. Cook, Capt. McCardle, Capt. George Leonard, Lieut. Dolan, Lieut. Ayers, Lieut. Jamison, Lieut. Latimer, Lieut. Potter, Sergeant Hodgins, Sergeant Dunnegan, Sergeant Rettle, Sergeant Pittman—arm amputated—Sergeant Evelyn, Sergeant Sarsfield and Corporal Neary Whiting are all recovering. The medical staff are busy, night and day, with the wounded, and the superintendence of Dr. Mores is spoken of very highly. Mr. Langsdale, a private in the Voltigeurs, whose gallant performance on the day of battle, became a matter of notoriety, is also recovering from the wounds he received in the fight.

DISCIPLINE.—The troops are now drilled on the Plaza every morning, for one hour. The necessity for a stricter discipline is apparent to all, and the present course will soon remedy an evil much complained of by the officers at Rivas.

RE-ORGANIZATION OF THE ARMY.—Under a general order, the whole army has been re-organized into two battalions, one of Rifles. The equalization of the different companies is now being carried out, and, in a few days, the drill on the Plaza will show all the companies of the same numerical strength.

GALA.—On the day of the return of the American troops from Rivas, the town was ornamented with flags, and the morning was ushered in with fireworks and other signs of rejoicing.

THE BATTLE OF RIVAS.

We glean the following particulars of the great battle of Rivas from El Nicaragüense of the 19th ult. The intelligence will be read with interest. In addition, we append the names of the killed and wounded in the army of Nicaragua:

In our last issue, in relation to the second battle of Rivas, we stated that "the battalion under command of Lieutenant Col. Sanders was ordered to enter by the street leading along the West side of the Plaza, and the East side was to be charged by the force under command of Col. Fry." In making this statement we committed an error, which justice and a sense of duty requires should be corrected. The mode of attack was arranged and ordered after the following manner: Companies A. B. C. and D., of the 1st Rifle Battalion, under command of Lieutenant Col. Sanders, were required to begin the assault from the North side of the plaza, and simultaneously from the South side, a charge was to be made by Companies E. F. and G., under the lead of Major Brewster. The former Companies were officered respectively by Captains Anderson, Rudler and Mason. They were the first to reach the plaza, and although not exceeding eighty men in the aggregate, they pushed forward, through a galling fire, with fearless intrepidity. The small command under Major Brewster displayed signal gallantry and did remarkable execution.—Company E leading the advance lost seven killed, and five wounded. Among the latter were Captain Frank Anderson, one of the original "fifty-six" of the Vesta, who was wounded in the arm and side, and Lieutenant T. Doland, who was wounded in the arm. In the first battle of Rivas, Capt. Anderson was twice wounded, and although scarcely recovered from the former afflictions, with a truly commendable heroism he submitted to encounter the perils of a second engagement. In this last conflict he was afflicted again with two severe, but happily, not dangerous wounds. Company F, formerly Voltigeurs, but transferred to the First Rifle Battalion, under the direction of Capt. Rudler, a most gallant and meritorious officer, sustained itself with a courage inferior to none. Its killed and wounded was little less than that suffered by its associated company. Company G., under Capt. Mason, was the greatest sufferer in the conflict in the number of killed and wounded. In view of the smallness of the number composing the companies under command of Major Brewster, and the extremely perilous position to which they were exposed, too much praise cannot be awarded to the fearless officers and the indomitable few sustaining so difficult an assault.

The companies under command of Lieut. Col. Sanders, in the attack from the east and along the north side of the plaza, behaved with most the gallant and exemplary heroism. The number of killed and wounded in that command, gives attestation of their devotion to their officers, and their fidelity to the cause for which they were imperiled. Capt. Harrell, of company D, was killed, and in him the army has lost a valuable officer and an accomplished gentleman. Among the wounded of company B, are Lieutenants Leonard, Porter und Ayers, officers of acknowledged gallantry und men of appreciated merit. Lieut. Leonard was another of the "Vesta Band," and has, throughout the war, conducted himself with such becoming courage as entitles him to most flattering commendation. Captain Coycee, of company C, was severely wounded in both of his hands while leading his men in the desperate charge upon the enemy's cannon. He is a man of desperate courage, and his men confronted danger at his behest, with the utmost alacrity. Lieut. Latimer, of his company, was also severely but not dangerously wounded.

The command under Col. Natzmer and Major O'Neil was ordered to enter the plaza by a cross street from the south side, and the native troops under Col. Machado by a cross street from the north side, simultaneous with the entrance of the commands of Lieut. Col. Sanders and Major Brewster.

From some misapprehension of the instructions, Col. Machado with the native force, instead of entering the city at the point designated for his command, kept with the command of Lieut. Col. Sanders, but proved, however, of essential service in the desperate conflict which followed. His gallantry was attested by his death, and in his fall the native army has suffered an irreparable loss. The immediate officers under him behaved with great courage, and too much credit cannot attach to the conduct of the troops they officered.

The Light Infantry Battalion, under the command of Col. Fry, was held as a reserve force, and entered the plaza about ten or fifteen minutes after the commencement of the assault. They entered a whoop, and were soon mingled with their comrades in arms, in the dangerous conflict. Capt. James Linton, of company D, than whom there was no more gallant gentleman on that perilous field, fell mortally wounded at the head of his valiant and devoted men. Lieut. James C. Jamieson, of company E, an officer of tried merit, and a man of doubtless courage, received in the leg a painful wound.

In the Second Rifle Battalion, under command of Col. Natzmer, Second Lieut. Anderson of Co. D. received an afflicting wound.

An interesting feature in the battle of Rivas was the presence of some of those gallant spirits who first adventured at that place the experiment of battle under the dubious auspices only of fifty-six men. Of the original number that embarked in the Vesta, and first met the enemy on the disastrous field of Rivas, there were sixteen who participated in the recent engagement. These were Maj. J. B. Markham, Capt. Frank Anderson, Capt. D. K. Bayley, Capt. Peter Veeder, Lieut. L. G. Gay, Lieut. S. M. Leonard, Lieut. G. Gist, Sergeant Wm. Sarsfield and Privates Moses Anderson, J. Blanch, J. Colmers, H. Lyons, Dr. Matthews, Jake Norris and C. Travella. These men, without exception, behaved with a gallantry meriting the highest admiration and applause. Of this number, Lieuts Stoll and Gay were killed, and Major Markham, Capts Anderson and Bayley, Lieut. Leonard and Gist and Sergeant Sarsfield were wounded. Lieut. Stoll, the aid of Col. Den Ilmno Natzmer, did most efficient service. It is authentically said that not less than thirteen of the enemy fell by his single hand, before he paid by his death the penalty of his gallantry. Lieut. Gay fell in the charge which he himself projected, and which required a courage of the most desperate character to prosecute. Then Capt. Veeder there was no man who displayed more heroic valor, or one who by his desperate fearlessness, commanded more the respect and admiration of the army. The whole of this little remnant of the "Vesta band," by their intrepid action, are deserving of even enthusiastic praise.

In company with the "Vesta band" of patriots there are others whose praiseworthy conduct entitles them to flattering mention. They were not connected with any especial command in the army, but acted on an impulse of patriotism, and courage impelled them to the desperate chances of the conflict. It is with pride and pleasure that we commend the gallant action of Col. C. J. McDonald, Captains Cook and Bradley and Drinker of the Quarter-Master Department; Major W. R. Rodgers and Captain Mahon, John Pelliccer, of the Commissary Department; Major Webber, a citizen volunteer; Lieut. J. S. Lyons, formerly attached to Major Brewster's command; J. Armstrong and J. Finney, of the Pay-Master Department, and Michael McCarty, a volunteer orderly to Gen. Walker. The reckless exposure of himself to peril stamped McCarty as a man without fear. All exhibited a brilliant and dashing courage, and are entitled to a similar encomium. Of this number Armstrong was killed, and Cook and Bradley and Lyons and Finney were severely wounded. McDonald and Webber are missing, and the apprehension is felt that they have not escaped the disaster of the battle.

Take it all in all, the conflict at Rivas cannot but be regarded as a glorious victory. We have lost indeed some good, and valiant men, but their deaths have been atoned for in the blood of numerous sacrifices. The enemy are disheartened at their defeat, let them linger within the limits of Nicaragua, and they too, will soon be offered oblations at the shrine of Liberalism upon the altar of Democratic progression.

The names of many privates could be mentioned, but to name one would require that all should be spoken of, and our space will not allow of it.

LIST OF KILLED, WOUNDED AND MISSING.

STAFF—KILLED.—Lieutenant Morgan, Aid-de-Camp to the General.

ASSISTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE—KILLED.—Capts. Thueston and Clinton.

INSPECTOR GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT—KILLED.—Lieut. Stall.

QUARTER MASTER'S DEPARTMENT—WOUNDED.—Capt. Cook.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT—WOUNDED.—Lieut. Gist and Sergeant Sarsfield.

UNATTACHED—WOUNDED.—Lieut. Joces.

NATIVE FORCES—KILLED.—Col. Murchado, commander of the native forces.

LIGHT INFANTRY BATTALION.

COMPANY B.

KILLED.—Capt. James Linton, Corporal Robert Kellet, Privates John Bridley, J. M. Jennings, J. H. Lane. Total 4—aggregate 5.

WOUNDED.—Privates Joseph Springer, C. H. Terry (wounded accidentally on the return march.) Total wounded, 2.

COMPANY E.

KILLED.—Privates Wm. Gould, George Dickerson. Total 2.

WOUNDED.—First Lieutenant James C. Jamerson, Privates Patrick Thomas, Louis Lott, Albert Adams. Total 3—aggregate 4.

FIRST RIFLE BATTALION.

COMPANY A.

KILLED.—Lieut. S. Gay, Privates P. Lynn, —— Rorrer. Total, 2—aggregate, 3.

WOUNDED.—Sergeant A. Pittman, Privates S. Kipp, Geo. Cook, T. Lane. Total, 4.

MISSING.—A. Du Jan, L. Pache. Total, 2.

COMPANY B.

KILLED.—Privates Bradley, —— Stone. Total, 2.

WOUNDED.—Lieut. Leopard, Lieut. Porter, Lieut. Ayers, Corporal Chandler, Privates Ashbro, Heury, Hodgdon, Martin. Total, 5—aggregate, 8.

MISSING.—Privates Augustin, Jackson.

COMPANY C.

KILLED.—Sergeant Wm. McCarty, Privates Barnhouse, A. G. Gates. Total, 3.

WOUNDED.—Capt. Caycee, Lieut. Latimer, Privates Wnolf, Barker.

MISSING.—Privates Gleason, Geary, Gilligan. Total, 3.

COMPANY D.

KILLED.—Capt. Harrell, Privates Blackburn, Flinn, Whites, Barstow. Total, 4—aggregate, 5.

WOUNDED.—Sergeant Hutchings, Private Bulger. Total, 2.

COMPANY E.

KILLED.—Privates Knox, Logan, LeClerc, Stickner, Dart, Davidson, Barr. Total, 7.

WOUNDED.—Capt. Anderson, Lieut. Dolan, Privates J. Miller, J. Briner, Jones. Total, 3—aggregate, 5.

MISSING.—Privates Heary, Wilson, Mooney, Gray. Total, 4.

COMPANY F.

KILLED.—Sergeant Chestnut, Privates McMurpey, Duncan. Total, 3.

WOUNDED.—Sergeant Dunnican, Sergeant Halliday, Privates Burns, Ferney, Williams, Langsdale, Cody. Total, 7.

MISSING.—Cody.

COMPANY G.

KILLED.—Lieut. John Doyle, Sergeant Risner, Privates McMahon, McGruar, De Lancey, Houston, Fisher, Miller, Hernshan, Townsend, Milty, Winchester. Total, 11—aggregate, 12.

WOUNDED.—Privates Latta, Miller, Jones, James, Shaffer, Spearman, Mayer, O'Malley, Dollau, Furgnson. Total, 10.

SECOND RIFLE BATTALION.

COMPANY A.

KILLED.—Privates Eldridge, Milholland. Total, 2.

WOUNDED.—Private Howell.

MISSING.—Private Strawhouse.

COMPANY B.

KILLED.—Serg't Stackl, Privates Bogliger, Winkler, Webber, Este. Total, 5.

WOUNDED.—Sergeant Ketter, Private Leslie.

COMPANY C.

KILLED.—Private Edwards.

WOUNDED.—Private Lockwood.

MISSING.—Corporal Roden.

COMPANY D.

KILLED.—None.

WOUNDED.—Second Lieuten't Anderson, Corporal Whiting. Total, 1—aggregate 2.

MISSING.—Privates Jeandrew, Huckley, Reeves. Total, 3.

MOUNTED RANGERS.

KILLED.—Lieut. Philip Gillis, Acting Lieuten't W. Winters, Private Scott. Total, 1—aggregate, 3.

WOUNDED.—Sergeant Cornin, Sergeant Evelyn, Privates Lyncy, Barray, McPard, Howard. Total, 5.

THE EMPRESS.—A recent letter-writer in Paris says:

"The Empress is doing well, and little Napkia is getting on bravely. It is said that Dr. Dubois, the accoucher who let him into this "fleeting show" of ours, has received a fee of 30,000 francs; Dr. Conneau, as assistant doorkeeper on the occasion, has received 8000 francs, and other medical bystanders, each 6000 francs. Napkin has a guard over his cradle, (in the next room,) not of infantry, as you might fancy, but of full-grown imperial dragoons. Their commanding officer receives his orders only from Napkin's governess. Now, how it would surprise and amuse a French traveler in America, and be text for a page or two in his chapter on "Women in the United States," when he returned home and published, if he should discover somewhere, in the course of his observations in our country, that Mrs. Colonel Jenkin's child's nurse had command of a corporal's guard of the Colonel's regiment!"

A PETRIFIED SHIP.—The Beardstown Illinoisian says: "While visiting a friend in Sangamon Bottom, in this county, a short time since, we were called to examine a specimen of stone which he had lately taken from a neighboring quarry. The curiosity consisted of two sandstone rocks, which were found joining each other in contectual form, which, when separated, the face of one presented the appearance of having been a part of the side of a vessel, near the gunwale. There seems to have been an over-lapping of the timbers, in the form of moulding, around the vessel. The work of art is as plain to be seen on the stone as on the floating vessel. The holes formed by the nails are very distinct, as well as the fossilized texture of the wood. There are also pieces of iron with the specimen, which seem to have been used, instead of caulking, between the strips of ida k."

"Look here, Jones," Professor Pudd's idea is dat de whole world is but de vulue ob a dollar.

"Why, how is dat?"

"Case, he says it only contains four quarters.

☞ If you are sick, the probability is that the root of your sufferings is in the stomach. From a weak stomach proceed dyspepsia, languor, oppression to the diaphragm, jaundice, headache, nausea, bodily weakness, dimness of sight, heartburn, sourness, dysentery, and a legion of other horrible diseases. Indigestion produces this blood, and therefore destroys the strength and vigor of the system. To restore the strength of the stomach, and enable it to throw off and dismiss forever all these tormenting and dangerous complaints, nothing is necessary but a persevering use of Hoofland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, Philadelphia. There is no mistake, no failure in their sanative effects. See advertisement. of 1m

☞ A Masterpiece Outdone.—We have lately supposed that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was the Ultima Thule in its line, and that nothing had been or would be invented which could at all surpass it in its fine points of excellence as a medicine. But we are confidently assured by those competent to judge on the subject, that Ayer's new Pills excel in high medical activity even that widely celebrated embodiment of the chill. He has succeeded in meshing them not only pleasant to take, but powerful to cure the large class of complaints which require a purgative remedy [Lancaster Argus, Ky.

They are for sale by J. WRIGHT & CO., and all city druggists. al9 2m

EUROPEAN NEWS.

We find in our Northern Exchanges some farther details of the news brought by the Arabia:

The Bay Islands.

On Thursday, the 10th, appeared a copy of the Queen's warrant for erecting the Islands of Ruatan and certain other Islands on the coast of Central America into a colony, under the name of "Bay Islands," to be administered by the Governor of Jamaica. The warrant was issued on the 10th March, 1852, and the right of revoking it is reserved to the crown. The Islands are those of Ruatan, Bonacca, Utilla, Helena, Barbarat and Moxat.

Miss Nightingale has received a slight injury from the upsetting of a vehicle—her back is hurt. She is at the Castle Hospital in the Crimea.

The Emperor of Austria has pardoned 62 political offenders, who in 1848–and 1850 were sentenced by the military courts to terms of imprisonment varying between ten and twenty years.

Prussia.

By a ministerial ordinance strong measures have been taken against stock-jobbing. Brokers are forbidden to negotiate foreign scrip. National shares partly paid up, and foreign shares fully paid up, are to be sold only for transfer.

The King of Prussia is said to have invited the Prince of Prussia to take up his fixed residence at Berlin. It is anticipated that the marriage of the Prince's eldest son with the Princess Royal of England, will place the august brothers on terms of much greater cordiality.

Rumors of ministerial changes still continue. Nothing certain can be ascertioned, but the rumors have touched too many officers and lasted too long to be entirely without foundation.

THE STIPULATIONS IN THE TREATY OF PEACE.—In the Paris Debats, M. S. de Sacy undertakes to unveil the transactions of the Conference with reference to the fifth article of the well known Esterhazy conditions—that by which the Allies reserved the right to produce ulterior conditions in a European interest.

The Russian plenipotentiaries, it is said, did not defend either the military arsenals of Nicholaieff or their naval establishments in the Black Sea, in the Sea of Azoff, or upon the shores of the Sea of Azoff. The treaty of peace proclaims in the widest and most absolute sense the principles of the neutralization of these two seas. Sebastopol will not be rebuilt. The Russian ports and cities will be accessible to all governments, who will be free to exercise an active surveillance by means of consular agents. All the Russian forts which have been constructed upon the Eastern coast of the Black Sea, along the Caucasus until the extremity of the Russian Territory, not far from Batoum, will be destroyed, and cannot be replaced.

M. de Sacy intimates that the demolition of the line of forts extending to the south of the Caucasus, between the Black and Caspian Seas, was demanded by Russia, and that the demand was refused on the ground that the forts were necessary for the security of the frontier, that no European interest calls for their destruction, and that they cannot be brought within the scope of the fifth article. The Allies, it is said, gave way; but it was agreed that the Russo-Turkish frontier on that side should be defined so as to avoid future conflicts, the Russians meanwhile retiring from the Turkish Territory.

It is also affirmed that the Turkish plenipotentiaries demanded of Russia an indemnity for the expenses of the war, and for damages sustained through repeated invasions of the Principalities by Russia. These latter damages, it is said, have been frequently admitted by the Russian Government which has promised reparation, but hitherto has not kept its word. This demand the Russian plenipotentiaries rejected.

The treaty forbids the Russians—so M. de Sacy is assured—the fortification of the Isles of Aland. The prohibition is absolute, and admits neither fortified barracks nor entrenched posts.

The question of the future constitution of the principalities, the Debats affirms, has scarcely been advanced beyond the vague principles of the propositions accepted at St. Petersburg last January, and is beset with difficulties.

THE POPE AND THE AUSTRIAN CLERGY.—The official advisers of his Holiness are preparing a surprise for the monastic orders in Austria, which will hardly be to their taste. Some years ago the Papal government was in unusually great financial difficulties, and it was proposed to apply to the different Catholic monarchs for pecuniary assistance; but the Roman Minister of Finance chanced to recollect that the loyal sons of the Church are seldom in possession of superfluous cash, and the idea was relinquished. Rome has now a better plan for raising the wind. She is about to order the heads of all the Austrian convents (some of which are extremely wealthy) to send in an exact account of their annual revenue and expenditure, and they will at the same time be given to understand that a part of the surplus ought in future to be employed in assisting Mother Church. Now, the Austrian monks are in general pious men and excellent Catholics, but they are extremely fond of the good things of this life, and therefore the demand of his Holiness upon their purses is not likely to meet with a very favorable reception. As it is possible that the foregoing little piece of news may be contradicted by the Ultramontain party, it may be well beforehand to state that it is correct, and that the words quoted are copy-lined in the original document, which is in Latin.—[Vienna Correspondent of the Times.

THE EAGLE PEN.—The eagle pen, which was taken from the king of birds to sign the treaty of Paris, was extracted by M. Feuillet de Couches himself. It requires more than the strength and savoir-faire of a chef de protocole to deprive this fiery bird of one of its feathers. The task is not an easy one. The eagle in the Jardin des Plantes, in undergoing this operation, was entangled in a strong net. The powerful bird made a long resistance, and in the scuffle with it the workman who took it upon himself to make this extract was dashed to the ground in no very gentle manner. This was done exactly a week previous to the signing of the treaty, as the pen had to be prepared before it could be used for writing.

SUICIDE OF A LOVER.—Our paper of yesterday contained an account of a death in the watch-house from the effects of laudanum. The name of the unfortunate man was registered at the station-house as Augustus Byson. We stated that several empty vials which had contained laudanum were found upon the person of the deceased and that there was nothing known explanatory of the matter. The Coroner's jury rendered a verdict of self-murder.

On Saturday we learned the following facts in relation to the matter which disclose that the unfortunate man "had loved, not wisely, but too well." The deceased was a native of Germany and named Augustus Wesser or Welser. Some time since he fell in love with a young and handsome German girl living in Frankfin street, and asked her hand in marriage. Mamma was opposed, the young lady was obedient, and Augustus was duly rejected. After brooding a few days over his disappointment he determined to end his life, and about ten days ago swallowed some three or four ounces of laudanum. His friends, however, discovered the act and had the powerful soporific pumped out of his stomach. The demented Augustus was not to be thwarted in that manner, and on Friday last he pawned a portion of his clothing to raise the means to purchase more laudanum. He went to four different drug stores and purchased a half ounce vial of his favorite life exterminator.

After writing a letter to his brother who resides in this city, informing him of what was intended, he retired to a pile of lumber and there swallowed a portion of the poison. He was then removed to the watch-house by a policeman, who found him in a stupid condition, and he doubtless drank the contents of the other vials in his cell. [Chicago Tribune, 21st.

FONDNESS OF GREAT MEN FOR CHILDREN.—Richter says that the man is to be shunned who does not love the society of children. Henry IV was passionately fond of them, and delighted in their gambols and little caprices.—One day, when crawling round his room on all fours, on his hands and knees, with the Dauphin on his back and the other children about him, urging the King to gallop in imitation of a horse, an Embassador suddenly entered and surprised the royal family in the midst of their fun. Henry, without rising to his feet, asked:

"Have you children, Mr. Embassador?"

"Yes, sir."

"In that case I proceed with the sport," replied the King.

The Duke of Wellington was extremely fond of children, and was a general favorite with them. He enjoyed their gambols, took part in them, and was constantly presenting them with little keepsakes and presents. The opera was his chief amusement, and he was a frequenter of both houses, as well as of the ancient and first class concerts.

Leibnitz used to pass months together in his study, engaged with his laborious investigations. At such times his only relaxation consisted in collecting about him in his study children of both sexes, whom he watched, and sometimes he took part in their frolics. Seated in his easy chair, he delighted to observe their lively movements, to listen to their conversation, and to observe their several dispositions; and when his soul had sufficiently enjoyed the innocent spectacle he would dismiss the children with sweet-meats, and return to his studies with renewed energy.

Louis Racine says of his father, that he took part in all the children's sports. "I remember a procession we once had," says he in his Memoirs, "in which my sisters played the part of the clergy, I was the curate, and the author of Athalie, singing in chorus with us, carried the cross."

Napoleon, like Wellington, was fond of children. He used to take the infant King of Rome in his arms, and standing in front of a mirror with him, there made the oddest grimaces in the glass. At breakfast he would take the child upon his knee, dip his finger in the sauce, and daub his face with it; the child's governess scolded, the Emperor laughed, and the child, almost always pleased, appeared to delight in the rough caresses of his father. Those who, on such occasions, had a favor to solicit from the Emperor were almost sure of being favorably received.

There has been a serious freshet in the North river. At Albany, on Tuesday, the water was up with the docks. The Genesee river is also overflowed, and in Western New York the Alleghepy is some ten feet too high for rafting. All the lowlands along its course are overflowed.

Texas Items.

RAINS.—Abundant and refreshing rains have fallen at Galveston, and in all parts of the interior from what we have heard—producing the best effects upon vegetation. The crops are now highly promising.

A little orphan boy, living with Richard Barkley, in Fayette county, was killed a few days since, by having tied a rope, with which he was leading a mule, around his waist. The animal ran off and dragged him to death. [Gal. Civilian, 26th.

We hear from gentlemen, from different parts of the country, that the rains have been very general and abundant. We trust, therefore, that our next accounts of the crops will be more favorable. We are also encouraged to hope that our rivers may again be navigable, so that our planters may be able to send the balance of their cotton to market. It is estimated that there are now about fifteen thousand bales on the Trinity, awaiting an opportunity for shipment down. [Gal. News, 20th.

Mr. R. S. Parsons has just received the first cargo of lumber from a large mill erected on Lake Charles, Calcasieu Parish, La. The vessel also brought 1,500 beef hides, and returns with a full cargo of assorted merchandize. Two or three schooners will run regularly in this trade, bringing lumber, corn, hides, vegetables, poultry, etc., and take back provisions, merchandize, etc. Calcasieu is said to be a rich country, and peculiarly favorable to the lumber trade. [Gal. News.

The Brazos and Trinity rivers are both down at low water mark, with but little prospect of affording much profit in the way of navigation this spring, meanwhile our railroads are progressing finely, the uncertainty of an inland navigation affording a strong argument in favor of the necessity. [Houston Tel., 28th.

THE WHEAT REGION.—The Dallas Herald of the 19th says the ground is parched, crops grow slowly, and farmers are anxiously awaiting a refreshing season of rain.

We learn from the Liberty Gazette, that Joseph White, who was convicted of murder last spring, and confined in Grimes county jail to await the decision of the Supreme Court upon an appeal, was rescued by an armed mob from the sheriff and his guard, en route to Liberty to receive the sentence of the law, the judgment of the Supreme Court being averse to him. He has not been re-arrested.

The prospects for crops in this county are rather more promising than they were last season this time. We are suffering severely for rain, although Providence has favored us with a small shower recently. [Brazos Statesman, 25th.

THE RAILROAD.—We feel a pleasure in announcing to the friends of Western Texas, that Col. H. A. Ogden has succeeded in obtaining the contract for building that section of the San Antonio Railroad lying between Victoria and Powderhorn. Under the contract, we learn Col. Ogden has the election to commence either at Powderhorn and build the first section, to save the charter, before July, 1857, and complete the remainder to Victoria on or before March, 1858, including a side cut from Lavaca, which would meet the main road a few miles this side Chocolate Bayou, or to commence at Lavaca and build the first section to Victoria and afterwards to build from Powderhorn to join the main line. No active measures will be taken before the middle of May, about which time a commencement may be expected confidently; but we hope, whatever may be determined upon, that the road will be built, even although some parties may be sacrificed in the event; the public good is, and must always be, paramount to all private interests. Therefore, we say, build the road, run the iron horse, something must be done, and the sooner it is done the better. [Lavaca Herald, 26th.

We clip the following from the La Grange True Issue:

We were visited, on the night of the 22d inst., by a most violent storm of wind and hail. Fences were razed to the ground, trees were uprooted and houses unroofed. Many of the planters of the county suffered serious damage. Our friend, A. H. Oates, one of the largest planters of the county, says his plantation presents truly a discouraging appearance. Some five hundred yards of his fence, strongly "staked and ridered," was blown down, and the rails scattered to the wind; his peach orchard ruined, and trees broken off, and blown in some instances to the distance of hundreds of yards; the roof of one of his houses blown off; but worse than all, about half of his crop destroyed. All his early corn and cotton are so badly beaten down that it becomes necessary to plough up and plant again.

TEMPEST.—The Bastrop Advertiser of the 26th ult., says:

On Tuesday last we were visited with a storm of hail and rain of uncommon severity. Trees were uprooted, and one house, partially finished, totally demolished. The hailstones in the county are represented to have been immense, some of them as large as hen-eggs.

The Los Angelos Star learns that a quicksilver mine has been discovered eight miles East of San Bernardio, which is said to be very rich.

GRASSHOPPERS.—These insectile intruders are still depredating upon farms and gardens. Their ravages have not been as extensive as was feared. A farmer in the neighborhood says, it takes them just five minutes to cut down a knee-high stalk of corn and eat it up. He declares his inability to tell the number that will settle upon one stalk. There is little identity of these insects with the genuine locust. They are growing slowly and will not leave until their capacity for flight is fully developed. State Times, 26th ult.

Louisiana Items.

Our country exchanges, received yesterday, furnish us but few items of interest. The Plaquemine Sentinel, of Saturday last, says:

We regret to learn that a valuable servant belonging to Mr. John A. Dardenne (whose plantation is a few miles below our town, on the Bayou,) was killed by lightning on Thursday morning last. It appears that he was on his way to the sugar house with a crowbar on his shoulder, as we understand, when he was struck by the electric flash, which burnt off his hair and clothes and killed him instantly.

The Monroe (Ouachita) Register, of the 26th, has the following:

The Ouachita river is falling very fast. Navigation will soon be closed again, as usual.

The second clerk of the W. W. Farmer, fell overboard on her last trip up, and was drowned. We did not ascertain his name.

Our planters are suffering from the want of rain. We have not had a single refreshing shower for nearly a month, and as a natural consequence, vegetation of every description is backward. The corn which is up, is greatly parched, and without a rain, shortly, corn and cotton will have to be replanted.

The Bayou Sara Chronicle, of the 3d, says:

DAMAGE TO THE RAILROAD.—We learn that the heavy rain and storm of Wednesday night seriously damaged the railroad between here and Woodville. Seven miles of the road is rendered impassable for the cars, and they will not be able to run for a week or ten days.

Says the Thibodaux Minerva, of Saturday last:

A few days ago

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

What to Me this Truth has Taught.

(This is truth that's worth revealing.)
More oftend from want of thought
Than from any want of feeling—
Were deem any want of feeling—
If advice we would convey it,
If we've but a word to say,
There's no time to which to say it.

Oh make lovingly the tongue
Touches on a chord so aching,
That a word or accent wrong,
Pains the heart almost to breaking—
Many a tear of wounded pride,
Many a fault of human blindness,
Has been soothed or turned aside
By a gentle voice of kindness.

Many a luxurious flower decays,
Through we tend it e'er so much—
Something secret in it preys,
Which no human aid can touch.
Many a lovely breast
Has some canker-grief concealed,
That, if breathed in sweet opprest—
Just unto itself is healed!

The Magical Isle in the River of Time.

BY MARY E. BAUCHELER.

There's a magical isle in the river of Time,
Where softest of echoes are straying,
And the air is as sweet as a musical chime,
Or the exquisite breath of a tropical clime,
When fanned with the roses is staying.

In these Memory dwells with her pale golden hue,
And music forever is flowing, [through,
While the low-murmured tones that come tremblingly
Softly trouble the heart, and yet overflow it too—
As South-winds o'er waters when blowing.

There are shadowy halls in this fairy-like isle,
Where pictures of beauty are gleaming, [smile,
With the light of their eyes, and their lips' sunny
Only found the heart, with a wildering wile,
And leave us to know 'tis but dreaming.

And the name of this isle is the Beautiful Past,
And we hurry our treasures all there;
There are beings of beauty, too lovely to last,
There are blooms of snow, with the dust o'er them cast,
There are tresses and ringlets of hair.

There are fragments of song, only Memory sings,
There are the words of a dear mother's prayer,
There are vows long memoried, and a fate without strings,
There are flowers all withered and letters and rings,
There are relics that love used to wear.

Was the dead, the bright, beautiful dead there arise,
With their soft-flowing ringlets of gold; [eyes,
Their voices are hushed, and o'er their sweet
The unbroken signet of silence now lies,
They are with us again as of old.

In the stillness of night, hands are beckoning us there,
And with joy that is almost a pain
We delight to turn back, and in wandering there,
Through the shadowy halls of this island so fair,
We wander our lost treasures again.

Oh this beautiful isle with its phantom-like show,
Is a vision enchantingly bright,
In the river of Time in its turbulent flow,
It is fanned by the voices we heard long ago,
In the sweet land of dream of delight.

From the German.

Oh! would'st thou delve, my lady,
Within my depth of eye—
To see if there be hidden
Some pearl of rarest dye?

Oh! seek it, my lady,
And thou shalt find the best,
For there, reflected, lie the rays
Of thy own heart at rest.

The Republican, of the 26th, has some late advices from New Mexico, received by the Wagon Road of the day before. The news is up to twenty-eight days later.

The advices of the 28th March announces the arrival of Col. Bonneville, Majors Grier and Carleton, and Capt. Davidson and Lieut. Williams, 1st Dragoons. The three first named officers were to constitute a Court of Inquiry in the case of Capt. Davidson.

Col. Chandler's command, detached to move against the Gila and Uregoyon Apaches, are now in the field.

The Topographical Engineer, with his party, left Fort Fillmore, on the 3d instant for the "Llano Estacado," and El Paso, to continue the duty of determining the practicability of procuring water by means of deep wells upon a portion of the arid plains, which present a serious obstacle to the construction of a railroad from the Mississippi river to the Pacific Ocean.

The escort to this party will be reinforced at Fort Union, and the whole will be provisioned for four months and fully prepared for efficient service.

Information has been received at the Department of Head Quarters that the animals taken by the Navajos have been returned, or an equivalent given for them by Manuelito, to whose band the depredators belonged. Delgadito, one of the Navajo chiefs, and consplcuous for his hostility at the treaty of Laguna, met Major Kendrick and proclaimed himself friendly.

In the vicinity of Trinchera, some Apaches ran off 6000 sheep, and mortally wounded the Majorno, on the 25th of February.

Orders have been given for a military party to visit the scene of this occurrence, and investigate all the facts in connection with the depredation.

The Court of Inquiry in the case of Capt. Davidson, 1st Dragoons, adjourned. After a patient investigation of the accusations against him, the Court found no cause of censure.

Colonel Miles writes, under date of the 12th inst., that the Mescaleros are quiet and peaceable.

On the 20th of last month, Marco, and a brother of Cuerno Amino, (late chief,) with ten others, sent out from Fauncon by Thuna, their principal chief, and came on a friendly visit to Fort Stanton. These are the first Indians that have ever visited that post. They professed a desire to be on terms of friendship.

They were informed that they would always be kindly received, so long as their conduct was good.

Major Kendrick left Fort Defiance on the 10th inst., to turn over some Indian goods which he had engaged to deliver in person to Moquis. Heavy snows have also fallen in the Navajo country during the winter.

We understand that a general court martial has been directed by the President to convene at this place on the 21st proximo, for the trial Capt. Seamon, Topographical Engineer, who was charged with the construction, and repair of roads in this Territory.

[From the Philadelphia Times.]

Interesting Letter from Jenny Lind—Her Sympathy for Barnum.

A friend in send'g &c.

We have been favored with the perusal of a letter from Jenny Lind Goldschmidt, to a lady in this city, of which the following is an extract:

"I had been apprised, some time previous, of his difficulties with the Company, (Jerome Clock,) but not the least idea he was so deeply involved. Now, that the crash has come, and ruin and poverty stare him in the face, I feel that he has all my sympathies, do most deeply sympathise with him. The American people will hardly believe him totally ruined. This is to be expected, as he has had the reputation of being a smart, shrewd business man, the truth of which I can myself bear witness to. Mr. Barnum had other qualities for which the American people knew little or nothing; his nature was the very acme of generosity, and thousands of untold and unheard of generous deeds will fully atone for any errors of judgment he may have, and doubtless has committed. You know, my dear friend, those gift and charity concerts, which were made to participate in, not that it did not meet with my cordial approval, yet they all sprung from Mr. Barnum, which, although he was shrewd enough to know would return again ten-fold, yet his soul was in the act, nor would he listen to my remonstrances that he, too, should share in whatever credit might be bestowed or attached to them. I know, also, that he was continually importuned by needy people for assistance, which I can most positively assure you, as I believe to be the case, that none ever left him unassisted, when in the least deserving. I think, however, that genius and talent will not long permit [illegible] in impoverished obscurity. His debts will soon arouse him to action, and in a short space of time he will have surmounted the difficulties now surround and oppress him, and would have paralyzed the energies of an ordinary [illegible]

I will not dwell longer upon this subject. It is, indeed, painful for me to contemplate. I believe a friend should [illegible] will be (Barnum) to [illegible] Under no circumstances [illegible] this, shall [illegible] (which, [illegible] to [illegible] that [illegible] as [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY A COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS FOR THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH---H. N. McTYEIRE, EDITOR.

VOLUME VI—NUMBER 15. WHOLE NUMBER 275. | NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 17, 1856. | $2 00 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE. OFFICE—30 CAMP ST.

CONSTITUTION

OF THE

Educational Institute of the M. E. Church, South

Adopted April 23, 1856.

In obedience to a resolution of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at its session in the city of Columbus, Ga., in the month of May, 1854, and to a more recent recommendation by the Tennessee Annual Conference, the undersigned, members of the Methodist E. Church, South, engaged in teaching, and other friends of education, members of said Church, resolve ourselves into a permanent association, to be governed by the following

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SEC. 1, This Association shall be known by the name of The Educational Institute of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

SEC. 2, Its objects shall be,

1st, To further the elevation of the standard of education, by urging upon the Church the importance of the ample endowment of all our higher institutions of learning.

2d, To elevate and render more efficient the teacher's office, by encouraging the establishment of departments in our higher schools and colleges for the special training of teachers.

3d, To improve the character of our text-books, and to adapt them to the circumstances of the South; encouraging the production of this class of books by Southern authors, by securing, as far as possible, uniformity in the text-books adopted in various institutions of the South.

4th, To define and recommend the course of study proper to the various orders of literary institutions, securing thereby uniformity in the course pursued by all those of similar grade.

5th, To promote, by the dissemination of right ideas upon the subject, every possible improvement in the discipline and internal arrangement of schools.

6th, To propose plans for enlisting the benevolence of the Church for the extension of educational advantages to the poor.

7th, And finally and in general to adopt any measures which may seem to be more conducive to a general development of the interests of education, and a more efficient application of its agencies to the furtherance of the cause of God.

SEC. 3, To accomplish these objects a free interchange of sentiment during the sessions of the Institute will be encouraged; reports from Committees upon various topics as appointed at previous meetings will be presented; volunteer and appointed lectures will be delivered; and, as the funds of the Institute may justify, its proceedings will be published and circulated.

ARTICLE II.

SEC. 1, Any of the members of the Methodist E. Curch, South, who are or have been engaged as teachers, may become regular members of this Institute upon subscribing this Constitution and paying to the Treasurer an initiation fee of one dollar.

SEC. 2, Any other member of said Church, specially interested in education, shall, upon election by the Institute, become a regular member upon the same terms.

SEC. 3, All regular members shall continue to pay an annual fee of one dollar to the Treasurer; or, on failure thereof for two successive years, shall forfeit membership.

SEC. 4, All ministers of the Methodist E. Church, South, or other friends of the educational interests of our denomination, are eligible by a unanimous vote to honorary membership in this Institute.

ARTICLE III.

SEC. 1, The officers of this Institute shall be a President, five Vice Presidents, a Recording Secretary and a Treasurer, who shall be elected at an annual meeting, and serve until their successors shall be chosen.

SEC. 2, The Recording Secretary shall give previous notice of the regular meetings of the Institute through the Church papers; shall keep a record of its proceedings and preserve its archives.

SEC. 3, The Treasurer shall collect and receive all moneys due to the Institute, disburse them at its order, keep a true account of these operations, and make an annual report thereof.

ARTICLE IV.

The meetings of this association shall be held annually, commencing on the third Monday in April, in the city of Nashville, Tennesse; but any three officers of the Institute may call a meeting of the same whenever they may deem it necessary.

ARTICLE V.

SEC. 1, By-laws in accordance with this Constitution may be made at any meeting.

SEC. 2, No alterations shall be made in this Constitution, unless agreed to by two-thirds of the members present at any meeting.

M. M. HENKLE,	WM. J. ROSS.
THOS. STRINGFELD,	R. L. KIRKPATRIKK,
OSCAR F. CASEY,	JOHN DARBY,
JOHN M. BONNEEL,	WM. J. STREET,
C. D. ELLIOTT,	O. L. SMITH,
J. O. CHURCH,	A. L. HAMILTON,
JAMES H. DODD,	C. W. CALLENDER,
A. S. KING,	A. R. ERWIN,
JAS. F HAMILTON,	CHARLES R. JEWETT,
R. PAINE,	G. F. PIERCE.

The Institute then proceeded to the election of officers for the succeding year, when the following were chosen:

Rev. ROBERT PAINE, D. D. President,
Rev. GEO. F. PIERCE, D. D. Vice Pres't.
Rev. M. M. HENKLE, D. D. " "
Prof. JAS. B. DODD, " "
Rev. C. D. ELLIOTT, " "
Rev. O. L. SMITH, " "
Rev. A. L. HAMILTON, D. D., Sec'y.
Prof. C. CALLENDER, Treasurer.

On motion, two committees were appointed, one to select themes for lectures and essays, and the other to assign subjects for reports to be delivered and presented at the next annual session of the Institute.

Said Committees reported as follows: The themes for these lectures, essays, etc., and the persons appointed to prepare them, are as follows:

1st, Opening lecture by the President, on the proper method of introducing the Bible as a text book in all our institutions.

2d, Lecture by the Rev. J. O. Church, D. D., on the importance of our itinerant system of educating the children of our traveling preachers free of expense for tuition and board.

3d, Lecture by Prof. John Darby, on the importance of Natural History as a branch of education.

4th, Essay by Rev. R. H. Rivers, D. D., on the importance of thorough English scholarship, and the means of attaining it.

5th, Essay by Rev. J. R. Thomas, on the best method of school government and discipline.

6th, Essay by Prof. O. F. Casey, on the best method of teaching Ancient Languages.

7th, Report on the proper course of study for Male Colleges and High Schools, to be prepared by Rev. W. M. Wightman, D. D., and Rev. W. J. Sasnett.

8th, Report on the proper course of study for Female Colleges and Academies, to be prepared by Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D. D., and Rev. O. L. Smith.

9th, Report on the expediency of providing, as far as possible, a system of Common School Education by benevolent effort or otherwise, to be prepared by Rev. J. M. Bonnell and Rev. W. H. Anderson, D. D.

10th, Report on the proper time and length of vacations, to be prepared by Prof. A. R. Holcombo and Prof. J. B. Dodd.

11th, Report on the expediency of establishing a scientific school journal under the patronage of this Institute, to be prepared by Rev. E. E Wiley, D. D., and Pres. J. Darby.

12th, Report on the subject of the endowment of our higher institutions of learning, to be prepared by Rev. George F. Pierce, D. D. and Rev. W. A. Smith, D. D.

On motion, Vice President Elliott and the Treasurer and Secretary of this Institute be appointed a committee of arrangement for the next annual meeting, and that they shall have power to secure volunteer lectures and essays, in addition to those above mentioned.

On motion, Pres. J. O. Church, Profs. Kirkpatrick and Casey, were appointed a committee to receive and report all books which any authors or publishers may desire to lay before this Institute.

A reconsideration of the above motion was called for, pending the discussion of which the Institute adjourned to meet again at a quarter to eight o'clock, P. M.

M. M. HENKLE, V. Prest.
A. L. Hamilton, Sec'y.

HAPPINESS IN GOD'S SERVICE.—The Christian does not serve God for happiness, but God by a sublime necessity has attached happiness to his service. Along the ranks of his army goes the command to rejoice; above it floats the banner of love. Felicity is the light which rests over it all. From the helmets of the seraphim that light is flashed back in full unclounded blaze; on us of the human race who, as Isaac Taylor says "beautifully" seems to stand almost on the extreme confines of happiness," its first rays are even now descending. Happiness is the spherical music in which God, whose name is Love, has ordained that holiness must voice itself; his light, as it sweeps over the Æolian harp of immensity, kindling every dead world into beauty breaks forth in the Memnonian anthem of joy.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

FEMALE COLLEGES.

NUMBER SIX.

If it were distinctly understood that no young lady could graduate at a first-rate college, under twenty years of age, an incalculable benefit would result to society. The marrying period would be deferred, and time gained for the cultivation and improvement of the female mind and character.

Were I to say that the women of the present day are no credit to the age in which they live, nor to the intelligent race of which they form an integral part, I should probably speak in terms too sweeping and severe, and should be visited thereupon with the "righteous indignation" of all the "Fanny Ferns" that might chance to rend me. Of course then, I shall say no such thing, but must confess that such a remark has been upon the very point of my pen more than once. Some great and noble exceptions there are—and, indeed, in almost every community are to be found those whose native good sense and judicious parentage have saved them from the general imbecility. But, alas for the remainder! "Wherewithal shall we be clothed?" and wherewithal shall we pass away the time? are the chief problems of their existence. In the solution of the first, they well nigh save themselves the trouble of solving the second, inasmuch as they thus dispose of a large portion of the troublesome hours. Sensible reader, did it never occur to you that in the wise scheme of God's creation, so sublimely beautiful a creature as woman could not have been made for so trifling an occupation as this continual talking, and toiling, and expenditure about frills and frippery, flounces and flummery, fashion and foolery? Has not the wish often arisen from the depth of your heart, that you might see no more powdered and painted faces? no more shamefully exposed and half-murdered forms, pinched and stayed and heaped; bedizened from head to foot with costly, worse than useless finery? "Yes," you answer, "of course I have, a thousand times. Nothing is more common for me than to remark, that chaste and plain simplicity of dress is the only becoming style of female attire." But, are you very sure, my sensible friend, that you are not in any way contributing to perpetuate the same evil? To this question, investigation and reflection may compel you to give an unfavorable answer.

But in the solution of the second problem above alluded to—"wherewithal shall we pass away the time?" There is, if possible, a still greater display of human weakness and folly. I do not mention these things because they form a pleasant subject of remark, but for the single purpose of calling attention to them and suggesting a gradual but certain remedy. It certainly is a source only of mortification to every well-wisher of humanity, to be compelled to allude to the foibles of any portion of the human species, but more especially of that portion that seems to exist in almost entire dependence upon the other.

But, here again, my friend Mr. "Sensible" wishes to know "what is the use of exposing their faults?" and declares that "their reformation is hopeless"—that "there is no conceivable cure for them"—and in his most sensible vein he adds that "women, young and old, will put on airs and make pretensions"—that "they will deck themselves out like peacocks, and appear about as vain"—(rather harsh, my friend)—that "they will talk scandal about their neighbors, because their minds are empty of everything else—(too true)—that they will say to a fashionable friend making them a fashionable call, "Oh I am delighted to see you," when, in reality, they are no such thing"—and that "they will make themselves silly and ridiculous, on a multitude of occasions and in a variety of ways, for the want of that real, hard sense which alone enables a person to act at all times like a reasonable, intelligent being."

Spoken like Mr. Sensible himself, and like no one else. But really, my friend, I am not so hopeless as you are. I believe with the illustrious John Wesley, that as woman was taken from man's side, she was designed to be his equal, his partner, his companion—that she is endowed by her Creator with a mind not less penetrating and comprehensive, and a heart certainly not less true to the noblest attributes of humanity.—But I am also satisfied that the habits of society at the present day, and the systems of female education, tend directly to implant and foster the very follies and imbecilities over which you so justly lament. Systems of education that pretend to do a great many things which it is impossible for them to accomplish—systems which give a smattering of a vast number of subjects, but a thorough knowledge of none—systems that wholly neglect the basis of an education, and propose to speak into existence, with magic-like brevity, a magnificent and gorgeous temple—such systems must surely contribute to vanity, deceitfulness and pride.

Where then shall we look for the remedy for all the faults to which we have directed attention? Most unquestionably to my mind, such a remedy is to be found in a well-directed system of Christian education.

To the elucidation of this thought we shall devote the next article.

MENTOR.

(To be Continued.)

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

MAKING TRACKS.

Mr. Editor:—I believe we have in English verse "The Pleasures of the Imagination," "The Pleasures of Hope," etc. etc., but who has sung The Pleasures of Travel? No one, to the best of my knowledge and belief—and why? For if we are to judge people by what they say and do, and then consider how much traveling is done, and done by pleasure-seekers, at great outlay of time and money, we might be tempted to think that all paths of travel are peaceful and flowery, therefore poetic. And yet no one has sung their delectabilities, nor will they ever, for the very good reason that the line of travel and the line of pleasure do not form a "Union Line,"—nor do they run parallel, but at right and acute angles. At least such is my experience, and I am in the twenty-seventh year of the experiment. If any ask, why continue? The only answer that satisfies my own mind is, the "love of Christ constrains me," and but for this, I sometimes think, I never would again be found ten miles from the place called home. But so it is, I have it to do, and without further delay, proceed to tell of what befel me during the month of April. Or rather tell how the Tract cause was received and estimated in the different localities visited—my griefs and pleasures only being incidental.

The second Sabbath at Newbern, Greene county—it being the time of the quarterly meeting—Brother Starr, the Presiding Elder, gave me an open field, and there being no other services in town, and a beautiful day, my expectations were large. The result fifteen dollars and some cents.

By appointment, I was to be at Greensboro at night, the seat of "The Southern University." I did my best, and realized forty dollars and five cents. I ought to have told that the Brother who keeps the ferry on the Catawba River, as he was roping the boat across, upon a single hint, pulled out his pocket-book and gave me five dollars.

Monday evening, leaving Greensboro with Brother Crowson, we journeyed a few miles and tarried all night with a kind brother, who kindly entertained us, bought some of our books, and gave me four dollars for the cause, promising to do more when I shall fill a certain appointment, then made.

Next day we reached Entaw, the flower town of Alabama. In the evening, fell in with class meeting; after which, at the suggestion of some of the sisters, the young pastor asked me to preach at night, which I did, to a congregation of respectable size for week-night on short notice, but took no collection, reserving this pleasure until my next visit.

My next stopping was in the town of Pickensville, with Brother Murrah and his kind family. After a day or two we went over to Carrollton, the county town of Pickens county, a small but growing place. I preached several times, and on Sabbath presented the claims of the Tract Society, and without much trouble or extra effort received ninety dollars! The day was unpleasant, the congregation under the usual size, and yet the result! I said something in a former number about "a banner." Candidly, everything considered, Carrollton is entitled to that distinction. Tuesday night following I was to hold forth in Pickensville, but a heavy shower defeated the collection. I received in private donations eight dollars and fifty cents. This is a small and rather ancient village, noted at present for the existence and maintenance of a flourishing female academy, under the Presidency of Rev. Mr. Bradshaw, of the Presbyterian Church.—Leaving this place I next stopped in Columbus, Miss., which might with propriety be called the city of buds and blossoms. It is situated on the Bigbee river, not at the head of navigation, for navigation on this river as well as some others, is constructed on the sliding scale, sometimes running away beyond Aberdeen, and then sliding down to Demopolis, and even lower. But so it is, it is a city, small but growing, and must in time be much enlarged, for it is now within fifty miles of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, which is daily coming on, so that they expect to see the Iron horse by next New Year's day. The Sabbath came, preceded by a heavy night's rain—the morning dark and lowering, nevertheless a pretty good congregation came out.—The collection summed up, before I left next day, one hundred and sixty-six dollars. I forgot to say, in the order of things, that the Saturday previous I had an appointment at New Hope, seven miles from C. There were about ten persons all told, present. I preached, and collected eleven dollars and fifty cents. In Columbus, I met many old friends that knew me twenty-six years ago, on my first circuit. I formed some new acquaintances that I judge are worth remembering. Indeed the kindness of Brother Oliver, the stationed preacher, and Brother Graham, the stationed missionary, together with many good brethren and sistors, made me feel that the place, at least the Methodists, are "given to hospitality." Apropos, a sensible brother jocosely reminded me the other day that my account of travels was well enough, when compared with some of our distinguished "note takers by the way," with this exception, that I had failed to tell how many good dinners I had eaten, and how these were graced by the politeness of mine hostess. I plead guilty, and can offer nothing in extenuation lest I offend the whole generation of good eaters and flatterers.

Once more homeward bound, I forbear details. Suffice it to say that, mounting the mail coach at 9 o'clock Monday night, and it crowded to its utmost capacity, we set forth in the midst of darkness, rain and thunder.—This continuing, we soon had signs of high waters. These we soon realized, and by a miracle of mercy were prevented plunging into an overflowing creek, in which some of the women and children in all probability would have been drowned. It were long to tell how we swam one creek, that is, the horses, while the passengers escaped wot feet by mounting the seats. How we lay over a day at Clinton—how we waded another creek, that is, the gentlemen passengers. How through much mud and rain, sometimes walking, sometimes riding, we at last reached Selma Thursday noon, 1st day of May. From this showing my readers will agree that my caption "making tracks," was appropriately chosen.

Yours truly, F. O. FERGUSON.

May 7, 1856.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

RECIPE FOR QUITTING THE USE OF TOBACCO.—First, resolve that you will use no more tobacco. Second, resolve that every time you feel a disposition to use tobacco that you will pray till the appetite for it abates. The cure is certain.

ONE REFORMED.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

The Annals of Southern Methodism for 1855.

GOLDSBORO, N. C., May 6, 1856.

Rev. and Dear Brother:—I have today mailed copies of the "Annals of Southern Methodism," to all those who ordered the work directly from me.

The delay in its appearance is much beyond my expectation, as it was beyond my control. A few typographical errors in names have occurred, probably, however, fewer than usual in so large a work; and a few sentences and paragraphs remain which I had intended to exclude. They will be noticed probably by only the most critical readers.

To compensate for the delay, there are twenty-five closely printed pages of valuable and interesting matter over and above the amount promised in my prospectus. Upon the whole I have reason to hope that each subscriber will feel that he has received much more than the worth of his money.

A supply will be kept at the Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, and at the Repositories in St. Louis, Charleston and Galveston, and at the stores of Bro. Knotts, Memphis, Tenn., and Mr. McGinnis, New Orleans. Preachers and booksellers can obtain them in quantities from those houses. Those who desire copies sent by mail will please address me.

Allow me to express my gratification at the liberal patronage bestowed upon the work in advance of its publication.

Very truly, yours,

CHARLES F. DEEMS.

From Washington.

The Question of Receiving the New Nicaraguan Minister—Reasons For and Against—The British Interposition in Behalf of Costa Rica—Nothing in the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty against it.

The decision of the Cabinet upon the question of the reception of the new Minister from Nicaragua has not been made known. Some assume that he will not be received, for the reason that the government cannot suddenly change its policy on the eve of the Cincinnati Convention, and that the original reason for refusing to recognize Walker's government, to wit: that it was not a civil government, still exists.

That on the other hand, it is urged that the present government has the almost universal support and confidence of the Nicaraguans, and that it is more permanently established than any previous dynasty for some time past, and that there can be no personal objection to the new Minister, who is a native Nicaraguan, and connected with the hierarchy of that State, which has an influential and permanent element in the government, and cordially supports the present regime.

The new Minister is in New York, but will not come to Washington uninvited, nor present himself an unwelcome applicant for recognition to Mr. Marcy.

It is also a question before the administration whether any and what notice shall be taken of the interposition by the British Government in behalf of Costa Rica in the present conflict. There is nothing in the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty which restricts either party from forming alliances, offensive and defensive, with any or all of the Central American States, still less from selling arms to either of them. The question for our own government to consider is, whether they shall imitate and go beyond the example of Great Britain, and after recognizing the new government, proceed to afford it material aid.

It will require no appropriation—no repeal of the neutrality law to do this—as we have recently seen, in the fact that Walker is receiving reinforcements from New Orleans and other quarters, without the slightest hindrance from the government.

The answer to be received within a week or two from the British government in regard to the enlistment case, will be one which will irritate the administration, if not the people; and it is very possible that Central America may afford necessary causes for dispute. [Cor. Balt. Sun.

The Panama and Nicaragua Trouble.

Through our private correspondence from Washington we learn that several members of the Cabinet are warmly in favor of prompt and bold action in regard to the recent outrages on American citizens at Panama and Virgin Bay. It is doubtful, however, that their counsels will prevail. A war vessel is ordered to Aspinwall, and another war vessel is supposed to have already arrived at Panama; and orders will be sent to the commander directing him to remain and afford protection to our citizens crossing the Isthmus. What course will be taken to obtain reparation for the murders and robberies committed by the infuriated mob, countenanced by the authorities and aided by the police, has not yet transpired, if it has been decided, which is problematical.

The massacre of unoffending American citizens, at Virgin Bay, by the Costa Rican soldiery, is a matter of even graver importance than the Panama affair, barbarous and blood-thirsty as it was in all its details. At Virgin Bay the Costa Ricans, acting under the direct orders of their commander and officers, wantonly fired upon and killed a number of our citizens in no wise connected with, or participating in the war waging between Costa Rica and the Republic of Nicaragua. The Costa Ricans had entered the place unopposed, and therefore no provocation had been given them by the victims of their savage onslaught. They were peaceful men in the employ of the Transit Company, and their only offence was that they were Americans.

We have not yet heard what our Government intends doing to avenge the outrage, but as it has the leading facts already in its possession, the country will expect prompt and decided action on the matter. Certainly, the Panama and Virgin Bay outrages afford the Administration an opportunity to redeem its foreign policy from much of the discredit into which it has fallen. But it must not be prompt and inflexible towards the Panamenos and slow and vacillating with the Costa Ricans, because the latter are incited and encouraged, and to a certain extent are under the protection of the British Government. If it would make the persons and the rights of American citizens respected, it must be as fearless and zealous in defending them against the intrigues and enmities of the strong, as against the weak who merely give rein to their vicious passions.

We hope that our Government will arrive at the resolution to pursue an independent, American policy, and pursue it without regard to what European nations may think. We do not intrude ourselves in their difficulties and quarrels, and we should let them know by our actions that we will resist their interference in matters that specially concern us and the States of this continent. If we adopt this policy, and show them that we mean to adhere to it, we will avoid complications of our relations and difficulties in the future, which, otherwise, will become inevitable, and perhaps force us into obstinate and destructive wars. [New York Sun, 5th.

War with England.

The following sensible article is from the London Daily Telegraph:

"Those who are disposed to attach but little value to the preservation of peace with the United States, should carefully examine the Blue Book which has recently appeared. They will there find that the value of the exports to foreign countries in the year 1854, of the products of the United Kingdom, was as follows:

To Russia	£24,801
Sweden and Norway	756,958
Prussia	7,96,434
Hanse Towns	7,413,745
Holland	4,573,574
Belgium	4,464,933
France	13,196,000
Portugal	1,370,803
Spain	1,270,464
Cuba and other Spanish Islands	1,078,190
Egypt	1,233,855
Brazil	2,891,840
Buenos Ayres	1,267,122
Chili	1,421,605
Peru	949,200
China, (exclusive of Koughong)	582,699
United States of America	21,127,631
Total	£61,877,054

Thus we are furnished with a result which should always be prominent in the public eye of every patriotic Briton, that the United States consume £21,127,631 of the industrial products of these Isles, while the other foreign countries designated take only £30,159,560.

The declared value of the raw cotton imported into the United Kingdom in 1854 was £20,173,393. The declared value of the cotton goods exported during the same year, including cotton twist, was £31,745,851. No one is so ignorant as not to know where and in what manner this cotton was produced, upon which, after supplying ourselves and our colonies with the manufactures proceeding from it, we are enabled to furnish the rest of the world with a surplus to the amount of £11,570,464.

AN AMBASSADOR FROM THE CANADAS AT WASHINGTON.—The proposition to send a resident Minister to Washington, to represent there the interests of the Canadas, is very seriously debated there. The Toronto Board of Trade make it the subject of special argument in their recent report. We quote what they say:

"In approaching this very important question your Council has not undervalued the difficulties which surround it, nor have they arrived at a hasty conclusion: The chief difficulty which suggests itself to us, as British subjects, proud of our connection with and alliance to the parent State, is, that if the proposed representative at Washington be an ambassador from the Government of Canada to that of the United States, which he should be to have any weight attached to his suggestions there, that the proposals to establish such representation may be looked upon as an infringement to the Royal prerogative, which your Council would be the last to suggest.

It cannot be denied that great necessity exits for some active, intelligent and influential representative of the commercial interests of Canada near the controlling power of the United States—and that, under the rapid growth and daily increasing importance of our commercial relations with that country, this necessity is every day becoming more keenly felt. We see and point out the want, leaving to the Governments of this country and Great Britain the task of supplying the remedy. Should neither Government see fit to take action such as the commercial men of Canada deem necessary, it will then be a matter of consideration for the different Boards of Trade throughout the Province whether a simply commercial delegate should be appointed."

AMERICANS IN CANADA.—Of late, many Americans, induced by the cheapness of lands, ubundance of certain varieties of instructed labor or other causes, have settled in Canada and established their various branches of manufactures. We notice a recent instance of this kind mentioned in the Rochester Democrat. A Rochester tobacconist has commenced in Toronto the manufacture on a large scale, of plug tobacco. He has nine presses, and intends erecting six more. But probably the great secret of his selecting that point for the business is, that he is there enabled to procure, at comparatively low wages, the services of experienced negro workmen, fugitives from Virginia, whom, of course, he could not expect to employ upon our soil. Forty-nine of these, all accustomed to the business, he has now at work in his factory.

Thirty-Fourth Congress—First Session.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Senate.—Mr. Pough presented the resolutions of the Ohio Legislature in favor of the admission of Kansas as a State into the Union, with her free State Constitution.

On motion of Mr. Clayton, the Secretary of State was requested to furnish the Senate with the original journal of proceedings of the American Commission in Paris in 1803 and 1804, for liquidating and auditing the claims of American citizens against France for spoliation on commerce.

Mr. Bayard addressed the Senate at length on the subject of the Naval Retiring Board, advocating a proposition which he had submitted, namely, restoring to their former rank all the officers who have been placed on the reserve list, and to investigate the capacity and fitness of those dropped officers who may desire it by courts of inquiry. Without concluding his remarks, the Senate adjourned.

House of Representatives.—The House under the operation of the previous question, passed a Senate bill appropriating forty-five thousand dollars for deepening the channel over the St. Clair Flats, Michigan, and also the bill specifically defining the objects for which the balance of the appropriation for the improvement of the Savannah river, shall be expended.

Mr. Clingman asked leave to offer a joint resolution for the better protection of American citizens and property, proposing, for this purpose, that the President of the United States protect the thoroughfare between the Atlantic and the Pacific States by the employment of any part of the naval or land forces, and any proper number of volunteers.

Mr. Stephens said he is willing to suspend the rules to admit the resolution, but not for its passage.

Mr. Jones, of Tennessee, said he understood that the resolution authorized the President of the United States to take possession of Central America. He was not prepared for that.

Mr. Campbell, of Ohio, intimated that he wished to offer an amendment looking to the annexation of the British provinces.

Mr. Clingman said he would make no motion to cut off such an amendment. He wished to get the resolution in; leaving it to the House to refer it or not.

A motion was made that the House adjourn.

WASHINGTON, May 6, 1856.—Senate.—The Senate spent the morning hour principally in discussion relative to the proper site for the armory for the District of Columbia.

The bill making an appropriation for the construction of a harbor at Marquette, on Lake Superior, in Michigan, was taken up.

Mr. Adams asked for the yeas and nays, insisting to make a test vote.

Mr. Bell, of Tennessee, was not sure that this would be a proper test, believing it to be a new work.

Mr. Cass remarked it was a new work because Congress had never expended a dollar on Lake Superior.

Mr. Stuart said the bill appropriated twenty-five thousand dollars, and provided that the work should not be commenced unless that amount would complete it.

Mr. Hunter opposed the bill, and Messrs. Cass and Stuart advocated it.

House of Representatives.—The House passed the Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill.

Mr. Bennett, of New York, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported a bill granting alternate sections of lands to Iowa, in aid of railroads in that State. He remarked that Arkansas and Missouri had each received three millions of acres, and this bill did not propose to give Iowa more than half that quantity. The Committee had other bills of a similar character, but first desired action on this, to ascertain the disposition of the House concerning such measures.

Mr. Stephens, of Georgia, made an ineffectual effort to introduce an amendment, extending all rights, privileges and liabilities contained in this bill to the States of Louisiana, Arkansas, and Missouri, and the territory of Kansas, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a railroad from Vicksburg, Miss., by Shreveport, La., Fulton, Arkansas, and Springfield, Mo., to Lecompton, Kansas, and that public lands to the same extent, and on the same terms, limitations and restrictions, be granted.

Mr. Bennett feared that such an amendment, proposing sixteen hundred miles of railroad, would be fatal to the bill.

Mr. Jones, of Tennessee, moved that the bill be laid upon the table, but the motion did not prevail—yeas 45, nays 75.

A substitute for the bill was agreed to; but before further action on the subject, the morning hour expired.

Mr. Jones, of Tennessee, moved that the House proceed to the business on the Speaker's table; his object being to reach the bill defining the duties of the Commissioners of Election in the city of Washington, and for other purposes. But the motion did not prevail—yeas 33, nays 90. The House adjourned.

SALE OF WASHINGTON'S CRAVAT AND JEFFERSON'S LETTERS.—On Saturday, Mr. Anthony J. Bleecker sold by auction, at his rooms, a number of autograph letters, chiefly of Washington, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe and others, in number sixteen, formerly the property of a late Captain of the United States Senate. One lot was a cravat worn by Gen. Washington in the war of the Revolution.—This was bought by the auctioneer for $65. It presented no peculiarity, its color faded, dirty white, and in form not unlike the black stocks in ordinary use, only containing no whalebone or stiffener.

A letter from Hon. Thomas Johnson to Rev. Mr. Hatch, sold for $7.

A letter from George Washington to Hon. Thomas Johnson, asking his acceptance of an appointment in the Supreme Judiciary of the United States, dated Philadelphia, July 14, 1791, sold also for $7.

One from THOMAS JEFFERSON to Rev. Mr. Hatch, relating to both business and social matters, sold for 50 cents.

One from James Monroe to the same—a social letter referring to Judge Nelson—brought 50 cents.

One from Thos. Jefferson to the same, containing a critique upon the Constitution of the Library Society, and a request to accept a dish of sea-kale; dated Monticello, April 26, 1823, sold for $3 50.

Another from Thos. Jefferson to the same, referring to his children, his library and his friends, dated Monticello, Sept. 9, 1821, sold for $2 75.

Another from Thos Jefferson to the same, referring to the "good old Feudal times," and inclosing a gift to his Pastor, as an "offering of duty," dated Monticello, Dec. 8, 1821; sold also for $2 75.

Another from Thos. Jefferson to the same referring to the Charlottsville Library Society, and suggesting the purchase of books of general instruction, and excluding novels, and professional and sectarian books, dated March 13, 1823, brought $2 25.

Three or four other lots sold for similar prices, only a few persons being present.

[New York Express, 30th.

DARING AND SUCCESSFUL HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—Mr. Richard Joyce, a cotton broker residing in James street, was attacked on Saturday evening by three men who robbed him of a wallet containing $160 in bank bills, and notes of hand and other papers to the value of nearly $3,000, with which they escaped. It appears that shortly after 9 o'clock in the evening he had landed at the foot of Roosevelt street from one of the ferry boats, and was proceeding toward his residence when three men came up to him, one of whom jostled against him while another struck him a powerful blow in the face which knocked him to the pavement. The thieves then stole his wallet and two of them ran off with it, while the other remained to rob Mr. Joyce of his valuable gold watch. Mr. J. was determined if possible to save his watch and also to secure the robber, but the fellow was too strong for him and fled with the watch, leaving behind him, however, his coat and a black velvet cap. Mr. J. followed the rascal and recovered his watch, the fellow having dropped it in his flight, but was unable to overtake him. The whole transaction was the work of only a few moments, and it was all over when the police arrived on the spot. The robbers are not known, and it is very doubtful whether, even if arrested, Mr. Joyce would be able to recognize them.

[N. Y. Tribune, 5th.

WHERE ARE THE OWNERS?—Some time ago we referred to the condition of the telegraph line on this side of the river, and making inquiries as to the whereabouts of the proprietors. We have not been able, so far, to obtain any information as regards the proprietors, or why other intelligence concerning it. We have been requested to call attention again to this matter, as some of our residents have evinced a determination to pull down the posts and throw the wire into the river. The cause of this is simply because their cattle have been injured by becoming entangled in the wire, and in some instances the cattle have been killed.

We give notice to all persons interested in the line, or its proprietors, if this caution can reach them, that unless the line is taken down from the posts and put away, those persons whose cattle have been injured will do it for them, and that too in some place where they will not be likely to find posts or wires.

[West Baton Rouge Sugar Planter, 10th.

THOSE MORMONS.—A large party of Mormons, numbering 536, went off last evening, in good shape, from the Providence depot. The party filled seven cars. They went on the Plymouth Rock to New York, to follow the party that preceded them over the Erie Railroad. A cleaner, better looking lot of immigrants never came into the port of Boston, whatever their creed may be. [Boston Chron., 3d.

A QUARTETTE.—The wife of Mr. Washington French in Atala county, Miss., presented him two boys and two girls at one birth. Mr. French was 45 old when he married Miss Eleanor Henley, of Miss., and had been married one year.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The N. O. Christian Advocate.

TERMS—$2 00 per annum, in advance.

NEW ORLEANS:

SATURDAY, MAY 17, 1856.

To the Preachers.—You get the paper free. We hope ever to continue it so. Do what you can. Your utmost and friendly diligence we invoke, in collecting its accounts and increasing its circulation.

Mrs. Belton's Return.—Rev. S. H. Cox, writes from Pickens county, Ala., May 6: "Sister Belton arrived at her father's residence on the 2d inst. She looks feeble and care-worn, but we hope home associations and comforts will soon restore her health."

February 4, 1857, is the date for the next Louisiana Conference Session at Waterproof, La. The 11th, as published, was erroneous.

Church Architecture.—J. P. Jewett & Co. have in preparation an important work on this subject, which, judging from the testimonial accompanying the advertisement, is likely to supply a want that has long been felt, and if so, will confer a lasting benefit on the churches of our land.

Rev. James Caughey is now laboring at Brockville, Canada. He spent most of the winter at Bellville, where a very glorious revival rewarded his labors, some five hundred souls having professed to receive Christ under his ministrations.

Southern Methodist Quarterly for April.—This number contains a portrait of Robert Newton, and the following articles: The Chronology of Creation; Spencer's Social Statistics; Prayer, by Dr. Winans; Scholastic Philosophy; Views of Female Education; Searching the Scriptures; Giesc-ler, the Church Historian; Ewald's History of Christ; Notices of Books; Miscellanies.

Sabbath School Holidays.

The Mobile Methodist Sabbath school scholars and officers had a pleasant time of it yesterday week. The Eliza Battle was chartered, and about three hundred children, with their teachers, passed over the Bay to Hollwood, where among trees and breezes and grass and fruit and lunch and speech-making, was a merry time. They returned to the wharf in the evening, under a full gale of song.

The Methodist Sabbath Schools of the Upper District of New Orleans had a nice time of it also, last Tuesday. They went by the cars to the Lake, and under the live-oaks rejoiced in swings, songs and pic nics and suitable dialogues. The Railroad Company acted generously—took out the two hundred and fifty children and brought them back free. D. Maxwell, Esq., bore the chief burden of the day, and he sympathized in his intense anxiety, that no accident should mar the innocent festivity—as none did. One little boy fell into the canal, but was picked out without any further damage than to his "Sundays." We had the pleasure of returning with the happy band on the 6 o'clock train.

These are good and genial signs. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," is true of the Sunday school too. Grown up people may be at much worse business than making children happy. Get into their hearts, then you may get something into their heads.—To teach them to shun theatres, circuses, and Sabbath breakings—is but half the work. Lead them forth to innocent amusement. These will be strong and pleasing associations with Sabbath School instruction, and open the way to recreations that cultivate the affections and leave no stain behind.

Death of Rev. J. W. Ellis.

Santa Clara, Cal., April 18, 1856.

Brother McTyeire:—One of our most efficient men has fallen. Rev. J. W. Ellis departed this life after an illness of three days, at the Monte, near Los Angelos, on the 30th March. He came to California with Bishop Andrew, in January, 1855, and labored one year on the Mariposa Circuit with acceptability and usefulness. At the last Conference he was appointed to Los Angelos and Lexington. He removed immediately to his work, but his Master called and he was ready to go. He leaves a widow and two children. His friends in Alabama and elsewhere, may rest assured that they will be taken care of. Brother Ellis is the first to go up to heaven from our Conference—but God rules and we submit.

A. M. BAILEY.

Plenty.—There are thirty-six persons advertised here and there, reading Hiawatha.

Steamboat Gambling—A Good Law.

Traveling up and down the Alabama river within the last month, we were impressed with the absence of card and dice playing, and their usual concomitants, drunkenness, swearing, rowdyism and blackguardism. On the Magnolia going up, and the King coming down the river, there was quietness and decency in men and things. What can the cause be, we inquired?

"The new law has done it," said the clever clerk of the King. "It works like magic." In this verdict other knowing ones joined.

We had not heard of the law before. It was passed by the last Legislature. We wish the name of its author were in our possession, for it deserves to be honored.

Every Captain of steamboat on which gambling is permitted, is fined five hundred dollars for each offense, half of this amount going to the informer. The Grand Jury of any county in the State can find a true bill, and in any county the fine may be collected. There is no dodging jurisdiction—no shifting responsibility. River navigation has been cleared at a stroke of these moral snags and sandbars.

Many a youth returning home with the price of his father's or widowed mother's cotton has been fleeced by gamblers on steamboats. Plying with drink and stratagem these light-fingered gentry have got considerable pickings from older persons. They followed a steamboat as sharks do a ship. If cheating at the table did not succeed, more violent forms of robbery, as trunk breaking, were resorted to. But now their occupation is gone, and they have disappeared with it. The traveling community has improved in manners and morals accordingly.

Soon after the passage of the law, the Captain of an Alabama boat was approached for permission to have a game. "Gentlemen, you can have it by depositing with me five hundred dollars—not without."

A good law. Pass it round.

Methodist Episcopal Church, North.

The Rev. Dr. Hannah, delegate from the British Wesleyan Conference to the General Conference, is also the delegate from the British Foreign Bible Society to the American Bible Society, whose anniversary was held 8th inst., in Broadway Tabernacle, New York.

The General Conference assembled at Indianapolis, Indiana, on the 1st inst. It is said the Legislature of the State generously placed the State House, with its halls and rooms, together with attendants and all necessary appliances, at the disposal of the Conference.—Bishops Waugh, Morris, Janes, Scott, Simpson, Baker, and Ames were all present on the first day, as were also 205 of 222 delegates.

Rev. Prof. Harris, of the Ohio Wesleyan University, was chosen Secretary; and Rev. Messrs. Griffiths, of New York, S. D. Simonds, of California, and J. S. Martin, of Baltimore, Assistant Secretaries. Committees, composed of one from each Conference, were then appointed on Episcopacy, Itinerancy, Boundaries, Slavery, Book Concern, Missions, Education, Tract Cause, Sunday Schools, Revisal of Discipline.—Smaller Committees were appointed on the Temperance Cause, on the Bible Cause, on Temporal Economy, and on Expenses of Delegates.

Rev. Dr. Hanna, of the British Wesleyan Conference, presented an address from his Conference, which was read. After assurances of Christian love and esteem, it alluded to the recent excitement looking to war between the two countries. They were happy to assure their brethren on this side of the Atlantic, that the excitement had subsided, they trusted not to exist again.

Rev. Dr. Hanna replied to the reception of Bishop Waugh, in an address abounding in Christian sentiments and affection. Rev. Mr. Jobson also replied.

The British delegates were invited by resolution to freely participate in the deliberations of the Conference.

A Model Subscriber.

Grenada, Miss., April 10, 1856.

Mr. Editor:—I herewith send you two dollars to pay my subscription for the Advocate for the sixth volume. My receipts show that I have paid to the close of the fifth. I generally prefer paying an agent, and always in advance. I attempted to do so some time since, but the preacher on our circuit refused to receive money, 'saying that he had nothing to do with your paper; that it properly belonged to another conference. It sounded rather strange to me, and rather bothered me, for I had never written a word nor sent a dime to an Editor in all my life. So here it is, for I must have your paper and you must have the money. Don't, Mr. Editor, tell any one the name of the Itinerant preacher in Mississippi that won't receive money for the Advocate. He is from T. Success to the Advocate.

L. P. PEACOCK.

P. S.—We publish that without apology.—[Ed.

Preaching the Gospel.

Dr. Sprague tells the following anecdote of an evangelical clergyman of the English Church, named Jones. The story was told him by the Rev. George Burder.

Mr. Jones had a classmate, who entered the ministry at the same time with himself, but was a mere man of the world, and knew little and cared nothing of the true gospel. This man, conversing one day with Mr. Jones, said to him, half jocosely, half seriously,

"Why is it that you are so popular as a preacher, and so few come to hear me, when every body knows that at the University I was considered greatly your superior?"

"Why," said Mr. Jones, "the reason is that I preach the gospel."

"The gospel?" said the other, "so do I, almost every text I preach is from Matthew, Mark, Luke or John."

Said Mr. Jones, "You may do that, and yet never preach Jesus Christ."

"Well," said the other, "lend me one of your sermons, and see what effect it will have."

He actually did lend him one, and he preached it, as he had engaged to do, and as he was coming out of the church at the close of the service, he was accosted by a young man, who, in listening to the borrowed discourse, had been thrown into a state of anxiety in respect to his salvation.

Says the minister, somewhat confused by the strange result of the preaching, "Wait, wait, say nothing about it till the people have gone out."

After the congregation had retired, the anxious inquirer began further to himself, when the clergyman interrupted him by saying,

"But what is the matter with you? I see no occasion for making yourself so unhappy."

"Matter," replied he, "why, your preaching has made me feel like a condemned criminal, and I fear there is no mercy for me."

"Well, really, said the minister, "I am very sorry that I have wounded your feelings—I had no intention of doing it—but, since you have got into this uncomfortable state, I advise you to go and see Mr. Jones."

Traces of a Father.

In a late history of Braddock's Defeat we have a very touching illustration of the manner in which truth long buried may be brought to light, by one of very slight but conclusive signs which Providence seems to have given as if for the very purpose of knitting together those members of the great skeleton of history which otherwise would lie scattered, unobserved and unknown in the deserts of the past. Sir John Halket, a brave and much respected English officer, had been one of those who had fallen in the terrible route that had befallen the English and colonial regiments in their attack on Fort du Quesne, but such was the number slain and the completeness of the defeat that no means were taken at the time to secure his burial. In 1756, however, Fort du Quesne having been reduced, his son, Sir Peter Halket, proceeded to the battle-field, to see if there remained any thing which would enable him to identify his father's body. In reply to his anxious question, we are told, "one of his tawny guides had already told him that he recollected, during the combat, to have seen an officer fall beneath such a remarkable tree as he should have no difficulty in recognizing; and, at the same moment, another rushing to his side was instantly shot down, and fell across his comrade's body. As they drew near the spot the detachment was halted, and the Indians peered about through the trees to recall their memories of the scene. With speaking gesture they briefly discoursed in their own tongue. Suddenly, and with a shrill cry, the Indian of whom we have spoken sprang to the well-remembered tree. While the troops rested on their arms in a circle around, he and his companion searched among the thick fallen leaves. In a moment, two gaunt skeletons were exposed lying together, the one upon the other, as they had died. The hand that tore away the scalps had not disturbed their position, but no signs remained to distinguish the relics from the hundreds of others that strewed the ground. At this moment Sir Peter remembered him of a peculiar artificial tooth which his father bore. The bones were then separated, and an examination of those which lay undermost at once solved all doubts. 'It is my father,' exclaimed the unhappy youth, as he sank into the arms of his scarcely less affected friends."

Rev. Alexander Speer.—This distinguished divine died at LaGrange, Ga., on the 28th ult., from paralysis, in the 63d year of his age. His family passed through Atlanta on the 28th on their way to Culloden, where his remains will be interred. In early life Mr. Speer took high rank as a politician in South Carolina. The prime of his manhood was devoted to the service of the church.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Butler Circuit, Ala. Conference, Apl. 3, 1856.

Brother McTyeire:—I have nothing cheering in the way of religious news to write. We have had an extremely cold winter for this climate, but spring, in all its magnificence and beauty has opened at last. Hark, how the feathered warblers sing,

'Tis nature's cheerful voice,
Soft music hails the lovely spring
And woods and fields rejoice.

Our second quarterly meeting has just closed, and though we had no peculiar manifestation of revival power, yet from the size of the congregation, and their serious attentiveness to the word, we trust some permanent good was accomplished.

On Sabbath morning, after a few pertinent remarks from our Elder, Bro. James A. Heard, on the subject of missions, a missionary zeal, quite uncommon in this section, was manifested among the brethren and friends of the cause. A call being made for contributions to this glorious enterprise, the response "put me down five dollars," "put me down five more," "put me down two and a half," was heard over the house till the handsome little sum of eighty dollars was readily made up. This was done here on Butler Circuit, at Ebenezer Church, a little log cabin not much larger than a common country school house, and in a poor neighborhood when compared with some others in point of wealth. The Lord bless the kind brethren and friends.—I trust to be able to bring up a good report from this work at the end of the year. I would like very much to have our Tract Agent visit this circuit. I know he cannot visit every deserted and sin smitten corner of Alabama Conference, but if he could spend a few days with us at Butler and Mount Sterling, I believe he could raise three times as much money as he did a few weeks ago a little west of this. Can't you come, Brother Ferguson? We have no railroad I know to Butler, but then how did Wesley, how did Asbury use to get from place to place? On horseback and sometimes on footback. Don't go around us then. True, we have one or two groceries here, but grocery-keepers do not like to be passed over any more than other folks. Some of them love to give, and do give of their substance, while some church members do not give and will not give. This is a shame, but it is a fact. We need help in this part of the Lord's vineyard. The fields are white unto the harvest and the laborers are few—but one local preacher on the circuit, and he nearly worn down in his Master's cause. The state of religion is not so promising as one might wish to see; but while some faithful members, good and true, are standing on the top of the high places, at the entry of the city, at the coming in at the doors, daily watching at their posts the signs of the times, I hear a voice, watchman tell us what of the night—what its signs of promise are? I look, I think sometimes I see a cloud about the size of a man's hand and hear the sound of much rain. Let it speedily arise, and come pouring down like a mighty rushing wind, till we are all baptized anew with the holy fire of love.

Come? Holy Spirit, heavenly dove,
Descend with all thy fire of love,
Destroy in me the man of of sin,
And make and keep me pure within.

Yours, in Christ, G. HAWKINS.

Duddemonia Circuit, La. Conference, Apl. 23.

Though I had nothing of interest to communicate in the letters that I have written to you previous to this, I now feel to bless God that I can adopt the language of the Apostle, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope." He that inspireth heareth and answereth, prayers hath heard the cries of his people, and the darkness that seemed impenetrable is beginning to give way, and the Lord has begun to "pour out refreshing showers upon his people."

On the second Saturday and Sabbath of the present month, I held a two-day's meeting at Spring Hill Church, where the members of the church in general were blessed; several mourners and three accessions to the church. On the third Saturday and Sabbath of the same, I held a meeting at Hickory Spring Church, where the Lord powerfully blessed the members, the most of which shouted aloud and praised God. Seven conversions—five accessions to the church. The work is generally looking up.

D. P. CULLIN.

Mobile, April 21, 1857.

Bro. McTyeire:—The Rev. C. C. Calloway, our worthy agent of the Southern University, left here on Friday last.—During his stay here he received in good subscription and cash, over sixteen thousand dollars, and the assurance that it should be twenty thousand dollars at least.

In addition, one of our worthy members is considering the noble enterprise of endowing a professorship.—Should this be done, and we hope it will, Mobile will have done a noble part. The agent is well fitted for his station. He makes many friends to the enterprize by his presentation of its claims, and offends none. I hope he will find favor wherever he goes.

One thing is much to be regretted, both here and elsewhere. Some of our worthy men express a warm friendship for the enterprise, yet failing to get their consent to do as much as others of perhaps less ability, they take counsel of their pride and refuse to give at all. All should bear a part in this noble enterprize.

We hope to have our institution well endowed. A strong faculty giving superior educational advantages. No where better. Yet we want this secondary to the higher object of moral and religious training of our sons. We want a faculty of piety and religious zeal—one that will exemplify Methodism in her simplicity and purity. We want to give gratuitous education to the sons of our Itinerant ministers—the orphans of deceased ministers—indigent young ministers, and worthy indigent young men—paying tuition and board. Our literary institutions should ever be the nursery of the church. We have no fears the Southern University will be among the foremost in the various departments of useful development.

May we not hope to enlist your ready pen in favor of presenting the claims of our cherished institution before the public.

Yours, respectfully, D.

REVIVALS.

Good News from the Old Capitol.

Baton Rouge, La., May 10, 1856.

Bro. McTyeire:—We have recently closed a meeting in this place that has resulted in the blessing of many of the faithful followers of Jesus—the conversion of several souls to Christ and fifteen accessions to the church. Brother A. E. Goodwyn, of Alexandria, was with us, and preached with his usual ability and success. His visit will be long remembered by us.

Our city is interested on the subject of religion at this time, which is manifested by the large assemblies that patiently listen to the preaching of the word—and the number of seekers, inquiring for the way that leads to God. In Mrs. Read's school especially, an intense interest is manifested. Never have I seen a school in which more pains have been taken to inculcate religious principles. Not one of her students is boarding with her who is not the subject of religious impressions.—Many of them have been converted this year—many more are seeking the pearl of great price. Never have I seen a female school in which greater advancements, moral and intellectual have been made, than those made by her students. I could say much relative to our church in this city, but at present desist, hoping that what has been said may prove to be the budding of better times. Pray for us.

Yours in Christ, Saml. B. Suratt.

H. Mosely writes April 25th, to the Presbyterian, cheering news of a meeting held in Jackson, La., the seat of Centenary College:

At the Synod of this Presbytery, Dr. Baker was invited to labor in our bounds as an Evangelist. Immediately after the Spring meeting of the Presbytery, he began his labors in this place, and preached to large and solemn audiences every night, for nearly two weeks.—His preaching roused this community to deep thought and attention to eternal things. At the request of the Session, Mr. Castleton, of Baton Rouge, came to our assistance as soon as he left, and the meeting was continued through a third week. The result of it all has been, under the blessing of God, a deep, genuine, thorough revival of religion. The church has been refreshed and edified, and there have been twelve additions to its membership, and will be, probably, five or six more. Our Methodist brethren took the meeting up, when we ceased, and prosecuted it with their usual zeal, and as the result of the two meetings combined, have received more than a hundred members.

The whole community has been shaken to its centre, and even the most wicked, careless, thoughtless men have thought for once, and some of them rejoice in a Savior's love. Our church has been enriched by the ingathering of several of her own baptized children, besides several of the most solid and interesting citizens of the place. The preaching was indeed of the most thoroughly Calvanistic character, and the doctrines of total depravity, total inability, God's sovereign grace and electing love, were held up continually side by side, with the full, free, overflowing salvation in Christ Jesus.—Sometimes the preacher depicted with startling power the sinner "corrupting in his own corruption," ruined, helpless, justly condemned; so that he seemed to hang over the very pit of hell; then again he dwelt with touching tenderness upon the infinite, the sovereign mercy of God, the completeness of Christ's salvation, and the wonderful simplicity of faith.

Both minister and people have been sweetly refreshed and strengthened.—We thank God for it, and set to our seal that he is good, that he is faithful to his promises and to his Son; that he is truly a covenant keeper and prayer hearing God. We would tell to our brethren what he has done for us, and say rejoice with us. And to those who are pleading for similar mercies, we would say, "Wait on the Lord; be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart; wait I say on the Lord."

Yours, respectfully, H. Moseley.

Lagrange, Ga.—The M. E. Church is enjoying a very interesting revival at Lagrange, which commenced on the 17th April—since which time there have been about sixty conversions—mostly members of the Female College, forty of whom have connected themselves with the Church.

Summerfield, Ala.—Hon. R. A. Baker writes, 9th inst. "I am pleased to say that for several days, a most interesting meeting has been going on in our church here. About forty mourners at the altar, and eleven conversions; among them persons of much influence in the community. We hope for large results."

Recent Publications.

Through H. D. McGinnis, 36 Camp street, we have received from the publishers, Harper & Brothers, these their latest. Mr. McGinnis has them on sale:

The Rise of the Dutch Republic.—A History—By John Lothrop Motley. In three volumes. Harper & Bros.

On reading Prescott's last volumes Philip II, we felt a sharp appetite for Motley's forthcoming work. Mr. Prescott often alludes to it, quotes from its unpublished sheets and commends it. Now we have it, and are not disappointed. It is a work of sterling value and dramatic interest. Republicanism did not begin in this country. The idea of ecclesiastical and civil freedom was developed, the struggle begun and constitutional government essayed by William Silent in Holland, 16th century; William of Orange, in England, 17th century, carried it forward; and George Washington, in America, 18th century, crowned the cause with glorious success.

Besides the satisfaction of announcing a new work, the press announces a new man. This is the author's first deliberate effort at authorship. With such wealth of knowledge, skill of research, and writing in such fine taste and spirit, Mr. Motley cannot stop, even with these volumes that put him in company of chief historians.

A Lady's Second Journey Roun the World; from London to the Cape of Good Hope, Borneo, Java, Sumatra, Celebes, Ceram, the Molucas, etc., California, Panama, Peru, Ecuador and the United States. By Ida Pfeiffer. 12mo., pp. 500.

Madam Pfeiffer is an Austrian lady, whose ruling passion seems to be a love of travel and adventure, which one "journey round the world" did not suffice to gratify. She has raised her children (takes care to let you know that) and gone a pleasure taking round the world twice. This globe we live on is a small affair, very l. Madam P. is a genuine female traveler, minute in observation, delicate of perception.—Has a piquant style of telling. Has no mercy on a boor, for a captain of ship or steamboat, or for traveling companion or Consul at foreign port either. Let it be known that such a person is out and it will put the whole carrying, traveling and taverning public on its best behavior. She has boldness in adventure; wisely calculates upon the gallantry even of cannibals, to woman! Her adventures among the Malays and Dyaks, of Borneo, and the Indians of Oregon, are intense passages. A savage struck her—gashed her arm, and was proceeding to eat her. She told him she was old and tough and not fit to eat. She finds opportunity for indulging a Martineau vein in disparaging allusions to foreign missions that came in her way. The American and English missionaries and families she represents as entitled to no sympathy for hardship—as fareing luxuriously, etc. The Dutch missionaries in India are the only ones living modestly and consistently. Her items are numerous and newsy, and little and big. At the French Market, in New Orleans, the world is informed, among other things, that "a person can get a cup of coffee or chocolate and three biscuit for five cents only."

The Teacher. Moral Influences Employed in the Instruction and Government of the Young. By Jacob Abbott. Harper & Brothers. 12mo. pp. 553.

This is a new edition of a well-known work, with the author's careful revision. It is apparent that it is the result of an extended experience, combined with minute observation, excellent common sense, and an earnest devotion to the best interests of humanity. We commend it to public teachers or those conducting home education.

The Tragedies of Æschylus—Literally translated; with Critical and Illustrative Notes, and an Introduction. By Theodore Alois Buckley, B. A. To which is added an Appendix, containing the new readings of Hermann's posthumous edition. Translated and considered by George Burges, A. M., 12mo., pp. 394.

This is the latest issue of Harper's Classical Library, which is designed to furnish a literal prose version of the principal ancient classics; a work that cannot but be acceptable both to the student and general reader.

The Spanish Conquests in America—vols., 8vo. By Arthur Helps, 18[illegible]

The discoveries and settlements affected by the "great Spanish Nation are related chronologically, from the day when "land, land," was sung before the mast of the Pinta, to the final conquest of Mexico. To us, it no small satisfaction to be able, these volumes enable us, to go back the early annals and trace the progress of colonization and conquest in a region of country now assuming importance. To understand the people and institutions existing in Central and South America, it is necessary to know what they have been and what influences have been at work. The problem of their regeneration requires this. The author is after a particular thing in this—not appearing on the face of the book. Assuming that the old slavery was military, the fruit of war, and shattered by war, and died with the Roman Empire, his theory is that the present system of domestic servitude is commercial, and sprung out of the discovery of the Western Coast of Africa, and the New World—events of the latter part of the fifteenth century. He therefore begins with Portuguese explorations along the Gold and Guinea coast down to Good Hope Cape. Commerce in negroes begins—but there is no room need in Europe. As Providence has it, America looms up, with mines to be worked and lands. Slavery is inaugurated by experiment on the Indians. In 1501, A. D., the first African importation is made. The trade grows with the system takes shape, under what auspices, influences, checks, etc., the author, who is anti in every respect purports to follow out minutely and commit to the historic page. The thread upon which the details of Spanish conquest are strung. Maps are given, illustrating island and and mainland as they came into being by discovery and settlement.

Annals of Southern Methodism, for the past year, 1855.—pp. 384.

By mail we have a copy. Dr. D. has gotten up what we expected, a resume or repository of denominational facts, feelings, sayings, writings and doings, projectings, discussings, electings, buildings, dyings, deathings, journeyings, paragraphings, conferrings, as leaves little to be desired in making up the current history of 1855. He has culled the best things out of the Advocates. It is a chronicle-post and sign-post. McGinnis has it for sale.

PLAN OF EPISCOPAL VISITATIONS FOR 18[illegible]

First District—Bishop Andrew.

Tennessee Conference, at Hunts[illegible] Ala., Oct. 15, 1856.
Holsten Conference, at Knoxville, [illegible] ber 29, 1856.
South Carolina Conference, York[illegible] November 19, 1856.
Georgia Conference, Americus, De[illegible] ber 3, 1856.
Florida Conference, Alligator, De[illegible] ber 17, 1856.

Second District—Bishop Early.

Western Virginia, Guyandotte, Sep[illegible] ber 4, 1856.
Kentucky Conferrnce, at Winche[illegible] Sept. 17, 1856.
Louisville Conference, at Elizabeth[illegible] October 1, 1856.
Memphis Conference, at Jackson, [illegible] ber 15, 1856.
North Carolina Conference, at Gr[illegible] boro', Nov. 12, 1856.
Virginia Conference, at Richmond, [illegible] 26, 1856.

Third District—Bishop Pierce.

Missouri Conference, at Louisiana, [illegible] tember 24, 1856.
St. Louis Conference, at Charles[illegible] Oct. 8, 1856.
Arkansas Conference, at Batesville, [illegible] 29, 1856.
Oucliittas Conference, at Princeton, [illegible] vember 12, 1856.
Mississippi Conference, at Kosci[illegible] Nov. 26, 1856.
Alabama Conference, at Tuskegee [illegible] cember 10, 1856.

Fourth District—Bishop Paine.

Kansas Conference, at Kickapoo, [illegible] ber 10, 1856.
Indian Mission, at Chickasaw Ag[illegible] Oct. 30.
East Texas Conference, at Paris, [illegible] 19, 1856.
Texas Conference, at Gonzales, [illegible] ber 10, 1856.

Fifth District—Bishop Kavanaugh.

Pacific Conference, at Gilroy, N[illegible] 12, 1856.
Louisiana Conference, at Waterp[illegible] Feb. 4, 1857.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Wanted.—A situation as Teacher, by a young man of considerable experience. He is prepared to teach Latin, Greek, and the higher Mathematics. Apply to Rev. J. C. Miller, President of Centenary College, or either of its Professors. my17-2t

MARRIAGES.

On the 10th inst., by the Rev. J. C. Keener, Mr. W. H. BAMERON, of this city to Miss COURTNEY M. NORTON, of Greenville, Jefferson Parish.

On the 1st inst., in Wynnton, by Rev. Dr. Lovick Pierce, HUGH B. DAWSON, Esq., of Columbus, Ga., to Miss ELIZABETH FLEWELLEN, daughter of the late Dr. A. H. Flewellen,

On the 17th ult., in Cuthbert, Ga., by Rev. J. L. King, Mr. A. J. LIGHTFOOT to Miss JANE M. BUCHANAN.

On the 22d ult., near Auburn, Ala., by Rev. Samuel Armstrong, Mr. ROBERT R. BARNETT, of Columbus, Ga., to Miss MARY E. ALFORD, of Augusta, Ga.

On the 22d ult., by Rev. E. J. Hamill, JAS. J. AMERCROMBIE, Esq., of Columbus, Ga., to Miss PARTHENIA E. ROSS, of Tallapoosa county, Ala.

On the 24th ult., in Muscogee county, by Rev. L. Pierce, Dr. FRANCIS A. BYARS to Miss ELIZABETH W. McMILLEN—both of Muscogee, Ga.

On the 24th ult., in Montgomery, Ala., by the Rev. T. W. Dorman, Mr. MILO BARRETT to Miss EUGENE C. BLUE, daughter of Neil Blue, of Montgomery.

On the 10th inst., at the residence of Rev. Wm. M. Jayne, in Rankin county, by Rev. C. K. Marshall, Miss LOUISA V., youngest daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Kemion, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., to W. G. RICHARDSON, Professor of Modern Languages in the University of Mississippi, at Oxford.

On the 22d ult., by Rev. C. K. Marshall, EDWARD L. BOWER, Esq., of Yazoo City, to Miss GEORGIANA WASHINGTON CARTER, daughter of Mrs. Mary B. Carter, of Warren county.

On the 8th inst., by Rev. H. Avery, WM. G. BOZEMAN to Miss ANNA J. SMITH, all of West Baton Rouge, La.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

LETTER FROM BISHOP KAVANAUGH.

NEVADA, Cal., April 18, 1856.

Rev. H. N. McTyeire—

My Dear Brother, I have purposed for some time past, to communicate a few items in regard to some of the provinces of Central America as opening fields for missionary enterprise, but have delayed to do so to the present time.

During my stay on the Isthmus I had conversations with the Rev. Messrs. Wheeler and Rowell. The former the Seamen's Chaplain at Aspinwall, and the latter at Panama. They concur in the sentiment that New Granada, as a missionary field, is white to the harvest. All religions are tolerated by the constitution of the country, and this toleration is sustained by public sentiment. Each of these brethren testify that they have sold thousands of copies of the Scriptures in the Spanish language, and that these are read with eagerness and interest.

The corruption of the Roman Catholic religion, and the profligacy of the priests is a matter of general dissatisfaction among the people. Any judicious minister of the gospel, who can preach in the Spanish language, would have a wide and most inviting field for usefulness opened before him in New Granada. There is too, a docility and tameness of spirit among the natives that makes them accessible to a missionary of the cross. I would rejoice to see this field appropriately filled.

In Carthagenia, a very liberal and tolerant spirit is obtaining ground, which is shown by the fact that the Rev. Ramon Montsalvage a converted Spaniard, preached for a few Sabbaths in Spanish to large and attentive audiences, who have so far encouraged him that he has gone to the United States to collect funds to build a Church edifice.

Without naming particular points, several of which the Rev. Mr. Rowell enumerated to me, the sentiment of religious toleration is not only a growing sentiment in the various provinces of Central America, but also in South America. In the legislative bodies at various points, attempts have been made to establish religious toleration; but as yet without success. The aspects of the subject, however, are so encouraging that the friends of the cause will persevere with the confidence of final success.

That, in God's Providence, Protestant ministers will soon be called for in these various sections of the country, is so certain, that young ministers who may feel their minds inclined to this part of the Lord's moral vineyard, should at once devote themselves to the study of the Spanish language, which I learn from many is a matter of easy acquisition.

CALIFORNIA.—Since writing to you last, I have been traveling pretty extensively in this very interesting country, going to some points where we have churches, and to others where we have none, and am striving to gather such facts as will entitle me to a clear and satisfactory opinion as to the true state and prospects of the church, before I shall commit myself to any position in regard to it.

The country has been lately greatly refreshed by copious and much-needed rains, important alike to the farming grazing, and mining interests of the country, all of which are now very promising.

This is an exceedingly sublime country. The mountains, valleys, forest, and vegetable productions are all out of the ordinary kind, and are ever inducing surprise and pleasure; but one of the most captivating peculiarities of this country is its climate—the most agreeable I ever realized in my life. It is peculiarly bracing, and the most refreshing country to sleep in, that ever revived a wearied frame.

Mrs. K. and myself have had excellent health since our arrival in the country, and particularly since being revived from the lassitude induced by a tropical climate.

As ever, truly Yours,

H. H. KAVANAUGH.

The Methodists in France.

This is not the first time, says the Paris Debats, that we have had to speak of the regretable position in which members of the Evangeligal Protestant creed known by the name of Methodists, are placed in several departments of France. The common law interdicts their holding any meetings without authorization; and that authorization is frequently refused, and the tribunals before which the matter is brought can only apply the law as it stands. A fresh case of this kind has just been brought to our notice. In consequence of a meeting held at Valleraugue, in the Gard, the preacher, M. Gallienne, and an inhabitant who had lent his house for the occasion, were summoned before the cival tribunal of Vigan.—The accused persons were defended with much zeal and talent by M. Raisin, and the preacher also made some remarks which could not but acquire for him the sympathies of the tribunal.—"We are compelled," said M. Gallienne, "to choose between a violation of the laws of the country and a violation of the most sacred laws of our conscience." The tribunal, however, had no alternative, and could only apply the law, which it did, admitting, however, extenuating circumstances, and the accused were each condemned to 50f fine and costs. We cannot say anything against the decision of the tribunal; all that we can do is to unite warmly with those who call for a modification of the law.

Studying Latin.

The New Era relates a story of a young farmer whose son had for a long time been ostensibly studying Latin in a popular academy:

The farmer not being perfectly satisfied with the course and conduct of the young hopeful, recalled him from school, and placing him by the side of a cart, one day, thus addressed him:

"Now, Joseph, here is a fork, and there is a heap of manure and a cart; what do you call them in Latin?"

"Forkibus, cartibus, at manuribus," said Joseph.

"Well, now," said the old man, "if you don't take that forkibus, pretty quickibus, and pitch that manuribus, into that cartibus, I'll break your lazy backibus."

Joseph went to workibus forthwithibus.

This very classical anecdote reminds us of one told concerning old Matthew Thornton, whose name is numbered among those on our declaration of independence.

Riding one day in a stage coach, wherein were a number of sophomoric young pedants, he got wearied by their school-boy quotations of Greek and Latin, as well as somewhat offended by their impertinence. Taking advantage of a lull in conversation, the old gentleman requested them to translate for him the following lines from Ovid:

> "In pix carix,
> In okeanum is;
> In mal, cisar,
> In clayvan ar."

It is needless to remark that their efforts at solution were all failures; whereupon, the generous old gentleman turned himself into a translator, as follows:

> "In pine, tar is,
> In bark, none is;
> In mule, sea ass,
> In clay, nose are."

The custom of "treating" was not then common, or they might have been justified in enquiring whether he was dry.

BERANGER, (says the London Athaenum) is taking revenge for the slights put on his literary brethren, and on literature itself, by the present rulers of France. His sarcasms, it is true, are not printed in France; but they circulate in copies by thousands and thousands, and are chanted in cafes and workshops in spite of the police. Here is the old singer's epigram on the Imperial Prince:

> Il est Hollandais par son pere,
> Il est Ecossais par sa grand'mere,
> Il est Anglais par alliance,
> Il est Espagnol par naissance;
> Quelle malheureuse chance,
> Qu'il ne manque à l'enfant de France,
> Que d'être tant soit peu Francais!

French compositors, who have lost their living by the system of suppression, are finding, we are told, a new resource in copying these Beranger verses, and other clandestine productions of the same class.

The sense of the above lines of Beranger is not far from the following:

> By his papa he is Dutch,
> By his grandma he is Scotch,
> By alliance he is English,
> By his mamma he is Spanish,
> What a most unlucky chance
> That this darling babe of France,
> Wanting of nought else a pinch,
> Should'nt have a bit of French!

Carlyle says, "Make yourself an honest man, and then you may be sure there is one rascal less in the world."

☞ A learned writer, Dendy, says: "Dryden, to ensure his brilliant visions of poesy, ate raw flesh; and Mrs. Radcliffe adopted the same plan. Green tea and coffee if we do sleep, induce dreaming. Baptista Potta, for procuring quiet rest and pleasing dreams, swallowed horse congee after supper: indigestion, and that condition which is termed a weak or irritable stomach, constitute a most fruitful source of visions. The immediate or direct influence of repletion in totally altering the sensations and the disposition in waking moments, is a proof of its power to derange the circulation of the brain and the mental faculties in sleep. People who are troubled with indigestion, may surely get relief from Hoofland's German Bitters," sold exclusively in this country by Dr. C. M. Jackson, 120 Arch street, Philadelphia, and by his agents. See advertisement. my17 1m

☞ Cholera being the disease above all others most dreaded, it will be well for all to bear in mind the as a preventive. Dr. J. HOSTETTER'S celebrated Stomach Bitters stand at the head, and therefore all should keep a supply at hand during this warm weather. Its effect upon the Stomach when disorganized by diet, and its vivifying influence upon the system, is truly astonishing, and cannot be described, but felt when used as per direction on the bottle. Further comment upon their worth be superfluous, as they are known far and wide, and for sale by dealers generally all over the United States. Sold wholesale by E. J. Hart & Co., 79 Tchoupitoulas street; Alexander Norton & Co., 2 Poydras street. —my17 1t

☞ A Masterpiece Outdone.—We have lately supposed that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was the Ultima Thule in its line, and that nothing had been or would be invented which could at all surpass it in the fine points of excellence as a medicine. But, we are confidently assured by those competent to judge on the subject, that Ayer's new Pill Maxwell is high medical artistry even than the widely celebrated embodiment of his skill. He has succeeded in making them not only pleasant to take, but powerful to cure the large class of complaints which require a purgative remedy. Lancaster Argus, Ky.

They are for sale by J. WRIGHT & CO., and all dry druggists. a17 3m

---

Nicaragua---Important Debate.

We have heretofore alluded to the debate which took place in the United States Senate, on the 1st instant, upon Senator Weller's resolution, calling upon the President for full information in regard to Central American affairs. Since, a full account of the debate has reached us, in the columns of the Washington Globe, of the 2d instant. We copy the important portions of the discussion:

Nicaraguan Affairs.

Mr. Weller—I ask leave to submit the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to communicate to the Senate copies of all correspondence between this Government and our Minister at Nicaragua not heretofore communicated."

I desire to remark, Mr. President, that I am in receipt of many letters from persons residing on the Pacific coast who are anxious to know whether I have been sustaining the Administration in the policy adopted in regard to the Nicaraguan Government. I speak of that Government which is now in existence. I desire to take this occasion, here in my place, to say that I have no information on this subject other than that which is published in the newspapers of the day; and upon the facts thus presented, I have no hesitation in saying that I do not approve of the course which has been pursued. If, when Colonel French came here and applied for the recognition of the new Government, there was proof to sustain the charges alleged against him in the public press, impeaching his integrity as a man, the Administration was justifiable in rejecting him; but it ought to have been placed on personal grounds. Our Minister to Nicaragua should have been instructed at once to say to that Government, "If you will send some other person to whom there were no personal objections he will be received." Whether this has been done or not I do not know; but I presume it has not.

Our usual practice has been, so soon as any of the South or Central American States have revolutionized and given evidence of their stability or of their power and capacity to maintain the new Government which they have thus constituted, to recognize them. I need not say that this course is peculiarly proper in regard to Central America. These States are often convulsed by civil wars; and revolution succeeds revolution in such rapid succession, that any other course would be found impracticable. The route from here to our Pacific possessions was through Central America, and this alone would compel us to suspend communication with that coast, or recognize at once the existing Government. We have now to pass through Nicaragua or Panama to reach the State from whence I come. Although it might be against the true interests of this Government to acquire or annex Central America at present, yet we are interested, and deeply interested, in having a stable and fixed government on that part of the continent. You will have no stability in any of the Central American States until you have infused a large amount of North American blood into their veins. The true policy, then, would have been to encourage rather than discourage emigration to Nicaragua. I do not ask that your neutrality laws or treaties should be violated. These I would have at all times maintained in good faith; but I do not approve the means which have been adopted to prevent our countrymen from emigrating to that country. The proceedings in New York to arrest persons going to San Juan del Norte were, in my opinion, not only unnecessary, but wholly unjustifiable—proceedings which neither existing laws, public treaties, nor good faith required, and which sound policy forbids. However devoted I may be to the principles which have generally governed the present Administration, it is due to my own honor to declare that these acts to which I have alluded do not receive my sanction.

A state of war is now existing between Costa Rica and Nicaragua. The army of the former has invaded the territory of the latter, although no war has been declared. Because North Americans aided in bringing the present Government into power, and because an American is at the head of the army, and some of his countrymen enlisted under his banner, Costa Rica only declares war against them. The people of Nicaragua are now united, and their dissensions no longer exist. They have a president, a native of their own country, selected by them, at the head of the Government. Some of these North Americans are now in her army, and General Walker is the Commander-in-Chief. Is Costa Rica to proscribe Americans from entering into the service of other States? Is she to dictate the birth-place of the man who shall be placed at the head of her army? I have in my hands a decree, or proclamation, issued by the General commanding the invading force from Costa Rica, to which I invite the attention of the Senate:

> JOHN R. MORA, President of the Republic of Costa Rica, General in Chief of the Army of Nicaragua.
>
> All the filibusters taken with arms in hand, will be subject to all the rigor of the law, which is death; but all the filibusters who have not used their arms against this Republic, and give up, out of free will, their arms and persons in officers of the Costa Rica army, shall be pardoned. JOHN R. MORA.
>
> RAFAEL S. ESCALANTE,
> Sub Secretary of Department of War.

I passed through that country for the third time in 1854; a civil war was then raging. A part of the Nicaraguans, by many supposed to be a majority, were arrayed against the existing government. The "Democratic party," so called, avowed liberal principles, and wanted a government similar in its constitution and laws to ours. Proclamations, signed by their leader, were posted along San Juan river and on Virgin Bay, inviting North Americans to join his standard. Under these invitations, General Walker and others, residing on the Pacific, went there and ventured their destinies with the revolutionary party. They succeeded. The old government was destroyed and a new and far more liberal one established. The Government at once offered large grants of lands, etc., to induce our people to emigrate. Costa Rica now wages a war of extermination against these countrymen of ours. Her chief declares they shall be shot if they are taken prisoners, and some of them have already been executed. Are we to stand still and see our people denied the rights of prisoners of war, and shot down by a brutal soldiery? Is not this such a violation of the law of nations as to demand immediate redress?

I intimated sometime since that on a suitable occasion I would reply to the charges made in the Senate against General Walker. The protracted illness of the Senator from Delaware (Mr. Clayton) has prevented me from doing so; and I only propose now to say a few words by way of prefacing a letter received this morning. It is from General Walker. It presents some facts and some points which ought to attract the attention of the Senate. But, you must allow me to say before I read, that there is no man whose character has been more shamefully misrepresented in this country than General Walker. I have known him for several years on the Pacific coast, as a quiet, unobtrusive, and intelligent gentleman of uncommon energy and decided character. His integrity—his honor was never impeached in any quarter. After being invited, he went to Nicaragua, not as a "freebooter;" he did not go there for plunder. He neither coveted their lands nor their money, for no one has less of the sordid feeling than General Walker. He was actuated by high and honorable ambition—a patriotic desire to aid in establishing free institutions in Nicaragua, and ultimately confederate, in a peaceable manner, the Central American States into one great republic. This was his ambition—this the object which he sought to accomplish. Many gentlemen of the highest character, residing on the Pacific, actuated by the same motives, rallied under his banner. It is a great mistake to suppose that these men are desperadoes and freebooters!

But, sir, I will read the letter—

GRANADA, April 15, 1856.

HON. JOHN B. WELLER, U. S. Senate:

My Dear Sir—By the last papers from New York I learn that when I was denounced in the Senate for the conduct which Nicaragua has pursued towards the Transit Company, you were so generous as to undertake to defend me from the aspersions of men utterly ignorant of my character. In consequence of this, I take the liberty of writing some facts in relation to affairs here, and these facts will, I think, prove not unimportant to the Government of the United States.

You have, doubtless, learned from the newspapers, how pacific was the policy Nicaragua proposed to pursue towards the other States of Central America. Notwithstanding all our overtures of peace, the neighboring Government showed themselves, if not positively, at least negatively hostile to the actual administration of Nicaragua. It was constantly asserted, not only here, but throughout Central America, that the states were stimulated to this conduct by Englishmen and French agents. But it was not until the correspondence of the Consul General of Costa Rica in London was intercepted by me, a few weeks ago, that positive evidence was afforded of this active sympathy the British Government manifests for those who oppose the Americans in Nicaragua. The correspondence shows that England is furnishing arms to our enemies, and at the same time, the whole British West India squadron is sent to San Juan del Norte, in order that the moral weight of the English Government may be thrown into the scale against our Republic.

I do not know how these facts may appear to the people of the United States, but to me they seem directly at variance with American principles and American feelings. These facts with the general truth, and their significance is apparent to the most superficial observer. There are other circumstances connected with the present war waging in this State and in Costa Rica which may require interpretation in order to make their importance felt.

The Government of Costa Rica has never yet declared war against the Government of Nicaragua; yet it has invaded our territories and has murdered American citizens who have never forfeited the protection of the United States Government. This has been done under cover of a decree issued by the President of Costa Rica declaring war against the Americans in the service of Nicaragua. That decree was against the forces in the service of Nicaragua and not against Nicaragua herself as to deny in the most positive and offensive manner the right of Americans to engage in the service of a foreign State. Not only has this declaration of war been made in this offensive and unheard of manner, but another decree has been published declaring all the American prisoners of war taken by Costa Rican forces to be shot. This is to deny to Americans engaged in a foreign service the common rights to which soldiers are entitled by the laws of war. Such decrees as those I have mentioned not only throw Costa Rica, as a nation, at the mercy of all civilized nations, but they directly affect the honor and dignity of the United States.

They (the Costa Ricans) attempt to control the American people and keep them within a limit which the American Government itself has never prescribed. Costa Ricans say Americans shall not emigrate to Nicaragua and take arms in her service. It remains to be seen whether she can sustain herself in so singular a position. In such a war they are certain of success, and there can be but one result. They may destroy my single force—a circumstance I deem almost impossible—but they will every American now in Nicaragua, but the end is sure and not all the force of Spanish America can prevent the fruit from coming to maturity. The more savage the nature of the war they wage against us, the more certain the result, the more terrible the consequences. I may not live to see the end, but I feel that my country men will not permit the result to be doubtful. I know that the honor and the interests of the great country which, despite of the foreign service I am engaged in, I still love in full pity, are involved in the present struggle. That honor must be preserved inviolate and those interests must be jealously maintained.

So far, we have had great moral odds against us. The slow element to which we are naturally loyal for aid and comfort has lagged in its path coldness and disdain. There has been no encouragement to enlist or to aid in "kind speed." Nothing but my own sense of the justice of the cause we are engaged in and of its importance to the country of our birth has enabled us to struggle so far as we have done. We may perish in the work we have undertaken, and our cause may be for a time lost if we fall, we feel it is in the path of honor. And what is life or what is success in comparison with the consciousness of having performed a duty, and of having co-operated, no matter how slightly, in the cause of improvement and progress? I beg, sir, however, to leave facts, and therefore will conclude.

I remain, with high regard, your obedient servant,

WM. WALKER.

Mr. Cass. What is the date of that letter?

Mr. Weller. April 15th, the day before the battle. So you will perceive the British Government has given orders to furnish the Costa Ricans with arms to expel North Americans from Nicaragua! And the Clayton and Bulwer treaty is still in force! —

Mr. President, the Government of Nicaragua ought to have been recognized long since. The weight of argument against the party now in power. They have for six months past given satisfactory evidence of their ability to maintain a government. If our countrymen desire to settle their destinies with Nicaragua, let them go without being dogged around your wharves by police officers. These are my opinions and I frankly avow them.

Let me say before I dismiss this subject, that the interference of the British Government in this contest may induce Guatemala and San Salvador to form an alliance with Costa Rica, and assist in the effort which is now being made to drive North Americans from Nicaragua; but if General Walker can obtain sufficient supplies for his army in the way of food and clothing, the whole Spanish race in Central America cannot expel him. Notwithstanding they are openly provided and worse paid, no troops ever had more confidence in their leader, and in their cause. Although the odds are against him, I still think he will be successful. If he fails, it will be because of the aid and comfort given to his enemies by British agents and emissaries.

We have difficulties, too, on the other route. Thirty Americans have been slaughtered at Panama. As the very latest feeling has always existed between the Government of New Granada and the United States, I have no doubt the full power of that Government will be immediately used for the purpose of redressing these injuries. And I have a right to believe that those in power here will see that that Government makes ample reparation for the outrages which have been committed. It was one of those violent outbreaks which occasionally happen when strangers and people of different nations and tongues are thrown together. The local authorities were too weak to control the movements of the excited populace. Steps will be taken, as I am assured, on the part of this Government, to prevent a recurrence of such outrages. Reparation, for properly destroyed must be made, and the amplest security given for the future. The line of communication which has thus been interrupted through Panama will soon recover from the shock it has sustained. As this is the route over which our mails are transported, I expect to see prompt action on the part of our Government. Besides, we carry over this Isthmus some $1,500,000 of gold dust every month, the non-arrival of which in New York at the proper time would inflict great loss upon our banks and merchants. I hope Senators will see in our present position the necessity for constructing at once a safe and convenient road through our own territories. But I will not trespass further upon the courtesy of the Senate.

Mr. Seward. I suppose it is the desire of the honorable Senator to have the resolution considered now.

[Senator Seward here explained, that a similar resolution introduced by him three or four weeks before, and adopted by the Senate, had not been honored with a motive from the President. Senator Weller interrupted him, as follows:]

Mr. Weller. The Senator will allow me to interrupt him. I supposed that resolution had been answered.

Mr. Seward. No, sir.

Mr. Weller. I knew that the resolution was adopted several weeks since, and therefore I have inserted in this resolution the words, "not heretofore communicated."

Mr. Seward. It has not been answered, and the reason is, undoubtedly, as I have stated. There is no impropriety, however, in our passing this resolution; and I rose chiefly for the purpose of giving the information which I have already communicated to the Senate, and those to bring the former requisition to their remembrance, to the end that it might be understood that the President will now receive this as an earnest call for an answer to the previous resolution.

[Senator Seward continued his remarks at length, and evinced a disposition to act fairly in the premises. This was unexpected from such a source. But, as we believe in giving the devil his due, we say this much freely. Senator Douglas then entered upon the discussion:]

Mr. Douglas. Mr. President, I have refrained, during the whole session, from uttering a word on the Nicaraguan or Central American question. I take it for granted that no member of the Senate will presume that this silence has arisen from any want of interest in the events which were transpiring in those countries. My opinions on the Clayton and Bulwer treaty were stated when it was ratified by the Senate, and subsequently, when its provisions became the subject of discussion in open Senate. I do not deem it necessary, on this occasion, to repeat the objections which I then urged to the provisions and terms of the treaty. It is sufficient to say, that subsequent events have in no wise diminished those objections. It has now become obvious to every one, that with the construction which the British Government has placed on the treaty, and the line of policy which she is pursuing under it—or rather perversion of its provisions as understood by a majority of the Senate at the time of its ratification—all American interests in Central America are to be sacrificed and destroyed.

I think the time has come when the Government must consider seriously how much longer we can allow that treaty to remain a compact between the two countries, and permit the English government to deny to us all its benefits, while refusing to comply with its stipulations. That it has been violated in regard to the Ruatan and the Bay Islands—that it is now being violated every day by a substantial blockade of the San Juan river and the whole coast, are facts too well known to the country and to the world, to require proof.

It has, therefore, become a great question, how much longer we shall submit to these invasions of our rights in violation of solemn treaty stipulations. Our government has been actuated by a spirit of forbearance and moderation which has not been appreciated, much less reciprocated, by the British Ministry. Our administration has observed a scrupulous regard for the obligations of treaties and of the laws of nations, and for the rights of all countries arising under either. If the administration has erred at all in connection with the Central American question, the error will be found to consist in allowing its scrupulous regard for good faith and international comity to carry it beyond the point required by the laws of nations, and our own neutrality laws, in restraining our citizens from emigrating to Central America, under the inducements from the existing government of Nicaragua. The error, if may has been committed, has been on the side of peace, moderation, and international comity.

I have not chosen to go into the discussion of the question, because I knew that a foreign policy could not be originated or directed in the Senate, nor in Congress. Our foreign relations must be managed by the executive branch of the Government. We cannot know all the facts that are known to the State Department bearing upon the question; we cannot fully appreciate the embarrassments that surround it. I have had faith that our administration would manage this subject prudently and wisely, and that the results would show that American interests and American rights had not been yielded or sacrificed. I have that faith yet; but while this is the case, I cannot acquiesce in the condemnations which I have heard in the Senate upon the existing Government in Nicaragua. I hold that that Government is as legitimate as any which ever existed in Central America. I think it is the firmest, the most stable Government that has ever existed there since the Spanish yoke was thrown off, and the Colonies became independent States. I believe that justice is more impartially administered, that the rights of men and the rights of property are more carefully protected and guarded under the existing Government than under any which has ever prevailed in Central America.

Nor is it any objection with me that an American by birth, whose name indicates his origin, is in command of the Nicaraguan army. I suppose that the right of expatriation is as sacred and conclusive in the United States as it is in Europe. I suppose that Nicaragua has as much right to become an asylum for emigrants from the United States as our country has to become the asylum for emigrants from Europe. I suppose that Nicaragua had as much right to naturalize General Walker as we had to naturalize General Shields. Then, I suppose, that she had as much right to intrust him with the command of an army as we had to intrust General Shields with a command in the Mexican war, or to intrust the care of our armies to Lafayette, Steuben, De Kalb, and that host of liberty-loving heroes who fought so gallantly for us in the revolutionary war. It is no objection to me, therefore, that a man of American birth is in command of the Nicaraguan army. They have a right to intrust that command to him if they choose to do so.

I go further. It is no objection with me that they send a man of American birth here to represent the nation, if he be a man of suitable character and qualifications. Whether it is wise for them to do it is another question. I am not prepared to deny that they have as much right to send a man of American birth here to represent them, as we have to send a man of European birth to Spain, to Naples, to Holland, or to any other European country, to represent the United States. Hence I am not prepared to admit that the fact that there are Americans connected with that Government, and in its employ, changes the nature of the question, or presents it in any different light than that in which it should be regarded if the government were entirely controlled, and all the offices filled, by the natives of the country. I do not subscribe to the doctrine that birth-place is necessarily a disqualification for office, either here or in Central America. We must deal with the existing government of Nicaragua as the legitimate government of the country established by the people themselves. If they choose to avail themselves of the services of men of American birth to administer that government, it is a matter for themselves to determine, and for no one else to interfere with.

I, sir, would not be willing to do any act that would impair our neutral position as a nation to aid in sustaining the government with which General Walker is connected. I would violate no treaty stipulation; I would not violate the laws of nations. I would do no act which could be considered as an infringement of our good faith towards all nations. Yet we cannot conceal the fact that we have great interests which should lead us to sympathize deeply with the movement now going on in Central America. Our interests are involved to a great extent in that movement, and would be promoted by its success. I am not prepared, therefore, to do any act, or express any opinion, calculated to discourage or weaken the efforts of those who are striving to consolidate and perpetuate a system of government similar to our own, in Central America. My sympathies are with that government which has so many Americans connected with it, and administering its functions. I believe that the cause of progress, of humanity, of civilization, will be promoted by the extension of that American influence. Whether it will ever lead to a connection with this country, let time develop. If the time shall ever arrive when they become thoroughly Americanized, when they come to understand the principles of our Constitution, and of our system of government, and can administer one in conformity with those principles, the question would arise at that time whether their interests and our interests required annexation. I am willing to adjourn the decision of that question until the period when it shall arrive.

I was opposed to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty; among other reasons, because it made a pledge that we never would annex any of the States of Central America to the United States, or exercise jurisdiction over them. I was not willing to tie our hands in the future; I was not willing to make treaty stipulations that we would not do that which our interest, our honor, and our safety, might compel us to do in the future. I thought that our children would be as capable of deciding that question for themselves as we are now. I did not wish a treaty stipulation pledging our faith in regard to a point, when we might be compelled, in the vindication of our rights, and interests, and honor, to violate that treaty. That was one of my objections to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

I do not propose now to take any step for the purpose of annexing that country to us; nor do I propose to make hot-beds in which a premature growth may be forced into existence. I propose that we shall adhere strictly to our treaty stipulations until we get rid of them, and that we shall require Great Britain to comply on her part. I propose, furthermore, that we shall enforce our neutrality laws as they read and as they mean; but I would not go a hair's breadth beyond the line of duty and of good faith, to check a movement in which civilization and humanity, and especially American interests, have so deep a stake.

I have felt called upon to make these remarks in consequence of the elaborate discussion which has taken place on this question during the present session, and my entire silence throughout in regard to it. I am not prepared to say that I think it wise to adopt the resolution of the Senator from California at this time.

Mr. Weller. I desire to say to the Senator that I took it for granted that the resolution which was passed some two or three weeks ago had been responded to by the President. I certainly should not have offered this resolution this morning if I had known this fact, that the former one had not been answered. With the belief that it had been responded to, I framed this resolution so as to call for "all correspondence not heretofore communicated," so as not to make it necessary to send copies of that which I supposed we had received two weeks ago.

I do not desire to occupy the position which the Senator from New York assigned me, of endeavoring to hasten action on the part of the President; and I take it for granted that the reason why we have received no response from him is a good one—that it was against the public interest at that time to send in this correspondence—that our negotiations with that government were of such a character as would prevent a compliance with the resolution at that time. If that reason existed then, I suppose it does yet. When the Senator from Illinois shall have concluded I propose to withdraw this resolution.

Mr. Douglas. I have only a word or two more to say. I think that the resolution heretofore adopted is a sufficient intimation to the Executive of the desire of the Senate to see the correspondence so soon as the public interest will allow its publication. I presume that every Senator is prepared to take it for granted that the executive branch of the Government will communicate it at the earliest moment when the public interests will permit it to be done. Intelligence from Central America of an exciting and important character appears in the newspapers of this morning. I doubt whether the mails have arrived here, but the telegraph has announced the news.

Mr. Weller. The mails reached here this morning.

Mr. Douglas. That may be. I think that the wiser course for us is not to show any undue excitement in regard to those affairs. If the intelligence contained in the newspapers be true, the British government is taking a position there which must command the serious attention of the Senate, of the government and of the whole country. It becomes a grave question—too important for us to act under sudden impulses. I trust that when we take our position, it will be taken calmly and maintained firmly, no matter what shall be the consequences.

I will not say now what my own opinions are as to the precise form of action; I choose to wait until we hear from the Executive, and learn what the correspondence is; give it a calm consideration first in the committee on foreign relations, and then be prepared to take a step and mark out a line of policy that shall carry no threats, but a fixed purpose never to yield from the incipient step that we shall take, not to cease until we carry it to its final consummation.

Mr. Seward. I hope the honorable Senator from California will not misunderstand me. I suppose he was absent when my resolution was adopted by the Senate, and was not aware that it had been passed.

Mr. Weller. I knew that it had been passed, but I supposed it was answered.

Mr. Seward. No, sir.

Mr. Butler. I understand that the purport of the resolution is to call for information that has not already been furnished. On more occasions than one I have been embarrassed by topics connected with our foreign relations being introduced into the debates of the Senate before we acquired information through the only responsible medium that I know in this country on such questions—the Executive. I have been in some measure blamed, by a portion of my constituents, who feel a great interest in this question, for not bringing it forward. Except, perhaps, Texas and the Gulf States, Georgia and South Carolina are more interested in this question than any other two States—they are the South Atlantic States.

But I now say here, that the issues of war and peace are the gravest issues that can be made by nations, and I no one of those who believe that they ought not to be made except upon the gravest consideration. I will never countenance the idea that we are to be involved in a war with any nation by the intermeddling of any military adventurer who may think proper to take a position.

Now, sir, what the relation may be between General Walker and the Nicaraguan Government, I know not. I have no doubt that he is a gallant man; but I will not go further; I should be trespassing on the very line of propriety which I indicated if I were to say another word. I hope the resolution will take its ordinary course without further debate.

Mr. Weller. I withdraw the resolution.

Louisiana Items.

The Franklin Journal, of the 5th, says:

The gloomy prospects of the coming crop, and the inclemency of the weather for the past week, form sad subjects for comment in every circle. With the exception of the late intelligence from Central America, we have had nothing to excite us. There is a perfect calm in the political world.

The Richmond Advocate, of the 2d, remarks:

HEAVY RAINS.—During the past week a great quantity of rain has fallen throughout our parish. On Saturday night the heavy fall was accompanied by high wind, which did much damage by the blowing down of fences, trees, etc.; and on Tuesday night a heavy shower of hail preceded one of the hardest rains we have ever seen fall, which continued during the next day.

The Concordia Intelligencer, of the 9th, says:

THE CROPS.—The plenteous showers, soaking the soil, have destroyed the chintz bug that was injuring the corn, and have been beneficial to both corn and cotton. They have made the weeds and grass flourish, too, like a green bay tree, and the race will soon be between grass and cotton for mastery.

The Monroe Register, of the 3d, has the following:

SEVERE STORM.—Last Tuesday night we were visited by a severe and, in some instances, quite destructive storm. It rained incessantly and in perfect torrents during the night, and the wind was as severe a one as we ever witnessed in Ouachita blowing down trees, sheds, fences, etc., in its mad career. We heard it stated that about eighty-five miles below us the wind blew a perfect tornado—tearing down dwellings, negro cabins, gin houses, and leveling the forest for miles in extent in every direction. It is said the damage done is almost incalculable. Fortunately, however, we have heard of no loss of life.

Our river is again rising. The recent heavy rains experienced in this section will doubtless produce a sufficient rise to afford uninterrupted navigation up to Camden for a few weeks to come.

PRAYER UNANSWERED.—The Rev. Mr. Kilpin passed a very profane man, and having failed to rebuke him, he awaited him in the morning at the same place. When he approached, Mr. Kilpin said, "Good morning, my friend; you are the person I have been waiting for." "Oh, sir," said the man, "you are mistaken, I think." "I do not know you; but I saw you last night when you were going home from work, and I have been waiting some time to see you." "Oh, sir, you are mistaken; it could not be me; I never saw you in my life that I know of." "Well, my friend," said Mr. Kilpin, "I heard you pray last night." "Sir, now I know that you are mistaken; I never prayed in all my life." "Oh," said Mr. Kilpin, "if God had answered your prayer last night, you had not been seen here this morning. I heard you pray that God would thrust your eyes and damn your soul." The man turned pale and trembling, said, "Oh, sir, do you call that prayer? I did, I did." "Well, then, my errand this morning is to request you to pray as fervently for your salvation as you have done for damnation; and, may God in mercy hear your prayer." The man from that time became an attendant on Mr. Kilpin's ministry.

Magnetic Telegraph.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, May 12.—The United States Mail Steamship Atlantic, Capt. West, from Liverpool on the afternoon of April 30th, arrived at this port this morning. Her advices are four days later than those by the America.

Cotton.

LIVERPOOL, April 30.—Some circulars quote prices "easier, but not quotably lower;" while others report a decline of ¼d on lower qualities.

Richardson, Spence & Co. quote Orleans Middling 6 5-16d; Uplands Middling 5¾d.

The sales of four days preceding the departure of the steamer amounted to 20,000 bales, of which only 1,000 bales were taken on speculation, and 3,500 for export.

Breadstuffs.

Breadstuffs show a slight advance generally. Flour has advanced from 6d to 1s. Wheat is from 1d to 2d. higher.

Corn is firm, with an upward tendency. Some circulars quote an advance of 6d.

The business in breadstuffs had been moderate.

The money market was more stringent; a new loan being anticipated. Consols were quoted at 92¼ to 92¾.

The Asia arrived out at Liverpool on the night of the 28th.

The Treaty of Peace had been published officially.

ADDITIONAL BY THE ATLANTIC.

LIVERPOOL, April 30.—Cotton is quiet with a downward tendency.

The principal feature of the week's news is the official publication of the Treaty of Peace with three appended conventions.

The first has reference to the passage of the Dardanelles.

The second arranges the details relative to the naval force to be kept in the Black Sea.

The third declares that Aland Island shall not be fortified.

There is also appended an important declaration of maritime law, abolishing privateering, and settling that a neutral flag shall protect all cargoes except contraband, and that neutral goods under an enemy's flag are exempt from capture.

The details of the Treaty are the same as received per America.

The raising articles, five and six, relate to the general amnesty, and exchange of prisoners.

Articles seven and eight admit Turkey into the European political system and secure European arbitration in case of a dispute with her. Peace has accordingly been formally proclaimed.

Important meetings of the different political parties in Parliament presage trouble to Palmerston.

The Parliamentary Blue Book, containing all the documents relative to Central American affairs has been published.

A GREAT RISE IN THE UPPER RIVERS.

CINCINNATI, May 8.—The river here is out of its banks already, and is still rising fast.

The Northern and Western rivers are all overflowing, and it seems the end is not yet.

New York Cotton Market.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Cotton is ⅛c

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Panama Troubles.—Official Correspondence.—Pierce still a Candidate.—Negotiation with Spain.—Lord Warrenbe.

WASHINGTON, May 3.

The President sent a message to Congress to-day, enclosing the correspondence between the Postmaster General and the Panama Railroad Company, relative to the compensation for carrying the mails—the latter claiming a greater amount than heretofore allowed. The Department offered 14 cents per pound, but the Company insist on being allowed 21 cents, which for the year ending March last, would amount to nearly $100,000.

The Postmaster General says he unwillingly yields to the unjust and unfounded demands of the Company, rather than risk the consequences which might follow a refusal to accede to the exaction—the Company having threatened to refuse transportation of the mails, and that route, at present, being the only direct and expeditious channel of communication—the Nicaragua line having been withdrawn.

The President endorses the recommendation of the Postmaster that the latter be authorized to contract with the Panama Railroad Company for the convey ance of mails across the Isthmus, at a price not exceeding $350,000 per annum.—Also for a semi-monthly conveyance of the mails from New York and New Orleans to San Francisco via Nicaragua, alternately, at regular intervals, with the present line via Panama, at a sum not to exceed $300,000 per annum.

An alleged well founded rumor published in the Washington Sentinel, this morning, that President Pierce will decline the use of his name at the Cincinnati Convention, is entirely destitute of foundation.

A communication from the State Department to the House of Representatives, in reply to a resolution calling for information, states that the Georgiana and Susan Loud cases, with others, for indemnity from Spain, are still subjects of negotiation.

The total number of land warrants issued under the law of March, 1855, are 227,000; requiring upwards of 15,000,000 acres. The number of claims received are 243,700. Upwards of 14,000 warrants, covering 1,700,000 acres, were issued in April.

[New York Express, 5th.

THE HON. EDWARD EVERETT.—This distinguished scholar was born in Dorchester, near Boston, in 1794, entered Harvard College at the age of thirteen, and graduated with distinguished credit in 1811, when 17; when only 16 he was appointed Latin tutor at Harvard, and Greek tutor at 21; commenced preaching in the Unitarian church at 19, and before he was of age published an admirable defence of christianity. Displaying an extensive acquaintance with biblical literature. In 1815, he traveled in Europe, and made the acquaintance of Scott, Byron, Jeffry, Campbell, McIntosh, Romilly, Davy and other distinguished literary and political characters. From 1820 to 1824 he was editor of the North American Review, to which journal he contributed from time to time no less than 110 articles. From 1824 to 1834 he was member of the House of Representatives at Washington. From 1835 to 1849 he was four times elected Governor of Massachusetts, and needed only one vote to secure a 5th election. From 1841 to 1846 he was a Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of St. James. From 1846 to 1849 he was President of Harvard College On the decease of Daniel Webster, Mr. Everett was appointed Secretary of State of the United States, in and 1853 he succeeded John Davis as a national Senator for Massachusetts. The failure of his health obliged him to resign the seat in the national councils, and he has since been living in retirement at Boston, occupied in the preparation of a great work upon international law.

FROM KANSAS—St. Louis, May 5.—A letter from Westport, Kansas, says: "Hopes are entertained that Sheriff Jones will recover."

Col. Sumner arrived at Lawrence on the 25th ult. with his whole command. Governor Robinson charged the act of firing into the soldiers' tents on the pro-slavery party; but Col. S. denied this, and said if the Governor would leave the matter to him, he would soon settle it.

Springfellow demanded to appear on the behalf of Kansas before the Congressional Committee, either in person or by counsel, to introduce testimony and examine witness. Mr. Howard, chairman of the committee, refused the demand.

The Deputy Sheriff of Douglas county was having writs issued to arrest one hundred citizens of Lawrence, charged with the commission of crimes under the Territorial laws. The troops will remain at Lawrence until all the arrests are made and the parties are sent to Lecompte.

THE RESULTS FROM QUARANTINE.—The passengers from the Empire State, who were sent on shore at Quarantine, some seven days since, on account of small pox, have been thoroughly cleansed and purified of the infection, and were released from Quarantine and sent to Castle Garden yesterday morning. Aside from being properly cleansed, they were all well vaccinated, among other things. Days enough have elapsed since any of the disease has appeared among them, and the vaccination, to make it entirely safe for them to proceed to the West, whither most of them are bound. The Empire State was exceedingly unfortunate in the choice of her passengers. A crowd of persons more thoroughly infected from small-pox has not crossed port for many years. Out of 516 emigrants on board, over 60 were sick, and many of them have died of this disgusting disease—all of which was concealed by the pauper emigrant, who clandestinely smuggled himself on board, so as to escape the notice of the Port Physician at Liverpool. Most of those who escape the infection had never been vaccinated. Those who had been vaccinated, though long exposed, had in no case anything worse than a furred tongue, foul in the back, and depression of spirits—but never an eruption. [N. Y. Times, 7th.

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS AND THEIR CAUSES.—This is the title of a very interesting volume, just published in Boston. We learn from it that from 1840 to 1852 there were 4,476 individual casualties on the English roads, of which number 1,823 were killed, and 2,648 wounded. They are classed as follows:

	Killed.	Wounded.
Passengers	298	1794
Persons not connected with the road	315	84
Persons standing on the track	386	84
Engine drivers	73	94
Firemen	116	123
Conductors	126	100
Workmen and brakemen	117	68
Other employees	543	221

The passengers killed were in proportion to those ...ried as 1 to 2,300,000. The passengers wounded ... in proportion to those carried as 1 to 340,000. Among ... the causes of accidents there were 308 collisions, ... which 38 were caused by bad weather, 8 by ... of motive power, 34 by defects in the ma... or cars, and 238 by inattention ... on the part of the employees. Of the 308 collisions, 110 occurred at stations. It is remarked that fewer accidents happen to express than to other trains.

DEATH OF A DISTINGUISHED PHYSICIAN.—We regret to state that Dr. John C. Warren, one of the oldest as well as the ablest of our resident physicians, died yesterday morning at his residence in Park street. Dr. Warren, in the course of his long and useful career, acquired a renown in his profession rarely equalled in this country. As a surgeon and anatomist he stood in the front rank, and his death will be a deep loss to the medical fraternity, as well as the public at large. He died while sitting in his chair, of a disease of the digestive organs. His age was 77 years.

[Boston (Mass.) Chronicle, 5th.

A MORMON JOB.—A very painful event occurred in Taylor Co., Va., recently. On a Sabbath morning the youngest son of Mr. Boyd was taken sick; in the evening another was taken down in a similar manner; and on the next morning a little girl was taken like the others. They all died, and were laid in the same grave. On the day of the funeral two other children were taken ill and one died. Thus, in one week four were laid in the grave. Before the death of the last one, the fires which have been raging so extensively lately in Virginia broke out about two miles from his residence, and in one hour Mr. Boyd was stripped of all he possessed—house, barn, wheat, hay, oats and corn-cribs! The child was hastily removed, and when brought back there was not a place to lay him on to die. [N. Y. Mirror.

SYMPATHY FOR GENERAL WALKER.—A meeting was held last evening at the St. Charles Saloon in Broadway, the head-quarters of the filibusters, to make preliminary arrangements for a grand mass meeting of sympathy for General Walker, and of hostile demonstrations concerning the interference and secret influence of the British Government in the United States. Some fifty were present, of whom Alderman Clancy, of the Sixth Ward, was chosen Chairman, and Mr. Alexander Robinson, Secretary. After various speeches expressing the necessity of doing something, and that right early, it was finally agreed to hold a general mass meeting on Friday evening of the present week, at National Hall in Canal street. After appointment of a Committee of Arrangements, whose duty among other things was to provide speakers for the occasion, the meeting adjourned.

Shortly after adjournment it was announced that a telegraphic dispatch had been received from Senators Douglas and Weller, promising to speak at the mass meeting, should their engagements render it possible for them to leave Washington.

[New York Times, 7th.

MEDICAL.—The Medical Gazette for May, gives the following table of graduates for the Medical Colleges for 1856:

Jefferson Medical College	215
University of Pennsylvania	140
University of New York	90
University of Nashville	70
Medical College of South Carolina	68
Medical College of Georgia	65
University of Virginia	60
Louisville Medical College	60
College of Physicians and Surgeons	50
Transylvania Medical College	47
Pennsylvania Medical College	37
University of Maryland	36
Medical College of Alabama	30
Philadelphia College of Medicine	29
Vermont Medical College	28
Harvard Medical College	18
Medical College of Ohio	17
Dartmouth Medical College	15
Berkshire Medical College	13
Medical College of Savannah	13
Bowdoin Medical College	12
Baltimore College of Dental Surgery	12
Ohio College of Dental Surgery	10

The Prize of East Indian Empire.

Louis Napoleon has already prepared new work for his Crimean heroes, to keep them away from Paris and mischief. He is about to march them across the Egyptian battle grounds of his great uncle, with the same purpose, that of conquering Indian Empire—and augering from the greater success of the nephew in his war upon the Czar, he will meet with no Acre or Sydney Smith in his pathway to the East, which he designs to follow down the Eastern coast of Africa to Zanzibar, and thence to the opposite shores of the great island of Madagascar—an insular continent—stretching 1,040 miles in length, and averaging 400 in breadth, with a population of between three and four million of souls; with a rich soil, covered with a prolific and valuable vegetation; abounding in numerous herds of cattle, producing sugar and coffee; yielding abundant harvests of rice and other grains, and calculated to be the basis of a larger commerce than three or four Cubas, or all the West Indian Archipelago.

This great Island commands the Western verge of the Indian ocean. Louis Napoleon has already planted the French eagles upon New Caledonia, and islands commanding the South Eastern limit. He has, we know from high diplomatic sources, been negotiating with Holland concerning New Guinea in the South, and with Spain about Magindinao in the North; and thus sooks to encircle Malaysia—an Indian Empire—greater than the one that Alexander conquered, that England now holds, or that the great Napoleon ever thought of or coveted—the one that shall make the power, fully capable of controlling and developing it, the master of the richest commerce of the world, and consequently of the world itself.

England, with seeming contentment in her continental Asiatic possessions, is coyertly marking out a path for more extended insular Indian empire. She is establishing commanding positions on the shores of the Red Sea and the Gulf of Persia; strengthening her posts at Malacca, Pinang, and Singapore, in the Straits of Malacca, that great highway of Eastern commerce; controlling the coal mines at Formosa; has her vessels of war at Lebuan; in the Mindoro Sea; watching New Caledonia from New Britain; and then her settlements on the shores of the Gulf of Carpentaria; her influence in the heroic-Island of Bali, and her strongholds at the Mauritius and Cape of Good Hope, make a circle of positions and operations wholly enclosing the coveted Indian empire of Napoleon, vast as Oceanica, and mighty as British maritime enterprise.

No other champion appears to dispute for this gorgeous prize. The Russian retires to his fastnesses to heal his wounds and recruit his strength; the spirit of maritime enterprise is dead in Spain and Portugal; and Holland, once merged in the French Empire, and restored to her possessions and nationality by British power, has held her position in the Eastern Seas through the sufferance of the Cabinets of St. James and the Tuileries; and these two courteous allies, with their potential armaments, prepare to contend for the Indian prize, without any fears of the rivalry of a third.

Yet such a one may be found in a quarter little thought of. The four millions of Australians are ripe for independence; and have recently been aroused to think the more strongly of it, by the establishment of French troops in New Caledonia—almost in sight of their coast. They have sent remonstrances to the Imperial Parliament against the movement; they have notions of a kind of Monroe doctrine with regard to Australia; and if the Home Goverment will not heed them—or pleads that her hands are tied by treaties, or concessions to an ally—then they talk of "cutting the painter" adrift from the ship of State; and then those four millions of Anglo-Saxons will drive away French-men, Dutchmen—even their own British brethren—and establish themselves the great Empire of Oceanica.

But a fourth disputant may rise up in a quarter still less thought of. The master races of the East Indian Archipelago are gifted for a high degree of civilization, for a great nationality, and to be the controllers of the inexhaustible treasures of their isles, to be disposed in free trade with the world. Having a common language, literature, laws, and religion, they are, however, divided into many hundred petty sovereignties—an easy prey do any monopolizing trader of Europe.

The higher races of Malays in the Archipelago—the Normans of the East, want a rallying point, a free and powerful flag, as a nucleus for a great free entrepot—a common centre of unshackled Archipelagian trade, where Eastern tropic wealth can be exchanged for the manufactures of Western hands; and where Western intelligence can direct and organize Eastern imagination; where, in fact, American enterprise, not trammeled like the European, can lay the foundation of a development of the mighty resources of the East Indian Archipelago; commencing with the establishment of a coal and naval depot, as we urged upon the attention of our merchants a few days ago; and thus might Baltimore, once the leading American port in East Indian commerce, initiate an American Malayian movement, that shall lead to the winning of the paramount sovereignty of the much coveted East Indian empire. [Baltimore Patriot.

A FRENCHMAN'S OPINION ON THE UNITED STATES.—M. Alfred D'Alembert has published a book on America. On slavery he is neutral; but maintains that the condition of the slaves, physically, is superior to that of the peasants in many parts of France. Of the inferior cast into which free blacks at the North are converted, even by the Abolitionists, after speaking of their exclusion from all participation on an equal footing, in the business and pleasures of white life, their exclusion from public offices, from theaters and hotels, and railroad cars, he adds:

Death itself does not rehabilitate them; they have a separate burial place! And it would not surprise me if the Americans should pretend that God had set apart for them a hell and a paradise, so that the classification might be observed in the other world. Do not forget that this is the case in the Northern States, where slavery has long since ceased to exist, and where they manifest the greatest impatience at not seeing it abolished by their neighbors.

He writes as follows on the subject of American gallantry:

I am profoundly humiliated; I blush to the roots of my hair; I know not where to hide myself. On the faith of tradition I had hitherto believed that the French people were the most gallant people in the world. Everything supported this conviction. Songs, ballads, the good opinion we generally entertain of ourselves, and the error of foreign people, who say from habit: "Gallant as a Frenchman."

A profound error which I have recognized with shame and surprise! Gallantry is not dead. It has deserted Europe; it has taken refuge in the United States. I proclaim it openly—it is in America that I have seen true gallantry universally practiced, spontaneously, disinterestedly. There woman is respected for her own sake, because she is woman; because she is, or will be, the mother of a citizen. If a good thing could be carried to an excess, I should say that the rights attributed to the fair sex are pushed to exageration. The women know their power, they abuse it as tyrants do who know that there are no limits to their authority.

In summer when it is too warm to stay at home, all America travels, by railroad and by steamboat, to interior watering places, to sea-side resorts, or wherever else the inhabitants of the United States are supposed to amuse themselves.

It is in these excursions that one can judge better than anywhere else of the extent and degree of this true gallantry, and of the eager deference shown, invariably, to women. They arrive late; all the seats in the cars are occupied; twenty gentlemen immediately rise, at the risk of remaining on their feet, or even of losing their journey; they quietly seat themselves, without as much as saying "thank you." The least sign of gratitude to the men is superfluous.

Thomas Carlyle.

Mr. Carlyle has been variously estimated, according to the predispositions of those who have judged. Excellence, when it appears in a novel shape, is sometimes estimated below, often much above, its merit; rarely according to its desert. The natural eye, we know, is deceiving as to the distances and magnitudes of objects, when it cannot compare them with other familiar objects, and the mind is still more prone to misconceive the proportions of those things which it cannot refer to some wonted form. So it has fared with Mr. Carlyle; he has been unjustly condemned, and has been extravagantly praised. Not that we think he has been, upon the whole, too highly estimated by any class, were their applauses somewhat more discriminating. We should be glad to believe that there were any persons, amidst the mob of talkers about Carlyle, who were capable of valuing to excess the excellencies which he unquestionably possesses. His peculiarities they esteem too flatteringly; his greatness they scarcely appreciate at all. For ourselves; we cannot give him the rank of a first-rate intellect; we cannot approve his writing as a whole; but we admire many of his qualities as brilliant and admirable, and we think him possessed of some capacities which are as rare as they are excellent. One of the most striking peculiarities of Mr. Carlyle's character, is his intolerance of cant in every shape; whether it be the traditionary cant of moral enlightened opinion of the time; the cant of the nation, or the cant of a noisy sect; the dogmatizing cant of the age, or the flippant cant of the hour. Now, undoubtedly, an infinite deal of sense is in solution with all these kinds of cant, and in unsettling or dissipating the strength or weakness of any one of them, the defences of truth in its fastness, or the supports of truth in its open marches, are to some extent enfeebled. Still it is of incalculable value to every reader to have before him an example of a writer who is laboring only to judge sincere judgments; who brings the conscience of his intellect, not its prejudices or affections, to investigate everything, in its search after truth. The influence of such an example is of salutary moral tone, and it invigorates and strengthens the intellectual temper. Mr. Carlyle belongs, undoubtedly, to the skeptical school: his mind is naturally fertile of "obstinate questionings" of everything. But he does not make his sword his worship; he does not mistake the method for the end. His object is truth and its repose; the means he employs are skepticism and its disorders.

"Tom, you sot," said a temperance man to a tipling friend, "what makes you drink such stuff as you do? Why the very hogs wouldn't drink that brandy." "That's cause they is brutes," said Tom. "Poor creatures! they don't know what's good."

THE BATTLE OF LEXINGTON.

BY E. S. THOMAS.

The British in possession of Boston had learned that a quantity of public stores were deposited at Concord, nineteen miles distant, and determined to destroy them. Another and and a much more important object of the expedition was, to capture, if possible, John Hancock and Samuel Adams, who were known to be in that neighborhood and upon whose heads a price had been set.

On the night of the 18th of April, 1775, the British landed eight hundred men in Charleston, who took up the line of march through Mentony (now called West Cambridge) and Lexington, to Concord. It was a calm starlight night, and they moved with all possible stillness; at West Candbridge they passed my father's house, and their tread awoke him; he arose, stood at the window and counted their phitoons. As soon as they had all passed, he seized his musket and started across the country, every road of which was familiar. In his progress he fell in with numbers on the same errand—that was to get ahead of the enemy, and alarm the country, in both of which they succeeded, so that when the British arrived at Lexington, eleven miles from Boston, at five o'clock in the morning, they found the militia assembling; they had received intelligence of the enemy's movements, some hours before, and were promptly assembled at the beat of the drum. When the British came within striking distance, Major Pitcairn rode forward and called out, "Disperse, you rebels, disperse!" and without waiting to see whether they would or would not, fired his pistol which was a signal for a volley from the advance, which killed eight; the others dispersed, and the British pursued their way to Concord, where they arrived without interruption, but Hancock and Adams had made their escape. They then commenced a retreat, to do which they had to pass the north bridge; at the foot of it Capt. Davis had drawn up his company, (the Concord Light Infantry,) and then and there the first volley was fired by the Americans, in that cause which gave Independence to America and freedom to the world. In the meantime the minute men were pouring in from all quarters, and the British found themselves so hotly pressed, that had it not been for a reinforcement of about a thousand men, with two field pieces, under Lord Percy, whom Gov. Gage had dispatched to their assistance, not a man of the detachment would have reached Boston. The reinforcement met the retreating column near Lexington, greatly diminished, almost exhausted, having taken no refreshment since they left Boston, whence they were yet distant eleven miles, and had to fight every inch of the way.

The plan then adopted by Lord Percy, was one of the most savage warfare; his troops fell off from the front, entered the houses of the Americans, plundered them of whatever they could carry; set fire to the house, and then joined the rear, thus giving an opportunity to their whole force to plunder; but so hot was the pursuit, a large portion of the fires were extinguished before they had done much damage. When they had passed the foot of the rocks, they entered the plain of West Cambridge, seven miles from Charles river, and quite a village for about two miles; at least I found it so when a school-boy ten years after, and there was no appearance of any addition to it since the Revolution.

It is proper here to remark, that there were two taverns near West Cambridge—one kept by a Mr. Cooper, the resort of the Whigs, the other the resort of the Tories kept by a Mr. Bradish. There were three families on the road within a fourth of a mile; by the name of Adams, a name hateful to the British; in one of those a lady was confined the night before; the enemy entered the house, took the bed on which she lay with her infant at the breast, and carried them into the yard and left them there. A little boy about five or six years old had taken shelter under his mother's bed—his foot projected from beneath the drapery—a British soldier thrust his bayonet through it, and for a minute pinned it to the floor; the boy did not even utter a cry: this fact I had from his mother. They then plundered the house and set it on fire, but the Americans entered in a few moments, extinguished the fire, and restored the mother and infant to their room and bed. Their next exploit was at the Whig tavern, into which they fired more than a hundred bullets; the holes made by them were filled up but the marks are visible to this day. It was a singular fact that three old men, seventy years and upwards each, who were Tories, the battle coming on so unexpectedly, took shelter in this tavern, (Cooper's) where the British found them and put them to death.

The name of one was Winship. I well remember his son. The heavy discharges of musketry at the tavern brought my mother into the streets or road, who had learned nothing certain of what was going on since my father left her on the previous evening. To her utter astonishment she saw the battle raging at less than half a mile distant; she instantly returned to the house, secured a large bag of currency so much wanted at this time, and a few small articles, then taking one child of two years old in her arms, and having two older hanging to her apron, she sallied forth to go to a Captain Whittemore's, about two miles distant across the fields, on the bank of the Mystic river, (women and children had already fled there, to the number of a hundred of the former, and two or three hundred of the latter.) She had scarcely set foot on the road when one child cried for bread; she returned to the house, and cutting a loaf, gave a piece to him that wanted it and wrapping the remainder up in her apron, she was again in the road. In the meantime the battle had approached so near she was within point blank shot of the retreating enemy, who let go a whole volley at her, which did no other damage than to pass two balls through her cap. The Americans saw her perilous situation and called out to her, "Run, good woman!" She did so, and arrived safe at the house of refuge.

The enemy in the meantime, sent out a flanking party with the intention of cutting off the retreat of the mother and child—an object which they came nigh accomplishing—for the Americans did not succeed in turning their flank until they had approached the house near enough to lodge bullets in it—and a very large elm tree, within twenty-five feet from the house, was spattered with them and I took great pleasure in cutting them out ten or twelve years after.

After my mother's escape, they entered the house, took every article of clothing and bedding, except the beds themselves, which they ripped open, split up the furniture, and then set fire to the house—but the building was saved. They also killed a horse in the stable and some hogs in the pen.

Near my father's dwelling was Bradish's Troy tavern. When they arrived at that, Mrs. Bradish who was in delicate health, rose from her easy chair to retire from the front of the house; she had not left it a minute when a ball passed through the back of it: it was the only one fired at the house, and was probably done inadvertently. The British officers, who had been in the habit of making trips to the country, particularly on Sunday, knew every family which was near Troy, for many miles around, and dealt with them accordingly, when they had the opportunity. It was not until dark that they arrived in Charleston, when the Americans withdrew from the contest, and the British encamped on Bunker's Hill. The next morning they entered Boston.

The loss on both sides has been differently stated, and my memory does not serve with certainty on this subject; but a pamphlet which I remember to have read, affidavits of many occurrences of the day, it seems to me put down the loss of the British at 245, besides many wounded, and that of the Americans at 140—but I am not certain, nor have I any authorities at hand to refer to on the subject.

STATISTICS OF LONDON.—London covers at present a space of 122 square miles. It contains 327,391 houses, and 2,362,236 inhabitants, the annual increase of the population being upwards of 40,000. The length of all the different streets is 1,750 miles. The paving of them cost £14,000,000, and the yearly cost of keeping the pavement in repair is £1,800,000. London has now 1,800 miles of gas pipes, and the same length of water pipes. The introduction of gas cost £3,000,000. There are 360,000 burners in the city, which consumes every night 13,000,000 cubic feet of gas, valued at £500,0000 or two million and a half of dollars. The bankers of London have under their control a capital of $64,000,000, and the different insurance companies have in cash capital of £10,000,000, and £78,000,000 in negotiable paper.

The tax on houses amounts yearly to £12,500,000. The furniture of these houses is insured to the amount of £166,000,000. Twenty thousands persons are constantly employed in keeping the docks in repair. London consumes yearly 277,000 oxen, 30,000 calves, 1,480,000 sheep, and 34,000 hogs, worth all together, £8,000,000.

London consumes every year 1,600,000 quarters of wheat, 65,000 pipes of wine, 2,000,000 gallons of brandy, 43,200,000 gallons of porter and ale, and 19,215,000 gallons of water, 3,000,000 tons of coal.

It has 350 charity associations, which distribute every year £1,805,635 to the poor, which sum increased by private charities will amount to £3,500,000. The city from the showing of its official documents, has 143,064 persons who have no visible means of support. Among these are 4,000 vagabonds, who cost the city 50,000 a year to support them. There are besides in London 110 professional house-breakers, 107 street thieves, 40 robbers, 783 pickpockets, 3,675 ordinary thieves, 11 horse thieves, 140 dog thieves, 3 forgers, 24 counterfeiters, and 317 individuals who live directly by the profits of illicit trade, 141 swindlers, 182 people who speculate on charity with false documents, 343 receivers of stolen goods, etc., etc., in all, 122,000 criminals who are known to the police, and who steal every year to the amount of £42,000.

After a contiouous drought of several weeks, from which vegetation was beginning to suffer very seriously, we were yesterday blessed with a succession of refreshing and copious showers throughout the day, as was correctly predicted by our old friend Miller, in his Almanac. The cisterns, which had begun to give out very generally, were also replenished by this timely and so much desired fall of rain.

[Charleston (S. C.) Courier, 1st.

ICE CROP OF 1856.—The ice delivered in Boston the present year is of the best quality ever known. It is very thick, and as clear as pure crystal. The expense of cutting was very heavy the past winter, and consequently the prices will be little if any lower than in 1855. To large consumers the price will be 17 cents per hundred pounds.

For two days past some citizens have expressed apprehensions of a frost. That danger, however, we think is past. It has been extraordinarily cool, producing agues, but we have no suspicion that the eccentricity of the season will wind up with a freeze. It is but one of the least remarkable incidents of the season that there are no mosquitoes. The mosquitoes have unusually come in between the first of March and the beginning of April. This year it is nearly the middle of May, without any of these pests. Two months ago we saw one of the little ruffians, but that was the first and last of them. Who knows? Perhaps we shall get rid of the mosquitoes and the yellow fever together.—[Mobile tribune, 11th.

SPLENDID ARCHITECTURAL WORK.

CHAPEL AND CHURCH ARCHITECTURE, with designs for PARSONAGES. By GEORGE HOWLAND, Roxbury, Mass.

This work is designed to meet a want which has been long felt. Among all denominations of Christians, plans for chapels and churches of moderate cost have been needed, from which committees may select a style appropriate to their wants, and not too expensive for their means. This want the author has endeavored to meet, by presenting a series of designs, ranging in estimated cost from $1,500 to $20,000. He has also added designs for country and city parsonages, such as will commend themselves to the good taste of all. The working plans for these drawings are not furnished, for the reason that the work would be too costly, but all such plans and specifications can be had on application to the author. The principal design of the work, however, is to enable committees to decide on some style previous to making application to an architect, so that they may convey their ideas and wishes clearly. With this end in view, the work is commended to the public.

At a meeting of the Boston Conference of Methodist Ministers, the following resolution in regard to the above elegant and timely work, was passed unanimously:

BOSTON, Feb. 25, 1856.—The Committee appointed to examine Plans of Church Architecture, by Brother George Bowler, have attended to their duty as far as they have been able, and would report the following:

Resolved, That the Plan and Sketches of Church Architecture, designed and drawn by our brother, Rev. George Bowler, evince, in a high degree, correctness of taste and skill in execution, combining in themselves, to an extent seldom equalled, beauty, economy and convenience; and we feel confident that the publication of the work would be of essential service to the churches in this country.

We shall publish the above during the month of May, in one superb folio volume. It will contain over forty elegantly executed Lithographic Designs, with ground plans and interiorness executed in the highest style of art, bound in cloth, price $10 per copy, with a liberal discount by the hundred. All orders to be addressed to the publishers,

JOHN P. JEWETT & COMPANY, Boston.
JEWETT, PROCTOR & WORTHINGTON, Cleveland, Ohio.
SHELDON, BLAKEMAN & CO., New York. may17 3t

LET NO NURSE OR MOTHER

NEGLECT the first symptoms of the presence of worms in the delicate viscera of a young child. In nine cases out of ten convulsions, the terrible destroyers of life and intellect, proceed from this cause. Avoid such consequences by the prompt use of WINER'S CANADIAN VERMIFUGE, a preparation with not any mineral taint, and a safe, painless and infallible remedy for all forms of the complaint.

For sale in New Orleans, wholesale and retail, by

J. WRIGHT & CO.,
Nos. 21 and 151 Chartres street, sole Proprietors.

Sold by all the Druggists. may17 1t

THE XXth VOLUME OF THE SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE (improved and enlarged) will commence on June 1st, 1856. Now is the time to subscribe. Terms, $2 per annum, paid in advance. If payment is delayed six months, $2 50—if one year, $3. When enlarged in the contemplated size it will be the largest religious weekly published in the South.

All Ministers of the M. E. Church, South, are empowered to act as Agents. They are allowed 12½ per cent. on all collections—and the paper is put to them at $1 25 per annum.—The collection and forwarding of $10, entitles an Agent to the paper one year. Address E. H. MYERS, Editor, a26 tjel Charleston, S. C.

IMPORTANT TO THE METHODIST DENOMINATION.

NEW EDITION, just published, containing Twenty New and Popular Denominational Tunes.

The Wesleyan Sacred Harp,

a collection of choice TUNES and HYMNS, for Prayer, Class and Camp Meetings, Choir and Congregational Singing. By Rev. W. McDonald, of the Maine Conference, and D. Hubbard, Esq., author of several Musical Works. Price, 50 cents, single; $4 50 per dozen.

This Work is designed to become a very popular Music Book for social meetings with the Methodist Denomination. Rev. W. F. Farrington, Pastor of the Pine Street Methodist Church, Portland, Maine, a man of fine musical taste, writes thus to the Editor of Zion's Herald, Boston:

THE WESLEYAN SACRED HARP.—A collection of choice Tunes and Hymns for Social and Congregational Singing. By Rev. W. McDonald and S. Hubbard, Esq.

BRO. WEBB: I wonder that no more has been said publicly in favor of this excellent work. I used to think that it has not been examined by a practical test, generally, or that it is thought to possess sufficient merit in itself to recommend it wherever it is known. The selection, compositions and arrangement of the music and hymns—the latter peculiarly from our standard book—evince a taste and skill which ought to give it an extensive circulation. It is just the book for our family circles and social religious meetings. Having the hymn and music before us, on the same page, it will help to correct the time and tune of many who join in this delightful portion of religious worship, and prevent those grotesque and grating sounds which often annihilate melody, and sometimes the devotional feelings even of those whose ears and voices are scientifically untrained. Can not the compiler add, in another edition, some fifteen or twenty carefully selected tunes and hymns, suitable to be used in our public congregations, where congregational singing is not adopted? And we fondly hope that this school of singing will speedily obtain throughout our New England Churches. It is the most conducive to spirituality and union of any mode yet adopted. Success to the "Harp," and to every Methodist Yearly, especially, be generally supplied with it.

Portland, Nov. 6, 1855. W. F. FARRINGTON.

☞ Orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to. A pamphlet containing further particulars and directions for using the above fertilizers will be sent by mail, on the receipt of postage stamp, to any one desiring it.

D. C. LOWRER, 98 Magazine street,
m15 6m New Orleans

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

FACULTY—Rev. H. C. TIWEATT, D. D. President and Professor of Mental and Moral Sciences, Belles-lettres and Ancient Languages.

A. R. REMBERT, M. D., Professor of the Physical Sciences and Mathematics.

Mr. CHRISTOPHER PLAGGE, Professor of Music.

Miss L. HATHS, A. M. Instructress in English Literature, Modern Languages, Music, Drawing, Painting, Embroidery, etc.

Mrs. PLAGGE, Instructress in Music and the French Language.

Miss E. K. QUARLES, M. E. L., Instructress in Primary Department.

Miss MARY E. CROWDER, M. E. L., Instructress in Academic Department.

Assistant Teacher in the Elementary branches.

N. B.—In a few weeks a gentleman of distinguished reputation will be added to the present corps, his name occupying the vacancy of Professor of Music and Modern Languages.

RATES OF TUITION PER SESSION OF FIVE MONTHS.

Primary Department	$12 50
Academic Department	15 00
COLLEGIATE DEPARTMENT.
Freshmen and Sophomore classes	20 00
Junior and Senior classes	25 00
ORNAMENTAL DEPARTMENT.
Music on the pianoforte, harp or guitar	25 00
Use of Instruments	5 00
Vocal music	5 00
Drawing, with use of copies	12 00
Water and chromatic painting, each	15 00
Oil painting	20 00
Embroidery	10 00
Incidental expenses	2 00
Fee for Graduation and Diploma	5 00

No extra charge made for Modern or Ancient Languages.

Payment to be made at the close of each term. Board, including lodging, washing, lights and fuel can be procured in the village and immediate neighborhood at ten dollars per month. Students will be received at any time during the session, and will be charged only from the time of their entrance to the end of the term. We would, however, respectfully urge all parents and guardians, who design placing their daughters or wards in the Institution, to do so at the earliest convenience, as it will tend much to the individual interest of the pupils and the general prosperity of the school. Facilitating, as it will, a proper arrangement of the various classes in their respective branches efficiently.

School books, stationery, etc., may be had at any of the various stores in the village at the usual rates

The scholastic year consists of ten months will be divided into two equal terms of five months, one immediately succeeding the other.

The first session commencing on the first Wednesday in October, and closing the last week in February; the second commencing on the first Wednesday in March, and closing the last week in July; at which time the annual examination will be held, and the usual rewards and honors conferred. The vacation will embrace the months of August and September.

All applications for admission of pupils, etc., to be made to the President of the College. m1 1y

A SOUTHERN REMEDY.

Made by O. O. Woodman, New Orleans, La.

HAS received the appointment from the proprietor for the sole agency of

Woodman's Cherry Expectorant,

the medicine that has created such an excitement at the North among the Physicians, and has been recommended by all who have used it as being far superior to any Cherry Pectoral.

WOODMAN'S CHERRY EXPECTORANT

Contains the active medical qualities of the pure decoction of Wild Cherry Bark, and many other valuable ingredients that render it far better than any other cough medicine in this country.

RECOMMENDATION.

NEW ORLEANS, April 9, 1856.

DEAR SIR—The public generally are fully aware of the thousands of testimonies for diseased lungs, under the title of Sarsaparillas, Pills, Plasters, Liniments, etc., that are daily brought to their notice through the newspapers by way of advertisements. My object in writing this note for publication is to induce the public, or at least those who are afflicted, to use one that contains articles of real use in pulmonary diseases. I am conscious that in so doing, I am acting most unprofessionally and derogatorily to the interests of Medical Science and the regular practitioners of Medicine. I refer to Woodman's Cherry Expectorant, which is a scientific remedy that I have used with more success than any of the usual prescriptions used by physicians.

J. M. MAITLAND, M. D.

This preparation has attained a wide celebrity from the universal success which has attended its use. For though coughs, colds, and in fact, any pulmonary complaints, this medicine, from its peculiar properties as a discutient, and its soothing power to all irritations of the throat, will probably be preferred to any other offered to the public—as an appetizer—dyspepsia remedy, it will also be found excellent, its natural and genial warmth keeping the digestive powers in proper tone.

Remember that this is the only cough medicine that has stood the test of the medical fraternity. It is sanctioned by, approved of, and recommended by leading physicians of New York city. Every bottle is warranted to give satisfaction or the money refunded. We guarantee it to be better than any Cherry Pectoral, Cod Liver Oil, or anything else now extant.

For BRONCHIAL AFFECTIONS it will be found superior to all other remedies.

O. O. WOODMAN,
New Orleans.

And by all the Druggists in the South. ap9 6t

DRUGS, CHEMICALS, PAINTS, OILS, WINDOW-GLASS.

O. O. WOODMAN, WHOLESALE DRUGGIST,
Successor to Jarvis & Wondman.
CORNER OF COMMON AND MAGAZINE STREETS, NEW ORLEANS.

IMPORTER AND DEALER IN

CHOICE DRUGS, SELECTED MEDICINES, PURE CHEMICALS, ESSENTIAL OILS,
Medicinal Extracts, Fine Perfumery and Fancy Soaps,
PATENT MEDICINES, SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS, DRUGGISTS' GLASSWARE,

FRENCH AND AMERICAN WINDOW-GLASS, PAINTS, OILS, DYE STUFFS, ETC.

☞ Druggists, Physicians, Country Merchants and Planters who purchase medicines, may rely upon being suited. Orders Promptly attended to.

300 DOZEN CHERRY EXPECTORANT—FOR THE CERTAIN CURE OF COUGHS, COLDS INFLUENZAS, Bronchial Affections, Consumption, and all diseases of the lungs, in the incipient stage. Also for the relief of Consumption, in the advanced stages of the disease.

This is an Alterative Expectorant, prepared on the plan of combining the most active and efficient remedies usually prescribed by the Profession, in all their purity, affording a remedy which is found to give energy and certainty of effect, which cannot be had by using the same remedies as usually prescribed by the physician of apothecary.

It is not designed that this shall be a secret remedy, and the formula, with the proportion of each ingredient, will be readily submitted to physicians.

The cost of the preparation is such that it will not warrant the usual amount of Advertising and puffing resorted to by popular medicine dealers. I must make its way in public favor by its intrinsic merits alone.

The following is one of the many testimonials volunteered by physicians of the first standing:

FROM DR. W. M. DEASON.

GALLATIN, MISS., May 1, 1852.

O. O. WOODMAN—Dear Sir: I have given your Cherry Expectorant a fair trial, and am well pleased with its effects—better than any other article I ever met with. I would be pleased for you to send me a half a dozen bottles by the bearer.

Resp

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY A COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS FOR THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH---H. N. McTYEIRE, EDITOR.

VOLUME VI—NUMBER 16. WHOLE NUMBER 276.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 24, 1856.

$2 00 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE. OFFICE—36 CAMP ST.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION OF NEGROES.

NO. V.

We have, in former numbers, spoken of the obligations of the Church to use all the means in her power to aid in the religious instruction of the slave population of the West and South-west. We have, also, briefly glanced at some of the dangers to be guarded against in responding to this call. No grand and important movement can be conducted to its issue without peculiar exposure to mistakes, more or less painful, in the details of its management; and here it is necessary for the church to scrutinize closely and weigh maturely every step taken in carrying out its great plans; as it is very possible that a few false steps allowed, especially in the incipient and early stages of the movement, may operate disastrously during its whole history. And even where they do not ruin the entire scheme, yet they may, to some extent mar its usefulness.

The missionary operations of our church among the slaves of the country has been a great and prominent fact in the history of the times, and its success or its failure (little as some may be inclined to think of it,) must have an important bearing upon the fortunes of church and country. Deeply impressed with this conviction, we have undertaken the preparation of this series. We may be mistaken in our views—for we claim no exemption from error—but of one thing we are certain, we are honest. We love the church, and we love it in our very soul, this department of her work. These articles are the offspring of a long and deeply cherished care for it, and an honest concern lest we should even in the smallest degree be of success in our efforts in this great field of Christian enterprise. We have no fear of doing harm by pointing out evils as they exist—nor will it do any harm to lift up our note of warning as to possible dangers ahead. It may serve at least to make us look well to our movements—for it is possible, in conducting so great a public interest to commit serious blunders, even with the purest intentions.

We have already made some remarks on the importance of acting discreetly in the selection of proper fields for the establishment of missions among the colored people. This part of the subject demands further consideration; and we may also notice, as somewhat connected with it, the selection of proper men to occupy those fields. May it not sometimes happen that certain neighborhoods are recommended as a proper mission field because some very worthy local brother can be employed to fill the work, and the P. E. says "he is the very man for it—is very willing to take that particular work because it will be no inconvenience to him to labor there—his plantation, or his school, or his business, whatever it is, is near this field—he is a very man, and, withal, his heart is in the work." Well, we shall see.

The mission is made and left to be supplied, with the understanding that this excellent brother is to take charge of it. All very well, but you come to take the appropriations. This mission is called, and it would be fair to infer from what you had previously heard that, inasmuch as the work would not in the least degree trench upon the time of this good brother, as he will only spend the Sabbath at it, and will not make one bale of cotton the less on his plantation, or one dollar the less in his school or his mechanical operations; and, moreover, as he professes a most ardent love for the souls of the negroes, that he would gladly do this work for nothing.

But his friends tell you that there must be some appropriation to quicken his zeal—some two or three hundred dollars will be asked, just by way of having the work well done. So that he makes as much by his secular employment as though he were a missionary, and what he receives from the Missionary Society is so much clear profit.

Now, my doctrine is, that in all such cases, if the preacher tells the truth when he says that God has called him to preach the gospel, and if he loves the souls of these negroes as he says he does, he ought joyfully to take this field for nought; and if, under the circumstances which I have above supposed, he demurs, let him go.

Or, it may be, that some traveling preacher has grown rather weary of perpetual change. He selects a home; says he cannot any longer wander about and drag his wife from pillar to post; he must in some measure localize his work. There are a number of large plantations and numerous slaves who need the gospel, and who are likely to suffer for the lack of spiritual instruction because the regular pastor will not pay them proper attention. Perhaps he has traveled most of the surrounding circuits, and judges of the future from the past. Now the P. E. and his brethren generally regard him as an exceedingly clever man. 'Tis said he loves the work, can't bear the thought of locating, but will be necessarily compelled to do so, unless he can be accommodated with this particular field of labor. Now, what is to be done? The case is represented to the Bishop at Conference. He is told that the planters in the vicinity greatly desire this brother as a missionary to their slaves, and he is appointed.

One thing, however, has not been duly considered, viz: These planters don't expect to support him, but are very willing that he should come provided the church supports him. And when the appropriation is made, it will be found a very clever support is expected for this brother, for whose accommodation this work was organized. He enters upon his work, preaches on Sundays, probably sometimes on Saturdays; stays all the week at home; pays very little attention to catechising the negroes; perhaps less to class meetings and church discipline; and after he has been accommodated for two or three years, the mission runs down on his hands, simply because he is utterly unfit for the work, as any man must be who enters upon it with worldly motives, or for his own accommodation and ease instead of seeking the glory of God and the salvation of souls.

This seeking our own ease and profit, and making the ministry tributary to these worldly ends, must always end disastrously to the individuals concerned, and to the people whom they serve. In all such cases, it seems to me the proper course would be to let the brother locate at once, and let the planters, if they choose to do so, employ him and support him themselves, without charging the missionary funds with that burden. If the brother loves the itinerancy as he professes to do, let him continue to take the same fare as his brethren take. If he can't afford to do that, let him retire, and become in name and in fact, what he is already in health has failed him, so that he says he can't do the work of a circuit. If we can find some snug little nook of a colored mission, he thinks he could do that, and so it may be, think some of his friends. Won't do brother—this is a hard work, and we must have men of strength—men who can do a good deal of work. Let us see—here is preaching twice or thrice every Sabbath—meeting the classes—regulating the leaders and classes—catechising the children—visiting the old, the infirm, and the sick negroes. You can't do this. You know you have been grunting for the last two or three years over your throat, or your heart, or your chest, or your legs, your lungs or some other part of you, and have not been able to hold ten class meetings in all that time, because of your manifold infirmities. Now you are asking for a more laborious work, that you may neglect it after the same fashion. It won't do, brother—no, never.

But, possibly, another case may occur. Here is a very fine brother in the local ranks, who is just exactly one of the cleverest; a good man, a first-rate preacher, and withal, he has an itinerant soul, though unfortunately his body is local, and there is such a weight on him in the shape of lands and negroes and business, that it is almost impossible to make that body itinerant. He is just the man we should like to have in the Conference. His character, his talents and his influence would be of great service. So we can make a mission to suit his convenience and get him in. Stop, if he is the man you say, you will continue to have his influence as in times past—and if he is not, better be without him than act on the bad principle of cutting out particular work for men, and receiving men into the Conference for a particular work, and who, if found unsuitable for that work, cannot be removed to another.

J. O. ANDREW.

"In the multitude of words there wanteth not sin, but he that refraineth his lips is wise." [Prov. 10: 19.

"Riches profit not in the day of wrath, but righteousness delivereth from death."

Every promise in God's word is intended to disperse your doubts, and to produce confidence, hope, comfort and gratitude in your heart. Have they this effect?

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

FEMALE COLLEGES.

NO. VII, CONCLUDED.

If any sensible man were to be asked whether the daughters of our land ought to be well educated, his answer would unquestionably be that they ought.

Ask him again, "Should they be thoroughly educated?" and he replies with equal emphasis, "They should."

But ask him once more, "Ought they to be extensively schooled?" and there is no longer a uniform response. Some affirm, others deny.

Here then we arrive at the real difference of opinion among thinking men on this subject. Some, placing a higher estimate upon christianized mental culture, desire it to a greater extent than others, in our female schools. But, upon all hands, it is agreed that girls should be thoroughly educated.

Now, universal experience has determined, beyond controversy, that this cannot be accomplished without what is usually termed academic discipline. To meet this authoritative demand, we ventured, in our last number, to suggest that our female colleges assume the academic function—perform the laborious and noble, though restricted work of the academy. If they do not do it, nothing is more manifest than it will not be done at all. Every one agrees that it ought to be done—every one, therefore, implicitly declares that they ought to do it.

But what is to be done for all that large and intelligent class of parents who wish their daughters extensively educated? Must they be content with academic advantages? Shall we have no real female colleges, to graduate at which would imply an acquaintance with the studies usually embraced in a male college curriculum? Must young ladies always be denied the luxury of studying the sciences upon the strength of well-disciplined minds, and under the liberal auspices of a great and wealthy college?

These questions develop to our minds most clearly, the truth of the proposition which we have laid down at the beginning of these articles—that there is a serious demand for a higher grade of

My second suggestion, therefore is, that such a grade of public schools be created as soon as possible.

At once the objection is raised to this that it is impracticable. "It is," says the objector, "a visionary conception, which, though very desirable and excellent in itself, can never be realized."

To this I have to reply that no great reform would ever have been accomplished in the world, if the appearance of impracticability had been allowed to rule men's movements. This same cry of impracticable, has been a fetter upon the swift foot of progress ever since the world began, and will be while the world shall last, unless the race of timid men expires. Those who stand by and raise this cry, at the inception of any desirable reform, ought to bethink themselves that the chief impracticability consists in their own inertness and want of sympathy with the movement.

The proper question, in the case before us, it seems to me, is, does the cause of sound education, does the good of society demand the proposed grade of institutions? If this question be answered affirmatively (as I believe a knowledge of the facts that bear upon it, and a candid consideration of them will compel every man to answer it,) then manifestly it is our duty—not to stand and cry impracticable—but to set ourselves to work at once to devise plans and means for the success of the enterprise.

But to this suggestion of impracticability I wish to reply again, by suggesting a plan that is believed to be entirely feasible. It may be expressed in a few words: Let female colleges of the proposed grade, be established by liberal endowment, taking some of the best of the present female colleges for a foundation. Let, for instance, the friends of the Centenary Institute at Summerfield, or of the Judson Institute at Marion, or of the Tuskegee Female College, or of any other prosperous institution of the kind, that has a host of warm and wealthy friends, gather at the approaching anniversary; and let them resolve, first, to set down all present facilities and expenditures to the account of academic education; second, to inaugurate at once, a thorough academic course of study; third, to establish, and richly endow a Female College, into which the young ladies can pass from the academy, and wherein, with well-trained and appreciative minds, they may enjoy all the superior advantages usually afforded the young men in first class male colleges.

As I have not time to discuss this subject further, permit me to conclude these articles with a few pertinent aphorisms:

1st, Discipline is of more value to a young mind than knowledge.

2d, No one can be truly learned without first being properly educated.

3d, It is better to send your daughter four years to a faithful academy, and never to a college, than to send her four years to a college and never to a faithful academy.

4th, It is better that a woman marry at twenty-two, with a well cultivated mind and heart, and no money, than marry at seventeen, uneducated, with a patrimony of five thousand dollars.

5th, No institution, without endowment, can justly be expected to elevate the popular standard of education—for while it is dependent upon the public for existence and support, it will, of course, serve according to the preference and taste of the public.

6th, A well-endowed institution can furnish a better education, at a less price, than one not endowed, (ceteris paribus.)

7th, A richly endowed college can educate the poor and the deserving gratis.

8th, If a great public reform is manifestly needed, it is unworthy of wise men to expend their time in wrangling and recrimination in order to locate the responsibility of existing evils. It is worthy of them to concert measures for the immediate accomplishment of the desired reform.

MENTOR.

The Impending Sentence and a Present Pardon.

BY THE REV. JOHN COX.

Most persons have heard of Sir Walter Raleigh, and many have had their pity and indignation excited by reading the story of his eventful life and tragical death. This celebrated man flourished in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, with whom he was a particular favorite, being employed by her in many high offices of state. He was also a great navigator, and made several voyages of enterprise and discovery. On [illegible] country, that most useful article of food the potato root.

Soon after the accession of James I, to the throne, this highly talented man fell into disgrace; he was charged (most writers say unjustly) with being guilty of treason against his sovereign, and on this charge he was condemned to die; but the sentence was not executed until more than fourteen years afterwards. Twelve years of this time he spent as a prisoner in the tower of London, where he wrote the History of the World and other works. About two years before his death, with the king's permission, he went on a voyage to America in search of gold mines.—This enterprise was altogether a failure, and on his return his implacable enemies succeeded in procuring the execution of the sentence before referred to. He was beheaded on Tower Hill, in the sixty-ninth year of his age.—During the long period of fourteen years, this sentence hung over him—wherever he was, whatever he employed himself about, or amused himself with, he was still a condemned man, and as such was brought forth to execution.

This historical fact may yield instruction and warning as regards the spiritual condition and prospects of many now living, and the importance of the subject may well claim the attention of all. Every man should be anxious to know how he stands with relation to the great King of heaven, and what his prospects for eternity; any one may ascertain these points if he will earnestly use the means provided and seek the instruction promised.

In the book of God, that word which shall judge all men in the last day, it is written, "He that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed on the name of the only begotten Son of God;" and again, "He that believeth not the Son of God, shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him" (John iii. 18, 36). There are many like words in the Bible, but these may suffice; and it will be well if all whom they concern will ponder them, until, deeply convinced of their truth and terror, they are constrained to "flee from the wrath to come."

It is a solemn thing to lie under the sentence of Divine condemnation. For a man to have it written over against his name, and that by his own hand, "Condemned to death," how fearful!

"The liberal soul shall be made fat, and he that watereth shall be watered also himself."

Four Days Later from Europe.

The Collins mail steamer Atlantic arrived at New York on the 12th, bringing four days later European news. She left Liverpool on the 30th April.

The principal feature of the news is the publication of the official treaty of peace, together with three appended conventions; the first having reference to the passage of the Dardanelles, the second arranging the details of the naval force in the Black Sea, and the third declaring that the Aland Islands shall remain unfortified. Also an important declaration of maritime law, viz: the abolishing privateering—that a neutral flag is to protect the cargo, except when contraband, and neutral goods under an enemy's flag are to be exempt from capture.

The treaty is the same as received and published by the last steamer. The missing articles are to the following effect:

Art. 5 grants a full and entire amenesty to those of their subjects who may have been comprised by any participation whatever in the events of the war in favor of the enemy; and it is expressly understood that this amnesty shall extend to the subjects of each belligerent Power who may have continued during the war to be employed in the service of the other belligerents.

Art. 6 declares that the prisoners of war shall be immediately given up on either side.

Art. 7 declares that the Sublime Porte shall be admitted to participate in the advantages of the public law and system of Europe. Their Majesties engage each on his part to respect the independence and integrity of the Ottoman Empire, and guaranty in common a strict observance of that engagement, and will in consequence consider any act tending to its violation as a question of general interest.

Art. 8 provides that if there should arise between the Sublime Porte and one or more of the other signing Powers, any misunderstanding which might endanger the maintenance of their relations, the Sublime Porte and each of such Powers, before having recourse to force, shall afford the other contracting parties an opportunity of preventing such extremity by means of their mediation.

The following additional article has been rendered imperative by the necessity of transporting troops from the seat of war.

"The stipulations of the convention respecting the Straits of the Dardanelles, signed this day, shall not be applicable to vessels of war employed by the belligerent Powers for the evacuation by sea of the territories occupied by their armies; but said stipulations shall resume their entire effect as soon as the evacuation shall be terminated."

Peace has been formally proclaimed, and the 4th of May was appointed as a day of thanksgiving for its restoration.

The debate upon the fall of Kars was commenced in Parliament on the 28th by Mr. Whiteside, who introduced a motion of censure upon the Government. The Attorney General defended the Government. Lord John Menners supported the resolution; after which the debate was postponed until the next evening. It is said that the opposition in Parliament intend to make this a test question against the present Ministry.

In reply to questions directly put to the Ministry in the British House of Commons, on the 25th ultimo, as to the number of troops to be sent to Canada Lord Palmerston said that at most the number would not exceed four thousand; and as to the report that it was the intention of the British Government to hold a military force in Costa Rica, he assured the interrogating member there was no foundation at all for it.

Telegraphic advices had been received from Calcutta to the 23d of March and from Hong-Kong to the 16th of March. To India and Persia matters were quiet. The insurrection in China continued active. The Imperial troops had been defeated at Kiang-si. An extensive fire had occurred at Hong-Kong.

News from Buenos Ayres.

We have dates from Buenos Ayres to the 20th of March. There is little news of interest to report. A decree fixes the last Sunday of March for the election of Senators and Representatives for the ensuing Legislature.

A band of military emigrants, under the command of Col. Boland, had started to colonize Patagonia. Disaster, that commenced during their short passage, and strange to say, after their landing extended even to the resident population. Several deaths had taken place, which naturally cast a gloom over the enterprise. It appears also that there had been some symptoms of mutiny and insubordination that were energetically suppressed.

Col. Olivieri, with a party, had made an excursion into the interior, and were delighted with the appearance of the country, but the site of the future colony had not been fixed upon. At from 25 to 30 leagues from the port they discovered a party of Indians, but they do not appear to have come into contact.

It was whispered that Gen. Hornos might probably retire, and that Col. Gorardo would be promoted to the rank of General, and invested with the Command-in-Chief in the Southern Department. No further mention is made of the negotiations with Calfurubia; on the contrary, the opinion gains ground that H. E. is concerting an aggressive movement.

It was rumored in Buenos Ayres that there were better hopes of an understanding with the Indians. Despite of this the money market has shown a slight upward tendency—the cause or causes of which we are unable to assign.

The Governor was supposed to have under his command about 200 militia men and about 1,200 horses.

The British Packet of the 15th of March says: President Urquiza has returned to the Parana and resumed the reins of Government on the 23d ult. No other news of general interest; but referring to the dates we cannot help remarking, that with so many steamers of different dimensions our intercourse with the sister Provinces is much less frequent than it ought to be.

Of affairs in Montevideo; the British Packet says that "the measures of the new President (Pereyra) continue to give increased satisfaction to all parties. All political emigrants are not only invited to return, but a public subscription has been raised to aid those whose means are deficient. This is sound policy and genuine patriotism, and gives a hope of brighter days for the Republic. The President, it is said, is engaged in an important administrative reform. A Council of State has been appointed, and the members selected are admitted to be good men and true, without any indication of party bias."

THE STEAMER PACIFIC.—Mr. R. K. Haight, of New York, has received a letter from a London friend, under date of April 22d, expressing the belief that the steamer Pacific has been blown on the Greenland coast. We extract a portion of the communication:

Your letter of 5th April conveys to us the painful apprehension under which you labor of the loss of the Pacific and your son. It is very remarkable that my son in China, now a partner in a large mercantile house, should have sent home a ship load of tea in the Swallow, Capt. Tucker, who saw the Pacific drifting before a terrific gale—he thought, disabled in her machinery. Now, Capt. Tucker is a most intimate friend of the Captain of the Pacific, who said to him often: "I am a Northern bird; I find the degrees less." On Capt. Tucker arriving, he said to some of his consignees that he had every reason to believe the Pacific was disabled, and drifting before the gale, and would be found in the northern point of Greenland. Lord Palmerston sent for him, and he stated his opinion, when two men-of-war steamers were instantly dispatched to search every part of the coast—one was the Tartar, in which was my nephew, Mr. Harford. They have returned. Capt. Tucker does not now give up the ship as lost. He says, in such a gale what could a disabled steamer do? He brought us home 19,000 packages of tea; but for ten days he said he believed his ship would not ride it out, and such a storm prevented his once taking off his clothes. Capt. Tucker says the gale would have blown a disabled steamer three hundred miles in twenty-four hours out of her course, for they could set no little canvas. Now, look at the chart—a gale of wind of nine days' duration, a ship like a log on the water, why, where would she be blown to? I cannot help believing, and really hoping, the crew are yet safe with the ship in some of the inhospitable shores of Greenland, and may any day be heard of, or as soon as they can construct a vessel from the wreck to bring them away.

A DEVOTED LORD.—Lord Ward, an English nobleman, is one of those beings rarely met with. He is a young man of immense wealth, probably one hundred and fifty thousand pounds a year, singularly handsome person, great mental accomplishment, a multifarious linguist, an exquisite connoisseur in paintings and the arts, and one of the best riders, best shots, best billiard players, and best fencers in England; in fact, a subdued Crichton in his way. But all these advantages are, unfortunately, shaded by an interesting delusion under which he constantly labors, that he is the happy man in which ladies love to be who love their lords. Some few years since he was married to Miss De Burgh, a celebrated London beauty, much against her wish; and, after marriage, this strange delusion ripened into such strength that a kind of separation took place, and the lady died of heart-sadness in a few months. There are, notwithstanding this example, many beautiful moths in the circles of London fashion who would fly at the glittering light this moment, regardless of singeing their pretty wings.

Thirty-Fourth Congress—First Session.

WASHINGTON, May 9, 1856.—Senate.—Mr. Bayard read a letter from Lt. Thorburn, in reference to certain statements in the recent debate on the Naval Retiring Board.

The House bill granting lands to Iowa for railroads in that State was read.

The Senate passed sundry private bills.

Mr. Jones, of Iowa, asked that it might be immediately put on its passage.

Messrs. Jones, of Tenn., Cass, Douglass, and others, advocated the bill, and Messrs. Biggs, Foot, Crittenden, and others, opposed it.

After considerable discussion, the bill passed by ayes 31, nays 9.

Mr. James, from the Committee on Patents, reported a bill amendatory of the patent laws. The bill has been the subject of the closest and most patient scrutiny by the committee, and has been settled under the advice of the Commissioner of Patents and by several of the Judges of the Supreme Court. Its object is to protect the public on the one hand, against the oppressive use of invalid patents and the really meritorious inventor from the piracies of dishonest infringers.

The Senate then adjourned till Monday.

House of Representatives.—The message from the Senate asking the appointment of a third Committee of Conference relative to the disagreeing amendments to the deficiency bill was again taken up.

Mr. Phelps rose to defend the people of Missouri, whom he said Mr. Giddings yesterday charged as traitors, and deserved to be hanged.

Mr. Giddings (interrupting) explained that his statement was that the people of Missouri, by collecting an armed body for the purpose of usurping the Government of Kansas, had committed treason, and under the laws and the constitution were guilty of the charge.

Mr. Phelps denied the charge, saying that such an idea existed only in the distempered imagination of its author. The Missourians who went to Kansas in November and December last were for maintaining the law. The scenes of bloodshed were properly attributable to the friends of Mr. Giddings.

After further debate the House concurred in the recommendation of the Senate for the appointment of a third Committee of Conference on the disagreement of the Deficiency bill.

The House resumed the consideration of the resolution reported from the Committee of Elections, that the parties of the New Mexico contested election case be allowed to appear before the House, either in person or by counsel, to represent their respective claims. The question was taken on the motion of Mr. Carlisle to strike out so much of the resolution as proposed to allow the parties to appear by counsel; and it was decided in the affirmative.

Without coming to a conclusion upon the subject, the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, May 10, 1856.—The Senate was not in session to day.

House of Representatives.—An hour or more was occupied in calling the House, and in a motion to adjourn.

Mr. Fuller, of Pennsylvania, made a personal explanation in relation to his position on the subject of slavery, and was replied to by his colleague, Mr. Todd, and by Mr. Jones, of Tennessee.

No other business was transacted, and the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, May 13, 1856.—Senate.—Mr. Fish submitted a resolution, which was agreed to, directing the Secretary of War to report to the Senate an estimate for the removal of the rocks at Hell Gate in the East river in the State of New York, so as to admit the passage of vessels of war and the largest class of merchant vessels, and such other aids to navigation as to render this passage safe. He also gave notice that he should take an early opportunity to introduce a bill for the purpose of carrying out the object indicated in the resolution.

On motion by Mr. Weller, a resolution was adopted instructing the committee on military affairs to consider the propriety of making suitable compensation to the militia and volunteers serving in the Indian hostilities, when called into the service of the United States.

The Senate agreed to the report of the Committee of Conference on the Deficiency bill.

Mr. Cass concluded his remarks, which were commenced yesterday, in support of "squatter" or popular sovereignty. Among other things he said that the South does not meddle with the social institutions of the North; and if the North would but follow the example, this country ought no longer submit to the payment of Sound dues. The notice given to Denmark was simply that we would take no steps on the subject, but did not revive it.

The Senate adjourned.

House of Representatives.—Mr. Jones, of Penn., made a speech defending the political consistency of James Buchanan.

Mr. Pennington, from the Committee of Conference on the disagreeing amendments to the Deficiency bill, made a report thereon. During his explanation, he said that the Senate had receded from fourteen of its amendments, including those appropriating $300,000 for the continuation of the Washington aqueduct; $5,000 for the removal of the Franklin engine house, and $5,000 for the repair of the upper bridges over the Potomac.

The report was concurred in, and the bill only requires the President's signature to become a law.

Two hundred and ten thousand copies of the agricultural portion of the patent office report were ordered to be printed.

Mr. Evans, of Texas, addressed the House on political affairs, when an adjournment succeeded.

Louisiana Items.

We clip the annexed paragraph from the West Baton Rouge Sugar Planter, of the 17th:

Some weeks ago, everybody wanted rain—just now, nobody wants it. We have had enough, in all conscience sake, to last for a couple of months at least. On Tuesday last, we were visited with one of the heavist showers of the season. It never rains but it pours.

The following is clipped from the same paper:

Yesterday we received a visit from a couple of friends and subscribers at Brusle Landing, who assured us that West Baton Rouge would hardly raise cane enough for seed next year. [Iberville Gazette.

Your information is not true to the letter, friend Jennings. There are a few of our planters who will have to buy seed, but a large majority of them will make seed enough for next year, and in many instances, seed to sell. There is no use making matters worse than they really are, although heaven knows they are bad enough. Our parish will make, this coming season, a crop of 2500 hogsheads—if you call 2500 hogsheads a crop!

The Plaquemine Sentinel, of Saturday, says:

The river has risen considerably at this point, within the last week, and is now higher than it has been this year. We believe it is still rising.

In reference to the stage of water in the Mississippi, the Concordia Intelligencer, of the 16th, has the following:

THE MISSISSIPPI AT VIDALIA.—Here the river has reached the highest point at which it has been marked for more than a year past, and is still rising with considerable drift visible.

If it shall continue at this stage until the Mississippi and Missouri rise comes down, we may have tolerably full banks. We anticipate nothing more—nothing like an overflow. Full, but not overflowing high water, always makes a healthy summer and autumn in the South.

Of the river, the Bayou Sara Chronicle, of Saturday last, speaks as follows:

The river is rising very rapidly at this point, with indications of pretty high water.

The Natchitoches Chronicle, of the 10th, says:

From every portion of our parish, we hear the most encouraging accounts as to the prospects of the crop. The recent rains have been potent for good, and the season augurs well for the future.

The Shreveport Southwestern, of the 7th, says:

MORE RAIN.—Last Monday evening, we had another fine rain, together with some hail. We are induced to believe that much rain has fallen in the neighboring country during the past ten days. A rise above in Red river is currently reported, but, at this season, we do not think the river at this point can be effected much. The rains and reported rise, may, however, fill up the lakes again, and as they act as feeders to the river, prevent its falling for a considerable time.

Cotton and hides, from Texas, continue to arrive very freely. The wagons return heavily laded with goods, plantation supplies, wheat, machinery, etc. Mark well what we predict: ten years will not elapse before we shall see flour, pork and beef, descending Red river to find a market.

THE RISE.—The Mississippi at this point, continues to rise with great rapidity. We received no advices yesterday of later date than the intelligence published in these columns yesterday morning. [Vicksburg Whig, 16th.

The Lafourche is now within fifteen inches of high water mark at this point. It is yet rising slowly, and if it continues for any time to come may cause considerable damage to the growing crops, should it, unfortunately, burst the frail barriers that confine it to its present channel. We hope for the best. [Thibodaux Minerva.

The Sabbath.

With silent awe, I hail the sacred morn
Which slowly wakes while all the fields are still;
A soothing calm on every breeze is borne;
A graver murmur gurgles from the rill,
And echo answers softer from the hill,
And softer sings the linnet from the thorn;
The skylark warbles in a tone less shrill.
Hail! light serene, hail! sacred Sabbath morn.
The rooks float silent by, in airy drove;
The sun a placid yellow lustre shows;
The gales that lately sighed along the grove,
Have hushed their downy wings in sweet repose;
The hovering rack of clouds forgets to move;
So smiled the day when the first morn arose.

The Blade of Grass.

BY WILLIAM GARDNER BLACKWOOD.

Nay, slight me not! I'm a humble thing,
Yet mine's a life of a vernal Spring;
Summer's sweet breath on my cheek has been,
And her warm flush ripens my tints of green;
And my meadowy home is decked with flow'rs,
Planted by fairies in moonlit hours.

Tha glist'ning dew of the early morn,
In jeweled splendors, my brow has worn;
The wind that lifts the scarf like mist,
With wooing love my lip has kiss'd;
And the prismy glows of the setting Sun,
In roseate smiles, by me are won.

In the haunted shades of my matted cell,
The four-leaved clover and cowslip dwell;
And fingers of love delight to trace
The sibylline lova of my dwelling place;
Love's silvery whispers have breathed in my ear
Of a star-like joy or a rainbow tear.

And when the glory of Summer's o'er,
And Autumn's pomp is seen no more,
And diamonded stars look keen and cold,
As Arctic streamers their gleams unfold—
Like a constant heart, my bosom lies bier,
I pillow the head of the dying year.

Then slight me not; though a simple blade,
My delicate texture God hath made;
And what if, with mystic mission franght,
I bear the charm of a lover's thought?
Some elfin sorcery mine may be,
To bind a passionate heart to thee.

Plighted.

Mine, to the core of the heart, my beauty!
Mine—all-mine, and for love, not duty;
Love given willingly, full and free,
Love for love's sake, as I love thee.
Duty, a servant, keeps the keys,
But Love, the master, goes in and out
Of his goodly chambers with song and shout,
Just as he please—just as he please!

Mine, from the dear head's crown, brown-golden,
To the silken foot that's scarce beholden;
Give a warm hand to a friend—a smile,
Like a generous lady, now and awhile;
But the sanctuary heart that none dare win,
Keep holiest of holiest evermore—
The crowd in the aisles may watch the door,
The high-priest only enters in.

Mine, my own—without doubts or terrors;
With all thy goodness, all thy errors,
Unto me and to me alone revealed,
"A spring shut up, a fountain sealed."
Many may praise thee—praise mine and thine;
Many may love thee—I'll love them too;
But thy heart of hearts, pure, faithful and true,
Must be mine—mine wholly—for ever mine.

Mine!—God, I thank Thee, that Thou hast given
Something all mine on this side Heaven;
Something as much myself to be
As this my soul which I lift to Thee:
Flesh of my flesh, bone of my bone,
Life of my life—na whom Thou dost make
Two to the world, for the world's work's sake,
But each unto each, as in Thy sight, one.

Kind Words.

A little word in kindness spoken,
A motion or a tear,
Has often heal'd the heart that's broken,
And made a friend sincere.

[illegible]
A pleasant word to speak,
The face you wear, the thoughts you bring,
A heart may heal or break.

Nothing is Lost.

Nothing is lost; the drop of dew
Which trembles on the leaf or flower
Is but exhaled to fall anew
In summer's tenderer shower;
Perchance to shine within the bow
That fronts the sun at all of day;
Perchance to sparkle in the flow
Of fountains far away.

Nothing is lost; the tiniest seed,
By wild birds borne or breezes blown,
Finds something suited to its need,
Wherein 'tis sown and grown.
The language of some household song,
The perfume of some cherished flower,
Though gone from outward sense belong
To memorie's after hour.

So with our words; or harsh or kind,
Uttered, they are not all forgot;
They have their [illegible]ence on the mind,
Pass on, but perish not!
So with our deeds; for good or ill
They have their power, scarce understood;
Then let us use our better will
To make them rife with good!

We have been informed that notice has been given to the Postmaster General, by the President of the U. S. Mail Steamship Company, that the steamship Philadelphia, which has been for sometime past running between Havana and Aspinwall, has been temporarily withdrawn from the line for repairs, and that arrangements have been made to run the steamer Daniel Webster from New Orleans to Aspinwall, direct, on the 23d inst., with the Southern and South-Western mails for California. The California and South Pacific mails from this city will therefore, we understand, be forwarded to New Orleans, and from thence, on the 23d instant, to Aspinwall direct, instead of being sent by the way of Havana.

[Charleston Courier, 16th.

MEETING AT THE EXCHANGE BUILDING LAST NIGHT.—The friends of Walker and Nicaragua had a glorious meeting at Exchange Buildings last night. Dr. A. K. Taylor was appointed Chairman, and Mr. Yancey, Secretary. J. H. Unthank, Esq., explained the object of the meeting in an eloquent address.

Walter Coleman, Esq., was speaking when we arrived. The meeting was then addressed by Capt. Jones, of the Nicaraguan army, and by Messrs. Carr and Sanders.

On motion, the Chairman appointed a committee to collect money to be appropriated in aid of Walker, and his cause in Nicaragua.

We were compelled to leave at this stage of the proceedings, and did not learn what subsequently took place. Every one seemed enthusiastic on the subject, and convinced us that the cause of the gallant Walker is at the hearts of our people. [Memphis Eagle, 16th.

RED RIVER ITEMS.—We clip the following items from the Shreveport Gazette, of the 17th:

News came from above the raft last week, that a tremendous rise was coming down. The smaller boats that had been lying here waiting for water, all got up steam and hurried off. It turns out to be a false rumor, and if the boats that went up got as far as Fulton, they will be fortunate if they are able to return to Shreveport—so we hear. At last accounts the R. M. Jones and Hope were still aground above White Oak Shoals, and both empty we believe.

Gen. Samuel Houston came up to Alexandria on board the steamer Storm, on the morning of the 7th. We took the Storm at Alexandria for Shreveport, and learned on board, that it is the intention of the General to offer himself as a candidate for the Presidency independently of conventions. No one could inform us whether he had resigned his seat in the U. S. Senate, or not.

Messrs. J. M. Ford & Co. have sold their contract for building the railroad from Shreveport to the Texas line, to Dr. Culbertson, of Georgia, at a profit, as we learn, of $20,000. Dr. C. has had some experience in constructing railroads, and will undoubtedly push the work forward.

It is the opinion of many planters with whom we have conversed, that the prospect for a fine crop of both corn and cotton in this region, has not been so good for many years. The crops on the river below this place are generally very promising.

Our town was visited by a furious wind and heavy rain on Wednesday evening. The planters had quite enough rain a week ago, and some entirely too much. Some plantations have almost been washed away.

EARLY ATTACHMENTS.—The attachments of youth rarely ripen into the warm and enduring love of maturity. Like early spring buds they are nipped by the frosts of experience, or fade into dim recollections of their transient beauty.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The N. O. Christian Advocate.

[illegible] per annum, in advance.

NEW ORLEANS:

SATURDAY, MAY 24, 1856.

COVERED MURDER.

Thursday morning, folds of crape, black and long, hung at the office door next our own, Cuddy, Brown & Co.—The day before, at Pass Christian, whither the parties went from this city, a duel was fought between R. W. Estlin and M. Cuddy, a member of the above firm. At the first shot Mr. Estlin was wounded in the arm—at the second Mr. Cuddy was shot through the body, dead! The falling out, we understand, began about a few bales of cotton.

While writing this, some ladies came into our office asking our signature to a petition to the Governor for commuting the sentence of a young man named Costello, who, in a drunken frolic, urged on and inflamed by bullies, some time ago, killed a watchman. He is sentenced to be hung next Friday. He begs only to be spared death by the rope and imprisoned for life at hard work in the penitentiary.

Oh, Justice, where are thine equal scales!

NICARAGUA.—Since President Pierce has received Padre Vijil at Washington in a diplomatic capacity, and recognized the defacto Rivas-Walker-Government, Nicaragua has neared our doors. Meetings, savagely patriotic, are rife. Recruits are going out. At the meetings a thin, pleasant looking gentleman, Mr. S. H. Slatter, makes telling speeches. He rises and says: "Put me down $500." Again, "Put me down $350." A good deal of such speaking is done.

KNEELING IN PRAYER.—Rev. Dr. Wayland, in an article to an eastern paper, on the principles and practices of the Baptist Churches, condemns the irreverent practice of sitting during prayer, and recommends the Methodist practice of kneeling.

The Protestant Episcopal Church for deaf mutes in this city, of which Rev. Thomas Gallaudet is rector, has forty or fifty communicants, of whom twenty-five can neither speak nor hear. The plan adopted is to provide oral service in the morning and in the sign language in the afternoon; the two are combined for the purpose of building up a

---

TOO LATE.—A person in Birmingham, who lived in the neglect of the worship of God, and of reading the Bible, was, on a Lord's day, sitting at the fire with his family; he said he thought he would read a chapter in the Bible, not having read one for a long time. But, alas! he was disappointed; it was too late, for, in the very act of reaching it from the shelf, he sunk down and immediately expired.

The love of Christ is unparalleled in its nature—intense in its ardor—immense in its extent—and glorious in its purpose and issue.

A CHILD'S ANSWER.—A father once said playfully to his little daughter, a child five years old:

"Mary, you are not good for anything."

"Yes I am, dear father," replid she, looking thoughtfully and tenderly into his face.

"Why, what are you good for?—Pray tell me, my dear."

"I am good to love you father," replied she, at the same time throwing her tiny arms around his neck and giving him a kiss of unutterable affection.

Blessed child! may your life ever be an expression of that early felt instinct of love! The highest good you or any other mortal can possibly confer is to live in the full exercise of your affection.

THE PRONOUNS OF THE BIBLE.—Luther pronounced the pronouns to be the sweetest and most consolatory expressions to be found in the word of God. What, in fact, is more tenderly elevating than when the prophet Isaiah heralds peace and refreshing to the people of Israel? "Comfort ye, comfort ye, my people, saith your God." No longer the "Lord God, the strong and mighty," but "your God," and "my people." And how marked the difference between saying the Lord is a shepherd, and "The Lord is my Shepherd;" between the heathen who acknowledges God as the Father of all things, and the ransomed of his well-beloved, who behold in the Lord, "Our Father, which art in Heaven;" between "the Lord will hear us when I call upon him," and "lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world."

Missionary Anniversary at St. Louis.

The St. Louis Advocate 15 inst. gives a good account of the Anniversary held on the 5th inst. We have just time to put in the spicy paragraph that closes the editorial:

"The total amount contributed in the city during the occasion, is considerably over three thousand dollars; which was pretty well for us "border people."

We beg leave to close this hasty sketch, with the following:

"The Methodists of St. Louis to their brethren,—the Methodists of Nashville—Greeting:

Beloved Brethren,—Ye are more numerous than we; your membership among the whites is nearly or quite three hundred more than ours. Last year you, inducted, inaugurated, and installed the Missionary Society, the object of our mutual care and affections, in your midst. At the installation, there were present nearly or quite all of the beloved Bishops of the church. There was the Missionary Secretary, the Board of Managers; there were present at least six of the ten editors of the church. There were present divers other worthy, efficient and beloved brethren of the ministry. With you is the center of our church operations, and with these aids and advantages, you crowned the Missionary Society during the year of its inauguration among you, with contributions, as per report, to the amount of two thousand two hundred and ninety five dollars and six cents. Which was liberal, and for which we praise you.

This year you did us the honor to favor us with the anniversary meeting, and though we had but few of the able men who were among, and assisted you, which we regret, as it would have rejoiced us to have seen, welcomed, and heard them all; and though our meeting unfortunately happened in the midst of the most unfavorable and worst spell of weather, we have known in May for five years past, and though meetings were not held in all our churches, nor did all our members have the opportunity of contributing, yet we have placed upon the head of our beloved Missionary Society, a crown worth fully one thousand dollars more than that with which you crowned her in 1855. It is thus by deeds, rather than words, we show our loyalty to the church.

Please accept our best wishes for your prosperity and welfare, for time and eternity, and believe us to be Methodists good and true.

Yours, affectionately,

THE METHODISTS OF ST. LOUIS."

The itinerant anniversary is a good idea.

[illegible] the ministers of religion! How varied their manner of delivery! Some are cold as Greenland; others are hot as a Calabar; some are genial and serene as an Italian climate; others are boisterous, and lay about them like the mountain waves of a Tierra-del-Fuego sea; some are hard and matter-of-fact, like a Scottish hill; others are emollient and gorgeous, like an Indian landscape. And where there is true conversion, this diversity is pleasing and profitable. Every minister of Christ has, of course, his own peculiar natural endowments, and his own share of spiritual gifts, and we ought not to seek to square and trim him to the dimensions of our particular model.—Variety is pleasing, especially when the sun shines.

But there is one thing indispensable to a minister of Christ—one thing which must be present, or else, (however regularly he may have been placed in his ecclesiastical neiche by the hands of men) he is no minister at all. From the depths of a converted soul that yearns with tender compassion over lost sinners, he must fully, freely, faithfully and devotedly preach "the glorious gospel of Christ." How great the blessing to have a pastor who knows, loves and honors his Lord; and who constantly preaches "Christ crucified," instead of duties, rites and ceremonies!

Hear how one of the holy M'Cheyne's flock wrote to a friend who was living in a "dark place," with regard to this: "I thought often about you last week. I thought how highly favored we were with the means of grace, when compared with you. I consider it the greatest earthly blessing to have a faithfully-preached gospel, and sooner would I part with everything, however dear, than part with that privilege."

Reader, do you esteem a faithful gospel ministry as "the greatest earthly blessing?" Do you value the gospel above all things?" Are you showing unmistakably your appreciation of it, by attending that place of worship where it is most fully and faithfully preached? Rather suffer persecution daily than "sit in darkness," and want the truth as it is in Jesus. I beseech you to hear evangelical preaching at any sacrifice, for your soul's eternal salvation depends upon receiving "the glorious gospel of the blessed God?"

"The memory of the just is blessed—but the name of the wicked shall rot."

Singing in German Churches.

The Germans make great account of singing in their worship, as indeed everywhere else. The hymn is regarded as a very important part of the service. The German Protestant cannot be satisfied to take his seat in church without his hymn-book. If he comes without one, it is interesting to notice how much pains those who sit near him will take to supply him, or to allow him to look over with them. There is a neighborly spirit in this matter which is very pleasing; and it shows itself in various other little attentions at the place of worship.

In many of the German churches one sees little black-boards placed conspicuously about the room, on which, by means of movable figure-blocks, the numbers of the hymns to be sung are presented to the assembly, from the opening of the house. The worshipper may look out his hymns at his leisure; and those who have come early are often seen reading over most diligently the selection for the occasion.

The singing is unique. Perhaps we Americans have something to learn from it. Every one sings, man woman and child; it is a storm of song. All sing in good earnest. No one is afraid to hear on with the full power of his voice. The house is perfectly filled with sound. The organ leads, with its full German harmonies; and the tide is so strong that every individual must go with it. We do not hear incorrect singing. Indeed, the style of music is just such as must be used for congregational singing. It is very slow, and the notes are usually the same length. Indeed, it is not easy to trace any characteristic melody in the slow and unvaried succession. But one has plenty of time to find the sound, and fasten his voice fully upon it, before the next one is called for; and as all sing the principal melody or air, there is little little chance to stray away.

The great offence in this singing is, that no one seems to feel obliged to attend to the quality of the tone which he produces. Hence the performance, although hearty, is hard, and rather trying to untrained nerves. Many of the assembly seem to sing as loud as well they can, and many of these with anything but a pleasant voice. The satisfaction which one feels in this performance of sacred music is, therefore not a gratification of musical taste, but an admiration of the moral sublime—of the united act of worship in which a whole assembly lifts up the voice in praise. It is an ecclesiastical, and not a concert gratification.

The custom thus described has the advantage of fixing the attention [illegible] may study the hymn most thoroughly during the singing. And it is no small matter to hold the attention of the whole assembly—of multitudes who, perhaps, read but little in any religious books elsewhere—to such impressive and beautiful, and highly devotional hymns as are found in the German collections. This one part of the German worship must do much to familiarize the minds of the people with religious truth and sentiment.

If we are willing to resign the concert principle, and glory in the devotional, we should, perhaps, introduce into our churches something like this German usage, in place of the quartette performances which have become so fashionable.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

A Successful Agency.

VAN BUREN, Ark., May 9, 1856.

Mr Editor:—The object of this note is to inform you of the relief and success of the Crawford Institute, and in so doing, acknowledge the kindness and liberality of many of your merchants and most influential citizens. I do this, not merely as an expression of gratitude from myself and those intimately identified with the interests of the Institute, but to show them that the liberal donations which they made, so far from being lost, are auxiliary in the completion of a noble and successful enterprise. Since I assumed the agency of the Institute $12,567 50 have been subscribed, and new subscriptions are being added daily.

Col. Alfred Wallace, a worthy member of our church, and a benevolent man, dying, left a considerable sum to the Institute as a permanent endowment, which places it at once beyond a doubt of its success and perpetuity.—Not long since a beggar, a poor pensioner upon the munificence of others, now an almoner of charity, the Crawford Institute commences a career of usefulness to our people in education, morals and religion.

J. S. MCALISTER.

BE HAPPY.—A little child seven years old, one day said to her mother,

"Mother, I have learned to be happy, and I shall always be happy."

"My dear," said the mother, "how can this be done?"

"She said, "it is by not caring anything about myself, but trying to make everybody else happy."

THE CHURCHES.

M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.—The Eleventh Annual Report of the Missionary Society, shows under care 368 missions, 311 missionaries, 128 churches, 19,050 church members, 185 Sunday Schools, 25,034 children under religious instruction, 9 manual labor schools, and 485 Indian pupils. The contributions for the year amounted to $164,336, of which $22,772, the largest amount, was received from the South Carolina Conference; $20,790, the next in size, from the Alabama Conference; and $19,083 47, from the United States Government. This last amount, we think, had better not appear in the Reports, as it leads to misconception. The Church and State are not united, even in missions—but the Government, holding certain annuities for the Indian tribes, and owing them a debt on various grounds, is trying to do something for their amelioration and enlightenment. To this end, the Government employs the agency of responsible boards and bodies, of any denomination, to carry on schools among the Indians. The Government appropriation never equals the expense, but as a missionary work the Society carries it on.

Centenary College.—President Miller writes: "The center building is progressing rapidly. The walls begin to rise." On the 10th April, as already published, $9,000 were subscribed at the Joint Board meeting—well begun. Judge E. McGehee, $2,000; E. M. McGehee, jr., $1,000; C. G. McGehee, $1,000; J. W. Burruss, $1,000; John Robson, $1,000; J. C. Miller, $1,000; G. B. Miller, $1,000; a friend, $1,000.

PRESBYTERIAN.—Neither of the leading sections of the Presbyterian Church have hitherto held the sessions of their highest ecclesiastical convention in New York, and now they are both meeting there. Both the Old School and the New School, as they are properly termed, claim to be "The Presbyterian Church of the United States of America;" and, consequently, an official announcement that "The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church" is to meet on Thursday, May 15th, at eleven in the morning, in the First Presbyterian Church, is followed in the papers by another notice, equally official, that said body is to assemble, on the same day, and at the same hour, in the Madison Square Presbyterian Church. The last mentioned is the "New School" body, whose session opened with a sermon by the Rev. Wm. C. Wisner, D. D., Moderator of the last assembly.—The Rev. N. L. Rice, D. D., is to preach at the opening of the "Old School" Reformed Presbyterian Church in the United States, is to meet in the First Presbyterian Church, New York, (Rev. Dr. McLeod's,) May 21st, and be opened with a sermon by the Rev. T. W. J. Wylie, of Philadelphia.

Under the recommendation of the Presbytery of Mississppi, the Rev. Wm. Riddle is engaged in preparing a Memoir of the late Jeremiah Chamberlain, D. D. Persons holding letters from Dr. C., or in possession of facts connected with his history, will render material aid to the biographer by communicating to him such letters or facts.

The Flint River Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church, lately held its semi-annual session at the White Sulphur Springs Watering Place in Meriwether county, Ga. The proprietor of the Springs, R. T. Marks, entertained the entire body with his usual hospitality, under the roof and at the table of his own hotel. All speak in praise of Mr. M.'s liberality in this respect, and of the christian courtesy manifested by himself and lady toward those who were his welcome guests. Rev. Dr. Wilson, in noticing the fact that all the members of the Presbytery were under one roof, said:

"I have been a pretty constant attendant on Presbyteries and Synods for more than a third of a century, yet I have never been at such a meeting before, where all the body met as one family around the same table and around the same altar from day to day."

BAPTIST.—The State (Ga.) Convention lately held its annual session in the city of Savannah, to attend to the various wants of the denomination in the State at large. Thomas Stocks was chosen President, and the introductory Sermon preached by Rev. Mr. Teague, of LaGrange. Among the reports was one relative to the Mercer University, which showed that the Institution was in possession of an endowment fund of near $147,000, and the income for the past year amounting to $12,500. A resolution was adopted providing for the removal of the Christian Index from Penfield to some point to be fixed upon by the Executive Committee. It has but 2,660 subscribers, and the last two years brought it in debt $5,000.

The convention that met in Augusta, 30th April, for locating a Theological Seminary, adjourned to Louisville, Ky., a year hence. The question is not yet settled. They wait proposals, etc.

The Alabama Baptist State Convention lately met in Macon county. It was recommended to use Denominational and not Union books in Sabbath Schools; also to raise twenty-five thousand dollars by the Baptist denomination in the South, for enabling their Publication Society to carry out the several departments of publishing books, and of furnishing the means for the general distribution of a suitable religious and denominational literature.

The Report on Education says: Howard College, the offspring of the Convention, though established years since, is yet without an adequate endowment. By the energetic labors of its agent, brother DeVotie, during past years, the fund has reached the sum of about $85,000. This, for a college suitable to our wants, is but a beginning. The denomination in Alabama should not be satisfied with an amount less than that possessed by the most munificently endowed College in the State. The University of Alabama has an available fund of $30,000. The contemplated Greensboro' University, projected by the Methodist Conference, has already a subscription of near $200,000.

EPISCOPAL.—The Rev. Dr. Davis, Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in South Carolina, denies that the Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church are "successors of the apostles." He says the apostles "had no successors, and were not intended to have any. It was not the nature of their office to have successors." This rejection of the doctrine of apostolic succession by a Bishop of the Episcopal Church is received with strong approval by the Protestant Churchman, edited by the Rev. Drs. Tyng and Anthon.

BOOK EDITOR'S DEPARTMENT.

We have a score or two of new books stereotyped—that is to say, they are cast—but when the plates will be finished, quien sabe? It seems impossible to man our finishing department. The demand for books is so great that the Book Committee have requested the Agents to procure three new presses—and these will not be enough, if the House develop as it ought. We are increasing our list of Sunday-school publications as fast as possible; but it will be a long time before we shall be independent of our eclectic catalogue. With the aid of this, however, we can furnish the best libraries and other requisites for Sunday-schools on liberal terms. We are glad that the Agents have declined doing any more work for other people until our own can be dispatched.

RAMBLES AMONG MOUNTAINS: A Book for the Young. By N. M. Lamhdin, D. D. Nashville: Stevenson & Owen—1856. Price 25 cts.

Mountain scenery, the world over, is sublime—who does not love to ramble among "the everlasting mountains?" Here we have a book of rambles among the sacred mountains, and most interesting they are. Mr. Langridge is a safe guide and entertaining companion; those who accompany him in his Rambles will scarcely fail to realize both pleasure and profit. The contents are as follows: Mount Ararat; or, the Wonderful Monument—Mount Moriah; or, The Trial of Faith—Mount Pisgah; or the Glorious Sunset—Mount Gilboa; or, Death on the Battle-field—Mount Carmel; or, the Power of Prayer—Mount Tabor; or, The Lifted Veil—Mount Calvary; or, "It is Finished!"—Mount Olivet; or The Ascending Saviour—Appendix.

Affairs in Mexico.

The Boston Journal of the 5th inst., has the following:

The recent decree of President Comonfort, confiscating the church property located in the State of Puebla, the seat of the late revolution, (not in the whole of Mexico as some have supposed,) has created great excitement among the clergy, who are exceedingly reluctant to lose their hoarded wealth. When the Governor of the State communicated the decree to the Bishop, and demanded his compliance with it, that functionary protested, suggested the possibility of excommunication, and said that he should give orders to all the prelates and priests in his diocese not to resist compliance with said decree by means of physical force, but to disobey and protest against when waited upon to deliver up the property of the church in their respective districts. He said that in extreme cases, when the question was to be obedient to the Lord or to Cæsar, he would at all risks obey the Almighty.

When the officer went to claim the register's account books, etc., relating to the church property, the Bishop refused to see him, locking the doors against him; and upon their being forced, he still refused to deliver the books. These occurrences created great excitement at Puebla, and a guard was ordered out to preserve the peace.

It being understood that there would be preaching against the decree in all the churches on the Sunday following, the Governor ordered out the troops, and placed ordnance—some 12 pounders—in front of the doors, with an intimation that they would be used if required. The reverend padres did not relish this kind of cannon law, and consequently desisted from speaking their minds. The Bishop having refused to deliver the keys of the offices, it became requisite to break open the doors, and after one of two carpenters had refused to undertake the job, the portals were forced by the military.

The decree of the Governor of Puebla for the execution of the orders of the National Government, provides severe penalties for all who resist the delivery of the property. Public functionaries are to lose their offices, if they oppose; church authorities who refuse to deliver up the account books, are to be sentenced to hard labor on the public works for two to six years; all others who endeavor to hinder the execution of the decree, are threatened with like penalty,—and, if they create public disturbance, death is to be the punishment.

The importance of this bold and determined action on the part of the new Government can hardly be overestimated. The Church in Mexico has exercised an inordinate influence over the Government, and has in years past exerted a pernicious away over the masses. Its influence has of late years been weakened, however, as the idleness, bigotry, ignorance, and sensuality of the priests, have become more and more apparent. The Church of Mexico has gone on accumulating property with the covetousness of a miser, until it now possesses enormous wealth in gold and silver ornaments and images, lands, etc. Twenty years ago, had an attempt been made to sequestrate this property, it would have lighted the flames of revolution from one extremity of the country to another. Now the people seem to be comparatively apathetic upon the subject, and this first aggression upon the Church property of Puebla will prepare the way for dipping still more deeply into the hoarded wealth of the clergy.

New Grenada, S. A.

The letter of Bishop Kavanaugh, published last week, referring to the openings in Central and South America for Protestantism and a purer Christianity, says:

"That in God's Providence, Protestant ministers will soon be called for in these various sections of the country, is so certain, that young ministers who may feel their minds inclined to this part of the Lord's moral vineyard, should at once devote themselves to the study of the Spanish language, which I learn from many is a matter of easy acquisition."

Let young men ponder that. Bishop Pierce has the enterprise for missions in that section under his care. To him persons having information or suggestions to offer, or what is better, having themselves to offer, may apply. Meantime, as we are within a few days journey of those parts, and in weekly intercourse, it may be expected of us to lay before our readers accounts of the country. To this we have ever kept an eye, as our columns will show. There, we believe, besides the colored missions at home, lies the great missionary field of the Church, South.

"Amigo," of the Picayune, is now touring in New Grenada. We extract from his correspondence, dated Bogota, April 3, 1856:

CARTHAGENA A FREE PORT.

I wrote you, some days since, an account of my visit to the Emerald Mines of Muzo, and some other noteworthy objects in this vicinity; and as I have now been here two months, during which time I have endeavored to study the political condition and constitution of the country, a few remarks upon its present state and future prospects may be of some interest to your readers.

I will first mention, in passing, a law which has just been passed by Congress, as it has a very marked influence upon some extensive American interests in New Granada, and may tend to a large increase of intercourse with the United States. The city of Carthagena, with its beautiful harbor, which was once the most important city in Spanish America, having been at the same time the headquarters of its naval forces in those waters, and the centre of its richest commerce, has been declared a free port, and all goods imported there, are to be, from the 1st of September next, free of duties. As a company of New York capitalists have already opened the old Spanish dique, or canal, between that city and the Magdalena river, which is the sole commercial artery for nearly two millions of people, and have placed several line steamers on the river, this measure has a direct and unavoidable tendency to throw the whole trade of the country into their hands, and, besides, giving them the profitable carrying of it, they will receive a toll upon its transit through the line of canal which their enterprise has opened.

PRODUCTS OF THE COUNTRY.

The industrial interests of this country have received a remarkable impulse within the last few years. The extinction of the tobacco monopoly, which was abolished by Gen. Mosquera, as President of the Republic in 1847, opened the fields of the southern part of the valley of the Magdalena to this branch of labor; and so well adapted have these lands proved to the tobacco culture, that their product now stands second in the estimation of the commercial world, and the yield has increased and is increasing with great rapidity. Lands in that section of country have risen from fifty to a hundred fold in value, and labor has advanced from ten cents to eighty cents a day, for common field hands.

Another branch of trade that has increased greatly, is the getting out of the bark of the cinchona tree—the old Peruvian bark. There are vast forests of this tree in the public lands of the Republic, and so profitable has the trade been, that a feeling something akin to our own Western wild land speculation exists here. It has caused a great demand for labor, and in conjunction with the tobacco culture, has had the effect of causing a general advance in the value of labor throughout the Republic to [illegible]

The Northern Provinces of the Republic, lying east of Magdaleun river, are extensively engaged in the culture and manufacture of cotton; the gathering of coffee, which grows with great luxurinnce, (nearly all the fine coffee now exported from Maracaibo coming from those districts,) and sugar making, which is a most profitable business. Since the organization of the navigation of the Magdaleun by the American Company, the Legislatures of Velez and Socorro have passed laws authorizing their Governors to contract for the opening of roads to that river. By these measures, the products of those two very industrious provinces will soon be poured into the market of Carthagena.

PROGRESS—RELIGIOUS FREEDOM.

That I am not too sanguine in the hopes I entertain in relation to the stability and progress of New Grenada, will be evident, I think, from a simple recital of some of the labors she has accomplished during her short career as a nation, which has often been disturbed by political convulsions. She has freed the press from every trammel which the policy of the past has put upon it; she has separated the church from the State, and declared universal freedom of religious worship; she has thrown down all the old barriers that a protective system had erected in the ports of commerce; she has instituted public schools at the charge of the State; she has abolished the law of primogeniture; she has abrogated imprisonment for debt, and the death penalty for political offences; and she has invited immigration by grants of lands to actual settlers, and conferring upon them citizenship immediately on application for it. If the unquiet past has borne such rich fruit may we not hope for much good in the quiet future?

REPUBLIC OF COLOMBIA.

The general hope of the people now is that the former Republic of Colombia may be soon re-established, and it would seem as though events were tending in that direction. A large majority of the people of Venezuela are in favor of it, and the recent message of President Mosquera, of that Republic, strongly advocates it. Ecuador is ready and desirous to enter into negotiations to effect that object; and the statesmen here are seriously meditating the manner of bringing it about, now that the cloud that lately hung over the relations between New Granada and Venezuela has disappeared. If they succeed in establishing the principle of States rights here, as is now contemplated, the work will be more than half done, for they will thus lay hold, in South America, of the true secret of the rapid extension of the North American confederation. The neighboring communities will be ready and anxious to come into a Colombian confederation that respects the sovereignty of its constituent States, and only bands together free people for the purpose of mutual defence and unrestricted intercourse. Should this event take place, we may believe that the evils of the past have taught wisdom to the nations of Spanish America, and that its regeneration has begun. A South American confederation, upon the principles of our own prosperous Union, would mark a new era in the progress of republicanism, and be hailed with joy throughout all the civilized world.

POPERY AS IT IS THERE.

From Simijaca we proceeded on to the town of Chiquinquira, the site of the celebrated shrine of the Virgin, where is a miraculous picture of "Our Lady of Remedies," that has been nearly three hundred years the object of deep veneration by the Indian and mixed population of New Grenada. The time of our visit was Palm Sunday, when the church was about two-thirds filled with devotees, a thousand or twelve hundred being present, mostly ladinas. The church is a very large and massive building, belonging to the order of St. Dominic, and its income is said to be about seventy thousand dollars a year. This arises almost entirely from the votive offerings, as the lower classes, through a very large portion of the Republic, make vows to the Virgin of Chiquinquira, under all circumstances of difficulty or distress. The walls of the church are covered with relations of miracles performed, each relation being accompanied by its pictorial representation, for the benefit of the large non-reading class. The name of the person, place and date, as well as character of the miracle, are given with scrupulous minuteness; and from the fact that nearly all those cited were of recent occurrence, the oldest miracle not being more than eight or ten years back, I inferred that the older ones are from time to time removed, to make room for the rapidly accumulating instances of miraculous intervention on the part of the Virgin.

The character of the miracles was of the most ordinary kind, recoveries from sickness being by far the most numerous; others were salvation from impending dangers, as being chased by a mad bull, or a fall from a horse; and one man in an open field, was miraculously saved from a flash of lightning which got into the crown of his hat, but upon his calling upon the Virgin she conducted it out through the side and rim, he received no other damage than being knocked down in the process. In every instance the pictorial representation gives the full particulars, the sick son stretched upon a bed, the praying mother, and the picture of the Virgin in the air; or the prostrate man, the flashing lightning the goring bull, and the vicious horse suddenly tamed. A crowd of gazers was continually gazing upon them, and listening to our reading of the facts.

We sought the miracle-working picture and found it in a large shrine, which formed the reverse of the great altar. It is a miserable and apparently freshly painted daub, representing the Virgin, with a saint on either side, the figures being nearly as large as life. The legend is, that, in fifteen-hundred and eighty something, a certain person in one of the northern provinces ordered a picture of "Our Virgin Remedies" to be painted, which was done accordingly in a very inferior style. This picture was made the altar-piece of a small church; but the church got out of repair and the picture became dilapidated and almost invisible. It was finally thrown aside until a poor woman, seeking for a representation of the Virgin, found it, but sadly torn and soiled. She however erected a small altar of bamboo in a cattle pen, and set it up, and daily paid her orisons to it. One day the picture suddenly blazed forth, to the astonishment of all beholders; the head of the Virgin beamed with heavenly radiance and the saints' features became lighted up to such a degree that the villagers rushed to the spot, thinking the houses were on fire. Since then it has preserved its miracle-working powers.—The legend does not tell us when, if ever, this radiance lessened, but the picture certainly has none of it now. Such is the object of almost universal adoration among the ignorant portion of the population of New Granada, and their great reliance in time of need.

It is not improbable that the Roman Catholic Church, with its ready adaptability to the superstitions of all nations, has in this instance adopted in a modified form, the ancient religion of the Indians, or at least, some renowned shrine that was the object of their veneration. The ancient and still existing name of the town, Chiquinquira, which means the "City of the Moon," seems to confirm this supposition. It may be that here her altars burned, and her priests offered prayers and received offerings, as do the present ones in the name of "Our Lady of Remedies," and that the Virgin has merely displaced an Indian Diana in her shrine and in the hearts of her votaries. I believe it would but be the first instance of the kind recorded in the page of history. A rival miracle-working Virgin has been gotten up some few leagues from Chiquinquira, at the village of Leyra; but although she is said to do a good business, she cannot equal her elder sister that stands upon the ancient altars of the moon.

A three days' ride brought us back to Bogota, pleased with our journey, and, I trust, somewhat wiser, but certainly with a stronger faith in the institutions of our own free land than when we left it.

Truly, yours, AMIGO.

Itineracy Commended from a New Quarter.

An able correspondent of the Presbyterian, (Philadelphia,) signing himself D. X. T., in the copy of that paper May 10, urges the adoption of itinerant preaching. We give his reasons for it, or, as he prefers, his "suggestions."—They seem to be good, very. The wonder is that they have not before been appreciated in that quarter. The hit at Methodist doctrines we can afford to let pass, with this only: It is a lame reason for the success of doctrines in saving men, that they are popular. We hope that after a while this Presbyterian brother and his kin of faith, having adopted two thirds of our system—extempore preaching and itineracy—will take up also, the other and best third—doctrines. For, what is good in our system we got from the Bible, and they have as much right to it as we. The article is boldly headed

ITINERACY.

MESSRS. EDITORS—Permit me to occupy a small space in your paper with the subject indicated by the heading. I desire to do it now, because I hope the subject will claim the special attention of the next General Assembly, and that something commensurate with the spiritual wants of the country will at least commenced. I shall attempt suggestions rather than thorough discussion. For the latter there is not sufficient time, and the class of readers upon whose attention I would lay claim do not need it. "A word to the wise." The Presbytery of Huntingdon has set a worthy example in employing a missionary [illegible] bounds. But can the spreading, growing wants of the whole country be met by separate Presbyterial action? They cannot. A few strong Presbyteries may cultivate the waste places in their own bounds, but what is to become of the wider wastes of the feeble Presbyteries, and of the vast regions where there are no Presbyteries? They must remain waste, or be overrun with error. The wisest minds and the holiest hearts in the Church have for years felt and said that more must be done to cultivate the ever-enlarging fields that God is spreading out before our Church.—At the last interview but one, which the writer had with his venerated and now glorified theological teacher, Dr. Alexander, that wise and zealous friend of missions, in a very earnest conversation, urged the necessity of an enlarged itineracy. "Urge upon the brethren," said he, "whenever you have the opportunity, the importance of sending forth travelling preachers. And press the value of Christ's example in this thing. Let them set forth two and two." Our Lord was wiser than any of us, and he sent them forth two and two; and I know from personal experience that this plan has great advantages; for wherein one lacks the other may make up, and they will be mutual helps." And the venerable man waxed warm as he expatiated upon the importance of paying more regard, in our missionary efforts, to New Testament example, illustrating his remarks by interesting incidents in his own missionary history. "He being dead, yet speaketh;" and I doubt not that if that excellent man were permitted to make, to the next General Assembly, a communication upon this subject, he would say in substance, "Let the vigorous and extensive system of itineracy, modelled after Christ's plan, be at once added to our system of pastorates."

In making some further suggestions, I remark concerning itineracy—

1. It is scriptural. "The twelve" and the "seventy" were itinerant missionaries. The apostles and evangelists, after our Lord's ascension, were itinerants; and although after these, pastors and teachers were set in the Church, yet it is true that the great evangelical work by which Christianity was first spread over the world, was chiefly performed by travelling preachers. Christ's example—apostolic example—and, indeed, the whole history of the Church, point to a well organized itineracy as a most important arm of the sacramental host.

2. It is approved by the modern history of the Church, especially in this land. The Wesleys and the Whitfields were itinerants. The fathers of our own Church were, to a great extent, itinerants. The Makemies, the Brainerds, the Tennents, the Smiths, the McMillans, the McCurdys, and all the early planters of Presbyterianism, were "in journeyings often;" and it is largely to their zeal and toil, in itinerant labors, that our Church is indebted for the position she obtained in the fore ranks of the friends of God. The example of the Methodist churches enforces the same great lesson. At the close of our Revolutionary war they were scarcely known in our land. And now behold its vast extension! For although they are by no means so large a body as is generally supposed, and much allowance must be made in estimating their statistics, for the double and treble counting that results from their frequent reconversions, yet, after all such deductions, we find them, perhaps, the largest body in the land. And why? Are their ministers more learned, more mighty in the Scriptures, more consistent in Christian character, or of greater general ability? This is not pretended. Whence then their success? It is to be attributed chiefly to three causes—

1st, Their doctrines are more popular, because less offensive to the prejudices of the natural man.

2d, Their extempore preaching, and

3d, Their system of itineracy.

The last I suppose to be chief agent of their great success. Now, if, "fas est ab hoste doceri," much more ought we to learn from Christian brethren, so far as their teaching is scriptural. What is good in their system they got from the Bible, and we have as much right to it as they.

An itineracy is to our Church in this land as indispensable necessity. Without it she cannot accomplish her mission. Great as our progress has been, we are relatively falling behind. The system of settled pastors, (and alas! we are too content to be settled pastors) never will, of itself, meet the wants of this growing land. We must consent to be the "old fogy" church of the old settled States, and small and despised at that—or we must rouse up, re-organize our system of frontier scouts, throw forward pickets and rangers of our best and bravest men, get once more in earnest, and resume our original position as the Pioneer Church. An effective itineracy is now the great necessity of our Church.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

MARRIAGES.

On the 3d inst., in the city of Apalachicola, Fla., by Rev. J. B. Plummer, Dr. WM. E. HOE to Miss MARY MACLAY, daughter of J. C. Mackey, Esq., of this city.

NICARAGUAN MEETING.

A large, respectable and enthusiastic meeting was held last evening at Banks' Arcade, for the purpose of expressing the sympathy of our citizens with the Nicaraguan cause, and collecting "material aid" in behalf of the great cause of advancing "the area of liberty."

The meeting was called to order by James Beggs, Esq., and the following officers were chosen by acclamation.

President—Col. WM. CHRISTY.

Vice-Presidents—Judge Edward Rawle, F. A. Lanman, J. O. Nixon, S. F. Slatter, Jas. H. Caldwell, Saml. Henderson, Geo. W. Shaw, Jas. L. Carman, Geo. W. Morrison, Chas. A. Labuzan, Chas. V. Jonte, N. Fitzsimmons.

Secretaries—D. C. Jenkins and Major Graham.

Upon taking the chair, Col. Christy adressed the meeting in his usual eloquent and forcible manner. His remarks were greeted with enthusiastic cheers.

The following resolutions were then read and adopted with hearty unanimity:

Resolved, That this meeting fully concur in and endorse the resolutions recently adopted by the friends of the Nicaraguan cause at a public meeting held in the city of New York.

Resolved, That our Government, in recognizing the Independence of Nicaragua, has done nothing more than was expected of it as a measure loudly called for by the almost unanimous voice of the American people.

Resolved, That the recent arbitrary and impertinent interference of the Commander of the British frigate Eurydice, at anchor in the harbor of San Juan del Norte, with the free ingress and egress of American citizens through that port to and from Nicaragua, calls for prompt action on the part of our Government being in direct violation of the treaty stipulations between the two countries, as well as in violation of the laws of nations, which the British Government should be held to a strict accountability.

Resolved, That a collection be now taken up to aid such emigrants as are destitute to go out on the steamer Daniel Webster, which leaves this port on the 23d instant for San Juan del Norte; and that funds collected to be placed at the disposition of the Permanent Nicaraguan Committee in this city.

Major Frazier being loudly called for, came forward, and in a short but pertinent address, urged the necessity of prompt and generous action in the furtherance of the cause. He asked that each one should contribute what he could, and whether it were a dime or an hundred dollars, it would alike be considered as an evidence of the co-operation of the giver in the cause.

Loud calls that a subscription should be taken up were made, and accordingly several gentlemen came forward and subscribed, the hat being at the same time passed round through the crowd. Meanwhile, Jordan's Band struck up the "Star Spangled Banner" and other patriotic airs.

The Hon. P. C. Shannon, of Pennsylvania, next addressed the meeting. He stated that in this cause, the country was a unit. The North and the South were united hand in hand, heart and heart. Who, then, shall attempt to stay our progress? Great Britain, by her recent conduct, has given indication of such a desire; but let us bear it in mind that we have met her before in hostility, and who says we may not ready to do so again? Our possessions upon the Pacific shore make it necessary that the Isthmus should be open to our people, and it behooved our Government to cure that it should be so.

The speaker was listened to with attention and frequently cheered. The lateness of the hour prevents our entering more into detail.

Col. W. J. A. Roberts next spoke at length, and in much enthusiasm. He was followed by Mr. Fraser, who was speaking when we left the room.

Previous to adjournment, the President announced that on to-morrow (Wednesday) evening there would be another meeting in aid of the same good cause, held at the Louisiana Hotel, opposite St. Mary's Market.—[Crescent, 21st.

The Scientific American gives an account of a new Artesian well being bored in the Avenue Charles X, on the angle of the Avenue St. Cloud at Petit Pare, near Paris, for the purpose of supplying the ornamental lakes of the Bois de Boulogne. An interesting letter has been communicated to the Academy by M. Mauss on the subject, from which it appears that M. Degoud, the engineer, has undertaken to bore a well 29 inches in diameter, and continue the sinking, if necessary, to the depth of 2,500 feet, and thus obtain a daily supply of 10,000 cubic metres of water, being nearly equal to the volume of water delivered by the Ourcq through the Pont de la Tournelle, at Paris. The boring was commenced on August 2d last, with a diameter of 41 inches. For some time when the operations were through marl and chalk, the average daily progress was 16½ feet; then, through sand, it was reduced to 8½ and 10 feet; and now, having reached another stratum of chalk, containing boulders, the speed is 5 feet, the depth being already upwards of 1,000 feet, and by May 1st, it is expected that the enormous depth of 2360 feet from the surface will be attained, being more than 490 feet deeper than the Artesian well at Grenelle. The motive power is a steam engine of 24 horse power.

Dyspepsia, in all its various forms of distressed humanity, resulting often from small causes like indigestion, producing Constipation, Flatulency, Nausea in the stomach, and a thousand other ailments tending to prostrate or annihilate the physical man; any and all of these ills yield like magic to Dr. Hostetter's celebrated Stomach Bitters, giving it a reputation it bears of reinstating to health thousands who have tried its vitalizing and strengthening influence upon their first despairing and broken constitutions. All should use Hostetter's Bitters during this warm weather, as it is the most effectual preventive of disease known. For sale by Daly & Holmes, corner Exchange street; Alexander Norton & Co., 2 Peydras street. ? 24 1t

A learned writer, Deudy, says: "Dry-ness smears his brilliant visions of poesy, ate raw flesh; and Radcliffe adopted the same plan. Green tea and coffee. If you do sleep, induce dreaming. Baptista Porta, for procuring the most pleasing dreams, swallowed horse dungle after dinner. Indigestion, and that condition which is termed a weak stomach, constitute a most fruitful source of visions. The immediate or direct influence of repletion, is totally otherwise in its sensations and the disposition in waking moments, is one of its power to derange the circulation of the brain and mental faculties in sleep. People who are troubled with indigestion, may surely get relief from Hoofland's German Bitters, which is sold exclusively in this country by Dr. C. M. Jackson, No. 126 Arch street, Philadelphia, and by his agents. See advertisement. my17 1m

A Masterpiece Outdone.—We have lately learned that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was the Ultima Thule in the line of cough, and that nothing had been or would be invented which could surpass it (this fine point of excellence as a medicine that we are confidently assured by those competent to speak on the subject), but Ayer's new Pills excel in their sanative efficacy even that widely celebrated medicine of his skill. He has succeeded in making them not only pleasant to take, but powerful to cure the large class of complaints which require a cathartic remedy. [Lancaster Argus, Ky.

They are for sale by J. WRIGHT & CO., 2m and all city druggists.

Startling and Interesting Facts

CONCERNING

CHOLERA, DIARRHEA, DYSENTERY, COLIC, and

Summer Complaints, etc.

A fact that should startle is this; One feels a slight uneasiness in the bowels, a slight diarrhea comes on, which is little thought of: in a short time, in a few hours, perhaps, seldom more. It is attended with sickness of the stomach, a most sinking weakness, rapid discharges, coldness, cramps, agonies, nausea, collapse, DEATH—and yet all this fatal result from a disregard of the warning, premonitory Diarrhœa, and neglect of some timely provision of a safe and sure remedy that kind Providence has made easy to all.

Such a remedy is made public from the strongest desire to rescue the exposed, under the best substantial conviction that it is safe in its good effects, and wild it on hand, no one heeding warning and using the remedy, need be a victim to the above.

DR. BILLINGS'

CARMINATIVE and ASTRINGENT SYRUP

IS THIS SURE REMEDY.

To the advice and urgent request of hundreds, whose lives have been saved—of many even when apparently in the very struggles of death—he has been induced to make still more known to give a wider publicity to a remedy so greatly successful.

The perfection which he and others ascribe to this remedy appears beyond the power of medicine to possess; yet the truthfulness of the claim is most thoroughly established, and will be fully confirmed by calling on the individuals who have witnessed its effects, and used it with complete success; some of whose names we are authorized to give.

For Cholera, Colic, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Bloody Flux, Summer Complaint and Weakness of the Bowels, this medicine is offered as a certain remedy. This is the medicine that arrested that horrible disease so prevalent among the Indian soldiers. The officers first commenced its use, after which they gave it their soldiers, and cured in every case without exception. I would refer to the officers and others who resided to the war with Mexico. Sold by

O. O. WOODMAN,
corner of Common and Magazine streets, New Orleans.
J. WRIGHT, & CO.,
21 and 101 Chartres street.
JOS. TUCKER, Mobile.
W. H. FOX, Natchez, Miss.

THE MARITIME LAW.

The Peace Congress at Paris, after arranging matters and things to their liking in Europe and Asia, concluded to enter upon the domains of Father Neptune and regulate the mode and manner in which privateering and blockading should be conducted in future. We need not express our belief that they have undertaken a harder job than they anticipated.

The following is the "Declaration respecting maritime law, signed by the plenipotentiaries of Great Britain, Austria, France, Prussia, Russia, Sardinia and Turkey, assembled in Congress at Paris, April 16, 1856:"

[TRANSLATION.]

The plenipotentiaries who signed the Treaty of Paris, of the 30th of March, 1856, assembled in Conference, considering:

That maritime law in time of war has long been the subject of deplorable disputes:

That the uncertainty of the law and of the duties in such a matter gives rise to differences of opinion between neutrals and belligerents, which may occasion serious difficulties, and even conflicts:

That it is consequently advantageous to establish an uniform doctrine on so important a point:

That the plenipotentiaries assembled in Congress at Paris cannot better respond to the intentions by which their Governments are animated, than by seeking to introduce into the international relations fixed principles in this respect:

The above mentioned plenipotentiaries, being duly authorized, resolved to concert among themselves as to means of attaining this object; and, having come to an agreement, have adopted the following solemn declarations:

1. Privateering is and remains abolished.

2. The neutral flag covers enemy's goods, with the exception of contraband of war.

3. Neutral goods, with the exception of contraband of war, are not liable to capture under enemy's flag.

4. Blockades, in order to be binding, must be effective, that is to say, maintained by a force sufficient really to prevent access to the coast by the enemy.

The Governments of the undersigned plenipotentiaries engage to bring the present declaration to the knowledge of the States which have not taken part in the Congress of Paris, and invite them to accede to it.

Convinced that the maxims which they now proclaim cannot but be received with gratitude by the whole world, the undersigned plenipotentiaries doubt not that the efforts of their Governments to obtain the general adoption thereof will be crowned with full success.

The present declaration is not and shall not be binding, except between those powers who have acceded or shall accede to it.

Done at Paris, the 16th of April, 1856.

(Signed)

BUOL-SCHAUENSTEIN, HATZFELDT,
HUBNER, ORLOFF,
WALEWSKI, BRUNNOW,
BOURQUENEY, CAVOUR,
CLARENDON, DE VILLAMARINA,
CUWLEY, AALI,
MANTEUFFEL, MEHEMMED DJEMIL.

The reflection is a very comfortable one that the foregoing "declaration" "shall not be binding" except upon powers that agree and accede to it! Governments of countries not represented in the Paris Congress, are allowed a breathing spell—not expected to come into the arrangement all at once. We ought all to throw up our hats and shout with delight over the fact that, four exhausted nations—the controllers of the Paris Congress—have permitted outsiders a chance for decent deliberation, without compelling them to come into their terms, nolens volens.

The coolness of the "Declaration" is quite refreshing. It is one of the coolest specimens of diplomatic assurance on record. The plenipotentiaries decree that "privateering is and remains abolished." The practicality of this declaration remains to be established. It is possible we may be engaged in a war with Great Britain before the lapse of many months. If such unhappily prove the case, we don't think the foregoing part of the "Declaration" would be worth the paper it is printed upon. We "guess," in less than three months after a declaration of war, there would be at least one thousand American privateers afloat in search of British merchantmen and rich prizes; and we furthermore "guess" that number would be continually augmenting until no British commercial vessel would be safe unless under cover of the guns of some British war ship. These "guesses," although Yankeeisms, are pretty well sustained by the events of the past. We can point to the history of the last war as an illustration of their probable verity in future.

All of the nations, parties to the Paris Peace Congress, would find it the hardest thing they ever undertook to "abolish" American privateering, if they should all, en masse, declare war against the United States. Our privateers would swarm like hornets on every ocean, and would sting to the death everywhere.

"Blockades, in order to be binding, must be effective," etc., saith the reckoned Congress of Paris. We shall see whether the unrepresented world will pay much attention to this delicious morsel of assumption. In the little and insignificant country known as the United States, we don't believe it will exercise the smallest influence. We shall probably insist upon being judges of the "binding" or "effective" nature of any blockade our government may proclaim, just as we shall in the matter of privateering.

The foregoing "declaration" was an artful ruse of generous old mother England to bring the moral influence of Europe to bear against us in the event of war. Knowing that our navy is comparatively weak, and her navy overwhelmingly strong, she seeks to enforce a new law of nations that would release her from the risk, and deprive us of the benefit of our privateers. She would fight us war vessel with war vessel when she knows we have not one war vessel to her five, which would give her a vast advantage at the commencement of a conflict! The attempt is a shrewd one, but the game will not win.

PRODUCE.—The receipts continue large for the season of the year, of cotton, tobacco, flour, corn, pork, lard, bacon, bagging, rope, oats, wheat, and other articles too numerous to describe. What adds to the general interest of these increasing receipts, are the good prices, speedy sales, and prompt pay which attend their advent in our market. The receipts of flour since the commencement of the commercial year, are within a few barrels of 900,000, which is almost double the quantity for the same period of time last year. The receipts of pork are above the quantity for the same time, and there is only a slight deficiency in other articles, and a large increase in many others. There is no diminution in the facilities for shipping either to coastwise or foreign ports. Vessels are arriving and will continue to arrive for weeks to come. A decline is even expected in the present low rates. Vessels are here and they must be employed in some way, whether such employment will or will not pay for a new coat of paint at the end of the season.

EXPENSIVE PETS.—The present royal family of England enjoy an annual income from the public purse of Great Britain of £1,087,693. The income of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert alone, including palace building and repairing, is £977,693 per annum. Rather costly exotics these. After paying all this John Bull has to do his own government, or rather work his own "circumlocution office," and pay all the little bills thereof. Johnny is a wise gentleman who keeps a dog and barks himself.

N. O. SCHOOL OF MEDICINE.—The Faculty have purchased four lots of ground on the corner of Common and Villere streets, opposite the Charity Hospital, on which they are erecting a splendid building—all at their own expense. Having thus put their own shoulders to the wheel, and done so much to establish an institution that must be of great benefit to our city by causing a large amount of money to be brought and spent here annually, they now appeal to the liberality of the citizens for aid in procuring a museum of anatomical and other preparations to illustrate the science they teach. Surely, they will not be disappointed in their hope of getting this aid. New Orleans, above all others, is the place to educate Southern physicians.

☞ The New York Courier des Etats Unis ridicules as absurd the rumor which has been circulated that the American officers of the Crimean Commission were rudely refused permission to visit and inspect the fortifications of Paris, by the military authorities of that city. No permission, says that paper, is necessary to visit any part of the fortifications; they are open to the public. It is, therefore, not likely, in the opinion of our French cotemporary, that any such permission was ever applied for, or that it was discourteously refused.

Chicago seems likely to become a second Amsterdam. The city is built so little above the level of the lake that a large part of it is to the process of being raised to secure better drainage. A company has lately purchased a tract of 150 acres, at $4000 per acre, through which will be constructed seven canals, each one hundred feet in width, with streets 80 feet in width between the canals, each street to be provided with railroad tracks. This improvement will give great increase to the water front of the city, and great facility for the expeditious shipment or lading of goods.

A NEW POST-OFFICE.—The Postmaster General has established a new post-office at Raceland, in the Parish of Terrebone, Charles G. Thibodaux, Esq., has received the appointment of Postmaster. Raceland is forty miles, by railroad, from New Orleans.

Magnetic Telegraph.

CRAMPTON TO BE DISMISSED.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Lord Clarendon's dispatch, declining to recall Mr. Crampton, was received to-day, per Asia, and is very voluminous. It is understood that the President is determined to dismiss him.

Kansas Affairs.

ST. LOUIS, May 16.—Dispatches from Kansas say that Governor Shannon has sent an express to Lexington, Missouri, with the necessary papers to arrest Governor Robinson.

Markets.

NEW YORK, May 17.—Our Cotton Market is improving with sales of 2000 bales. Orleans Middling 10⅞; Orleans Fair 11¼. Uplands Middling 10¼.

Flour firm—Ohio $6 to $6 37½.

SECOND DISPATCH.

Crampton Dismissed.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Mr. Crampton will be certainly notified of his dismissal to-day.

KANSAS AFFAIRS.

ST. LOUIS, May 16.—Robinson having been indicted by the Grand Jury for high treason, the Marshal and two deputies have gone to Missouri with Governor Shannon's requisition for him.

Brown, editor of the "Herald of Freedom," was arrested while attempting to escape from the territory.

Reeder has fled, but it is thought he would be captured.

Sheriff Jones is convalescent.

Judge Fane, of Georgia, has been appointed sheriff during Jones' sickness, and has been shot at twice while discharging his duty.

Fifteen hundred men, with two pieces of artillery and Sharpe's rifles, have fortified Lawrence, and mean to resist all attempts to arrest the indicted persons.

About one thousand men responded to the Governor's proclamation, and are encamped in the vicinity of Lawrence and Lecompton for the purpose of compelling the people of Lawrence to acknowledge the organic laws of the Territory.

Markets.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Good Ohio, $5 87½ to $6 and $6 37½; Western Mixed Corn, 58c. Western Mess Pork, $19 25. Whisky, 26½c.

CINCINNATI, May 16.—Flour, $5 00 to $5 60; Whisky is selling at 24½c; Lard 9½ to 9¾c.

River Intelligence.

LOUISVILLE, May 16.—The river is falling, with four feet on the falls and seven and a half feet in the canal.

MR. CRAMPTON NOT DISMISSED.

IMPROVEMENT BILL VETOED.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Mr. Crampton did not receive his dismissal on Saturday. The Cabinet are awaiting the arrival of the Asia's mails.

Senate.—The President sent a message to the Senate vetoing the bill for the improvement of the mouth of the Missouri and St. Clair flats—giving as a consideration, the principles of the message vetoing the River and Harbor bill of 1854.

House.—The House passed a joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to dispatch a vessel to the Cape Verdes Islands, with provisions privately contributed.

The Markets.

NEW YORK, May 20th.—Straight State Flour is selling $5 25 to $6 00; Western Mixed Corn at 57 to 58 cents; Mess Pork at $19 12½; Whisky at 27½ to 28 cents.

CINCINNATI, May 20th.—Flour is selling at $5 25 to $5 70; Whisky is better and is quoted at 21 cents; Mess Pork is selling at $16 00.

River Intelligence.

LOUISVILLE, May 20th.—The river is falling slowly, with three feet water on the falls, and six and a half feet in the canal.

LATER FROM KANSAS.

Battle Expected—Great Excitement.

ST. LOUIS, May 20.—Later intelligence from Kansas states that the people are responding to Governor Shannon's proclamation in large numbers. Six hundred men, equipped, have assembled at Lecompton, and five hundred more at Franklin. The greatest excitement prevails throughout the Territory, and a battle is expected shortly.

Important from Kansas.

LOUISVILLE, May 21.—A correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, writing from Leavenworth on the 17th inst., says that Wednesday is fixed as the day to make the attack on Lawrence. Major Buford's company had been furnished with United States arms by Governor Shannon. The Free-State men were in want of arms and ammunition.

The Kansas correspondent of the St. Louis Democrat says that Mr. Cox, of Lawrence, had waited on Marshal Donaldson to ask his ultimatom. The Marshal replied that every person against whom process had been issued, should be surrendered, and that all munitions of war at Lawrence should be given up; and that the citizens of Lawrence must pledge themselves to obey implicitly all existing enactments. The citizens held a meeting and promised to comply, but the Marshal replied that he did not believe in promises, and that he considered them traitors and rebels.

CONCLUSION OF BENTON'S THIRTY YEARS' REVIEW.—The following is the two hundredth and last chapter of Col. Benton's history of his Senatorial life. The second volume contains 788 pages. The work is now printing by the Messrs Appleton, N. Y., and will soon be before the public:

I have finished the view which I proposed to take of the Thirty Years' working of the Federal Government during the time that I was part of it—a task undertaken for a useful purpose, and faithfully executed, whether the object of the undertaking has been attained or not. The preservation of what good and wise men gave us has been the object; and for that purpose it has been a duty of necessity to show the evil, as well as the good, that I have seen, both of men and measures. The good I have exultingly exhibited: happy to show it, for the adduration and imitation of posterity; the evil I have stintedly exposed, only for correction and for the warning example.

I have seen the capacity of the people for self-government tried at many points, and always found equal to the demands of the occasion. The other trials, how going on, remain to be decided to settle the question of that capacity. 1. The election of President; and whether that election is to be governed by the virtue and intelligence of the people, or to become the spoil of intrigue and corruption? 2. The sentiment of political nationality; and whether it is to remain co-extensive with the Union, leading to harmony and fraternity, or divide into sectionalism, ending in hate, alienation, separation and civil war.

An irresponsible body (chiefly self-constituted and mainly domicated by professional office-seekers and office-holders,) have usurped the election of President; for the nomination is the election, so far as the party is concerned; and always making it with a view to their own profit in the monopoly of office and plunder.

A sectional question now divides the Union, arraying one-half against the other, becoming more exasperated daily—which has already destroyed the benefits of the Union, and which, unless checked, will also destroy its form.

Confederate republics are short-lived—the shortest in the whole family of Governments. Two diseases beset them—corrupt election of the chief magistrate, when elective; sectional contention, when interest or ambition are at issue. Our confederacy is now laboring under both diseases; and the body of the people, now, as always, honest in sentiment and patriotic in design, remain unconscious of danger—and even become instruments in the hands of their destroyers.

If what is written in these chapters shall contribute to open their eyes to these dangers, and rouse them to the resumption of their electoral privileges, and the suppression of sectional contention, then this view will not have been written in vain. If not, the writer will still have one consolation—the knowledge of the fact that he has labored in his day and generation to preserve and perpetuate the blessings of that union and self-government which wise and good men gave us.

There is "more truth than poetry" in the foregoing remarks of Col. Benton. They contain matter for profound cogitation—for deep and faithful reflection. "Confederate republics are short-lived," and so will ours be, unless the wretched system of levelling up, instead of levelling down, is abandoned!

The New York Mirror is responsible for the following story, which is good, if true:

BISHOP HUGHES AND THE NICARAGUA PADRE.—When the Padre sent by Walker as Minister to the United States arrived in this city, he lost no time in calling on Bishop Hughes, before whom he knelt and received a blessing. On rising to his feet, the Archbishop, not knowing exactly the official position of the Padre, said: "Do you know anything of that cutthroat, Walker?" The Padre bowed and replied, "He is my friend; I am his minister"—and hastily left with "a flea in his ear."

THE CURRENT WEEK.

The year goes on, growing in glory and brilliancy, like the young tendrils and tender shoots of a tree. The green and gold become brighter in its complexion and new wings are given to help it climb that heavenly path which leads to the commencing decade of each year. The new shoots sharper arrows—the birds sing sweeter songs, and everywhere, and in every way, nature proves the progress that is being made.

Monday, May 19.—St. Dunstan, A. D., 988; and St. Peter Celestine, Pope, 1296, are the day's patrons, with the monk's hood, dedicated to the former, for the plant.

In 1536, Anne Boleyn, queen of Henry VIII, was executed by his orders, in order that another might be wedded by him. Her virtues and surpassing beauty have been chronicled by many historians.

In 1692 a great sea battle was fought off La Hague.

In 1783 the records and charter of the colony of Connecticut were found and taken from the old charter oak, at Hartford, which still lives.

Tuesday, May 20.—St. Bernardin of Sienna, 1444; St. Ethelbat, 793; and St. Yvo, 1114, are the saints of the day.

The horse-chestnut, dedicated to St. Bernardin, is the plant.

In 1755, a colonial expedition, under Gens. Monckton and Winslow, consisting of 3,000 men, sailed against Nova Scotia.

In 1781, Gen. Cornwallis entered Petersburg, Virginia.

The day is not chronicled as having been productive of any great event in English history.

Wednesday, May 21.—St Felix, of Cantalacio, A. D. 1587; St. Goodrich, 1170; and St. Hospitius, 681; are the day's patrons.

The ragged robin, dedicated to St. Felix, is the flower.

In 1542, De Soto, the discoverer of the Mississippi, died on the banks of that stream, above the present city of New Orleans, whither he had journeyed from Florida, in quest of Bimini, or the fountain of life. His history is a romance of reality which would seem almost absurd in a novel; but which, with the attesting proof that it professes, is more interesting than any story ever written. Father Marquette subsequently floated down the river, but De Soto has the honor of having first sailed into it.

Thursday, May 22.—St. Yvo, 1303; St. Basilissa, St. Castus and Acmilius, 250, with several others of no greater note, are the days' guardians; and the yellow star of Bethlehem, dedicated to St. Yvo, is the flower.

None of the European histories chronicle any feat of arms greater than a Carlist battle in Spain, 1827, in which the Carlists, by means of a surprise, were successful over the royal forces.

In 1847, General Doniphan reached General Wool's headquarters, from Chihuahua, having performed a march from California and New Mexico which has no prototype upon military records, for length and severity, if the great anabasis of Xenophon only is excepted.

Friday, May 23.—St. Julia, 5th century; St. Desiderius, 7th century, and another of the same name, 612, are the day's patrons.

The lilacs, dedicated to St. Julia, is the flower.

No one of the English histories records any more valuable story concerning the 23d, than Mr. Jemmy Gordon had birth and being then; a gentleman, whose conduct savors more of the insane hospital and the madhouse, than of that which is reasonable and manly.

In our own chronicles, the Indian wars of the West have a prominent part; Tecumseh having raised his tribes of savages, and prepared them for their depredations at that time, and General Harrison having received his orders to defend the frontiers.

Saturday, May 24.—St. Vincent of Lerins, 450; Sts. Donatian and Rogatian, 287, and St. John de Prado, are the saints. The monkey poppy, dedicated to St. Vincent, is the flower.

European history gives us no event of importance upon this day.

In 1632 Sir John Philips brought the new colonial charter to Boston, which was received with military and civic honors among the people, and which remained in force for many years, notwithstanding the opposition made to it. That charter formed the foundation of the present constitution, and has remained in its influence to the present day.

In 1780 a bloody battle occurred between the Indians and settlers in Michigan, wherein the latter were at length successful; winning for themselves a peace which remained unbroken and inviolate for many years.

Sunday, May 25.—St. Mary Magdalen, of Pazzie, 1607; St. Urban, A. D. 223; St. Aldhelm; St. Gregory, Pope, 1085; and St. Maximus, are the day's saints.

The common avens, dedicated to St. Urban, is the flower.

The English and French nations are equally barren af eventfulness, so far as this day is concerned; and our own history chronicles nothing of importance.

The history of St. Aldhelm is the most important matter with which we have met in our researches, but is not, in itself, of such importance as to merit particular mention. We are bound to suppose, from the day's dryness, that it has not been prominent in politics, or polemics, and that, instead of the white mark with which Horace preserved great days, it deserves only a black mark and feeble mention.

AN ELECTIVE JUDICIARY.—Hon. N. P. Talmadge, formerly United States Senator from the State of New York, has written a letter to the National Intelligencer, of which the following is the concluding paragraph:

I find the same change in public sentiment (concerning the election of Judges) in the State of New York. It is becoming general, without reference to party predilection. The Judiciary every where under the elective system has gradually sunk in public estimation, although there are high and honorable exceptions to the general remark. As a whole it has vastly depreciated. At first it was hoped that the elective system would be kept free from all party strife, and that the people would be left to their own unbiased judgment. That reasonable expectation has been disappointed. Nominations for Judges are now procured by mere politicians and to subserve mere party purposes. The great mass of the people have nothing to do with bringing forward candidates, and often do not feel sufficient interest to attend a judicial election. In this state of things what is to be done? It was easy to fall into the system—facilis descensus—but the revocare gradum—how to get back again—that is the question. I know of no better way than to agitate the subject, and to present to the public mind the enormous evils of the system through the public press. Public sentiment is already making gigantic strides in that direction, and in due time will be ready to return to the old and only true system.

Mr. W. T. Chappel has furnished the Edgefield (S. C.) Advertiser a letter which he has lately received from Hon. I. S. Brooks, giving valuable information to those of our citizens wishing to emigrate to Kansas, on a subject which has caused much inquiry, but which has not before been satisfactorily answered:

"I have the laws of Kansas before me, and will copy the clause relative to the qualification of voters:

"Every free white male citizen of the United States, and every free male Indian who is a citizen by treaty or otherwise, and over the age of twenty-one years, who shall be an inhabitant of the Territory, and of the country or district in which he offers to vote, and shall have paid a Territorial tax, shall be a qualified elector for all elective offices."

This is the clause, and if you are in Kansas but one week, and pay the Territorial tax (which is only one dollar) one day before you offer to vote, your right will not be denied.

A REVOLUTIONARY RELIC.—A week or two since, says the Westchester Village Record, an unexploded bomb-shell was plowed up in the field of Mr. Caleb Brinton, jr., in Birmingham township, Chester county, about a quarter of a mile north of the village of Chadd's Ford, and on the bloody battle ground of September 11th, 1777. It contained a considerable quantity of powder, and is yet a perfect missile of death, with the exception of having lost its match and being considerably rusted. The field in which it was found is within a stone's throw of the Brandywine, and lies to the vale directly between the hills on which the American army under Wayne, and the British under Kuyphausen were stationed.

LEAP FROG.—Who but Hood could thus make this rude game subserve a poetical purpose? Hear him in his description of a storm at sea:

> The sun went down with a blood-red flame,
> And the sky grew cloudy and black,
> And the tumbling billows like leaps frog came
> Each near the other's back.

The Philadelphia Ledger calls the western cities and towns "young communities which have not yet had time together the rust of fogyism and prejudice."

The new line of steamships between Hamburg and New York, will commence running on the 1st of the coming month.

SYMPATHY FOR NICARAGUA.—A mass meeting of citizens opposed to British interference on the American Continent, and for the purpose of expressing sympathy with the cause of liberty in Nicaragua, was held at National Hall, Canal street, last evening. A band of music was in attendance and an appropriate transparency was erected in front of the Hall. The room was entirely filled, so that many could not get in, there being about two thousand persons present. The meeting was called to order by Alderman John Clancy, who nominated as President J. McKibben, Esq., who was unanimously elected. A long list of Vice-Presidents and Secretaries were then elected.

Capt. Isaiah Rynders offered a resolution to the effect: That the Nicaraguan people, after struggling ten years for their liberty, had a right to call upon General Walker to aid them. Gen. Walker had a right to assist them, in obedience to that invitation. That the American Government should be the first to recognize the independence of Nicaragua. That Americans, as citizens, have a right to sympathize with the cause of liberty everywhere; and that the British Government has no right to call us to account for such sympathy. That American interests will not allow a foreign power to rule in Nicaragua, unless that power is friendly to American interests. That the existence of the present Government of Nicaragua is essential to the liberty of that people. That the neutrality laws, by imposing conditions upon America, without exacting any return from England, are a disgrace to republicanism, and should be considered as a disgrace to the American people. That the American people should be protected all over the world in the exercise of their rights, whether they be in Japan, Panama or Nicaragua. That the cold-blooded butchery of American citizens at Virgin Bay by the heartless Costa Rican savages with British arms in their hands, is an outrage which should be punished. That the aggressive spirit of the British Government should receive a check, by the enforcement of the Monroe doctrine. That General Walker, surrounded as he is by a band of savages ten times the number of his assistants, needs material aid and shall have it!

The resolutions were adopted with an unanimous vote.—[New York Sun, 19th.

FROM ASPINWALL.—We have been allowed to make the following extract from a letter from the vice Consul at Aspinwall to Mr. Fletcher, the United States Consul at that port, who is now in our city on leave of absence for the benefit of his health, and who leaves here to-morrow for New Orleans on his way back to the Isthmus, being compelled to return prematurely without accomplishing the object of his visit.

The letter is dated the 5th inst., and came by the Philadelphia to Havana, and thence by the Empire City—the Philadelphia having left Aspinwall in the morning, and the Geo. Law in the evening of the following day, some six or eight hours intervening.

"Everything here is in a state of excitement, and I am anxiously looking for a vessel of war from Havana or San Juan. The St. Mary's is yet in Panama.

"The Geo. Law is only just coming in sight. Her delay has caused great excitement among the passengers per Uncle Sam, as there are 800 additional per Sonora at Panama, and the Philadelphia's. It was feared, would be the only steamer to accommodate them.

"8th.—We had an awful time here last night, there being no less than 2500 passengers in town. I had to give up every corner of the Consulate to women and children. However, they all go off to-day.

"The Philadelphia will got up to New York via Havana, and the Geo. Law direct.

"The bark Lowell was recently lost at Boca del Toro."—[Mobile Tribune, 17th.

PRACTICAL AMALGAMATION.—The liberty allowed under the laws of Massachusetts, for intermarriages between the white and black races, is but rarely taken advantage of in Boston. A few days since a colored man of twenty-eight years, born in Norfolk, Virginia, was married to an Irish girl of nineteen years. Formerly such marriages were forbidden by law there, but the prohibition had no practical effect.

THE MACHINERY OF THE FRIGATE MERRIMAC.—A statement has obtained circulation in some of our exchanges, to the effect that the machinery of the Merrimac was a failure, which statement is entirely a misrepresentation of the facts. The most competent officers and engineers, after a thorough examination, have pronounced the machinery as not only successful, but admirably executed.

[Washington Union, 10th.

THE TORNADO IN UNION PARISH.—Last Saturday a week ago, a fearful tornado swept over the lower part of Union Parish, doing immense damage. Dwellings, gin-houses, negro cabins, etc., were torn down and blown away. On the road leading from Monroe to Farmerville, the trees are piled up upon one another to an incredible height, rendering it absolutely impassable. Our informant thinks it will require several weeks to repair the damage sustained.

[Monroe (Ouachita) Register, 10th.

SOLITUDE.—We sometimes read of hermitages—of secluded spots, sequestered nooks, and such like localities, that are deemed Edens by those only who are fond of romantic habitations—we have a taste for them once in a great while; but a late New Hampshire paper has put the finish on our imaginations at this kind, by relating an incident to the life of a lady who has but recently left a solitary hermitage and moved into the "white settlements" of Maine. It seems that more than ten years ago her husband (a Boston merchant) failed in business, and determined to retire to the country, where by hard labor he could earn and lay by sufficient to purchase himself a farm, and thereafter lead the life of a quiet tiller of the soil. In one of his rambling fishing excursions he fell in with a lovely retreat, fifteen or twenty miles from the nearest habitation, on the bleak shores of one of the Northern lakes. Here he removed, with his little family, and by active exertions in fishing, collecting furs, etc., secured a competence sufficient to answer his purpose. The spot being visited only by amateur fishermen during the warmest season of summer, eight months of each year neither himself or his wife saw any human being save their own family, and during their residence of eight years the wife never met with one of her own sex! We call that living almost "solitary and alone," and it shows how exclusively the welfare and happiness of a family engage the heart and soul of woman. "Wherever thou goest I will go—thy home shall be my home."

During the past month there occurred 32 fires where the loss exceeded $10,000 in each instance, and the aggregate loss resulting reaches the enormous aggregate of $1,847,000. A fire at Galena destroyed property to the value of $300,000; one at Baltimore, $171,000; one at Philadelphia, $600,000; one at Boston, $200,000; and one at Nashville, Tennessee, $200,000. In addition, destructive conflagrations have swept through the forests of Virginia, inflicting serious losses.

The weather yesterday was cloudy and cold. Fire was a very pleasant addition to the comforts of the "Sitting rooms" of old couples; although voted unnecessary by the "newly mated."

[Nashville Patriot, 8th.

WOUNDED.—An Irishman named Hughes was found asleep on the street, night before last, by officer Swords. When the somnolent Paddy was aroused from his slumbers, he commenced a vigorous bombardment of brickbats on the officer, who was finally compelled, in self-defence, to shoot the irate son of Erin. We understand that Hughes was severely, though not dangerously wounded.

[Vicksburgh Whig 15th.

Among the new and appropriate names for ladies' mantles, are "Wife's bliss," the "Husband's torture," the "Banker's terror," the "Notary's joy," the "Poor man's horror," the "Rich man's dread," the "Maiden's joy," and the "Girls delight."

An exchange asks very innocently if it is any harm for young ladies to sit in the lapse of ages.

Our opinion is that it all depends on the kind of ages selected. Those from eighteen to twenty-five, we think, are rather hazardous.

A SCULPTOR.—At the ——, the other evening, one gentleman pointed out a dandified looking individual to his friend as a sculptor! "What!" said his friend, "such a looking chap as that a sculptor!" Surely you must be mistaken." "He may not be the kind of one you mean," said the informant, "but I know that he chiselled a tailor out of a suit of clothes last week."

John Faust, or Faustus, of Mentz, in Germany, was the inventor of printing, for which he was called a conjuror, and his art the Black Art. As he kept a constant succession of boys to run on errands, who were always very black with the stain of ink, these they called devils. Some of them being raised to be his apprentices, he was said "to have raised many a devil."

TRUTH.—A cannon ball, striking the oaken ribs of a man-of-war, pierces straight through them, scattering destruction on all sides, until its force is expended; but if it impinge upon the wave, it swerves aside and is conquered by their unresisting softness, and finally subsides without injury. So the first burst of passion, increased and rendered more dangerous by a stubborn opposition, will generally yield and fall harmless when it is met by softness and submission.

A young beauty beheld, one pleasant evening, two horses running off at a locomotive speed, with a light wagon. As they approached, she was horrified at recognizing in the occupants of the vehicle two gentlemen of her acquaintance. "Boys," she screamed in terror, "jump out—quick—jump out—especially Tom."

It is needless to say that her sentiments as to Tom were from that time forth no secret.

The following rich incident actually occurred not long ago in the recitation room of a law school not a thousand miles from Lebanon:

One of the professors, to test the ability of a student he was examining, propounded this

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Angel Music.

When the twilight weeps beath the azure veil,
And the sunset flowers sigh as the day grows pale,
Then an angel comes on her silver wings,
And a golden harp in her hand she brings;
Soft, sweet and low,
Rich numbers flow,
And I hear, my dream when the angel sings!

O! the love-rays fall from her dew-filled eye,
Like the soft star-beams from the twilight sky,
And she fans my brow with her fragrant wings,
While she gently strikes on the golden strings!
Soft, sweet and low,
Rich numbers flow,
And I weep for joy while the angel sings!

Like the soft March wind, when he woos the flowers,
Like the wood bird's note in his love-trimmed bowers,
Like the thrilling sigh of the wind's harp-strings,
Are the raptures borne that the angel sings!
Soft, sweet and low,
Glad breathings flow,
And I dream of love while the angel sings!

Like the plaintive tone of the mourning pine,
Like the wild, wild call of the heaving brine,
Like the grave murmurings on the night-wind's wings,
Is the strange, sad song that the angel sings!
Dark, deep and low,
Sad meanings flow,
And I weep o'er the lost while the angel sings!

Then a lofty strain on the rich harp swells,
And the soul of bliss in its music dwells;
And the tide of song o'er the glowing strings
Flows fresh and free from the Eden Springs!
Soft, sweet and low,
Rich breathings flow,
And I dream of Heaven while the angel sings!

TEXAS.—The Galveston Confederate, of the 16th, says:

The Trinity river is now at a very high stage of water, and an overflow apprehended. There are five steamers now in the river, and with the flatboats coming down, it is thought that the remainder of the crop will be brought out during the rise.

BROOMS.—This section of country has been visited, within the last ten days, with two severe storms. The first occurred on last Sunday week, and the second on Tuesday evening following. We are informed that much damage was done to the growing crops, in this and the adjoining counties. In newly opened land, the crops will prove almost if not quite a total failure, owing to the number of dead trees that have been blown down—one third of the crop it is thought will be lost.—[Jefferson (Tex.) Herald.

THE WEATHER.—With the exception of a glorious shower on Tuesday morning, the past week has been a succession of beautiful days and lovely nights. Trees overburdened with fresh may, indeed, have had some slight cause to complain of the warmth; but what else should be expected in the sunny South "in the sunny month of May?"

[Opelousas Patriot, 17th.

STEAM FIRE ENGINES.—It is probably known to most of our readers that the city of Philadelphia is the owner of one of Shaw's steam fire engines; but it may not be known to them that the selfish policy of petty politicians—knowing that those machines have no votes—has hitherto prevented the use of this efficient and powerful engine in the extinguishing of fires. Yet such is the fact, strange as it may appear to Cincinnatians, who have become accustomed to see nothing else used by the firemen of Cincinnati. The North American in speaking of the late disastrous conflagration in that city, and in which $700,000 worth of property was given to the flames, says that, had the steam fire engines been employed, the exhausting labors of the volunteer firemen would have been materially lightened, and the progress of the flames would have been stayed, and an immense amount of property saved from destruction." Really, such things are preposterous. Had the people of Philadelphia an opportunity of witnessing a fire in the Queen City—which, thanks to our perfectly organized and efficient and well paid department, is quite ordinary—as to get a sight of our seven steam fire engines with their miles of hose pouring floods of water upon the fire, they would not be long in pitching their city council overboard, if they have neglected to supply their city with a sufficiency of these fire-annihilators at the earliest practicable notice of Mr. Morton is the country. It is fourteen feet high, and will extend upon its full height of the same altitude. Its inauguration will be celebrated by a military parade with all the pride and circumstance usual to give solemnity to such occasions.—[N. Y. Express, 14th.

IMPORTANT DECISION.—We learn that on Wednesday last the Supreme Court of the United States decided the case of Bacon et als., versus Wm. Robertson, et als., in favor of the defendants. The case was, in fact, a bill filed by the stockholders of the Commercial Bank of Natchez, against Robertson, Brooks, and others. The question for adjudication was either the stockholders could, in equity, recover the debts and property due to the Bank, and the Court decided unanimously that they could so recover. The case was argued by George B. Yerger and George M. Wilson, Esqrs., for complainants, and by Mr. Lawrence, of Washington, for defendants. [Vicksburg Whig, 17th.

Our files from Bermuda are to the 30th of April. The blighting of the potato crop had commenced in various parts of the country, and the returns, in most instances, have been exceedingly good. Two whales had been taken by the Whaling Company fishing in Smith's Island. These are the first that have been captured this season off the coast. The Assistant Receiving General has resolved to continue to enter any vessel at his office that may be bound to Ireland Island to discharge.

[Charleston Courier, 16th.

STEAM FOR STEAM.—A new heated steam has come already into progress. While a ship held a quarter of an inch from the nozzle of a try-cock, would be free of as much from the nozzle of the boiler, it would be drawn suddenly in, and forcibly retained against the opening, as if by the attraction of a magnet. The property of super heated steam to lessen its bulk is also remarkable. A boiler filled to two-thirds of its capacity, and then closed, so that self-acting discharge for excessive steam, the machinery of which was heavily weighted, being neglected for a considerable time, was overwhelmed. When the discharge ceased, it was through a nozzle turned down until but a gill of cold water; the steam suddenly shot into it did not, as would be supposed, blow the water out of the steam-pipe, but it converted every drop of it into steam, filling the whole building with a dense cloud of vapor.

BRUNSWICK STATUE OF WASHINGTON.—This monument, which, after so long a slumber, has, by the public spirit of Col. James Lee, come to an appearance which arrests the attention of all passers by, is, we are glad to say, certain to be pushed at once to completion. The pedestal is in New York (partly at the foundry of the statue) and the equestrian statue in the foundry at Brooklyn, ready to be put in its place. It is to be crowned by good judges worthy the subject, and is the finest equestrian statue of Washington in the country. It is fourteen feet high, and will stand upon a pedestal of the same altitude. Its inauguration will be celebrated by a military parade with all the pride and circumstance usual to give to similar occasions.—[N. Y. Express, 14th.

IMPORTANT DECISION.—We learn that on Wednesday last the Supreme Court of the United States decided the case of Bacon et als., versus Wm. Robertson, et als., in favor of the defendants. The case was, in fact, a bill filed by the stockholders of the Commercial Bank of Natchez, against Robertson, Brooks, and others. The question for adjudication was either the stockholders could, in equity, recover the debts and property due to the Bank, and the Court decided unanimously that they could so recover. The case was argued by George B. Yerger and George M. Wilson, Esqrs., for complainants, and by Mr. Lawrence, of Washington, for defendants. [Vicksburg Whig, 17th.

Our files from Bermuda are to the 30th of April. The blighting of the potato crop had commenced in various parts of the country, and the returns, in most instances, have been exceedingly good. Two whales had been taken by the Whaling Company fishing in Smith's Island. These are the first that have been captured this season off the coast. The Assistant Receiving General has resolved to continue to enter any vessel at his office that may be bound to Ireland Island to discharge.

[Charleston Courier, 16th.

STEAM FOR STEAM.—A new heated steam has come already into progress. While a ship held a quarter of an inch from the nozzle of a try-cock, would be free of as much from the nozzle of the boiler, it would be drawn suddenly in, and forcibly retained against the opening, as if by the attraction of a magnet. The property of super heated steam to lessen its bulk is also remarkable. A boiler filled to two-thirds of its capacity, and then closed, so that self-acting discharge for excessive steam, the machinery of which was heavily weighted, being neglected for a considerable time, was overwhelmed. When the discharge ceased, it was through a nozzle turned down until but a gill of cold water; the steam suddenly shot into it did not, as would be supposed, blow the water out of the steam-pipe, but it converted every drop of it into steam, filling the whole building with a dense cloud of vapor.

BRUNSWICK STATUE OF WASHINGTON.—This monument, which, after so long a slumber, has, by the public spirit of Col. James Lee, come to an appearance which arrests the attention of all passers by, is, we are glad to say, certain to be pushed at once to completion. The pedestal is in New York (partly at the foundry of the statue) and the equestrian statue in the foundry at Brooklyn, ready to be put in its place. It is to be crowned by good judges worthy the subject, and is the finest equestrian statue of Washington in the country. It is fourteen feet high, and will stand upon a pedestal of the same altitude. Its inauguration will be celebrated by a military parade with all the pride and circumstance usual to give to similar occasions.—[N. Y. Express, 14th.

BOSTON AFFAIR AT COVINGTON, KY.—Cincinnati, May 13.—The German Turners' Societies of this city, while holding a celebration at Covington, Ky., yesterday, were annoyed by some boys, and handled them rather roughly. Subsequently, Marshals Butts and Harvey, on attempting to arrest the Turners, were severely wounded; the former by a pistol ball, and the latter by a stone cut. The most intense excitement ensued, and large crowds of citizens collected. Some demanded the United States troops at Newport barracks to turn out, but they were refused. Stones were freely used, and some firearms discharged, but no one except one of the officers was much hurt. Finally, five of the Turners surrendered voluntarily and quietly went to jail. The Germans say that the officers did not make themselves known or no resistance would have been offered them.

Keep watch on the Tongue.

People are often subjected to extreme mortification by indulging in disparaging remarks of strangers, and learning subsequently that the persons themselves or some of their intimate friends were within hearing of the remarks. Such unpleasant occurrences rarely have as pleasant a termination as the following singular rencontre between Dr. Dwight and Mr. Dennie:

As Dr. Dwight was traveling through New Jersey, he chanced to stop at a stage hotel, in one of its populous towns, for the night. At a late hour of the same, arrived also, at the inn, Mr. Dennie, who had the misfortune to learn from the landlord that his beds were all paired with lodgers except one, occupied by the celebrated Dr. Dwight. Show me to his apartment, exclaimed Dennie; although I am a stranger to the Rev. Doctor, perhaps I can bargain with him for my lodgings. The landlord accordingly awaited on Mr. Dennie to the Doctor's room, and there left him to introduce himself. The Doctor, although in his night gown, cap and slippers, and just ready to resign himself to the refreshing arms of Somnis, politely requested the stranger intruder to be seated. The Doctor was struck with the literary physiognomy of his companion, unlent his austere brow, and commenced a literary conversation. The names of Washington, Franklin, Rittenhouse, a host of literary and distinguished characters, for some time gave zest and interest to their conversation, until Dwight chanced to mention the name of Dennie.

"Dennie, the editor of the Portfolio, (says the Doctor in a rhapsody) is the Addison of the United States—the father of American Belles Lettres. But sir," continued he, "is it not astonishing, that a man of such genius, fancy and feeling should abandon himself to the inebriating bowl, and to bacchanalian revels?"

"Sir," said Dennie, "you are mistaken, I have been intimately acquainted with Dennie for several years, and I never knew or saw him intoxicated."

"Sir," says the Doctor, "you err; I have my information from a particular friend; I am confident that I am right, and that you are wrong."

Dennie now ingeniously changed the conversation to the clergy, remarking that Doctors Abercrombie and Mason were amongst our most distinguished divines; nevertheless, he considered Dr. Dwight, President of Yale College, the most learned theologian—the first logician—and the greatest poet that America has ever produced. "But, sir," continued Dennie, "there are traits in his character undeserving so great and wise a man of the most detestable description—he is the greatest bigot and dogmatist of the age!"

"Sir," said the Doctor, "you are grossly mistaken. I am intimately acquainted with Dr. Dwight, and know to the contrary."

"Sir," says Dennie, "you are mistaken. I have it from an intimate acquaintance of his, who, I am confident, would not tell me an untruth."

"No more slander," says the Doctor, "I am Dr. Dwight, of whom you speak!"

"And I, too," exclaimed Dennie, "am Mr. Dennie of whom you spoke!"

The astonishment of Dr. Dwight may be better conceived than told. Suffice it to say, they mutually shook hands, and were extremely happy in each other's acquaintance.

Rev. Mr. Troute's Prayer.

A week or so ago we published the eloquent and sublime sermon of this Revolutionary Divine, delivered on the evening before the disastrous and bloody battle of Brandywine, September 11th, 1777, in presence of General Washington and several of the distinguished officers of the American army. We knew that this prayer was in print which we present to-day. It should, by right, have accompanied the sermon; but we could not lay hands on it. However, says the Concordia Intelligencer, of the 15th, that collector and preserver of all things good, both old and new, Capt. William Wood, of Maysville, Kentucky, now in Natchez, furnished us the Prayer, which we gladly publish.

PRAYER OF THE REVOLUTION.—Great Father! we bow before thee; we invoke thy blessing, we deprecate thy wrath, we return thee thanks for the past, we ask thy aid for the future; for we are in time of trouble, oh! Lord, and sore beset by foes, merciless and unrelenting. The sword gleams over our land, the dust of the soil is dampened with the blood of our neighbors and friends.

Oh! God of Mercy, we pray thee to bless the American arms. Make the man of our hearts strong in thy wisdom; them we beseech thee, with renewed life and strength our hope and thy instrument, even George Washington—shower thy clements on the heads of the Continental Troops; visit our host, with thy mercy, and in the hour of triumph be thou merciful. Though the memory of galling wrongs be at our heart, knocking for admittance, that they may fill us with the desire of revenge, yet let us, oh! Lord, spare the vanquished though they never spared us in the hour of butchery and bloodshed.

And in the hour of death, oh thou guide us to the abode prepared for the blest; so shall we return thanks unto thee through Christ, our Redeemer. God prosper the cause. Amen.

THE ALLEGED LETTER FROM JENNY LIND.—To the Editor of the N. Y. Tribune. SIR: Permit me, as a simple act of justice to one of the best of women, to pronounce the letter a forgery, which purports to have been written by Mrs. Goldsmidt (Jenny Lind) to a friend in Philadelphia, concerning my pecuniary embarrassments.

It cannot be genuine, because, although the sympathy and kindly feeling expressed in it are such as might expect from the known goodness of that lady, and the cordial terms upon which we parted when she returned to Europe, she could not conscientiously attribute the charity concerts that she gave in this country to me, and she would not assist in circulating a misapprehension.

To Jenny Lind alone belongs the entire credit of having originated all her concerts here in aid of the cause of benevolence. The natural impulses of her heart are in the highest degree noble and generous. Long before she visited America, her disinterested humanity was the common subject of the world-wide commentary. She loved to do good, and was never thoroughly happy except when carrying out some project of that character.

I deeply regret that any secret enemy or indiscreet friend should attempt to compliment me by injuring a lady for whom I entertain such a sincere respect. Who has manufactured this canard I cannot imagine, nor can I conjecture his motive. But I desire at least to place Jenny Lind in this matter correctly before the public, as well as exonerate myself from the possible suspicion of being a party to this fabrication.

Truly yours, P. T. BARNUM.

Long Island, May 10th, 1856.

Dying Expressions.

"Don't give up the ship."—[Lawrence.

"I'll be —d —d if I don't think I'm dying."
[Chancellor Thurlow.

"Don't let the awkward squad fire over my grave."
[Burns.

"Raise me up that I may behold the ann."
[Schiller.

"See how calmly a christian can die."—[Addison.

"Blessed be God; all is well."—[Richardson.

"Kiss me Hardy."—[Nelson.

"I have gain'd the victory, and Christ is holding out both hands to embrace me."—[Rutherford.

"Weep not for me but for yourselves; I go to the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who no doubt will receive me, though a sinner, through the mediation of our Lord Jesus Christ, where I hope we shall be e're long to meet and sing the new song, and remain happy forever in a world without end—amen."
[John Bunyan.

SCHOOLMASTER'S PHILOSOPHY.—Woman is a noun, and to love is the verb which agrees with her best.

In fashionable society a candidate for matrimony, like a verb in a good system of grammar, has his derivation discussed before the conjugation is proceeded with.

Some wives are active participles in their husbands' good or bad fortune; others, passive ones. The former govern objectionable cases when necessary; the latter are often governed by them.

A hypocrite is like a pronoun of the first person; he is different in every case.

The best authority—the spell that a kind, good-hearted woman, exerts over every one.

A "fast" young man's life goes forward by steps in geometrical progression—but it is seldom in any but descending series.

ANYBODY LIKE ME.—I ain't anybody—I'm married—I ain't a bachelor any longer!—This ain't my home; that's my carriage, my horses, my opera box; oh, no! they are Mrs. Smith's. I'm not John K. Smith, the richest broker on Montgomery street, but—that fashionable Mrs. Smith's husband!

Nelley came down to the office yesterday; sweet Nelley! she almost coaxed papa for all his cares; clustering curls, blue eyes—dear Nelly!

"Whose lovely child is that?"

"Mrs Smith's."

Of course it is! she don't belong to me—oh, certainly not! I wish I felt a little more clear on that point. That expensive plate just going home belongs to Mrs. Smith! What if I did pay for it? don't I belong to Mrs. Smith? Poor oppressed women! they have only all their own property and half of their husband's by law, and the rest by possession; but they need more rights! Where rights are wrong, I wonder what words the petitioners would use! And does the idea of calling me "anybody!" I'm a cipher! I'm an animocule—I'm a bubble—a jack-o'-lantern—a shadow. I'm also cried—small used up—extinct.

"You bachelors ought to be taxed," said a lady to a resolute evader of the noose matrimonial. "I agree with you perfectly, ma'am," was the reply, "bachelorism certainly is a luxury."

SIGNS AND THORNS.—Milton, when blind, married a shrew. The Duke of Buckingham called her a rose. "I am no judge of colors," replied Milton, "but I dare say you are right, for I feel the thorns daily."

Who is Contented?

One day, as the Dervish Almoran, the wisest of all the followers of the Prophet, and the oracle of the Chief Mufti of Stamboul, was sitting in a shady grove, by the side of a bubbling fountain, on the shores of the Bosphorus, trying to find out the true road to happiness, in order that he might benefit his fellow-creatures by communicating the discovery, his speculations were interrupted by a man richly clothed, who approaching, sat down and sighed very heavily, crying out at the same time:

"Oh! Allah, I beseech Thee to relieve me of life, or the burdens with which it is laden."

Almoran, who was a sort of amateur of misery, it afforded him the pleasure of administering consolation, approached the man of sorrow, and kindly inquired the cause of his griefs.

"Art thou in want of food, of friends, or health, or any of those comforts of life that are necessary to human happiness?—or dost thou lack the advice of experience, or the consolations of sympathy? Speak, for it is the business of my life to bestow them on my fellow-creatures."

"Alas!" said the stranger, "I require none of these; I have all and more than I want of everything. I have all the means of happiness but one, and the want of that renders every other blessing of no value."

"And what is that I" asked the Dervish.

"I adore the beautiful Zulema; but she loves another, and all my riches and honor are as nothing. I am the most miserable of men; my life is a burden, and my death would be the greatest of blessings."

Before Almoran could reply, there approached a poor creature clothed in rags, and leaning on his staff, bowed down to the earth with a load of misery. He sat down moaning, as if in great pain, and casting his eyes upwards, exclaimed:—"Allah! be my star, for I have none other!"

The Dervish went up to him and kindly said—"What alleth thee, poor man? Perhaps it may be in my power to relieve thy distresses. What wantest thou?"

"Everything," replied the beggar; "health, food, kindred, friends, a home—everything. I am an outcast and a wanderer, destitute of every comfort of life. I am the most miserable of mankind; for in addition to my own sufferings, I see others around me revelling in those luxuries for lack of a small portion of which I am perishing."

At this moment, a third man approached, with weary steps and languid look, and casting himself down by the side of the fountain, stretched out his limbs at free length, and yawning desperately, cried out:—"Allah what shall I do? What will become of me? I am tired of life, which is nothing but a purgatory of wants, that when supplied, only produce disappointment or disgust."

Almoran approached and asked:—What is the cause of thy misery? What wantest thou?"

"I want a want! replied the other. "I am cursed with the misery of fruition. I have wasted my life in acquiring riches that brought me nothing but disappointment, and honors that no longer gratify my pride, or repay me for the labor of sustaining them; I have been cheated into the pursuit of pleasures that turned to pain in the enjoyment, and my only want is that I have nothing to desire. I have everything I wish, and yet I enjoy nothing."

Almoran passed a few moments, utterly at a loss to find a remedy for this strange malady, then said to himself:—Allah! preserve me; I see it is all the same whether men want one thing, everything, or nothing. It is impossible to make such beings happy, and may I eat dirt if I trouble myself any more in so vain a pursuit."

Then taking up his staff, he went on his way.

Photographic Process.

Take a sheet of polished glass, on which pour collodion iodized; this leaves a film on the glass, after which it is plunged into a bath of nitrate of silver, and while in this bath the iodide of silver is formed, which is afterward to produce the image on the surface of the glass. (This operation is done in the dark, and the sheet of glass placed in the shield belonging to the camera.) The person is then placed in position, and the artist, after adjusting the focus, removes the ground glass, and the glass prepared as above is placed instead, and after a sitting of from thirty seconds to one minute is taken out, and is again taken in the dark. Here the artist takes the glass by the corner in his left hand, and, viewed by candle light, you see nothing on the surface. The next process is to develope the image, which is done with a solution of pyrogally and glacial acetique acids; great practice is required at this part of the process to develope the image sufficiently, and not over developed.

In looking at the image on the glass by transparence, we find the lights all reversed; this is what is required, as this negative will serve to print thousands of copies from. The iodine is removed from the glass with a weak solution of cyanide of potassium, and then carefully washed and set aside to dry, after which you can varnish it, or print from it without some negatives print better without varnishing—this very much depends on their intensity. The preparation of the paper to receive the portrait is the next operation. There are many opinions as regards the best makers of this paper, although most operators give preference to the Saxe Paper manufactured expressly for the purpose. This paper is first placed in a bath containing salt and water, well saturated, and then hung up to dry, after which it is floated over a nitrate of silver bath, and here is formed a chloride of silver; after remaining here a given time it is hung up to dry (this is done by candle light only). When the paper is quite dry, the negative is laid in a pressure frame, with the collodion side up, and the sheet of paper is then laid, with the silver side on the collodion blotting-paper, and the back of the frame is then fastened in tight, and the picture is then exposed to daylight. By raising up one corner and looking at the proof, you can see when it is printed enough.

You can remove this as soon as finished, place another sheet, and so on. Your proof is then placed in a solution of Hyposulfite of soda, and the iodine is removed from the paper; the proof is allowed to soak overnight, and then dried and mounted on card board. The picture is then ready to be colored by the artist. By this process they can be taken from miniature to life size. Old daguerreotypes of any size, no matter how small, can be enlarged to life size by this process, and perfect likenesses given, by the party giving a description of the color of the eyes, hair and complexion. Daguerreotypes, or any other pictures, forwarded in this way, from any part of the world, can be copied any size, and any number of copies taken, with all the natural colors.

THE EMPEROR'S BOY.—Wherever one goes or whatever one reads, the prominent topic seems to be the "child of France," whose recent birth has set all Paris agog. But careful as his papa is, the wonder child, which was born full grown, has already had an ominous fall. Our foreign papers bring us the following story as current in Paris:

"The imperial heir has scarcely made his appearance on the stage of this life, so full of visissitudes, when notwithstanding the minute care by which he is surrounded, he is already exposed to the dangers that occasionly happen to his inferiors. The wet nurse has had the misfortune to let the imperial infant escape from her hands, probably while handling him too softly, and he fell to the ground. He was not picked up immediately by her, as she was so frightened that she fainted away for half an hour; but the Duchess of Esslingen, who happened to be on the spot, raised the prince in her arms from his irksome position. At this accident was happily not attended by any serious consequences, the awkward female attendant was quit this time, for the fright she had experienced."

Is not this dreadful to think of, that an embryo Emperor, and a present King, should be so carelessly handled as to fall upon the floor. Other people's babies fall in the same way, and it is not of so much consequence, but when that baby fell, the French might exclaim—

"Then you and I and all of us fell down,
White bloody treason Scarlash'd over us."

For is it not treason to take the life of a King, and might not the King of Algiers perchance have died? We do not read that earthquakes were perceptible on the occasion, nor that this lamentable downfall of royalty resulted in anything more than a vigorous exertion of infantile lungs. But we do not read that a guard of soldiers has been stationed about the cradle of his majesty, with strict orders to do something desperate in case something else desperate should occur, which might disturb the peace of Europe in some unknown way. This "guard of honor," as it is called, is, we presume, properly careful about the administration of paid and paregoric, and see that the golden spoon which he had in his mouth at his birth, is not stolen or exchanged for one of baser metal.

The Kentucky Horticultural society have offered a premium of five hundred dollars for the discovery of a certain remedy against the curculio—said remedy not to be so costly or troublesome as to prevent general application.

INAUGURATION OF THE MAYOR OF PHILADELPHIA.—Philadelphia, May 13—Mayor Vaux was inaugurated at noon to day. The oath was administered by Judge Thompson.

The Mayor made a brief speech; saying he would make no promises, except that he would administer the laws as he understood them, and to the best of his ability.

THE STEAMERS.—The new steam-frigate Niagara was yesterday taken out of the U. S. Naval Dry Dock at Brooklyn, according to previous announcement. The new steamer Adriatic, of the Collins line, is now at the Novelty Works receiving her machinery, and her boilers and bed plate are already on board and in their proper places. The magnificent steamer Isaac Newton, of the Hudson River line, is at the adjoining pier, having her various improvements in size, etc. completed, and will be ready to run in about three weeks.—[N. Y. Express, 14th.

THE U. S. STEAM FRIGATE MERRIMAC.—This noble ship, under command of Capt. Pendergast, went to sea from Hampton Roads on Friday last. She sailed under sealed orders, supposed bound to Havana and Aspinwall. Although a letter from on board to the Norfolk Argus, says that on leaving Havana she will sail for England and France. On leaving Hampton Roads it is stated she sailed at the rate of nearly ten and a half miles per hour, with only a small quantity of steam on and top-sails and top-gallant sails set, the tide at the same time being strong against her.

[Baltimore Patriot, 14th.

MACAULAY VS. PENN.—This, most prominent, among the causes celebres of the literary world, at present, continues to be lengthily argued in the court of final appeal—the newspaper. We give the latest argument—the sur-replication:

"Mr. Dixon, the biographer of the Governor of Pennsylvania, has come out with a long and powerful "refutation" of Macauly's assumptions. In reviewing that work, and summing up the points of difference between Mr. Dixon and "the great historian," the critic of the times concludes an article in the following manner: "The question is independent of the merits of Penn. He may or may not, as Swift avers, have "spoken agreeably and with spirit." He may or may not, as Burnet describes, have had "a tedious, luscious way, that was not apt to overcome a man's reason, though it might tire his patience." But, at all events, he could not have been at the same time "a good and a great man," according to Mr. Dixon, and an extortionate, seducing, intimidating, simonical scoundrel and perjured traitor, according to Mr. Macauley. The evidence must warrant an election between such discrepancies as these, and Mr. Dixon is quite right in moving for a decision. Mr. Macaulay should come into court, and, without prejudging the result, if the authority lay with us, we would say, following our local metaphor, "Mr. Dixon, take your rule."

RELIEF FOR THE CAPE VERDE ISLANDS.—Pursuant to a call of the Consul-General of Portugal, about a dozen gentlemen, natives of Portugal, met yesterday afternoon at the Consulate, and subscribed $2,100 for the relief of their famishing countrymen at the above Islands. Offer was also made by one of the gentlemen to furnish a vessel, without charge, to convey provisions. A committee of five was appointed to adopt further measures as to the good work.

[N. Y. Sun, 7th.

The bakers in Boston have agreed to increase the size of their loaves, owing to the lower cost of flour. The bakers in other cities can well afford to follow the example.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS—PILLS THAT ARE PILLS—Professor Hayes, State Chemist, of Massachusetts, says they are the best of all Pills, and none and are the men who certify that Doct. Hayes knows, viz:

LEMUEL SHAW, Chief Justice Supreme Court of Mass.
EMORY WASHBURN, Governor of Mass
W. C. PLUNKETT, Liebt. Gov. of Mass.
EDWARD EVERETT, Ex S c of State and Senator of U. S.
BURRET C. WHITMAN, Ex-Speaker House Rep. U. S.
ABBOTT LAWRENCE, Minister Ple ipot. to Great Britain.
JOHN B. FITZPATRICK, Catholic Bishop of London.
WHEN THAT ARE MEN!!!

Among the diseases this Pill has cured with astonishing rapidity, we may mention

Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache, arising from a foul stomach Nausea, Indigestion, Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, and pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Cutaneous and Cutaneous Diseases, which require an evacuent Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints in which it would not be supposed they could reach; such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritabili y, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout and other kindred complaints, arising from a low state of the body, or obstructions of its functions. They are the best Purgative Medicine ever discovered, and you will not need to use them once to know it.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass, and sold by every respectable druggist in the United States.
my21 3m J. WRIGHT & CO., Wholesale Agents.

MADNESS, IDIOCY, CONVULSIONS,

AND a long train of other horrible diseases are the frequent consequences of permitting Worms to generate and multiply, without check. In the intestines and the stomach. Such neglect is as inexcusable as it is dangerous; inasmuch as WILKINSON'S CANADIAN VERMIFUGE, without detriment to the house or trouble (to the sufferer, will cure the disease in a few days, and at the same time improve the condition of the digestive organs, purify the blood and regulate all the secretions; it stands alone, unrivalled; it has the sanction of the highest medical authority, and should stand on the mantelpiece of every nursery in the United States. Mothers look to it, if you value your children's health and life.

For sale in New Orleans, wholesale and retail, by
J. WRIGHT & CO.,
Nos. 21 and 151 Chartres street, sole proprietors.
Sold by all the Druggists. my24 1t

NEW VOLUMES OF THE FOUR GREAT BRITISH REVIEWS, VIZ:

EDINBURGH, NORTH BRITISH, WESTMINSTER, AND London Quarterlies and Blackwood's Edinburg Magazine, (Monthly,) commence with NORTH British for November, 1855, and the other Reviews and Blackwood for January, 1856.

TERMS.

For any one Review or Blackwood.....per annum $3 00
Black wood and one Review or any two..... 5 00
For Black wood and the four Reviews..... 10 00
For four copies to one address..... 30 00

☞ Postage (which should be paid quarterly in advance) on the four Reviews and Blackwood to any post office in the United States only 80 cents a year: 14 cents a year on each Review, and 24 cents on Blackwood.

Address, post-paid, LEONARD, SCOTT & CO.,
54 (Gold street, corner of Fulton New York.

SPLENDID ARCHITECTURAL WORK.

CHAPEL AND CHURCH ARCHITECTURE, with designs for PARSONAGES. By OZORA DAVIES, Rodney, Miss.

This work is designed to meet a want which has been long felt. Among all denominations of Christians, plans for chapels and churches of miniature size have been sought for, which committees may select a style appropriate to their wants, and not too expensive for their means. This want the author has endeavored to meet, by presenting a series of designs, ranging in estimated cost from $1,500 to $5,000. He has also added designs for country and city parsonages, such as will commend themselves to the good taste of all. The working plans for these drawings are not furnished, but the reason that the work would not be complete, as all such plans and specifications can be had on application to the author. The principal design of the work, however, is to enable committees to decide on some style previous to making application to an architect, so that they may know their ideas and wishes. With this end in view, the work is commended to the public.

At a meeting of the Boston Conference of Methodist Ministers, the following resolution in regard to the above elegant and useful work, was passed unanimously:

Boston, Feb. 28, 1856.—The Committee appointed to examine Plans of Church Architecture, by Brother George Bowler, have attended to their duty as far as they have been able, and should report the following:

Resolved, That the Plans and Sketches of Church Architecture, designed and drawn by our brother, Rev. George Bowler, within, in a high degree, correctness of taste and skill in construction, combining in themselves, to an extent seldom equalled, beauty, economy and convenience; and we feel confident that the publication of the work would be of essential service to the churches in this country.

We shall publish the above during the month of May, in one superb folio volume. It will contain over forty elegantly executed Lithographic Designs, with ground plans and letterpress engraved in the highest style of art, bound in cloth, price $10 per copy, with a liberal discount by the hundred. All orders to be addressed to the publishers,

JOHN P. JEWETT & COMPANY, Boston.
JEWETT, PROCTOR & WORTHINGTON,
SHELDON, BLAKEMAN & CO., Cleveland, Ohio.
New York. my17 3t

THE XXD VOLUME OF THE SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE (improved and enlarged) will commence June 1st, 1856. Now is the time to subscribe. Terms, $2 per annum, paid in advance. If payment is delayed six months, $2 50—if one year, $3. When enlarged to the contemplated size it will be the largest religious weekly published in the South.

All Ministers of the M. E. Church, South, are empowered to act as Agents.—They are allowed 12½ per cent on all collections and the paper is put on them at $2 50 per annum. The collection and forwarding of $10, entitles an Agent to the paper one year. Address E. H. MYERS, EDITOR, a28 6el Charleston, S. C.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

FACULTY—Rev. H. C. TUPWATT, D. D. President and Professor of Mental and Moral Sciences, Belles-Lettres and Ancient Languages.
A. R. REMBERT, M. D., Professor of the Physical Sciences and Mathematics.
Mr. CHRISTOPHER PLAGUE, Professor of Music.
Miss L. BATES, A. M. Instructress in English Literature, Modern Languages, Drawing, Painting, Embroidery, etc.
Mrs. PLAGUE, Instructress in Music and the French Language.
Miss E. K. QUARLES, M. E. L. Instructress in Primary Department.
Miss MARY E. CROWDER, M. E. L. Instructress in Academic Department.
Assistant Teacher to the Elementary branches.

RATES OF TUITION PER SESSION OF FIVE MONTHS.

Primary Department.....$12 50
Academic Department..... 15 00

COLLEGIATE DEPARTMENT.

Freshmen and Sophomore classes..... 20 00
Junior and Senior classes..... 25 00

ORNAMENTAL DEPARTMENT.

Music on the pianoforte, harp or guitar..... 25 00
Use of Instruments..... 5 00
Vocal music..... 1 00
Drawing, with use of copies..... 12 00
Water and chromatic painting, each..... 15 00
Oil painting..... 20 00
Em broidery..... 10 00
Incidental expenses..... 2 00
Fee for Graduation and Diploma..... 5 00

No extra charge made for Modern or Ancient Languages.

Payment to be made at the close of each term. Board, including lo ging, washing, lights and fuel can be procured in the village and immediate neighborhood at ten dollars per month. Students will be received at any time during the session, and will be charged only from the time of their entrance to the end of the term. We would, however, respectfully urge all parents and guardians who design placing their daughters or wards in the institution, to do so at their earliest convenience, as it will add much to the individual interest of the pupils and the general prosperity of the school, facilitating, as it will, a proper arrangement of the various classes in their respective branches of study.

School books, stationery, etc., may be had at any of the various stores in the village at the usual rates.

The scholastic year, embracing ten months, will be divided into two equal terms of five months, one immediately succeeding the other.

The first session commencing on the first Wednesday in October, and closing the last week in February; the second commencing on the first Wednesday in March, and closing the last week in July; at which time the annual examination will be held, and the usual rewards and honors conferred. The vacation will embrace the months of August and September.

All applications for admission of pupils, etc., to be made to the President of the College. my17 1y

A SOUTHERN REMEDY.

Made by O. O. Woodman, New Orleans, La.

HAS received the appointment from the proprietor for the sole agency of

Woodman's Cherry Expectorant,

this medicine that has created such an excitement at the North among the Physicians, and has been pronounced by all who have used it as being far superior to any Cherry Pectoral.

WOODMAN'S CHERRY EXPECTORANT

Contains the active medical qualities of the pure decoction of Wild Cherry Bark, and many other valuable ingredients that render it far better than any other cough medicine to this country.

RECOMMENDATION.

NEW ORLEANS, April 9, 1855.

Dear Sir—The public generally are fully aware of the thousands of remedies for diseased lungs, under the title of Sarsaparillas, Pills, Plasters, Liniments, etc., that are daily brought to their notice through the newspapers by way of advertisements. My object in writing this note for publication is to induce the public, or at least those who are afflicted, to use one that contains articles of real use in pulmonary diseases. I am conscious that in so doing, I am acting most unprofessionally and disgustedly to the interests of Medical science and the regular practitioners of Medicine. I refer to Woodman's Cherry Expectorant, which is a scientific remedy that I have used with more success than any of the usual prescriptions used by physicians.

J. M. MAITLAND, M. D.

This preparation has attained a wide celebrity from the wonderful cures which has attended its use. For bleach coughs, colds, and in fact, any pulmonary complaints, this medicine, from its peculiar properties as a dissolvent, and its soothing power in all irritations of the throat, will probably be preferred to any other offered to the public. As an expectorant, or dyspeptic remedy, it will also be found excellent, its natural and genial warmth keeping the digestive powers in perfect tone.

Remember that this is the only cough me licine that has stood the test of the ra ding fraternity. It is sanctioned by, approved of, and recommended by leading physicians of New York city. Every bottle is warranted to give satisfaction or the money is refunded. We guarantee it to be better than any Cherry Pectoral (or Liver Oil, or anything else now extant, or dyspeptic

For all PECTORAL AFFECTIONS it will be found superior to all other compositions.

Sold by O. O. WOODMAN,
New Orleans.
And by all the Druggists at the South. ap 24

DRUGS, CHEMICALS, PAINTS, OILS, WINDOW-GLASS.

O. O. WOODMAN, WHOLESALE DRUGGIST,

Successor to Jarvis & Woodman.

CORNER OF COMMON AND MAGAZINE STREETS, NEW ORLEANS.

IMPORTER AND DEALER IN

CHOICE DRUGS, SELECTED MEDICINES, PURE CHEMICALS, ESSENTIAL OILS,

Medicinal Extracts, Fine Perfumery and Fancy Soaps,

PATENT MEDICINES, SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS, DRUGGISTS' GLASSWARE,

BRUSHES,

FRENCH AND AMERICAN WINDOW-GLASS, PAINTS, OILS, DYE STUFFS, ETC.

☞ Druggists, Physicians, Country Merchants and others who purchase medicines, may rely upon being suited. Orders Promptly attended to.

300 DOZEN CHERRY EXPECTORANT—FO

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY A COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS FOR THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH---H. N. McTYEIRE, EDITOR.

VOLUME VI—NUMBER 11. WHOLE NUMBER 271.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 31, 1856.

$2 00 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE. OFFICE—26 CAMP ST.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION OF NEGROES.

NO. VI.

We have already spoken of the importance of proper care in selecting mission fields and missionaries. We shall pursue this subject a little further.

It frequently happens that men are selected and recommended for established missions, not so much from a conviction of their fitness for the work, as because they are only moderate preachers, with large families, and there is no circuit in the District willing to receive and support them; and it is supposed they may do for the mission, especially as the Missionary Society will have to foot the bill. None of the circuits want them, and both people and Presiding Elder will be greatly rejoiced to get clear of the tax of supporting them. So they must go down on the mission, and as they ought to be well supported, the Missionary Society is in for it to the tune of seven or eight hundred dollars.

Now there is great danger at this point, which, if not carefully guarded, will seriously damage the cause. Let it be once understood that the missionary money which we collect is to be used in supporting men who have neither talents, zeal or industry to fill any other work, and we shall see our cause decline. We give it as our deliberate judgment that no man is fit to occupy a colored mission who would not be acceptable on a respectable circuit. The man who has charge of the religious instruction of negroes ought to be a respectable man of good sense, one well acquainted with men, as well as a man fond of study; one who is always on the stretch for improvement, and a gentleman in his bearing; one who can by his intelligence and personal address command the respect of the planters, and who will show them in all his intercourse that while respectful to them he is not obsequious, and expects from them the treatment to which as a christian gentleman and christian minister he is entitled. One of opposite character will hardly succeed as a missionary to the large southern plantations.

Many people seem to suppose that nothing is necessary in a negro preacher but plainness and zeal. We deem both of these of great importance, but if these be alone he is not by any means fitted for that work. Indeed, if the main object was to excite the negroes to uproarious religious demonstrations, such a man might be well enough qualified, but this is not the grand object. We must instruct the negro in religious truth, and seek by persevering effort and patient continuance in our efforts to make him understand those great facts which lie at the foundation of all christian experience and practice. To accomplish this may require time, and will most certainly demand the exercise of much patience and gentleness; and no man can be well qualified for this work unless he loves the Lord Jesus most earnestly. He must also feel a deep interest in the salvation of the negroes; for this he must be willing to labor earnestly and long, even amidst great discouragements, opposition and probably contempt. He must make up his account to meet all these. It may possibly happen that many of those for whom he is laboring will prove not only stupid and dull, but exceedingly perverse, and no marvel if he should find, even among them, enemies and persecutors. And perhaps, when all seems promising, master, overseer and servants, all treating him respectfully, yet his word seems almost powerless—or, if the negroes appear to receive it and many of them become Christians, some leading member of his flock, on whose influence he had placed strong confidence, falls into some of those scandalous sins to which the negro is peculiarly inclined. Under such circumstances of trial and discouragement, unless the preacher's heart be in the right place, and his faith in God's word be strong and unfaltering, he will be very apt to retire ingloriously from the conflict. He must school his heart to patient submission under all circumstances, and a calm and steady faith which will work on, looking to heaven above for reward. 'Tis his to sow the seed constantly, earnestly, faithfully—to God must be committed the making it fruitful. We must never forget that word of Jehovah "My word shall not return to me void."

Now let me ask, can any man be fit for this work who does not love it? One who has sought to be employed in it from selfish considerations, whose aim is to make it subsidiary to his own private ends, and who shows a great deal more concern for the temporal profit than for the salvation of the souls of his charge. One who leaves home perhaps, on Sabbath morning, rides to his appointment, and after preaching a cold, prayerless, unstudied sermon, rides home again on the same evening. Thus spending all the week days at his own business, most of the holy Sabbath on the road, and giving the people of his charge half his heart for about two hours in every seven days? The negroes are so dull of learning that he becomes listless in teaching and pursues his work only as a painful task, instead of a willing, cheerful, joyful, grateful service, rendered unto the God that redeemed him and called him to the work of feeding these poor sheep.

We have said that it will require much patience and forbearance to instruct the negro successfully. They have grown up under the influence of ignorance and sin. Their associations have been anything but favorable to the influence of good and holy principles. The whole current of their thoughts and feelings tends to darken and brutify their minds and hearts, and surround them with a darkness dense as was that of Egypt. To succeed with them the preacher must analyze their habits and feelings, that he may know how to approach them successfully.—He will have great need of apt similitudes and plain and forcible illustrations, such are familiar to his sable hearers, with whom one plain and striking illustration will be much more available than many hours' learned discourse.

In order to be able for this work, study well the Scriptures—get thoroughly imbued with their spirit and style—follow in your manner of preaching the example of your great Master and his apostles, and you will hardly fail of success.

One thought more before we pass on to some other views. Feel yourself honored in your work—never deem for a moment that your position as a "negro preacher," is at all inferior to that of the city preacher, the Presiding Elder or any other minister. Remember that the dignity and honor in either case, depends on the faithfully filling up the measure of your duty in the station to which God calls you.

Your city brother or he of the good circuit, may be a little more flattered and honored here, and he may live in better style and all that. But if thou dost thy work faithfully, God keeps the account, and will not fail to honor thee in the highness and glory of his heavenly kingdom. Is the prospect of that reward honor enough to satisfy the longing aspirations of thy spirit? If so, all is right.

I have feared that some of the preachers keep on hand a very inadequate supply of humility. Some of them seem to imagine that anything short of a city station, or probably some little country town, would be a sort of letting down of their dignity. Alas for them and the church when this is the case; when men who profess to be moved by the Holy Ghost to preach the gospel of the grace of God to a world of men and women who are dead in trespass and sin, are troubling themselves with the question of their own dignity.

Some good brother intimates that he has no gift for preaching to negroes, but he is not troubled with doubt as to his qualifications to fill any respectable circuit or town or city station. He deems himself well qualified to preach to white people, no matter how rich and how intelligent. Incompetent to preach to the poor, for whom first of all the gospel was designed!

Now, the truth is that, any man who is fit to preach to white people is fit to preach to negroes or Indians, or any body else. The deficit does not generally lie in a want of gifts, its origin may be found deeper down in the heart. There is too much pride and love of ease and worldly honor, and the man who cannot preach to negroes, or who regards it a degradation to do so is, in my judgment, unfit to preach the gospel of the grace of God at all, and had better quit the ministry and go to some calling which, in the estimation of the world is more lucrative and honorable.

I may be wrong, but it is my deliberate judgment, and an extensive observation of preachers and their work and history for the last twenty-four years as one of the Superintendants of the church, has brought me to this conclusion, that whenever the ministers of Jesus so far forget their calling as to make the attainment of temporal ease and worldly distinction and respectability a controlling element in their conduct, they have so far departed from their proper course that those who love them may well tremble for the issue.

Perhaps this is enough for one number: we will resume the subject hereafter. God help us and bless the church.

JAMES O. ANDREW.

When all around is gloomy, faith, through the promise, sees a prospect delightfully bright.

DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

PRAIRIE CREEK MISSION, Alabama Conference.

REV. H. N. McTYEIRE, Assistant Treasurer of the Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South:

Dear Brother—I now transmit to you the report of the state of the Prairie Creek Mission for the first and second quarters of the current year.

Eleven have been admitted on trial, four expelled and one discontinued.—There have been some conversions, and a revival influence seems to prevail on some of the plantations.

We have two churches which have already been reported, but we stand in need of several more.

While on this subject permit me to say that, in my judgment, the erection of houses of worship at all our missionary appointments among the colored people would not only advance the religious interests of the mission, but also the temporal interests of the planters by causing the colored people to be better contented with home.

Let us hope that the time is not very distant when all our missionaries among the colored people going to deliver the message of salvation, will be free from such nuisances as anvil blocks, work benches, water pails, dish rags, etc.—Did you ever think what an important article of faith the omnipresence of Deity is?

Place yourself in certain circumstances, and you will feel its importance You will also rejoice to read, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst."

Taken as a whole, the mission may be regarded as in a healthy condition.

Yours in Christ,

JNO. C. HUCKABEE.

Macon, Ala., May 1, 1856.

DAYTON COLORED MISSION, Alabama Conference.

Brother McTyeire:—This report of the above Mission embraces the first and second quarters. The first part of the year was so unfavorable to our operations that but little was done save attend the appointments when we could.

We now have fifteen preaching places four of them associate appointments, the balance seperate; in all we serve the people on twenty two farms: eight have been received on probation; nine into fellowship; five adults and twenty-five children have been baptized. Two members have been expelled. One Methodist and one Presbyterian have both died in a good old age. There was nothing remarkable in the death of the former, for years she had proved her faith by her works, and her end was peace.

There was more interest connected with the death of the latter. After it was evident that her disease was of a serious character, she was removed by her kind and christian master to his residence in town where she could have the attention and care of master and mistress in person. We had the privilege of visiting her once during her illness in company with brother Heard, and after our speaking with her freely and hearing from her as fully as utterance would admit, we were sensibly impressed that we were in the presence of one blessed of God and only waiting his summons to be with him in paradise. On taking leave of her she clasped her Missionary's hand in both of hers, and with bright face and tearful eyes said, "she never expected to see him again on earth but hoped to meet him in heaven." The day of her death she took an affectionate farewell of white and black, heartly recommending that religion by which she had been comforted and sustained for forty years past and exhorting all to meet her where parting is no more. We have given this special notice of those cases for the purpose of magnifying the grace of God in their life and death, and to show you that some of the owners at least do a faithful part for their servants while in health and forsake them not in affliction and death. And after that they are gone from them it is a source of unspeakable joy for them to be assured that they are at rest with God in heaven.

As to the spiritual condition of the mission, we feel safe in saying that it is healthful. The old members with some exception are doing well, they give signs of improvement in intelligence and a better understanding of divine things, and we have never known them and the blacks generally more attached to preaching and the preacher, than now. Some have professed conversion and the spirit of awakening is often manifest in the congregation. We still labor under disadvantage on account of not having suitable places of worship at some places. It is to be hoped that those in authority will remove this obstacle soon.

But as to the cause in general, it appears not to be on as good terms with some as formerly, another spirit than the missionary spirit has gotten hold of these persons. We mean the spirit of avarice and selfishness. It is likely there never was a time when these mischievous principles had a stronger hold on the hearts of the people in our country than the present. It is sweeping every thing good and liberal before it, and threatens not only to dry up the sources of benevolence among us, but also to interpose impassible bariers to all enterprises of usefulness.

How great the contrast between now and twelve months ago? Then the drouth was raging, and want and starvation looked us in the face.—Preaching and praying was in great demand, then the missionaries had more calls than they could attend to. Every body was more or less interested in the cause of Christ. The people were humbled, they made their confessions to God and promised amendments. O, yes, going to be good people now, if God would only spare, they would never lift a hand or heel against him again. He did spare them; he sent them a bountiful harvest, good prices were received for their produce, they are now abounding in plenty, and more than plenty—in excess, and with it they abound in pride, in the love of the world and contempt or at least neglect of divine things. Have forgotten all their humiliation and vows of faithfulness.—We know that God "is long suffering and kind," but then we know that he "will by no means clear the guilty," and that he has threatened to "tear in pieces those that forget God." It is a painful thing to think of the distraction of those for whom we labor and pray.

Some for whom we preached last year desire not our services now. The excuse is, "it does no good;" or, "the people dont care anything about it."—And others who were once favorable to our operations have fallen into the same way of thinking. The indifference of the servants is the prevailing excuse, but while owners put up these excuses, we have unmistakeble evidence to the contrary.

Frequently in our jouraeying we meet up with some of those servants to whom we have preached, and among the first questions they ask is, "when you going to preach for us again?"—"The people want to see you very bad, I wish master let you come back again." We have preached when opportunity would afford to the servants of those who have been expelled. The result is that about ten have professed conversion besides a number awakened. We received word from them the other day that their great greatest desire was to see us. But still the plea is, "they don't care any thing about it." At an other place where the master had been indifferent on the subject, from the solicitation of the blacks the overseer though an irreligious man, determined to have preaching though he and the servants had to meet the expense. So at the first appointment he stated the case to them, and wished to know now, "who would help him pay the preacher; he was giving in his time and service and he could not live on nothing. Who now will help?" "I will," came up from all sides of the house. Since then the master has concluded to meet the expense himself. "Don't care any thing about it." Why, if it was left to the blacks there would not be a plantation in all the country unserved.

Missionaries. } A. McBRIDE. F. JETER.

The drink traffic should be stopped in all our sea-ports, out of mercy to the poor sailor. Says Mr. Douglas, a Christian Missionary:

"We often talk of the dangers of the deep, and of a lee shore, but these are nothing to the dangers the men are exposed to when their ship is riding safe in harbor. It would be a great matter if temperance lodging-houses could be kept up at the principal foreign ports."

"A soft answer turneth away wrath: but grievious words stir up anger."

"A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance; but by sorrow of the heart the spirit is broken."

"Better is little with the fear of the Lord, than great treasure and trouble therewith."

"Pleasant words are as an honeycomb, sweet to the soul and health to the bones."

LEARNING AND THE BIBLE.—At the Reformation, that work of God for the restoration of the Apostolic Church, Luther says beautifully, in a letter to Eoban Hess, in 1853: "I see that there never has been an especial revelation of the Divine Word when God has not first prepared the way by the resuscitation of languages and sciences, as by the forerunning of John the Baptist." [Neander.

ONE WEEK LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE CANADA AT HALIFAX.

HALIFAX, May 20.—The Royal Mail steamship Canada, Capt. Lang, from Liverpool on the afternoon of Saturday, May 10, arrived here at 8:30 this evening.

The clipper ship Racer had gone ashore on Arklow Bank, and would probably prove a total wreck. All her passengers and crew, numbering over 500, were saved.

LATEST.—The mate of the Racer reported to the Liverpool agent of the Associated Press, just before the departure of the Canada, that the ship was fast sinking in the sand, being then up to her spar deck. There was no chance of saving the vessel, but divers might recover part of the cargo.

Great Britain.

The Queen held a Court at Buckingham Palace, on Thursday, the 7th inst., for the purpose of receiving the addresses on the peace from the House of Lords, the House of Commons, and the city of London.—The deputations came in great state, and numbered nearly a hundred persons. The Queen briefly acknowledged the addresses, and expressed her satisfaction that peace was re-established on a basis that affords security for its permanence.

Both House of Parliament have accorded a vote of thanks to the army and navy. Lord Palmerston moved the resolution, and was seconded by Earl Derby in the Lords. In the Commons, Lord Palmerston made the motion, and Mr. D'Israeli seconded it.

Lord Granville announced that a pension of one thousand pounds sterling for life, would be settled on General Williams, who is also created a Baronet by the title of Sir Wm. F. Williams of Kars.

Lord Elgin postponed his motion of enquiry respecting the troops ordered to North America until after the holidays.

Lord Colchester gave notice of a motion requiring Parliament to express its disapproval of the policy of abandoning the maritime rights so long held, as the Congress of Paris had pledged Great Britain to do. To celebrate the peace, the Queen has granted amnesty to all political offenders; consequently, Smith O'Brien, Frost, Jones and others, may return home. Special exception, however, is made against those who escaped to the United States.

Lord Woodhouse, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, is appointed Envoy Extraordinary to St. Petersburgh. The appointment is generally applauded.

The Lord Mayor of London gave the customary speech at the banquet to the ministry. The whole tone of the speeches on the occasion was congratulatory respecting the peace. Count Persigny, the French ambassador, said nothing could sever the alliance of France and England. Lord Palmerston replied, reciprocating the sentiment, and complimenting the ministers present of Sardinia and Turkey. Lord Clarendon then spoke, glorifying the peace and complimenting Russia. The usual toasts followed, and the company separated early. The American Minister was not present, being engaged at the annual dinner of the Literary Fund, where he made a speech.

Mr. Dallas, with his family and the Secretary of Legation, also assisted at the Queen's State Ball and levee.

May 29th is to be a holiday throughout Great Britain, to celebrate the peace.

A regiment of German Jagers, at Plymouth, had mutinied. The ringleaders were arrested. They complained that the drill was too severe, and that they only enlisted till the end of the war.

The five regiments in the Crimea under orders for Canada are the 7th, 9th, 39th, 62d and 63d infantry, under the command of Gen Eyre.

France.

A bill was introduced into the Legislature granting four hundred thousand francs for the baptism of the imperial Prince in June.

The Moniteur publishes the monthly account of the Bank of France, and the balance was satisfactory.

A son of the King of Sweden, the King of Wurtemburg, and Maximilian, brother of the Emperor of Austria, are visiting Louis Napoleon.

Count Edgar Ney is to be the bearer of Napoleon's letter in reply to the Czar's notification of his accession to the throne of Russia.

Count Mercy has been appointed Minister to St. Petersburgh, and Count Orlof has taken for him the Worongoff palace on a three years' lease.

Speculations on the Paris Bourse had risen to a great height, and English commercial papers previous to the sailing of the steamer, had been very flue.

Spain.

Arrests of suspected persons continued at Barcelona. The conscription had passed off quietly throughout the country.

Belgium.

The Senate was convocated for Wednesday, the 14th inst. Count Walewski's demand to muzzle the press of Belgium, created intense excitement.

A dispatch from Brussels says: "In the Chambers, on Wednesday, the Foreign Minister, in answering an interrogatory in regard to the recent speech of Count Walewski, on the press of Belgium, replied that that speech had not been officially communicated to the Government. When that communication should be made, the answer would be ready, and would be communicated to all the Governments, and would formally maintain the rights of a constitutional and independent country. It was asked further whether any power had asked for any modification of the laws relating to the press in Belgium. The Minister said he would answer in one word—"never." The meeting broke up amid stimmense cheering and enthusiasm.

Holland.

A treaty of commerce and navigation, based on principles of reciprocity, has been concluded between Austria and Holland.

Denmark.

The Danz towns have refused to adhere to the capitalization forced by Denmark in the question of the Dues.

Considerable excitement was caused by an announcement that an American fleet was on the way to Copenhagen.

Italy.

It is stated that a collective note of the Powers that signed the treaty of peace is about ready to be forwarded to the Governments of Rome and Naples, recommending the reforms asked for by the Italian people. It is also said that the Pope's Legation at Paris formally protested against Count Walewski's language in the Congress, and that of the Papal Government is preparing a detailed reply thereto. It is still further rumored that Naples will anticipate the Powers' remonstrance by granting an amnesty on an extensive scale.

Sardinia.

Questions relative to the Conference have been put to Count Cavour in the Sardinian Chambers. He replied that pending the negotiations concerning Italy, he could not speak fully. With respect to the Treaty of Peace he believed it would ensure great moral and material advantages. The Sardinian view of the Italian question was adopted, whilst that of Austria was rejected, hence the question of Italy is, and must continue to be, an European matter. He added that the relations of Austria and Piedmont are not ameliorated by anything that has occurred, and that the Sardinian Government may rely on the people to meet every emergency.

Turkey.

Disturbances continue in Turkish Asiatic Territory, and there had been some excesses near Sumotra. There is nothing additional as to the troubles at Nazareth.

THE LATEST.

A dispatch from Turin, says the memorandum presented by Count de Cavour and the Marquis de Villamarina to the Chambers, shows that Austria, having at the conference refused to discuss the condition of Italy, Sardinia is the only State which offers a barrier to revolution, and demands the co-operation of England and France in carrying out reforms. It shows that the Austrian occupation is opposed to the interest of Italy and Europe, and contrary to the treaty, to humanity and justice. Finally, the memorandum calls on England and France to unite with Sardinia in the application of an efficacious remedy.

Naples permits the export of breadstuffs until June 15th, at half the previous export duty—namely, at 5 carlini. Breadstuffs moderate.

LIVERPOOL, Saturday, 1 P. M.—The new British loan has been announced. It is to be for five millions pounds sterling, and the bidding entirely in consols. Parliament has adjourned over until the 19th May.

The Crimea.

The correspondence from the Crimea is up to April 26th. It merely records the preparations for the departure, with the drilling, and the furnishing of the men with clothing to make a good appearance on their return. Two regiments of English Cavalry have already embarked at Scutari for home.

The vessels comprising the Massachusetts whale fleet are returning in rapid succession, and a majority of the ships are well filled. The ship E. H. Jenney arrived at New Bedford on Monday, after an absence of four and a half years, and has on board 2,500 barrels of sperm oil, one of the most valuable cargoes ever brought to that port. This ship left Pernambuco, April 10, and reports that the cholera had entirely ceased its ravages at that place.

Among certain tribes in Africa, thunder is called "the sky gun;" the morning, "the day's child;" and one who is intoxicated is said to be "taken captive by rum." A native of Africa, who visited England a few years ago, when asked what ice was, said, "Him be water fast asleep," and of the railroad locomotive he said, "Him be one thunder mill."

ARRIVAL OF THE GRANADA.

Later from California, Oregon and China.

The steamer Granada, Capt. Griffin, arrived at this port Tuesday morning, from New York via Havana. She left New York on the 17th inst. and Havana on the 24th.

On the 22d inst., the Granada spoke ship Antoinette in New Providence channel, from Genoa, and forty-one days from Gibralter, bound to New Orleans. On the 25th, passed steamship Empire City. The steamship Illinois, from Aspinwall, arrived at Havana on the 24th inst., with 646 passengers and $1,788,000 in treasure. There was nothing new in Havana.

The following is a list of the Granada's passengers:

The Granada brings dates from California to the 5th inst. We extract the following items of interest from the summary of the Alta California of the 5th ult:

The public schools have just closed a very successful term of public instruction, which terminated with extensive examinations, public exhibitions and May day festivities.

The schools of our city are in a very flourishing condition, and by the present management, have attained a very enviable reputation.

Nicholas Graham, under sentence of death to be hung in the city on Friday, the 2d inst., has had his sentence reprieved until the 30th inst. Efforts are being made to obtain his full pardon.

R. M. Hackus was convicted of manslaughter for killing Frederick Ohlman about a year since, and has been sentenced to the State Prison for two years and six months, and to pay a fine of $3,000.

Captain W. A. Richardson, one of the oldest residents of California, and for twenty years Captain of the Port of San Francisco under the Mexican Government, died at Sancilleto on the 20th ultimo.

Dr. Hammond, of the U. S. Branch Mint, also died the same day, and Dr. S. H. Mills, County Physician, died on the 30th April.

A Republican State Convention was held at Sacramento on the 30th April, to select delegates to the National Convention to be held on the 17th June next, at which Judge Nathaniel Bennett presided, and the following persons were chosen to represent this State in the aforesaid Convention: Messrs. C. A. Washburn, John A. Mills, F. H. Fidger, E. Owens, W. H. Chamberlain, J. W. Pierce, C. M. Hanson, John Dick, John Phelps, J. C. Foll, S. M. Junkins and J. M. Reed.

The State Legislature adjourned on the 21st, the day of the sailing of the last steamer, leaving a record of its public acts for the criticisms of the press and the scrutiny of the people. Many things have been done for the benefit of the State, and much that was needed was left undone. The bill to consolidate the City and County Governments of San Francisco was passed, and has been approved. The first election under it will be held in November next.

The bills to fund the county indebtedness and the rejected city scrip were both lost, and since the adjournment suits have been commenced against the city upon the latter for about $200,000. There is in all about $1,700,000 of this character of indebtedness against the city, nearly all of which will probably be sued upon now, in consequence of the failure of the Legislature to provide for funding it.

Gov. Johnson has removed W. H. Rhodes from the office of Secretary, and appointed Wm. Bausman, late Secretary of the Senate.

There is nothing particularly new concerning the affairs of Adams & Co. It is expected that a dividend will soon be made, and will probably pay about 10 per cent.

The great bulkhead scheme has been repudiated by the Council after consultation with the Chamber of Commerce, and a discussion of its merits by the city press. It was believed to be a powerful monopoly, and would place in the hands of the city certain rights of the city which she ought not to cede away.

Mr. Alfred A. Green, an old resident of this city, claims to have recovered from old Spanish papers, written evidences of the title of lands in and about San Francisco, and also claims that with these papers the city can establish her title against all adverse claimants, and without them she cannot. He offers to sell them to the city for $50,000, and a large contingent in case of success.

The Marysville Express, says Mr. Beatow, of the Express, says the Lynch Republican, has favored us with some news items from the North. He left Yreka on Monday morning last.

More than the usual number of travelers are now upon the Northern trail. Many are on their way down for the purpose of visiting the Atlantic States, and an equal number are on their way to the Siskiyou mines and Rogue River Valley. At least one hundred footmen were met between Yreka and this place.

A few days since a party left Jacksonville and vicinity for the Atlantic States, with "plies." The party consisted of twenty one persons, and they took with them the sum of $140,000, being the result of several years' industry as miners, merchants, mechanics, etc. They passed through this place on Thursday last.

A sham duel was fought near Yreka on Sunday last. Of course, one party was killed on the first fire, and greeny was compelled to fly for dear life.

The great Yreka ditch is now delivering a few sluice heads of water on the Yreka Flats. It will be some time before it will be of any general advantage to the miners of that locality.

Indian troubles no longer exist in any portion of Siskiyou county or the Rogue river country.

Business is improving in Yreka, population is on the increase, and the late rains have put a considerable amount of gold dust in circulation.

Later from Oregon.

In Oregon the Indian war still continues, and the success of the present campaign has so far amounted only to the seizure of a few canoes, with their contents—squaws and cooking utensils. This war bids fair to rival the one in Florida for its length of duration.

Later from China.

By the arrival of the bark Live Yankee, at San Francisco, from Hong-Kong, we have eighteen days later news from China.

HEAVY FAILURE.—The mail says that an American house in Canton, of long standing, of great enterprise and respectability, have suspended payment, and their liabilities are said to exceed $1,000,000. No names are given.

WRECK OF AN AMERICAN SHIP.—The American clipper ship Mermaid, towed from Bombay to Hong-Kong, with a cargo of cotton, was wrecked on the Prata Shoal on the night of the 2d March, having been carried on shore by the current, the weather previously preventing any observation being taken. No lives lost. The captain also reports that two other vessels, one Ternvien and one Dutch, were said to be the wreckers to have been recently lost on the Shoals.

A Canton correspondent of the China Mail, of the 13th March, says:

During the last fortnight news has come that Yeh, the Governor General, has been advanced another step on the ladder of office, and is now the fourth member of the Privy Council, the Nui Koh, which consists of two Manchous and two Chinese. This one is always styled the Grandee, who embodies or represents the humanity of the Emperor.

The local authorities have tried to raise a revenue for winking at the rebuilding of the shops outside of the city wall, which were all pulled down in August 8, 1854, by forbidding the shopmen to use brick and tiles in their construction, expecting, of course, to be fee'd for permitting it. Nearly all the lots are occupied on the south of the city.

The execution ground is but comparatively seldom used, and the deaths there are so few as to excite no remark. It may be inferred, therefore, that the Government has quelled all sedition. About a month ago the existence of an organized band of boys, whose object was the downfall of Manchus, was discovered near Fushan, and two hundred or more arrested. Their ages ranged from 7 to 17, and so strong was the evidence against them, that many of the older ones were decapitated. It excited much surprise among the gentry and officials at Canton, who are strangely ignorant of what is going on among the people of even this prefecture, right under their eyes. However, the peace-at-any-rate party of Canton is now entirely in the majority, and the death of two or three hundred boys is a slight matter.

THE WEATHER.—Cotton.—On Sunday and Monday last, the coldest weather ever known for the season was experienced in this vicinity. We learn from the Vicksburg Whig of the 20th, the cause. Says that paper: "We had a wild storm of rain, wind, thunder and lightning, late last Friday night, and judging from the change in the temperature, we infer there was an accompaniment of hail at no great distance from this city."

It is now clear, dry, warm and somewhat dusty weather.

We have heard some complaint in Concordia Parish of lice on the cotton plant; but to what extent the injury is we cannot yet ascertain.

[Concordia Intelligencer, 23d.

The holy places at Jerusalem are now crowded with pilgrims from all parts of the world. The usual scandalous conflicts between the Latins and Greeks, owing to the circumspect conduct of the latter.

LATER FROM NICARAGUA.

Retreat of the Costa Ricans.

By the arrival of the steamship Granada, we are put in possession of Aspinwall papers of the 20th. From the Courier, of that date, we extract the following. It will be seen that the Costa Ricans have become homesick, and have cleared out. The news is successively meagre; but still, what there is of it is very satisfactory. We firmly believe now, as ever, that the star of Gen. Walker is in the ascendant, and that the independence of Nicaragua is secured. We shall have further and fuller intelligence, we suppose and hope, in the course of time.

But to the Aspinwall Courier's news:

On Saturday last, Messrs. Brando, McMurray, Drake, and others, of San Juan del Sud, arrived at Panama, in a schooner. They bring news from that point to May 5. From them we learn that some Costa Ricans rescued San Juan, after the battle of Rivas, on the 16th May; and having there shipped their wounded for Punta Arenas, the army started by land to retreat into Costa Rica; that the cholera has been making sad havoc among the Costa Rica troops, and that Gen. Walker is evidently in the ascendant.

Other parties who have been eye-witnesses to most of what they note, inform us more minutely:

Burying the dead and caring for their wounded, together with a few preparations of fortification, left Walker should return on them before they could leave, occupied the succeeding week. They commenced their retreating movement about the 24th, and on the 29th the entire army had vacated Nicaragua, all of them having marched to Guanacosta—except some fifty men who were at San Juan del Sud, shipping the wounded by water for Punta Arenas.

We have heretofore given an account of the battle of Rivas, which is confirmed. At 3 A. M., on the 12th, being out of ammunition, Walker marched out of the city to the fife and drum, and for four hours the Costa Ricans continued to fire at the church which he had vacated.

His force in the battle was 400 foreigners and 300 natives, and that of the Costa Ricans 3,000.

The Costa Ricans represented themselves as having been entirely deceived; that Walker was far preferred by the natives, and that instead of being received with open arms by Nicaraguans, they had been shunned or attacked at every point. Baron Bulow was exceedingly dissatisfied, both at the conduct of the Costa Ricans and the falsity of the representations that had been made to him respecting Walker's condition and the feeling of the Nicaraguans towards him and his army.

The Star and Herald, of Saturday, represents the church of Rivas to have been robbed by Walker's men, and refers to other plunder by them. We have the authority of those who have watched Walker's movements throughout the past year, for saying that he has never allowed plunder; and that he has never taken anything from foreigners and natives in Nicaragua, except by governmental levies.

No church in Nicaragua contains images with precious stones or jewels of any considerable value upon them; the church at Rivas has images in it, is without a roof, wholly unfinished, and never has been used as a place of worship. So much for the story of the Star and Herald, that images were robbed of diamonds, and used as barbeadas in the church.

FROM SAN JUAN DEL NORTE.—The steamer Taylor arrived at Aspinwall; from Greytown, on Wednesday, the 7th instant. She brings no news from the interior. Some dozen or more of Walker's men came in her from Greytown, having struggled there—they had left some two months since. Provisions are said to be very short at Greytown. The blockade is kept by her Britannic Majesty's ship Eurydice—there being none other there.

Thirty-Fourth Congress—First Session.

WASHINGTON, May 20, 1856.—Senate.—The Chair laid before the Senate a report from the Secretary of War, transmitting information respecting the improvement of the navigation of the St. Clair flats.

The House joint resolution in reference to the sufferers at the Cape de Verde Islands was read. Mr. Seward urged its immediate passage, but, objection being made, it lies over.

The bill making appropriations for the civil expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1857; which was amended and passed.

Mr. Benjamin, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a joint resolution requiring the Commissioners of Patents to take the necessary steps to obtain information with regard to the growth and consumption of tobacco and cotton in the several countries of the world; which was read three times and passed.

Mr. Sumner resumed his Kansas speech; in conclusion, making a comparison between what he called the tyranny of the President in Kansas, and the tyranny of King George the Third. From Congress he appealed to the people in the coming Presidential election to vindicate Kansas. Let the ballot box of the Union, with multitudinous might, protect the ballot-box there.

Mr. Cass characterized the speech of Mr. Sumner as the most un-American and unpatriotic speech he had ever listened to, and trusted his ears would never be saluted by such a one again, here or elsewhere.

Mr. Douglas was remarkably severe on Sumner, characterizing his speech as being a tissue of gross vituperations and vulgar abuse; and he said that while the Senator from Massachusetts had charged him with crime, he himself while taking an oath to support the Constitution, had violated that instrument!

Mr. Mason likewise replied to Mr. Sumner, saying Senators, by virtue of their political association, are compelled to listen to language here to which they would not lend an ear elsewhere. He said that Sumner was incapable of knowing what the truth is, and to see him elsewhere was to loath and despise him.

Mr. Sumner replied, indulging in coarse personalities, more severe than those of Douglas towards him. The Senate then adjourned.

House of Representatives.—Mr. Bennett, of New York, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported a bill granting 1,048,328 acres of land to the State of Wisconsin, for the construction of three roads, of an aggregate length of five hundred and three miles.

Mr. Stanton made an ineffectual motion that the bill lie on the table—yeas 69, nays 76.

Much time was consumed in preliminary questions, calling yeas and nays, etc., and pending the consideration of the bill.

The House adjourned.

OPENING OF THE PARAGUAY RIVER.—We have Rio Janeiro papers to the 8th ultimo. The Journal de Comercio of that date contains the following: We are happy to be able to announce that the negotiations that have for some time been pending between Brazil and Paraguay, respecting the free navigation of the Paraguay river, have at last been brought to a happy termination.

On the 6th of April was concluded, and signed in our city court, a treaty of friendship, navigation and commerce between the two powers, and also a convention naming the place and the form in which the boundary questions are to be definitely settled.

The exchange of ratifications will take place in the city of Assumption within eighty days, or sooner if possible. The treaty will go into effect as soon as the ratification can be exchanged—so that at present the navigation of the Paraguay, and consequently of the ocean, may be considered as open as far as the province of Mato-Grosso.

By the terms of the treaty concluded on the 25th of December, 1850, this province should have enjoyed the benefits of a free navigation of the Paraguay river, but it is only at the present day that she really comes into full possession of this privilege.

The Journal predicts that immense advantages will accrue to both countries from this treaty.

INTELLIGENCE FROM KANSAS.—The St. Louis Republican of the 23d inst., has the following Kansas items:

We learn from Brewerton, who left Franklin, K. T., last night at 8 o'clock, that war had commenced.

Mr. Cosgrove and Dr. Brannon were on their way to Franklin, Kansas Territory, from Lecompton, they were hailed by a party of Abolitionists, who inquired who they were and where they were going? On being answered, the commander of the squad turned to his men, and asked their motto. Their reply was, "Sharp's Rifles," and they immediately brought their guns to bear on Messrs. Cosgrove and Brannoe. Brannon was wounded in the arm, but Cosgrove sent a ball whirling through the brain of their leader—the balance fled.

An abolitionist was shot at Blanton's Bridge, yesterday morning—the wound is mortal.

Mr. Brewerton was pursued seven miles, by armed men, and only escaped by the speed of his horse.

THE TOBACCO MARKET.—The actual cash sales of leaf tobacco in this market, during the past week amounted to 939 hogsheads. Prices ranged from $4 40 to $5 00 for scraps and inferior lugs, $5 50 to $10 00 for fair lugs to choice, and $10 50 to $11 25, $11 75 to $13 00, and $15 50 for extra manufacturing leaf. These were about the largest sales and highest prices ever obtained in this market to one week. The aggregate cash price paid to farmers by the tobacco buyers of Louisville during the week, at a moderate estimate, amounted to the sum of $155,100.

[Louisville Democrat, 19th.

MUSIC BY STEAM.—Some time since we gave an account of the invention, by a Worcester gentleman, of an instrument which plays numerous musical airs by steam power. A joint stock company has now been formed for the manufacture of the instruments and is called the "Steam Music Company."

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The N. O. Christian Advocate.

TERMS—$2 50 per annum, in advance.

NEW ORLEANS:

SATURDAY, MAY 31, 1856.

Rev. James W. Shores.—We are pained to learn that Bro. Shores' health has failed. At the Alabama Conference he was appointed to the Buttahatchie Circuit. Though far from his last year's work and a hard one, "like a son in the gospel," he went with his family, and with alternations of sickness and health filled the appointments for two months. Under nervous derangement and general debility he is now obliged to cease work. His Presiding Elder, Rev. G. Shaeffer, and friends in the circuit, have extended much kindness. He begs the prayers of his brethren. His Post Office is Moscow, Alabama.

Sabbath School Fruit.—The Morean street Methodist Church, Third District of N. O., Rev. J. A. Ivey, pastor, has been blessed with a protracted meeting of deep interest. It is still kept up, night after night. More than twenty souls have professed religion and been added to the church. This church is an encouraging illustration of what a sabbath-school comes to. The sabbath-school has been the care of the church, and in turn is its recruiting source.—In a region of moral darkness, surrounded by irreligion, ignorance, and Romanism; sustained feebly by an American population; few in numbers at the beginning; burnt out once, the Morean street church has come up slowly, steadily. Capt. Robertson the Superintendent with his willing assistants, has been boasting, "if we have a weak church, we have a strong sabbath-school." It has been credited as one of the best regulated in the city. Their singing, under the direction of J. Uber, is especially good. Watkins, Kinnear, Gober, Thweatt and Ivey, have planted and watered there, and now the fruit appears. The girls and boys are growing and have grown to be men and women and find their places in the church, while the religious instruction of them, has kept the teachers in their places.

Watkinsoor, La.—A protracted meeting in the Methodist church at this place in Tensas Parish, has been very [illegible] Rev. R. J. Harp, pastor, assisted by Rev. E. W. Griswold and local brethren.

Camp Meeting in Lower Louisiana.—The notice of Rev. B. F. Alexander, of a camp meeting pitched for the Opelousas country, will arrest attention and secure the prayers of many of the ministry and laity, who have long had at heart the establishment of Methodism, with all her means of grace in full operation, in that region. How to get there? Will the pastor oblige some in this direction by letting us know?

Dr. Bodenhamer.—We do the public a real service by calling attention to a notice of the Louisville Journal, published elsewhere. We endorse it, too. Dr. B. now resides in New York.

Mansfield Female College.—See the notice of President Thweatt, as to the approaching commencement. It will doubtless be an occasion worth going a long distance to see and enjoy. We congratulate our friends of that region in having put the institution in a short time on such eminence of merit.

Going Away.—Our citizens are going away—for pleasure—in crowds—to spend their money among their particular friends, at Niagara, Saratoga, Nahant, Cape May, etc. They have made money the past season—now to spend it. With pockets plethoric, they are bent on the pleasures of travel. Intense Southerners, they will in the next few months drop a few millions of tribute money at the North.

Franklin Female College.—We learn from our exchanges, that Rev. D. J. Allen, has been elected President of this flourishing institution at Holly Springs, Mississippi.

Steam Carriage for Common Roads.—Hunt's Merchant's Magazine, in an article on the efforts that have been made to produce a steam-carriage for common roads, expresses the confident conviction that a recent invention of Mr. Fisher overcomes all obstacles, and will succeed.

Fanaticism.—Liberty, domicil property—yes, constitution, are the great arguments of bar-room statesmen.

SABBATH-SCHOOL CELEBRATION.

The scholars of the Sabbath-School Union of the M. E. Church in New Orleans held their annual festival last sabbath afternoon, four o'clock, in the Carondelet-street Church. Our engagements, at the hour, prevented the pleasure of attending on the joyous occasion. The reporter of the Delta gave a notice, which we append:

Methodist Sabbath-School Celebration.—We had the pleasure of passing a couple of hours most agreeable last evening in witnessing the tenth anniversary celebration of the Methodist Sabbath-School Union of this city, in the church belonging to that persuasion, on Carondelet street. At four o'clock, the hour appointed for the commencement of the exercises, the building was crowded with the members of the schools their friends and relatives, and a large number, like ourselves, who love to look upon happy and festal scenes wherever they can be found; and truly it was most beautiful to see this temple filled to overflowing with "little ones" and those of larger growth, all exhibiting, in demeanor and expression, the quiet and earnest joy which the pure and willing practice of religion ever imparts, and evidently showing that the assemblage was thoroughly impressed with that beautiful injunction of preserving "peace and good will to all."

The exercises consisted in the singing of hyms, recitation of poems, dinlogues, etc., and the whole celebration was highly creditable to the zeal and attention of the teachers.

Where all were deserving of so much praise, it would be scarcely fair to particularize; but we cannot refrain from doing so in a few instances.

* * * * * *

We hope that it will be in our power to attend many another exhibition of the Sabbath-School Union. Wm. H. Foster, Esq., the zealous and active President, deserves the warmest approval from the friends of these schools.

RESIGNATION OF DR. CLAPP.

This distinguished Divine has resigned his pastoral charge in New Orleans. Prostrated health induces this step—reluctantly on his own part, and with deep regret on the part of his congregation and numerous personal friends, to whom he was endeared as an eloquent minister, a christian gentleman, a man of laborious life and generous soul.

Dr. C. has been a settled pastor here demics—was no stranger to the house of mourning—abundant in charities.—He neglected not those occasions—affliction—where the foundation of strongest friendships and obligations is laid in the human heart. Few men, in or out of the pulpit, wielded such influence.

With the Doctor's theological views we are at variance—at war. His peculiar teachings and those of the Methodist pulpit and Advocate have more than once met in sharp conflict. But always on his part with courtesy and generous spirit. On ours, too, we trust christian comity was not less respected.

He left last week, for the North, where we trust reposo and a bracing atmosphere will recruit his health.

We understand that his late congregation agreeable to their liberal character and their high appreciation of Dr. C., will make provision for his support, in infirmity and age.

English Criticisms against Methodists.—Many specimens of learned ignorance and affected scorn and sneering contempt appear in the writings of Englishmen against what they term "vulgar extravagance of Methodists." A profound criticism of one of those writers is put forth against the hymn commencing—

"I'm not ashamed to own my Lord," which he considers a wonderful condescension. If this British sage will turn to Rom., 1st, chap, 16th verse, he will find the very phrase. Another writer, Lord Mahon, in his history of England, says: "a solemn accusation might have been brought against Wesley for the presumption with which he sometimes ascribed immediate efficacy to his prayers." What presumption to immediate answer of prayer. God's declaration is, "and it shall come to pass that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear."

Longevity of Clergymen.—Hall's Journal of Health states, that of eighty clergymen who died in the year 1855, one half had passed threescore and ten, thus confirming the opinion of statisticians that theologians are the longest lived of all the members of the human family."

What a marvelous idea that a sinner should excite harmony in heaven—yet every repenting sinner does this:—"There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."

THE COST OF PERIODICAL LITERATURE.

It is so easy to figure up the business of publishing a weekly paper! Profits, profits—the prospective trouble is what to do with them.

We smile at the remembrance of its ever having been suspected that somebody about this Christian Advocate was making money, getting rich; and that too, when our subscription list was not two-thirds what it now is, and the Editor was receiving one year four hundred dollars, and one year twenty-one dollars.

It is a great task, a serious enterprise to establish a religious paper. It is the work of years—the result of much sacrifice and labor. The Northern General Conference has had laid before it a statement that may be read several ways, and every way teaches a lesson to the Church, South.

The Book Agents, 200 Mulberry street, report—

PERIODICAL DEPARTMENT.

Your agents deeply regret that they are under the necessity of reporting a loss upon all the periodicals published by the concern, except the Christian Advocate and Journal.

The following shows the costs and receipts of each for the last four years, together with the average number of subscribers:

Christian Advocate and Journal.

Average No. subscribers, 29,875
Cost of publication	$124,749 22
Receipts	141,731 67
Profits	$16,982 45

Sunday-School Advocate.

Average circulation....83,500
Expenses	$95,831 85
Receipts	81,497 27
Loss	$14,334 28

National Magazine.

Average circulation....15,875
Expenses	$92,265 61
Receipts	69,357 93
Loss	$22,917 68

Quarterly Review.

Average circulation....2,721
Expenses	$17,236 08
Receipts	10,975 94
Loss	$6,260 14

Expenses over receipts on National Magazine, Quarterly Review and Sunday-School Advocate	$43,512 40
Deduct profits on Advocate and Journal	16,982 45
Balance of expenses over receipts on all the periodicals	$26,520 05

The demand for low prices has been yielded to below the publishing cost.—The Quarterly Review, one of the ablest in the world, pays fifty cents to agents for every new subscriber, and nearly all the periodicals pay a heavy per centage on collections. The result is a loss that would sink them in a legitimate business.

The Western Agents, Cincinnati, O., make a more favorable showing:

At this time we are running seven presses—six for printing books, and one for printing the Western Christian Advocate and Apologist.

We are now in a condition to do a large amount of printing, binding, etc.; and yet, should our business enlarge as it has, we shall find ourselves crowded for room.

We have printed during the last term:

Bound volumes for the concern	768,300 copies.
Tracts for the concern	745,750 "
Bound volumes for others	71,500 "
Pamphlets, consisting of Minutes of conferences, catalogues, etc.	65,000 "

We have added to our catalogue during the past four years, thirty-six works in the English language, and have several more in press; we have also stereotyped and issued during the same time, thirty-one volumes and thirty-one tracts in German; making a total of sixty-seven new works and thirty-one tracts.

Our periodicals are all in a most flourishing condition:

We are now sending out the Western Christian Advocate	28,718
Giving us an increase in the past four years of	7,718
The Ladies' Repository has a subscription list of	29,580
Which is an increase of	16,580
The Christian Apologist has a subscription list of	6,967
Being an increase of	3,563

Periodicals for the same time	85,164 28

The agents say:

"But for the heavy debt due the South, and the consequent importance of husbanding our finances, we should not hesitate to suggest to the General Conference the propriety of ordering the purchase of a suitable lot, and the erection of such a building or buildings as would answer for the Depository and the printing of the paper in Chicago."

We trust that those of our Southern papers that have reduced their subscription prices may not find it to work a loss. We tried $1 50 a year and bore the operation with as much uncomplaining dignity and quietness as we could, but it won't do. We cannot work as cheap as they. It is said that Southerners are not so punctual in small matters, as subscriptions, as Northerners. If Yankees lose at it, how can we make both ends meet?

True, there are certain benefits accruing to the Church, not set down in receipts, as the advantages to the book department in advertising through these mediums, which otherwise would cost the concern a very large amount, while all departments of the church would not be reached as at present, and the influence of such periodicals upon the church and the world, devoted as they are to morality and religion.

Our brethren may see the necessity of increasing the circulation and attending to collections for our Quarterly.

The Home Circle has claims, in this respect, that are forcibly suggested.—The S. S. Visitor also.

All our Advocates appeal to their patrons and agents on the above figures. As for the New Orleans Advocate, $2 in advance, $2 50 if payment be delayed six months, and $3 if to the end of the year. No apology is needed after these Northern figures. We hold it as self-evident that no man who likes to read a paper likes to get it at less than its cost.

THE CHURCHES.

M. E. Church, North.—The Daily Western Advocate, issued by the Book Agents and edited by Dr. Elliott, from the seat of G. Conference, carries forth ample reports up to May 18th of motions and debates. If it is well to have speeches reported at all they ought, in justice to the delegates and the church, be well reported. The address of the Bishops was read by Bishop Janes. It is a well drawn up document, save in one point, expressing only a doubt where a decisive tone is called for.

The statistics furnished show in 1855, 5,408 traveling preachers, 6,610 local preachers, and 799,431 members and probationers; giving a net increase during four years of 958 traveling preachers, 610 local preachers, and 77,627 members and probationers, or over 10 per cent beyond the number of 1852.

Attention is called to the mode of calling an extra general conference and a change suggested. The present mode of trying appeals is brought to view. A delegated annual conference, composed of one member from each annual conference is suggested. Another plan is a distinct annual conference in every episcopal district, composed of two delegates from each annual conference.

Reference is made to the existence of Biblical Schools, adopted by several conferences. But it is recommended that they should become connexional, "and in some way responsible to the General Conference, so that their management and teaching shall be in harmony with church doctrines and usages."

In the case of Africa it is stated that Episcopal authority on the spot is necessary, and three modes are suggested in order to meet the exigency—

1st, That the General Conference appoint a Bishop and send him to organize them as the M. E. Church of Africa.

2d, Or, that they organize themselves, elect their Bishop and send him to us for ordination.

3d, Or, to appoint a missionary Bishop to take charge of that work, we retaining jurisdiction over it.

The Bishops notice that the resolutions of four conferences asking a change in the general rule on slavery, had failed, in their opinions, in obtaining a constitutional majority in the annual conferences, so that the General Conference could not adopt any one of the alterations. The address then expressed a great doubt, that "any measure equivalent to a change in the general rules can be constitutionally adopted without the concurrence of the annual the address the Bishops say that doubtful measures should be avoided, "lest the unity of the body ecclesiastic should be periled."

The address states that there are six conferences, in whole or in part, in slave territory, composing a white membership of 143,000, with congregations composing five or six hundred thousand, and 28,000 colored members, with attendants of over 100,00. There are therefore 170,000 church members in these conferences, and some seven or eight hundred thousand of hearers.

The Nashville Presbytery on Dancing.

The Presbytery of Nashville, at its late meeting adopted the following:

On motion the following preamble and resolution was adopted, and ordered to be included in the abstract for publication, and ordered that it be read from each pulpit in our bounds:

Whereas, The Presbyterian Church have, through their highest Judicatories condemned dancing; and whereas members of the Church are often found ignorant of the sentiment and decisions of the Church, and often engage in this amusement; and whereas circumstances seem to demand the opinion of this Presbytery upon this subject, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the practice of dancing and attending upon dancing parties, is eminently and exclusively that of the world which lieth in wickedness; so inconsistent with the life of a Christian and that purity of heart which Christians should strive to attain, that it is not only improper for Christians to allow themselves or children to engage in it and qualify them for it, but sessions of our churches should treat it as an offence worthy of discipline under our rules of church government.

On Sabbath Travelling.

Resolved, That it is contrary to the word of God; the standards of the Presbyterian Church, and the practice of the peculiar people of God, for ministers and elders of the Church to return home or start for home at such times as will compel them to violate the Sabbath, and that this Presbytery express their strong and decided disapprobation of the practice of travelling on the Sabbath day.—And that this resolution be read from the pulpit by all the ministers of this Presbytery.

Holy comforts flow from holy truths, and always lead to holy practice; suspect all beside, they are highly dangerous.

Position and Influence of the Jews.

The existence of the Jews is the living miracle of the world. They are scattered and down trodden, and yet, according to the most accurate statistics, are as numerous as they were when they left the land of Egypt; the returns made to Bonaparte giving about three millions. Expatriated, they become citizens of the world; wherever tolerated they commence traffic, and become thrifty. Every were they are at home. They may be banished, but cannot be expelled; be trodden down, yet cannot be crushed. Only in the United States, France, Holland and Prussia, are they fully citizens; but in spite of British statutes, the Russian ukase, and Turkish curse, they prosper still. The great nations of antiquity, the Egyptians and Assyrians, the Romans and Saracens, as well as the modern Turks and Christians, have attempted to destroy them, but in vain; while penal laws and cruel tortures have only served to increase their numbers, and reinforce their obstinacy.

But the Jews exist, not only as a monument and a miracle; Jewish mind has exerted an influence on the world.—Favored by Napoleon, the Hebrew race at once developed power which had never been suspected: Soult, Ney and Massena, who thus altered his name from Manasseh, to escape the odium of being an Israelite, were all marshals of France under the eye of the greatest warrior of his age. In politics the Jews have Metternich in Austria, D'Israeli in England, a convert to the Christian faith, while the autocrat of Russia has had a Jew for his counsellor, and Spain a prime minister of the same race, and Russia, her Minister of Finance. In the United States, Jews begin to figure in our national councils; Mr. Yulee, late member of the house, and Mr. Soule, recently senator from Louisiana, and Mr. Benjamin, now senator, being of the Hebrew stock. Mr. Cremieux, one of the most eminent lawyers of France, was what we should call attorney general upon the flight of Louis Philippe, was a Jew.

In money-power the Jews hold in their hands the destiny of kingdoms and empires whose governments become bankrupt, and their sovereigns turn beggars at a Hebrew nod. Half-a-dozen Jews can do more to prevent the peace of Europe, by sitting behind their desks, and persistingly saying No! to the royal applicants for money, than all the peace congresses and conventions in Christendom. The Rothschilds, the Barings, and Sir John Montefiore, are all Jews, and with their banking establishments scattered over Europe and Asia, wield a hold.

Coming to the literary profession, and inquiring into the lineage of many of the most distinguished scholars and men of science, we find the Jew prominent here as well as in active life.—The most renowned in astronomy have been the Jews, as the Herscholls in England, and Arago in France, the astronomer royal under Louis Philippe, and who has filled the world with his fame. Those German works which are deluging the world are, for the most part, the productions of Christianized Jews, as those of Hengstenberg, Tholuck, Schleiermacher, Gesenius, Neander, Niebuhr, and others, whose learned treatises, Biblical criticisms, didactic theology, and general sacred literature, are found in the library of every theological student. Spinoza, the famous infidel, was a Jew; and so are Ronge, and Czerski, who took the lead of a religious reformation in Germany in our day.

Such have been and are the Jews.—Mysterious nation! Inexplicable enigma! A living, perpetually omnipresent miracle! A race so indomitable, so imperishable, must have been raised up and preserved for some grand purpose. —Congregational Journal.

Moral Courage.

Sydney Smith, in his work on moral philosophy, speaks in this wise of what men lose for want of a little moral courage, or independence of mind: "A great deal of talent is lost in the world for the want of a little courage. Every day sends to their graves a number of obscure men who have only remained in obscurity because their timidity has prevented them from making a first effort; and who if they could have been induced to begin would in all probability have gone great lengths in career of fame. The fact is, that to do any thing in this world worth doing, we must not stand back shivering, and thinking of the cold and the danger, but jump in and scramble through as well as we can. It will not do to be perpetually calculating tasks, and adjusting nice chances; it did very well before the flood, when a man could consult his friends upon an intended publication for an hundred and fifty years and then live to see its success afterwards; but at present, a man waits and doubts and hesitates and consults his brother, and his uncle, and particular friends, till one fine day he finds that he is sixty years of age—that he has lost so much time in consulting his first cousins and particular friends, that he has no more time to follow their advice."

Bowels Considered as Moral Agents.

* * * * But he advanced one doctrine which, with certain limitations and rather essential qualifications, we feel disposed to adopt. As nearly as we could get at his idea, it was that nothing stands in the way of a man being good but indigestion—that the hope of mankind lies in the stomach and bowels—that salvation exists only in assimilation—that man's highest relations are those which he sustains toward his dinner table, and that the road to Heaven passes through the alimentary canal. Now we will go so far with the gentleman as to admit that bowels really deserve a place among the great moral agents. We have no doubt that many of the gloomiest passages of religious experience originate in the liver, that conscience is harrassed by the passage of calculi through the billery duct, that coolness between friends is frequently not only coincident with, but dependent upon, constipation, that love wanes with a relaxed habit of the mucous membrane, that anger and irritability are the direct result of mince-pie, and lobster salad, and that conjugal infidelity may be produced by over-feeding, perhaps more readily than by spiritualism. We believe that the care-worn and haggard condition of the American people result from dyspepsia, rather than from any other cause, and that the natural bowels need only to be kept well and regularly open to lighten the general load of care fifty per cent.

We have seen cases in this poor world that would sufficiently illustrate the basis of our belief. We could lay our hand upon the arm of many a friend who would not only be startled, but offended, by the insinuation it would convey. We know a clam and patent woman whose religious exercises are one continued trial. Her heart is hard, her sensitive conscience is her persistent accuser, the heavens are brass above her, a cloud rests upon her worldly circumstances, she looks out upon the future with fearful forebodings, friends are fickle or cold, death stands always knocking at her door, and every thing goes against her. She thinks that all is meant to wean her from a world of sorrow, and yet she can not perceive that she is becoming better fitted for that land

"Where the wicked cease from troubling,
And the weary are at rest."

Now blue pill combined in small doses, combined with a little ipecac and hyosciamus, would do this woman a world of good. It would lift a load from her conscience, open the way for her heart's highest communion, fill her future with rosy light, and make her [illegible] in a sense that would not call for the corrective agency of the electro-chemical bath. This woman is the type of a large class, and, if any of them read this article, we hope that their next period of self-examination may be devoted to a careful consideration of the condition of their digestive organs. We know a man who has the reputation of being high-tempered and irritable, crabbed and cross. That man's mother will take her oath that he was the best baby and plensantest child she ever had. But he eats too much.—His stomach is sour, the tides of life flow laboriously, his alimentary passages are irritated by pepper and mustard, and the consequence is that he acts as if he were possessed of the devil. This man can not be peaceable and amiable with his stomach in a perpetual growl. Let him, by accident, get into a good physical condition, and he will greet you as pleasantly as a summer morning. He wants exercise on a hard-trotting horse, meat once a day, broiled, coarse bread, and a limited number of Carter potatoes, with nothing stronger for drink than cocoa and cold water. No essential amelioration of his moral condition can be achieved until these things are attended to. The preacher will preach, the friend humor, the wife caress in vain. We remember once seeing a very thick-headed little urchin struggling to keep his eyes open before the school mistress, and tell the name of the letter a. At last, in the very abandon of despair, he exclaimed: "I can't read with this darn great apple in my pocket." Comment is unnecessary. It is utterly impossible, it seems to us, for the real millenium to come until a healthy digestive apparatus becomes a universal possession. We say this in no spirit of levity or irreverence. It is impossible to feel good when one can not help feeling cross, to be happy when one is miserable, to be amiable with a cannon ball in one's stomach. Therefore let us all do what we can to advance the great cause of human progress and sound and healthy morality, by frequent bathing, daily out-of-door exercise, simple and wholesome diet, and regularity of habits.—Under this regimen, crime will become unfashionable, pauperism go out of date, and the great religious agencies of the world have a fair chance and a clear field.—Springfield Rep.

Christ as a Saviour is the great ordinance of God, and believing in Christ receiving from Christ, and aiming in all things to honor Christ, is the constant duty and high privilege of every Christian.

Confiscation of Church Property in Mexico.

We published last week, says the New York Evening Post, the news that the Government has commenced the confiscation of the church property in Mexico,—the most important intelligence that has reached us for many years from that distracted country.

It is impossible to say what is the exact, or even the approximate value of the property thus confiscated. Some authorities set down the whole ecclesiastical property as high as four hundred millions of dollars,—although it is said that one fourth of the whole is unproductive. This vast wealth yields the clergy an annul income of about two millions of dollars. The church establishment, thus supported, consists of the Archbishop of Mexico and nine Bishops, whose aggregate income amounts to $539,000. The number of the parochial clergy is 3,677. There are also four cathedrals, having 168 canons and other dignitares, and one college or church. The regular clergy comprise 1,978 monks chiefly Franciscan, and there are 156 convents.

Ecclesiastical property in Mexico has hitherto been free from taxation, and the management of all property bequeathed to the church for pious uses, such, for instance, as raising churches and saying masses for the souls of the donors, has always been in the hands of the clergy. It is more especially this last species of church property estimated by Baron Humboldt, some fifty years ago, to be worth $40,000,000, which it is intended at present, to confiscate. The greater part of this property is administered by chaplains who perform no parochial duties whatever. Dr. Jose Mora, one of the most intelligent men in Mexico, thought that Humboldt had underrated the extent of these donations, which he estimated at near eighty millions of dollars.

In the year 1804 the King of Spain ordered the funds of these religious foundations to be seized and confiscated. Of course the clergy protested against this measure, but without avail. By that time the estimated value of the property in question was between forty and fifty millions of dollars. The government contented itself with only twenty millions, and left the remainder untouched. The war of independence which followed, greatly diminished the value of these funds but subsequent endowments, and the careful administration of the clergy, repaired the loss, so that in 1831 the sum total of this kind of property had become worth nearly $80,000,000, and of course much more valuable now.

This property is entirely distinct from that possessed by the regular clergy, and, if we estimate it $100,000,000, the unproductive property of the Mexican Church at another hundred millions, it should leave $200,000,000 of property in the hands of the regular clergy, on the supposition that the whole ecclesiastical property of the republic amounts to $400,000,000. Of this $200,000,000 a large proportion consists of the rich monasteries and convents with which the country abounds.

The Child who Died in a Passion.

I was lately taking journey [illegible] home," says one, and happened one day to be taking tea with a clergyman, when he said that he had just had a very interesting death in his parish. "I thought it was some drunkard, or swearer, or Sabbath breaker, who had been cut off in his sins, and I never for a moment suspected that it could be a little child. Oh! how was I shocked when he told me the story! A very little child, not three years old, had her naughty will crossed by her mother, and flew into a violent passion. She screamed and shrieked, and stamped with her feet on the ground, and was like a mad creature with rage. And oh! dreadful to relate, it pleased God to strike her dead in the midst of her passion. Whether she broke a blood vessel with rage, or what it was I do not know—but she died in the midst of her passion and is gone into the world of spirits."

I'll Take Back the Money.—An Indian noble being at church one day, heard finding a priest who begged for souls in purgatory, gave him a piece of gold.

"Ah, my lord," said the good father, "you have now delivered a soul!"

The count threw upon the plate another piece.

"Here is another soul, delivered," said the priest.

"Are you positive of it?" replied the count.

"Yes, my lord," replied the priest, "I am certain they are now in heaven."

"Then," said the count, "I'll take back my money, for it signifies nothing to you now; seeing the souls are already gone to heaven, there can be no danger of their returning to purgatory."

An English church is to be built at Constantinople by subscription, as a memorial of the British who perished in the war.

MARRIAGES.

On the 24th ult., in Sunflower county, Miss., at the residence of B. G. Humphreys, Esq., by the Rev. E. Mortimer, Mr. JOHN I. HUNDBERG to Miss CLARISSA E. DYER, all of said county.

Where loving hearts are joined in one
There love and joy forever dwell,
Life's rugged pathway smoothed to both
And all goes "merry as a marriage bell."

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Notice.—The examination of the students of Mansfield Female College will commence on Tuesday, the 29th July. Commencement day the following Friday, which will be the first of August, at which time the usual honors will be conferred on the graduating class, and addresses appropriate to the occasion delivered. The attendance of the patrons and friends of the Institution and the public generally is respectfully invited. The Visiting Committee of the Conference are also earnestly requested to be in attendance. H. C. THWEATT, Pres't.

Notice.—A Camp meeting will be held at Plaquemine Brulee, in the Parish of St. Landry, La., beginning on Friday, June 20, 1856. Preachers and people are generally invited to attend.
H. F. ALEXANDER, P. C.

Notice.—On the 22d of June next, Bishop Andrew will dedicate the new M. E. Church at Enterprise, Miss., at which time he will also attend to the ordination of any brethren who may have certificates of election thereto, and who have not had the opportunity of having it attended to.
W. C. TURNER.

Notice.—N. O. District, 2d Quarter.—German Missions 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, May 18th at Saraparu.
Baton Rouge, June 7th and 8th.
Bayou Lafourche and Bayou Black, June 14th and 15th, at Napoleanville.
Plaquemine and Point Coupee, June 28th and 29th, at Bayou Poydras.
Protracted Meeting at Bayou Gros Tete 5th and 6th July.
Moreau st., July 13th; Q. C. and L. F. on the 14th.
New Orleans Circuit, July 20th at Algiers, A. M.; at Carrollton, P. M.; Q. C. 17th, in Carondelet basement.
Carondelet st., July 27th; L. F. 28th; Q. C. 29th.
Wesley, Soule and Wiman's Chapels, Q. C. August 1.
Felicity st., August 3d, L. F. 4th and Q. C. 5th.
Thibodeaux, August 23d and 24th.
J. C. KEENER, P. E.

Notice.—Gainesville District, Alabama Conference. 3d Quarter.—Fork and Willow Pond Colored Mission, June 14th and 15th; Belmont and Colored Mission, June 28th and 29th; Eutaw, July 12th and 13th; Livingston, July 19th and 20th; Warsaw, 26th and 27th; DeKalb, August 2d and 3d; Lauderdale, August 9th and 10th; Sumterville, August 16th and 17th; Gainesville, August 23d and 24th; Macon, August 30th and 31st; Wahalah, September 6th and 7th. T. Y. RAMSEY, P. E.

Wanted.—A situation as Teacher, by a young man of considerable experience. He is prepared to teach Latin, Greek, and the higher Mathematics. Apply to Rev. J. C. Miller, President of Centenary College, or either of its Professors. my17-3t

Episcopal Visitation.

ABERDEEN, Miss., May 17, 1855.

Rev. H. N. McTyeire.—You will oblige me by inserting the following as the official statement of the times of holding the sessions of the Conferences in the Fourth District of Episcopal Visitation for 1856-7.

Kansas Conference, at Kickapoo, Kan., Oct. 3, 1856
Indian Mission do. at Chickasaw Academy, " 23, "
East Texas Conference, at Paris, Texas, Nov. 5, "
Texas Conference, at Gonzales Texas, Dec. 3, "

This is the arrangement agreed to at the late meeting of the Bishops at Nashville, and published in the Nashville and Richmond Christian Advocates.—The plan of this work was, at first, proposed as you have published it, but the above is the one fixed on at that meeting. The balance of your statement of the plan is correct.

Your brother, R. PAINE.

Sincerity is an opening of the heart. We find it in very few people; and that which we generally see is nothing but a subtle dissimulation to attract the confidence of others.

If the prudence of reserve and decorum dictates silence in some circumstances, in others prudence of a higher order may justify us in speaking our thoughts.

The last foreign news states that General Williams, the hero of Kars, has been made a baronet, with a pension of a thousand pounds per annum. He well deserves the compliment—the rank and the reward. Himself and Omar Pacha are the real heroes of the war.

☞ Fraud—We would call attention of the public against a fraud daily practiced upon the unsuspecting, in the article of Dr. J. Hostetter's celebrated Stomach Bitters. Since these celebrated bitters have become so popular, others have been making preparations to imitate it, and in some cases have purchased old bottles and refilled them. We would advise all persons to buy of none but respectable dealers; the genuine are all covered with a metallic cap, and the name on it. For sale by John Wright & Co., 21 and 181 Charires street; and O. D. Woodman, cor. Magazine and Common. my31 1t

☞ A learned writer, Dendy, says: "Dry-den, to ensure his brilliant visions of poesy, ate raw flesh; and Mrs. Radcliffe adopted the same plan. Green tea and coffee, if we do sleep, induce dreaming. Baptisia Forta, for procuring quiet rest and pleasing dreams, swallowed horse tongue after supper. Indigestion, and that condition which is termed a weak or irritable stomach, constitutes most fruitful source of visions. The immediate or direct influence of repletion, in totally altering the sensations and the disposition in waking moments, is a proof of its power to derange the circulation of the brain and the mental faculties in sleep. People who are troubled with indigestion, may surely get relief from Hoofland's German Bitters," sold exclusively in this country by Dr. C. M. Jackson, 120 Arch street, Philadelphia, and by his agents. See advertisement. my17 1m

☞ A Masterpiece Outdoor.—We have lately supposed that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was the Ultima Thule in its line, and that nothing had been or would be invented which could at all surpass it in its fine points of excellence as a medicine. But we are confidently assured by those competent to judge on the subject, that Ayer's new Pills excel in high medical artistry even that widely celebrated embodiment of his skill. He has succeeded in making them not only pleasant to take, but powerful to cure the large class of complaints which require a purgative remedy. Lancaster Argus, Ky. "

They are for sale by J. WRIGHT & CO.,
my19 2m and all city druggists.

MEDICAL CARD.

W. BODENHAMER, M. D., would respectfully inform his friends in the South and South west, that he has permanently located himself in the city of New York, where he still continues to devote his whole attention to the medical and surgical treatment of Chronic Diseases, especially those of the Lower Bowel—such as Piles, Constipation, Fistula, Fissure, Failing of the Bowel, etc. He has devoted a number of years to the treatment of those diseases in Louisville, Ky. and New Orleans, La.; and for the success attending his peculiar practice, as well as other information on the subject, he refers to his work on those diseases, lately published by J. S. Redfield, of New York, especially addressed to non medical readers, and for sale at the bookstores of H. M. NORMAN and J. C. MORGAN, New Orleans.

☞ Letters can be addressed to Dr. W. Bodenhamer, 16 East Twenty-First street, New York. my31 3m

Magnetic Telegraph.

IMPORTANT FROM KANSAS.

CIVIL WAR RAGING!

DESTRUCTION OF LAWRENCE CONFIRMED.

Reported Hanging of Gen. Pomeroy.

GOV. ROBINSON TO BE HUNG.

MARSHALLING OF FREE STATE MEN AT TOPEKA

THEIR DETERMINATION TO FIGHT IT OUT.

Escape of Governor Reeder.

CHICAGO, May 26.—Advices from Leavenworth confirm the destruction of Lawrence.

The Sheriff appeared before the town on Wednesday with a large force, and made some arrests. He also demanded that the people should give up their arms. Some complied with the demand, but the majority refused, whereupon he cannonaded and burnt the town.

It is reported and generally believed that General Pomeroy, the leader of the Free State faction, had been caught and hung.

Gov. Robinson, who was arrested at Lexington, Missouri, while attempting to escape, has been taken to Lecompton, and the mob threaten to hang him.

Ex-Gov. Reeder is supposed to have escaped, and is expected here via Nebrasha.

The United States troops are not allowed to move from their quarters.

The Free State men have determined to make a stand at Topeka and fight it out.

NEW YORK, May 26.—The Kansas Committee of Safety, at St. Lawrence, have determined not to resist the Marshal in the performance of his duty.

An immediate secretion of arms and ammunition would take place and the town would be evacuated.

It is reported that the Free State men are gathering at Topeka, and will resist the invaders (?) if the threats against Lawrence are put into execution.

ENLISTMENT QUESTION.

Dismissal of Mr. Crampton Certain.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—There remains no doubt, now, of the almost immediate dismissal of Mr. Crampton, and the British Consuls who are implicated in the enlistment difficulty.

THE SUMNER-BROOKS DIFFICUTY.

Brooks Challenges Col. Webb.

It is reported that Mr. Brooks sent a challenge to Col. Webb, on account of an article which appeared in the Courier and Enquirer in regard to the assault upon Sumner. Webb disavowed his authority in the matter, and declined the challenge.

Nothing of importance in Congress.

The Nicaraguan Regenerators Discharged.

NEW YORK, May 26.—In the Circuit Court to-day, all the Nicaraguan Filibusters were discharged, owing to the absence of witnesses.

The Assault on Sumner.

BOSTON, May 26.—The Massachusetts Legislature have passed very strong resolutions relative to the assault on Mr. Sumner, and demand the expulsion of Brooks and others implicated.

Meeting in Boston.

BOSTON, May 25.—The largest meeting ever held in Faneuil Hall, assembled last evening, expressing indignation at the assault upon Senator Sumner. Governor Gardiner presided, assisted by several of our most distinguished men of all parties, as Vice Presidents. Speeches unusually warm and defiant were made and resolutions adopted.

A similar meeting was held at Lowell.

New York Market.

NEW YORK, May 26.—Flour.—The market is dull. Ohio is quoted at $6 37½. Corn, 59½—an advance. Mess Pork, $18 75 to $19.

Twelve O'clock, M.

The sun pours down his meridian rays—day has reached the half-way mark in his diurnal journey—toilsome has been his march thus far, and Old Atlas now points to the descending path whose end is shaded by sleep, and inhabited by dreams.

In the marts of labor and commerce, the 12 o'clock bell, so anxiously looked for, now rings out its summons to the artisan and laborer, speaking of the comforts of the home-hearth, the expectant wife and children, the frugal but wholesome board spread for them. Twelve o'clock, in the farm-yard, in the grain-covered field! The sweat of labor is brushed from the brow, the sickle and the reaper are at rest.—The near-by spring or rivulet is eagerly sought, and for the time, exertion quietly seats herself in the lap of contentment. Baskets are unpacked, the scanty meal is partaken of with zest, and the cheerful conversation turns upon the amount of corn, wheat, oats, or other production that each fenced field may yield. Perchance a jest may pass the merry round, and some "sighing swain" be jokingly reminded of the charms of "countrie lassies."

Twelve o'clock—listen to the pleasant tinkle of the bell from yonder school house. Recess; and how the bright-eyed little ones skip laughingly out the door; some to their tops and balls, some to their romping games; and the little ladies group themselves around some favorite pastime, whilst their merry voices keep good company with the minutes as they fly—no care there for the morrow—no shrinking from the ghost of the past!—Old Sol may get up when he pleases and go to sleep when he pleases; twelve o'clock is!—Goddenglittie ones, may you never realize twelve o'clock at night.

But whilst the Lethe of repose and harmony thus with bright surface rolls over the hour, beneath bubbles and boils the turbulent current. The merchant, greedy of the prospect of gain, hurries his clerks.—Are those bills of lading signed? Has that order been filled? Did you take up those notes? Are those accounts current made up? Go down to bank and see if those notes were discounted! Did you buy that Exchange? Hurry, hurry, are the sounds that note twelve o'clock in the counting-house.

Twelve o'clock, in the bank:—The discount clerk opens his ledger; a crowd of anxious applicants present their books; and, mark their countenances as they turn to leave. Ten thousand dollars to raise, and my offering refused, says one—and off he goes to skin it. Ten, fifteen, thirty thousand, says another; well, I knew they had to do it—I owe them so much that they must keep me going. And so, on it runs, this man nervously grasping his refused notes and anxiously debating with himself, as to how he may best meet his obligations for the day; the other speculating as to what may be the most profitable investment of his plethoric bank account.

And the court rooms are resonnat with the eloquence of the lawyer. The Judge is listening patiently, mayhap wearily, to the exposition of the text of Coke or Story, of Confucius or the Code Napoleon. Meantime, wait patiently the litigants glancing now and then towards the tired jury, as "a point is made."

The physician drives rapidly—his morning calls are not yet finished. Follow him to the bed side of the patient. Mark the anxious gaze of relatives and friends. "How eagerly do they listen for the word of cheer! How hitterly sound the words "No Hope!" and it may be, that as day gleams in his meridian glory, the portals of another world reveal the dazzling vista of the future.

The mother's bedside: The tiny infant, and its feeble cry—the attentive nurse, the present news that "he is born." The fervent prayer that the sun of his future may be as bright as that greeted his birth.

And thus it is!—The culminating point of day, and its step toward declinement. With men, happiness and inquietude jostle one another. Death and birth are curtained in the bed, and rocked in the cradle.

"Time will end our story;
But, so little, if we end well, will end our glory."

A CLAY WATCH.—M. Roby, of Paris, has a timepiece made entirely of clay. All the works, plates, cogs and wheels are made of aluminium; and M. Roby believes that it is much better for these purposes than the metals generally employed. It is much lighter, does not require so much power to conduct the wheels, and, therefore, with a heavy balance, will obtain a better result for regularity. It is very hard and smooth when hammered, and the friction will be reduced to almost nothing.

A Good Man Gone.

Gen. William Dellurys, one of our oldest and most respected citizens, departed this life on Friday evening last, at about seven o'clock. General Dellurys was a native of New Orleans; and, at the time of his death, was fifty-eight years of age.

The death of such a man is no ordinary event, as thousands of mourning hearts will testify. The deceased was a man of mark, in any and every relation of life—a man who was universally respected and esteemed by all who knew him, and his range of acquaintance was coextensive with the State. During our experience, we have rarely known so much unaffected and heartfelt regret expressed and felt over the demise of any individual.

The deceased held many important and responsible offices during his lifetime. He was a member of the House of Representatives of the Legislature of Louisiana, and presided over its deliberations as Speaker. He has filled the posts of State Treasurer, Treasurer of the Branch Mint of the United States, Treasurer of the First Municipality of the city of New Orleans, and Postmaster. All the public trusts confided to him were faithfully and vigilantly cared for. As he was unexceptionable as a citizen, he was irreproachable as an officer. His was the very soul of integrity, and all his acts were characterized by a high-souled honor, as stainless and steadfast as that of the Chevalier Bayard. Of him it may be truly said that he was sans peur et sans reproche. Peace to his ashes and immortality to his soul.

Gen. Dellurys' funeral was attended by a large concourse of our most respected citizens. As a veteran of the war of 1814, and as a former Major General of the First Division of Louisiana Militia, the military, by order of Gen. Lewis, turned out in large force to escort his remains to the tomb. The funeral cortege was long, mournful and imposing.—[Crescent.

TALK ON 'CHANGE.—It was expected the telegraph would yesterday have brought advices of the arrival of the Collins' Steamer Baltic at New York from Liverpool, with dates to the 14th inst. Although the season is so far advanced, what intelligence may come to hand will cause very little change in our markets. The stock of cotton in first hands is now so much reduced there is not much to be apprehended should, the market take an unfavorable turn, nor will there be much gain realized should it take a further advance.

There have been several arrivals from the, West since Saturday last; among them, boats out of the Cumberland river, bringing good loads of cotton and tobacco. Those from the Upper Mississippi, of course, are deeply laden. Up freights are, however, very scarce.

The opposite side of the river begins to look like summer. Boats are going over there daily to caulk, paint, and otherwise prepare for the fall business. We do not want those croakers to cast a derisive smile, when we allude to fall business at the close of the month of May.

There will be a good business done at the ship-yards this summer. Nowhere in the United States, nor in the world, are more competent, worthy, and accomplished artisans, mechanics and workmen to be found, than are in Algiers, opposite our goodly city. All, too, are identified with the general prosperity of our city; and vessels of almost any tonnage can be built on as good terms as in the Northern cities. It is not presuming too much, when we suggest that our merchants, when they desire to build a ship of the tonnage of the Juduh Touro, R. D. Shepherd, Emperor, Lucy and Harriet, Desdemona, and others, that they can be built at the ship-yards in New Orleans, on equally as favorable terms as in any Northern port. Suppose the thing is tested this summer; though it is not a very propitious time for the undertaking, but, as money is plenty, seventy-five thousand to eighty-five thousand dollars could well be devoted to the ship-yards and worthy mechanics of our city, in the building of a first class ship.

If steamboats of 400 tons burthen, costing $100,000, could be built in New Orleans thirty-six years ago on the levee, at this time, when science, and skill, and mechanism, have attained so great proficiency, the task will be comparatively easy. It is, doubtless, fresh in the memories of our old citizens, that a steamboat of 400 tons was built on the levee, nearly in front of the residence of our old and respected fellow-citizen, Bernard Marigny, Third District, in the year 1820, for account of the old commercial firm of Gordon, Grant & Co. So it will be perceived that ship and steamboat building is not a novelty in New Orleans.

The weather has reached its summer heat, and as no rain has fallen for nearly two weeks past, it is growing rather dusty and dry. From all accounts we have from the country, it is a most auspicious time for the growing crops. It is, however, impossible to judge what the result of the season may be. Some planters already exult at the very fine prospects of their cotton and corn, but their exultations are, in our view, premature; though we have no cause to exclaim, "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."—[Crescent.

CONSIDERABLE FISH!—Below, says the Franklin (St. Mary) Journal, of the 22d, we give a letter from E. W. Fuller, Esq., describing a fish recently captured at his saw mill, Chicot Pass. Not being sufficiently conversant with the genology and character of the finny tribe to solve the question at the close of the communication, we give publicity to the letter, in order that some one more learned upon the subject, may trace the genus of this remarkable fish, and enlighten the public in the premises. This is no fish story, but the facts, as given, are positively so. Mr. Fuller is a man of undoubted veracity, and a prominent citizen:

Mr. Editor—Dear sir: Yesterday my workmen hauled up into my saw mill a hollow log, in which we found a large fish, of the genus filibuster, judging from his equipments. It resembled both the alligator gar and shark, apparently being a cross between them, with the tushes of the gar and a tripple row of worked teeth. It was about seven feet long, in girth measuring thirty-one inches, with a coat of mail similar to the gar. In his stomach we found three dollars and seventeen cents in small silver and copper coins—there being twenty-nine pieces—together with a good sized Bowie-knife and sculpard, and a revolving pistol with five barrels, all loaded and capped ready for instant service.

He appeared as ferocious as a tiger, and would snap and bite at every thing in his reach. The power of his jaws was immense. He bit the end off from a piece of plank two inches thick by four wide. Altogether he was an ugly customer, which I would not fancy to meet in his own element. What kind of a fish was it?

Respectfully, yours,
E. W. FULLER.

May 10th, 1856.

A Yankee doctor has recently got up a remedy for hard times. It consists of ten hours' labor, well worked in.

[From the Louisville Journal, December 11, 1855.]

DR. HORNHAMER.—The card of this distinguished physician, who has been for above two years past in New York, is in our columns, and we desire to enill attention to it. Dr. it. resided for a number of years in Louisville and New Orleans, but is now established in New York permanently.

Dr. it. in his peculiar department of practice has no living rival. He has devoted about eighteen years almost exclusively to the medical and surgical treatment of the diseases of the lower bowel, such as piles, fistula, fissure, falling of the bowel, etc.; diseases which are most painful and distressing in their nature, and from which, as the most experienced physicians can testify, not one-fourth of our adult population are free. The successful treatment of those diseases is difficult under the most favorable circumstances, but Dr. B.'s success has uniformly been most extraordinary—utterly without parallel in this or any other country. This success has been the result, in part, of his peculiar method, but more especially of his having devoted so many years exclusively to the treatment of a single class of diseases.—Patients are continually flocking to him from distances of five hundred and a thousand miles, and never in vain.

The peculiarities of Dr. Bodenhamer's treatment are that it gives scarcely any pain whatever, that a radical, n perfect cure is effected with certainty, without the slightest danger, and in a very short time, and that his patients are always able to attend to their business, never being confined to their beds or their rooms, nor prevented from freely exercising or moving about wherever they please by either pain or complicated dressings. Dr. B. is of the old school of physicians, and has no concealments as to his practice; he cordially invites all physicians and others, who may feel an interest in the matter, to call and learn for themselves what his treatment is.

J. S. Redfield, 34 Beekman street, New York, has just published Dr. Bodenhamer's book on constipation, piles, fistula, etc., handsomely illustrated by plates, and especially addressed to non-medical persons. This book contains a very large amount of most valuable information for common readers, and is for sale at the bookstore of Messrs. Morton & Griswold in Louisville.

We ought to add that Dr. it. is a most kind hearted and just man, who will never make an improper charge against a patient. my30

THE CURRENT WEEK.

Blossoming in beauty the year marches onward towards its perihelion. The birds sing more sweetly, and the buds and blossoms shed a fragrance around the path of progress most refreshing to the wayfarer. All nature sings the io triumphe of advance, and men, unwilling as they may be to do so, take up the chaunt. We are all marching through these eternal gates of which Mrs. Osgood fittingly sang, "long time ago," despite our ignorance and in defiance of our folly. How beautifully Longfellow tells the story of life:

"Art is long and life is fleeting,
And our hearts though stout and brave,
Still like muffled drums are beating
Funeral marches to the grave."

Monday, May 26.—St. Quadratus, 125; St. Eleutherius, 192; St. Augustine, 604; and St. Philip Neri, 1595, are the patrons of the day.

The Rhododendron, dedicated to St. Augustine and the Yellow Agalea, dedicated to St. Philip Neri, are the floral emblems.

St. Phillip Neri was born in Florence in 1515, and when a child became a recluse. He lived to the age of 80, having died in 1595. his life having been devoted to the amelioration of his race. Alban Butler says of him—"The divine love so much dilated the breast of our saint, that the gristle which joined the fourth and fifth ribs on the left side was broken, which accident allowed the heart and the larger vessels more play."

In 1551 he founded the congregation or religious order of the Oratory, an order well known for the strictness and severity of its religious exercises.

On this day in 1851 a riot, in which many lives were lost, took place at Hoboken, N. J., between a party of Germans and "short boys," rowdies from New York.

Tuesday, May 27.—St. John, Pope, 526; St. Bede, 735; and St. Julius about 302, are the religious patrons of the day.

Buttercups, dedicated to St. John, and Yellow Bachelor Buttons, dedicated to St. Bede, are the floral emblems of the day.

Our reading does not enable us to chronicle any note worthy event as having occurred on this day.—Men are not all remarkable for the possession of one prominent characteristic, why, therefore, should we not have some days in the year with no special claim for prominence?

Wednesday, May 28.—Sts. Germanus and Carnatus are the day's patrons.

The cuckoo pink is the flower.

In 1535, Albert Pio, Prince of Carpi, was buried with extraordinary pomp at the Church of the Cordeliers in Paris.

In Scotland, the day is chiefly notable for that Cardinal Beaton was assassinated on its anniversary, in 1546. He was the primate of the kingdom and exercised almost sovereign sway. Under his authority George Wishart, a gentleman by birth and family connexion, was condemned and executed at the stake. This procedure aroused the anger of Wishart's friends, who proceeded to the Cardinal's palace, at St. Andrews, turned out the inmates and killed the primate.

In 1758, Admiral Boscawen sailed from Halifax, with 20 ships of the line, 18 frigates and 14,000 men, under the command of Brig. Gen. Amherst, for the reduction of Louisburg.

Thursday, May 29.—St. Maximinus, Bishop of Friers, 349; St. Cyril, St. Conon and his son, 275; Sts. Sesianius, Martyrius and Alexander, 397, are the saints. The blue bottle, dedicated to St. Cyril, is the floral emblem.

"Restoration Day," in England, so called because, on this day, 1660, Charles II entered London and re-established that royalty which had been broken down by Cromwell and the Parliamentarians, who assisted in conquering and executing Charles I.

The Convention of Rhode Island adopted the Federal Constitution in 1790.

Wisconsin was admitted to the Union in 1848.

The Congress of New Granada adjourned on this day in 1851, having passed a law to abolish slavery after January 1, 1852.

Friday, May 30.—St. Felix I., Pope, A. D. 274; St. Walstan, Confessor, 1010; St. Ferdinund III, 1252, are the saints of the day.

The lesser spearwort, dedicated to St. Ferdinand, is the flower.

In 1431, Joan of Arc, the celebrated Maid of Orleans, was burned in the market place of Rouen. Lingard gives this as the day of her execution, although it is proper to add that Hume states she perished on the 14th of June. Her life was not without great results, and her memory has lived with a growing brilliancy to the present time.

In 1506-7 Columbus died at Valladolio, Spain, having discovered a continent—doubled the world—and won for himself such an imperishable fame as can never die. His last words were, "Into thy hands, Oh Lord! I commit my spirit."

The colonial charter of Connecticut was granted in 1662 and held to 1818.

Saturday, May 31.—St. Petrovilla, of the first century; Sts. Cantius and Cantianus, brothers, and Cantianilla their sister, 304, are the patrons of the day.

The yellow turkscap lilly, dedicated to St. Petrovilla, is the flower.

The day's anniversary is barren of great events. The inauguration of Rauch's colossal statue of Frederick the Great at Berlin, in 1851, and the sailing of the second American Aretic Expedition from New York in 1852, are the only events we find registered, worthy of a place in this column.

Sunday, June 1.—

"And after her came jolly June, array'd
All in green leaves, as he a player were;
Yet, in his time, he wrought as well as they'd,
That by his plough-irons mote right well appear.
Upon a scrab he rode, that him did bare,
With crooked, crawling steps, and uncouth pace,
And backward-look, as latrans in woud to fare
Beding their force contrary to their face;
Like that ungracious crew which fashes democrat grace."

So sang Spencer of June—not lovingly or tenderly. Our own American poet, Lowell, has done it better justice, and made it as resplendent, poetically, as it really is. His words are to be found in his works; which all should know too well to need quotation, for they are strong, clear, terse, and paint ideas with words, as the great Rembrandts of the world paint pictures with the brush.

The month has high honors, and has richly won them; for its gentleness, its sweetness, its luxuriance of pleasant delightfulness, and that peculiar enjoyment which is only expressed by the strong old Saxon signification of dalliance. The mouth of sweet singing birds, of low and gentle breezes, of light and life, when existence puts on new charms, and everything, animate and inanimate, swims into glory and rejoicing.

St. Justin, A. D., 167; St. Pamphillius, 309; and St. Nicomede, who perished during Domitians persecutions, are the saints.

The yellow rose, dedicated to St. Justin, is the floral emblem.

In 1755, the colonial expedition reached the Bay of Fundy, on its way against Nova Scotia and the Blue Noses.

In 1792, Kentucky was admitted to the Union: On the same day, 1796, Tennessee joined the American confederacy.

In 1794, Lord Howe won his memorable victory over the French, at sea.

In 1852, submarine telegraph wires, coated with gutta percha, were laid across St. Georges Channel from Holyhead, a distance of eighty miles, completing the communication between London and Dublin.

THE SUGAR CROP.—"And the cry is still they come." For the last two months we have received daily confirmation of the fact that the next sugar crop of Louisiana must fall far short of an average yield. This, as our readers are aware, is the result of the stubble cane, and so injured the plants that many planters will not make more than seed enough for the next crop. Of this parish we can speak knowingly; and when we say that the crop of 1856-'57 will not exceed 2,500 hhds., we believe we have made our figures very large. Remark also that 2,500 hhds for '56-'57 stand against 5,739 for '55-'56, 9,718 for '54-'55, and 12,701 for '53-'54. We do not mean to say that the same ratio of deficiency will exist in all the parishes—in many it will be as great, perhaps, in most not so great—yet we are satisfied that scarcely a parish can expect the yield of last year, and the most of them will fall very far below it. In view of what we have stated, we can not see any reason to expect that the coming crop can possibly exceed 200,000 hhds, including refined, clarified and clotern bottoms, and may, as we are inclined to believe, fall greatly below it.—[Baton Rouge Gaz., 25th.

Tying a mackerel to your coat tail, and imagining yourself a whale, is one of the first lessons in codfish aristocracy.

Thirty-Fourth Congress—First Session.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Senate—Two messages were received from the President, vetoing the bills recently passed for the improvement of the mouth of the Mississippi river, and deepening the flats in the St. Clair river. The President says in returns them because he regards them as parts of a general system of internal improvements, and refers them to his message of 1854, vetoing the River and Harbor bill. The consideration of the subject was postponed until next Wednesday.

Mr. Cass stated that he should ask leave, when a convenient opportunity occurred, to show that he had been misrepresented by Mr. Crampton in certain correspondence with the British Government.

Mr. Sumner proceeded to deliver a very violent Kansas-Abolition speech, before concluding which the Senate adjourned.

House.—The House took up Mr. Wheeler's joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to dispatch a vessel with provisions privately contributed for the Cape de Verde sufferers.

Mr. Kelly briefly referred to the liberality of New York in aiding the starving people, appealing to the generous sympathies of the House to pass the resolutions, which asked for no appropriation of money.

Mr. Smith, of Va., said that while deeply feeling for their distressed condition, he was not willing, even in this trifling particular, to usurp power which was not guaranteed by the Constitution. He considered the sending of the ship equivalent to appropriating money for that purpose. The resolution was passed—yeas 123, nays 26.

Mr. Galloway asked leave to introduce a resolution requesting the President of the United States to inform the House whether he has information, officially or otherwise, of the murder of three American citizens—Messrs. Dow, Barbour and Brown—residing in Kansas; whether legal steps had been taken for the prosecution of the murderers. Also, whether he has information relative to the forcible abduction of Wm. Phillips, and of his being carried across the Missouri, and there tarred and feathered; and, like wise, regarding the tarring and feathering of Dr. Pardee (tutler and Atchison, and the shooting of Mr. Mnee, which attempt was made to kill him after he had given his testimony before the House investigating Committee; and whether legal steps have been taken for the prosecution of the persons engaged in these outrages. Also, whether the President has issued any special instructions for the protection and preservation of American citizens in Kansas from violence and murder.

Mr. Galloway, at the instance of Mr. Smith, of Virginia, added a clause calling for information relative to the murder of Sheriff Jones.

Mr. Giddinga said the gentleman had better wait until the Sheriff would do.

Mr. Haflin was opposed to such a string of nonsense, and therefore objected.

Mr. Galloway moved a suspension of the rules in order that he might introduce the resolution. The question was determined in the negative—yeas 102, nays 55—not two-thirds.

Mr. Keitt moved a suspension of the rules in order to introduce a resolution providing for an adjournment of Congress on the 5th August. Decided in the negative—yeas 62, nays 77.

Mr. Wheeler then moved to discharge the committee of the whole on the state of the Union from the consideration of the bill for continuing the improvement of the Mobile river. This was disagreed to—yeas 92, nays 57.

Mr. Bringle asked, but did not obtain, leave to introduce a resolution providing for a select committee to report on the subject of the Washington aqueduct.

Mr. Smith, of Virginia, introduced a resolution calling upon the Secretary of the Navy for information relative to that branch of the public service.

The House then adjourned.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Senate.—Mr. Seward ineffectually urged the passage of the House joint resolution in reference to the Cape de Verde sufferers.

The bill making appropriations for Consular and Diplomatic expenses was passed.

Mr. Benjamin, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a joint resolution requiring the Commissioner of Patents to take necessary steps to obtain information relative to the growth and consumption of tobacco in the several countries of the world. Passed.

House.—Mr. Bennett, of New York, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported a bill granting one million forty-eight thousand acres in Wisconsin, for the construction of three railroads therein, embracing a length of 500 miles. An ineffectual motion was made to table the bill.

The President's Vetoes.

During the session of the Senate on the 19th inst., two messages were received from the President of the United States vetoing improvement bills which originated in the Senate. They are as as follows:

WASHINGTON, May 19, 1856.

To the Senate of the United States:

I return herewith to the Senate, in which it originated, the bill entitled "An act to remove obstructions to navigation in the mouth of the Mississippi river, at the Southern pass, and Pass a l'Outre," which proposes to appropriate a sum of money, to be expended under the superintendence of the Secretary of War, "for the opening and keeping open ship channels of sufficient capacity to accommodate the wants of commerce through the Southwest Pass and Pass a l'Outre, leading from the Mississippi river to the Gulf of Mexico."

In a communication addressed by me to the two Houses of Congress on the 30th of December, 1854, my views were exhibited in full on the subject of the relation of the General Government to internal improvements. I set forth on that occasion the constitutional impediments which, in my mind, are insuperable to the prosecution of a system of internal improvements by means of appropriations from the Treasury of the United States; more especially the consideration that the constitution does not confer on the General Government any express power to make such appropriations; that they are not a necessary and proper incident of any of the express powers; and that the assumption of authority on the part of the Federal Government to commence and carry on a general system of international improvements, while exceptionable for the want of constitutional power, is in other respects prejudicial to the several interests and inconsistent with the true relation to one another of the Union and of the individual States.

These objections apply to the whole system of internal improvements, whether such improvements consists of works on land or in navigable waters, either of the sea coast or of the interior lakes or rivers.

I have not been able, after the most careful reflection, to regard the bill before me in any other light than as a part of a general system of internal improvements, and therefore feel constrained to submit it with these objections to the reconsideration of Congress.

FRANKLIN PIERCE.

WASHINGTON, May 19, 1856.

To the Senate of the United States:

I return herewith to the Senate, in which it originated, a bill entitled "An act making an appropriation for deepening the channel over the St. Clair flats, in the State of Michigan," and submit it for reconsideration, because it is in my judgment liable to many objections to the prosecution of internal improvements by the General Government which have already been presented by me in previous communications to Congress.

In considering this bill, under the restriction that the power of Congress to construct a work of internal improvement is limited to cases in which the work is manifestly needful and proper for the extension of some one or more of the powers expressly delegated to the General Government, I have not been able to find for the proposed expenditure any such relation, unless it be to the power to provide for the common defence, and to maintain an army and navy. But a careful examination of the subject, with the aid of information officially received since my last annual message was communicated to Congress, has convinced me that the expenditure of the sum proposed would serve no valuable purpose, as contributing to the common defence, because all that could be effected by it would be to afford a channel of twelve feet depth, and of so temporary a character that unless the work was done immediately, before the necessity for its use should arise, it could not be relied on for the vessels of even the small draught the passage of which it would promote.

Under existing circumstances, therefore, it can not be considered as a necessary means for the common defence, and is subject to those objections which apply to other works, designed to facilitate commerce and contribute to convenience of local prosperity of those more immediately concerned—an object not to be justly and constitutionally attained by the taxation of the whole country. FRANKLIN PIERCE.

RIVER, WEATHER, ETC.—Says the West Baton Rouge Sugar Planter, of the 24th:

The river is still rising slowly, and is covered with perfect rafts of drift wood. We have frequently seen the largest sized trees with all their branches, and leaves yet green, float past our office. Banks must be caving in somewhere.

We are now near to the close of May, and as yet we have had but little warm weather. The nights for some time back have been so cool as to compel an increase of bed clothing for warmth and comfort. So far it keeps healthy, and we trust may remain so. As an evidence of the health of the town of Baton Rouge, an old and well known physician of that place remarked to us that there was not enough for one physician to attend to. Good sign!

CRUELTY.—Yesterday, a little lad was brought to our office, all black and blue from brutal blows inflicted, at what is called a "public school," somewhere in close proximity to the Catholic Church. The lad is the son of widow woman, and has no male relative to protect him. We understand that an affidavit will be made, which will furnish us with the ground-work for an extended notice of what, as we learn, is not an uncommon thing. At the same time, it is our desire to enquire how public schools are supported, independently of those provided for under the public school laws of the State? These are interesting matters of our people.—[Baton Rouge Comet, 25th.

The Exiles of Siberia.

Whilst Russia and the Russians are the prevailing topics in all circles, a few gathered remarks upon those victims of Russian policy, the poor exiles, may not be deemed inappropriate; and as the laws of the empire require that all those condemned, in whatever part of the country they may have received sentence, should pass through Moscow on their way to Siberia, the traveler, who may have chanced to be there during the weekly gathering, will have little difficulty in recognizing facts in the following account.

On reaching that city, they are allowed a brief rest in the convict-prison, their daily journeys being so calculated that the separate bands all arrive there from diver's directions each Saturday night. After resting throughout the ensuing week, during which term they are relieved of their chains, they are despatched in one common band on the second Monday after their arrival; but ere their departure the Government appoints a committee of prison authorities to control the labors, and see that they in no case unnecessary harshness. These members are also empowered to hear statements from the prisoners, and in many cases, to grant redress. Such interferences do not, of course, extend to the guashing of legal proceedings, but merely to the prisoner's comfort, his health, or perhaps some last wishes respecting his family. The excellent Stazy, physician to the prisons, was some years since constantly present on these occasions, and was one of the warmest philanthropists ever known.—His exertions on behalf of those unhappy convicts were incessant; his labors, evidently those of a love that made him deem no sacrifice of time or comfort too great. He was a German, from Cologne, and as keen a Roman Catholic as that zealous city ever sent forth; and it would be well for mankind if half the world only possessed as much of the true Christian spirit as this worthy philanthropist.

Sparrow's Hill—for so is the place named, from which the doomed band depart—is situated at some distance from the city, and is not a prison, as might be imagined, but consists of a number of log-huts, united by a strong wooden wall, and in the interior divided into two or three courts, each strictly guarded by sentinels. In the first of these, both sexes are to be seen mingling indiscriminately, and all dressed alike in long loose greatcoats, made of a kind of gray cloth; the only distinguishing mark is, that the men have their heads shaved, whilst the women retain their long hair—a privilege also granted to the men as regard their beards; which decoration is the pride and delight both of the merchant class and peasantry. They are led thence into a second court, where their names are registered, as also their crime and history. Here they make their petitions; some soliciting leave to travel by the side of a brother, a fellow exile—a poor consolation that, of being together in disgrace; but the boon, if granted, is hailed with the greatest joy. A woman will also sometimes petition to accompany her husband; but only in rare cases is this permitted. According to the laws of Russia, she may marry again, for the banishment of the husband cancels marriage-bonds as completely as

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

May.

[Leigh Hunt, whose writings are remarkable for an extreme delicacy of fancy, although deformed by a mannerism in pouring of affectation, is the author of the following poem, suggested by the season, which shows in a striking manner both his excellencies and his defects:]

Hail! thou month of rosy beauty!
Month when pleasure is a duty;
Month of maids that milk the kine—
Month of health and month divine;
Month of trees and month of flowers;
Month of blossom-laden bowers;
Month of little hands with daisies;
Lover's love and poets' praises!
Oh, thou merry month complete—
May! that very name is sweet!

May was maid in olden times,
And is still in Scottish rhymes;
May's the blooming hawthorn boughs;
May's the month that's laughing now.
I no sooner write the word
Than it seems as though it heard.
Like a sweet face, ready;
Like an actual color bright,
Flushing from the paper's white;
Like a bride that knows her power,
Startled in a summer bower.

If the rains that do us wrong
Come to keep the winter long,
And deny us the sweet looks,
I can love thee, sweet! in books—
Love thee in the poet's pages,
Where they keep the green for ages;
Love and read thee, as a lover
Reads his lady's letter over.
Breathing blessings on the art,
Which commingles those that part.

There is May in books forever:
May will part from Spencer never;
May's in Milton—May's in Prior—
May's in Chaucer, Thomson, Dyer;
May's in all the Italian books:
She has old and modern nooks,
Where she mingles with nymphs and elves
In happy places they call shelves,
And will rise and dress your rooms
With a drapery thick with blooms.
Come to-day! to-morrow! still
Is she at home and ready, and will
Be, in lanes and fields and woods,
Where you look for solitudes,
And tender as you like to be,
Lover's love and poet's glee,
Sweet as sweet can be, and more
Than you ever knew before.

I dream of a lake by the morning kissed,
And wreathed in the folds of the rosy mist,
Where mountains watch, like enchanted kings,
Over a treasure of beautiful things.

For that lake is the home of everything fair,
That lives by the breath of the boundless air;
Bright flowers, and birds, and spicure bees,
And shells flung up by the prodigal seas.

Yet no one can tell, and none ever knew,
By what magical charm that fair lake grew;
But river and ocean seems both combined
To shape the dream of a perfect mind.

There are beaches that lie, like Danae, bare
To the ambrous breath of the golden air;
And the wavy margins, and river-like banks,
Are edged by the lotus of Indian tanks;

The water-lily lies out, asleep,
Heaved like a bark on the rippling deep;
While the beacon fire of its central gold
Burns all night its chalice cold.

And under its flat leaves the dolphin glides,
And the flying-fish leaps from the land-looked tides,
And leviathan spouts up a watery skein,
That falls on the meadows again like rain.

The violets nestle in shady nooks,
Content with the joy of their own sweet looks;
And fiery flowers of Indian birth
Run, like streams of lava, over the earth,

Rich buds, deep-dyed in the tropic noons,
Hang round the trees in thick festoons,
Or trail o'er the sward, as the burning wake
Left in the flight of a fiery snake.

There the cactus opens its crimson mouth,
And gasps for the sultry sun of the South,
And orchards, like doves that thirst for the springs,
Pant in the air on their violet wings.

The scarlet lychnis uplifts its lamp,
Like the watch-fire of some forsaken camp,
Smouldering deep in the matted grass,
Where the foot and the snake and the viper pass.

The white dog-rose illumes the wood
As the moon her imperial solitude;
And the mountains are moist with a thousand rills
Fresh from the heart of the adamant hills.

By beach and ship, over lake and stream,
A spirit flies like a daylight dream;
It talks with the waves, and woos the trees,
And opens its heart to the evening breeze.

The pulse of ocean; the leafy thrill,
The song of the pine on the windy hill;
The breath of roses, the pipe of birds,
The spirit speaks with, as with words.

For the soul of a poet is sheltered here,
Equipoised in the joy of a perfect sphere;
And all the beauty he loved and prized,
Is here ineffably realized.

So Shelley, outlawed by dogmatists
From the orthodox Heaven that for them exists,
In this fairy realm has built his throne,
And made a Paradise of his own.

Signs of Prosperity.

Where spades grow bright, and idle words grow dull;
Where jails are empty, and where barns are full;
Where churchpaths are with frequent feet outworn;
Low courtyards woody, silent and forlorn;
Where doctors foot it and where farmers ride;
Where age abounds, and youth is multiplied;
Where these signs are, they clearly indicate
A happy people and a well governed State.

The Sardinian Church.—The following are the nine articles proposed as a basis for the reformation of the Sardinian Church, to be brought forward at the next session of the Parliament of Turin:

1. The Roman Catholic Church of Sardinia declares its independence of Rome.
2. The King of Sardinia is the Sovereign Protector of the church of this kingdom.
3. The Priesthood to be paid by the State.
4. The canon law and the decisions of the Council of Trent to be abrogated.
5. Tradition, as a source of dogmas, to be declared of no force.
6. The reading of the Holy Scriptures to be allowed, and their explanation left to the conscience of each christian.
7. The Lord's Supper to be received under both forms.
8. The celibacy of the church to be no longer compulsory.
9. The Latin language to be no more used in the church service, and the number of church festivals to be diminished.

A Mean Dog.—The Georgetown Gazette gets off the following suggestion to his subscribers, in a late issue:

All persons indebted to this office are requested to take up, roll up, send up, or any way so they get up, and settle immediately, if not sooner. We are still prepared to furnish our paper to all who want it. We would prefer bank notes, gold dollars, and silver quarters in exchange, but in the desperate language of a poverty-stricken and head-over-heels in debt contemporary, will take grind-stones, wooden nutmegs, patent wheel-barrows, Shanghai chickens, hoop drums, boot-jacks, broom corn, "lasses" candy, "sweet potatoes," baby jumpers (for a friend,) fishing tackle, hoop-poles, patent medicines, dye-stuffs, cork screws, old tacos, young "niggers," sucking pigs, rags, bones and barrels, old clothes, sausage meat (extract of bark preferred,) post stamps, lager beer (used in printing,) grubbing hoes, pick axes, Colt's pistols (warranted not to kick,) tooth brushes, tenpeny nails, pins, needles, ginger cakes, circus tickets, or any other article usually found in a country retail store.

Walk up, but don't all come at once.

Major Heiss' Mission to Nicaragua.

We find the following card in the Washington Union of Saturday.

Washington, May 10, 1856.

To the Editor of the Union—

As my name of late has been connected in various ways in regard to Nicaragua, and as it has been stated by a portion of the press that I visited that country on a mission from this government, I feel it necessary to make the following explanations:

In the first place, I went to Nicaragua in the capacity of a private citizen, and I believe without the knowledge of a single member of the administration, with the exception of Governor Marcy. He only became aware of my intended visit from the fact that I offered my services to carry to the American Minister at Granada, any dispatch the government might have to send.

In the second place, I will inform the editors of the New York Express, and all others who are curious and desirous of knowing "whether secret instructions were sent out to Minister Wheeler to hint to General Walker that if a 'padre' were sent to Washington, in the place of Fenelt, he would be recognised," that when I left Nicaragua, General Walker had not received information, directly or indirectly, through Col. Wheeler, or any other person, that the government of the United States would receive a minister from Nicaragua.

Respectfully, etc., John P. Heiss.

The States of the Duchy of Meiningen have just decided that no Jew can be an elector, a juryman, a public functionary, an advocate, or attorney.

[From the National Intelligencer, May 15.]

Judge McLean's Views.

Washington, May 14, 1856.

To the Editors of the National Intelligencer:

Gentlemen: As the commonication of Judge McLean, which appeared in your issue of 22d of December, 1847, is now much looked for and of general public interest, will you not oblige me and many of your readers by republishing it? General Cass has made allusion to it in his speech of the day before yesterday, and hence it is desirable that the public should know what the full scope of the Judge's views are.

[The following is the article alluded to above, of which Mr. Justice McLean is the reputed author; and as he has been referred to as such, both on the floor of Congress and in the public press, without contradiction, we presume there is no impropriety in our permitting him to be named as the writer.

[Editors Nat. Intel.

[From the National Intelligencer of Dec. 23d, 1847.]

Has Congress Power to Institute Slavery?

The first article of the Constitution declares "that all legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States," etc. This limits the legislative action of Congress to the subsequently enumerated powers.

In the eight section of the first article of the Constitution it is declared that Congress shall have power "to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over such District, not exceeding ten miles square, as may by cession of particular States and the acceptance of Congress become the seat of the Government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased, by the consent of the Legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings."

Under this provision the cession of the District of Columbia was made, within which territory slavery had been long sanctioned, so that the power of Congress to institute it within the District did not arise; and no one, it is supposed, would contend that within the cession of a non-slaveholding State for forts, etc., Congress could establish slavery.

In no part of the Constitution are slaves named or referred to as "property: they are designated as persons. In the second section of the first article, which apportions representatives and direct taxes, the words "three-fifths of all other persons" include slaves. They are referred to in the ninth section of the same article, which declares that the "migration or importation of such persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the year eighteen hundred and eight," and also in the second section of the fourth article, in relation to fugitives from labor. In no other part of the Constitution is there any reference to slaves.

In the third section of the fourth article it is declared "that Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States." The power here given is limited to the regulation of the property of the Government, and may be exercised as well within a State as a Territory. It gives no express power to institute a Territorial Government, or to adopt regulations beyond the specific objects of the grant. Congress are authorized "to dispose of" the territory (land) or other property. Political power is not, it would seem, within the grant. This is considered too clear to be controverted.

There is no specific power given to Congress in the Constitution which authorizes the establishmeot of a Territorial Government except that which relates to the District of Columbia.

The ordinance "for the government of the territory of the United States north-west of the river Ohio," was approved 7th of August, 1787, which was before the formation of the Constitution of the United States. That ordinance provided for the first and second grades of territorial government, which extended over the territory that includes the present States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan. Separate Territorial Governments were formed under the ordinance as the progress of population required. This provided for the government of all the territory ceded to the Union at the adoption of the Constitution; and this fact may have been supposed to render any provision on the subject in the Constitution unnecessary. On the 7th August, 1789, the ordinance was modified by an act of Congress so as to adapt it to the Constitution.

On the 25th February, 1790, North Carolina ceded to the Union territory which now constitutes the State of Tennessee, which was accepted by act of Congress on the 2d of April ensuing. In the act of cession, among other provisions, it was stipulated "that no regulation made or to be made by Congress shall tend to emancipate slaves;" and on the 26th of May, 1790, by the act of Congress, the ordinance of 1787, with certain exceptions in the act of cession, was adopted "for the government of the territory of the United States south of the river Ohio."

The first annexation of foreign territory to the United States was Louisiana, within which slavery existed under the French and Spanish Governments. Florida, which was subsequently annexed, was also a slave territory. Texas was a slave State.

If any part of Mexican territory shall be annexed, as slavery is not sanctioned in Mexico, it must come into the Union as free territory; and the important question arises whether Congress have power to make it slave territory.

No question is better settled in this country than that slavery exists in a State by virtue of the local law; that the power over the subject is exclusively vested in the State; and that Congress, except as to the recapture of slaves, can exercise no power over it.

The relation of master and slave is dependant upon the local law; and when the slave escapes by any means to a State where such relation does not exist he is free, unless under a general law he may be recaptured by the master. The Constitution, which authorizes the reclamation of fugitives from labor, is the law of the Union on this subject. There is no principle in the laws of nations nor in the common law, as between sovereignties, which authorizes a reception of a fugitive slave. These principles will not be disputed by any one who has examined the decisions of the courts of the United States.

Under the articles of confederation there was a provision for the return of fugitives from justice, but none in regard to absconding slaves. There was, therefore, no obligation on a free State, unless imposed by its own law, to deliver up a slave; nor was there any legal means through which the master could claim the fugitive. The inconvenience and collision which frequently arose from this state of things led to the above provision in the Constitution.

The power to institute slavery belongs exclusively to the community in which it exists. In the language of Chief Justice Taney, (in Groves vs. Slaughter, 15 Peters, 508) a State "has a right to decide for itself whether it will or will not admit slaves to be brought within its limits from another State, either for sale or for any other purpose; and also to prescribe the manner and mode in which they may be introduced, and to determine their condition and treatment; and this action cannot be controlled by Congress, either by virtue of its power to regulate commerce or by virtue of any other power conferred by the Constitution of the United States."

And in the case of Prigg vs. the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, (16 Peters, 611.) the Supreme Court say: "The state of slavery is deemed to be a mere municipal regulation, founded upon and limited to the range of the Territorial laws; and "it is manifest from this consideration that, if the Constitution had not contained the clause for reception, every non-slaveholding State in the Union would have been at liberty to have declared free all runaway slaves coming within its limits, and to have given them entire immunity and protection against the claims of their masters."

The true construction of the Constitution is, that implied powers can only be exercised in carrying into effect a specific power. And this application is limited to such measures as shall be appropriate to the object. This is an admitted and safe rule of construction. It is believed to be the only one which has been sanctioned by statesmen and jurists. Powers exercised beyond this are not derived from the Constitution, but must depend upon an unlimited discretion. And this is despotism.

Now, there is no specific power in the Constitution which authorizes the organization of a Territorial Government. Such a power was given in relation to the District of Columbia, and it was equally necessary in regard to other Territories. But, if this power be implied from the specific power given to regulate the disposition of the public lands, it must, under the above rule, be limited to means suitable to the end in view. If Congress go beyond this in the organization of a Territorial Government, they act without limitation, and may establish a monarchy.

Admit that they may organize a Government which shall protect the lands purchased and provide for the administration of justice among the settlers, it does by no means follow that they may establish slavery. This is a relation which must be created by the local sovereignty. It is a municipal regulation of limited extent, and necessarily of an equally limited origin. It is a domestic relation over which the Federal Government can exercise no control. And above all the institution of slavery is not within any implication which can be drawn from the power to regulate and dispose of the public lands or other property of the United States. As before remarked, slaves are not treated in the Constitution as property. They are made property by the local law.

The Supreme Court of the United States have decided that, under the power to regulate commerce among the States, Congress could not interfere with the slave trade between the States. And with how much greater propriety and force of argument could such a power be sustained than the power to establish slavery in a Territory? In the latter there is nothing from which the power can be implied, while the former is admitted to include all commercial dealings among the States. And it was upon the ground that in the Constitution slaves were treated as persons and not as property that they were held not to come within the commercial power. If Congress under any implied power, may institute slavery in a Territory of the United States, on much stronger grounds may they exercise the commercial power over the transfer and sale of slaves among the States.

In the Territories of Louisiana and Florida Congress recognized, and to a limited extent, regulated slavery. But, as before remarked, slavery existed in those Territories at the time they were ceded to the United States, and in the treaty of cession of Louisiana, the United States bound themselves to protect the property of the citizens. Slaves in that Territory were considered as property, and were within the treaty. And it is singular that this fact in the Missouri controversy was not, I believe, relied upon by the South. It was the strongest position that could have been taken on that side of the question.

If free territory be admitted and Congress have not power to institute slavery within it, the territory must remain free until the people shall form a State Government; then the question may arise, in the exercise of this sovereign power, whether slavery shall be admitted.

Can the President and Senate by a treaty establish slavery in the new territory? Such a power is not found in the Constitution nor in the laws of nations.

The Fall of Jerusalem.

One of the most splendid sketches it has ever been our fortune to peruse is that by Croly, who in his works thus describes the fall of Jerusalem:

The fall of our illustrious and happy city, was supernatural. The destruction of the conquered was against the first principles of the Roman policy; and to the last hour of our national existence, Rome held out offers of peace, and lamented our frantic disposition to be undone. But the decree was gone forth from a mightier throne. During the latter days of the siege, a hostility, to which that of man was a grain of sand to the tempest that drives it on, overpowered our strength and senses. Fearful shapes and voices in the air; visions startling us from our short and troubled sleep; lunacy in its hideous forms; sudden death in the midst of vigor; the fury of the elements let loose upon unsheltered heads—we had every terror and evil that could beset human nature, save pestilence, the most probable of all in a city crowded with the famishing, the diseased, the wounded, and the dead. Yet though the streets were covered with enburied bodies; though every well and trench was teeming with them; though six hundred thousand corpses lay fining over the rampart and naked to the sun—pestilence came not, for, if it had come, the enemy would have been scared away. But "the abomination of desolation," the pagan standard, was fixed where it was to remain until the plough and pased over the ruins of Jerusalem. On this fatal night, no man laid his head on his pillow. Heaven and earth were in combat. Meteors burned above us; the ground shook under our feet; the volcano blazed; the wind burst forth in irresistible blasts, and swept the living and the dead, in whirlwinds, far into the desert. We heard the bellowing of the distant Mediterranean, as if its waters were at our side, swelled by the deluge. The lakes and rivers roared, and inundated the land. The fiery sword shot out, tenfold fire. Thunder pealed from every quarter of the heavens. Lightning, in immense sheets, of an intensity and duration that turned the darkness into more than day, withering eye and soul; burned from the zenith to the ground, and marked his track by forests of flame, and shattered the summits of the hills.

Defense was unthought of, for the mortal enemy had passed from the mind. Our hearts quaked for fear; but it was to see the powers of heaven shaken. All cast away the shield and spear, and crouched before the descending judgment. We were conscience smitten. Our cries of remorse, anguish, and horror, were heard through the uproar of the storm. We howled to the caverns to hide us; we plunged into the sepulchres to escape the wrath that consumed the living; we would have hurled ourselves under the mountains.

I knew the cause, the unspeakable cause; and knew that the last hour of crime was at hand. A few fugitives, astonished to see one man among them not sunk into the lowest feebleness of fear, came around me, and besought me to lead them to some safety. If such were now to be found on earth. I openly counseled them to die in the hallowed ground of the temple. They followed, and I led through streets encumbered with every shape of human suffering, to the foot of Mount Moriah. But beyond that we found advance impossible. Piles of clouds whose darkness was palpable, even in the midnight in which we stood, obscured the holy hill. Impatient, and not to be taunted by anything that man could overcome, I cheered my disheartened band, and attempted to lead the way up the ascent. But I had scarcely entered the cloud, when I was swept down by a gust that tore the rocks in a flinty shower around me. And now came the last and most wonderful sign, that marked the fate of rejected Israel.

While I lay helpless, I heard the whirlwind roar through the cloudy hill, and the vapors began to revolve. A pale light, like that of the rising moon, quivered on their edges, and the clouds rose rapidly, shaping themselves into forms of battlements and towers. The sound of voices was heard within, low and distinct, yet strangely sweet. Still the lustre brightened, and as the airy building rose, tower on tower, and battlement on battlement, we knelt and gazed on this more than mortal architecture, that continued rising, and spreading, and glowing with a serener light, still soft and silvery, yet to which the broadest moonbeam was dim. At last it stood forth from earth to heaven, the colossal image of the first temple—of the building raised by the wisest of men, and consecrated to the visible glory.

All Jerusalem saw the image, and the shout that, in the midst of their despair, ascended from its thousands and tens of thousands, told what proud remembrances that wore. But a hymn was heard that might have hushed the world beside. Never fell on my ear, never human sense, a sonod so majestic, yet so subduing—so full of melancholy, yet of grandeur and command. This vast portal opened, and from it marched a host such as man had never seco before—such as man shall never see but once again—the guardian angels of the city of David! They came forth gloriously, but with woe in all their steps; the stars upon their helmets dim; their robes stained; tears flowlog down their cheeks of celestial beauty. "Let us go hence," ewelled upon the ulght, to the utternost limits of the land. The processioo lingered long upon the summit of the hill. The thunders pealed; and they rose ut the command, diffusing waves of light over the expanse of heaven. The chorus was still heard, magnificent and melancholy; until their splendor was diminished to the brightness of a star. Then the thunder roared again. The cloudy temple was scattered on the wind, and darkness, the omen of the grave, settled upon Jerusalem.

The Haunted Moose.

A friend of ours, says the Albany Tribune, Bob Il., during the late cold term, thought he would go to Hamilton and have a moose hunt. He left the city, in company with six other gentlemeo, on Wednesday of last week. After u ride of about twenty-four hours, they reached the edge of the great wilderness. Huving put up their horses and sleigh at the last tavern, they started out for a week's sport in the woods. The second day in the wilderness, one friend and party started a moose of first class proportions. They eighted him about noon, and kept on his track till about 3 o'clock, P. M., when the party informed Bob that the were completely tired out, and they intended to take the back track for the shanty and have diuner.

Our friend said: 'Very well, go back if you please. As for me, I'll have that moose or perish in the attempt.' The party went back and Bob went ahead. He kept op the chase till nearly dusk, when he got sufficeiutly near the critter to give him condign. He was a glorious fellow. Like Frank Granger, six feet high and well proportioned.' Bob was rejoiced at his success. But his pleasure had one drawback, 'what could he do with him?' Another source of uneasiness was the excessive cold, and the distance from the shanty, some eight miles. While philosophizing upon his folly, night came on, and as there was no such thing as getting np a fire, he was at his wit's eod to keep from freezing. At last he hit upon an expedient.

He cut open the moose, took out its entrails, and crawled lo and lay down. The animal heat kept him as warm as 'pepper sass,' till about midnight, wheo he fell asleep. He awoke about sunrise and thought he would crawl out and start back to his friends. There was one pull back to this arrangement. After the beat had left the moose, he had frozen as stiff as a post, an operation that subjected Bob to as rigid confinement as if he had been locked up in a Bastile. Bob endeavored to cut his way out with a knife. But it was no go. He might as well have undertaken to whittle granite. Bob spent a most melancholy day, and finally worried nature into a sound sleep.

While thus unconscious, a company of hunters came along, discovered the moose, fastened a rope to his legs, and set about dragging him out of the woods. The movement awakened Bob, who thought he was getting haunted, and, therefore, commenced hallooing for help. Such a noise coming from a dead moose, excited the superstition of the hunters to such a degree that they abandoned their prize and fled as if the devil was after them. After rumolog about three miles they met Bob's friends, who had been out all day trying to discover his whereabouts. The hunters told the story of the haunted moose and the strange noise which came from his abdomen. Bob's friends smiled.

They requested the huoters to return. In a half hour the 'haunted moose was reached. The friends hallood 'Bob!' Bob hollood 'here!' The friends said: "we are goiug to eut; look out for the axe.' Bob said: let drive—better have a damaged head than legs made of icicles.' The adventure has made an impression on Robert. He says next time he sleeps inside a moose, he will take good care that it has leather hinges on its back.'

Syllogistical.—A writer in the Westminster Review some time since, assumed the somewhat novel position that alcohol is food, and offered the following logic in proof, viz:

"Food is force.
Alcohol is force;
Therefore, alcohol is food."

Another writer offered the following pungent syllogism, as equally legitimate and conclusive, viz:

"Horse feed is force,
Whipping a horse is force;
Therefore, whipping a horse is horse feed."

Should any of our readers hear a Pennsylvania wagoner—as we have—talk about feeding his horses on "whip lash," the force of the above will become evident.

The Frost saw the pretty Flower, and sought to marry. "Wilt thou?" said the Frost, and the Flower wilted.

Startling and Interesting Facts

CONCERNING

CHOLERA, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY, COLIC,

Summer Complaints, etc.

A fact that should startle is this: One feels a slight uneasiness in the bowels, a slight diarrhœa comes on, which is little thought of in a short time, in a few hours, perhaps, seldom days, it is attended with sickness of the stomach, a most shaking weakness, rapid discharges, coldness, cramps, agonies, blackness, collapse, DEATH—and yet all this fatal result from a disregard of the warning, premonitory Diarrhœa, and neglect of a wise provision of a safe and sure remedy that kind Providence has made easy to all.

This remedy is made public from the strongest desire to rescue the exposed, under the best substantial conviction that it is certain in its good effects, and with it on hand, no one heeding the warning and using the remedy, need be a victim to the Cholera.

DR. BILLINGS'

CARMINATIVE and ASTRINGENT SYRUP

IS THIS SURE REMEDY.

By the advice and urgent request of hundreds, whose lives have been saved—of many even when apparently in the very last struggles of death—he has been induced to make still more efforts to give a wider publicity to a remedy so greatly successful.

The perfection which he and others ascribe to this remedy may appear beyond the power of medicine to possess; yet the truthfulness of the claim is most thoroughly established, and will be fully confirmed by calling on the individuals who have witnessed its effects, and used it with complete success, some of whose names we are authorized to give.

For Cholera, Colic, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Bloody Flux, Summer Complaint and Weakness of the Bowels, this medicine is offered as a certain remedy. This is the medicine that arrested that horrible disease so prevalent among the Mexican soldiers. The officers first commenced its use, after which they gave it their soldiers, and cured in every case without an exception. I would refer to the officers and others who served in the war with Mexico. Sold by

O. O. WOODMAN,
corner of Common and Magazine streets, New Orleans.
J. WRIGHT, & CO.,
21 and 151 Chartres street.
JOS. TUCKER, Mobile.
W. H. FOX, Natchez, Miss.

m24 1m

SPLENDID ARCHITECTURAL WORK.

CHAPEL AND CHURCH ARCHITECTURE, with designs for PARSONAGES. By George Bowles, Roxbury, Mass.

This work is designed to meet a want which has been long felt. Among all denominations of Christians, plans for chapels and churches of moderate cost have been needed, from which committees may select a style appropriate to their wants, and use too expensive for their means. This want the author has endeavored to meet, by presenting a series of designs, ranging in estimated cost from $1,500 to $20,000. He has also added designs for country and city parsonages, such as will commend themselves to the good taste of all. The working plans for these drawings are not furnished, for the reason that the work would be too costly; but all such plans and specifications can be had on application to the author. The principal design of the work, however, is to enable committees to decide among the style previous to making application to architects, so that they may convey their ideas and wishes clearly. With this end in view, the work is commended to the public.

At a meeting of the Hoosier Conference of Methodist Ministers, the following resolution in regard to the above elegant and timely work, was passed unanimously:

Boston, Feb. 25, 1856.—The Committee appointed to examine Plans of Church Architecture, by Brother George Bowler, have attended to their duty as far as they have been able, and would report the following:

Resolved, That the Plans and Sketches of Church Architecture, designed and drawn by our brother, Rev. George Bowler, evince, in a high degree, correctness of taste and skill in execution, combining in themselves, to an extent seldom equalled, beauty, economy and convenience; and we feel confident that the publication of the work would be of essential service to the churches in this country.

This superb work is now ready, in one elegant folio volume. It contains over forty elegantly executed Lithographic Designs, with ground plans and letter-press executed in the highest style of art, bound in cloth, price $10 per copy, with liberal discount by the hundred. All orders to be addressed to the publishers,

JOHN P. JEWETT & COMPANY,
Boston.

JEWETT, PROCTOR & WORTHINGTON,
Cleveland, Ohio.
SHELDON, BLAKEMAN & CO.,
New York.
J. C. MORGAN, New Orleans.

And for sale by the trade generally. my17 3t

A SICKLY ALTERNATED APPEARANCE

In a child is prima facie evidence that its internal organization is tenanted by some one of the many species of worms which afflict and too often destroy the most promising children. The best thing to be done is to administer WINER'S CANADIAN VERMIFUGE without delay. It will dislodge and discharge the enemy, it present in the bowels, and in worms exist, it will cleanse and invigorate the whole digestive, secretive and excretive systems, and create a healthful appetite.

For sale in New Orleans, wholesale and retail, by

J. WRIGHT & CO.,
Nos. 21 and 151 Chartres street, sole proprietors.
For Sold by all the Druggists in the South. my31 1y

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS—PILLS THAT ARE PILLS.

Professor Hayes, State Chemist, of Massachusetts, says they are the best of all Pills, and I annexed are the men who certify that fact. Have known, viz:

Lemuel Shaw, Chief Justice Supreme Court of Mass.
Emory Washburn, Governor of Mass
W. C. Plunkett, Lieut. Gov. of Mass.
Edward Everett, Ex's c of State and Senator of U. S.
Horace C. Wentworth, Ex-Speaker House Rep. U. S.
Abbott Lawrence, Minister, Plenipotentiary to Great Britain.
John B. Fitzpatrick, Catholic Bishop of London.

MEN THAT ARE MEN!!!

Among the diseases this Pill has cured with astonishing rapidity, we may mention

Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache, arising from a foul stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Inflammation of the Stomach, Pain in the Stomach, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Ulcerous and Cutaneous Diseases, which require an evacuant Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints, which would not be supposed they could reach; such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritabili y, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout and other kindred complaints, arising from a low state of the body, or obstructions of its functions. They are the best Purgative Medicine ever discovered, and you will but need to use them once to know it.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass., and sold by every respectable druggist in the United States.

my21 3m J. WRIGHT & CO., Wholesale Agents.

NEW VOLUMES OF THE FOUR GREAT BRITISH REVIEWS, VIZ:

EDINBURGH, NORTH BRITISH, WESTMINSTER, AND London Quarterlies and Blackwood's Edinburg Magazine, (Monthly,) commence with North British for November, 1855, and the other Reviews and Blackwood for January, 1856.

TERMS—

For any one Review or Blackwood.....per annum $3 00
Blackwood and one Review or any two..... 5 00
For Blackwood and the four Reviews..... 10 00
For four copies to one address..... 30 00

☞ Postage (which should be paid quarterly in advance) on the four Reviews and Blackwood to any post office in the United States only 80 cents a year, viz: 14 cents a year on each Review, and 24 cents on Blackwood.

Address, post paid, LEONARD, SCOTT & CO.,
my24 54 Gold street, corner of Fulton New York.

THE XXth VOLUME OF THE SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE (improved and enlarged) will commence June 1st, 1856. Now is the time to subscribe. Terms, $2 per annum, paid in advance. If payment is delayed six months, $2 50—if one year, $3. When subjoined is the contemplated size it will be the largest religious weekly published in the South.

All Ministers of the M. E. Church, South, are empowered to act as Agents. They are allowed 12½ per cent. on all collections—and the paper is put to them at $1 25 per annum. The collection and forwarding of $10, entitles an Agent to the paper one year. Address E. H. MYERS, Editor, a25 3t Charlestown, S. C.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

FACULTY—Rev. H. C. THWEATT, D. D. President and Professor of Mental and Moral Sciences, Belles-Lettres and Ancient Languages.

A. R. REMBERT, M. D., Professor of the Physical Sciences and Mathematics.

Mr. CHRISTOPHER PLAGGE, Professor of Music.

Miss L. BATES, A. M. Instructress in English Literature, Modern Languages, Music, Drawing, Painting, Embroidery, etc.

Mrs. PLAGGE, Instructress in Music and the French Language.

Miss E. K. QMARLES, M. E. L., Instructress in Primary Department.

Miss MARY E. CROWDER, M. E. L. Instructress in Academic Department.

——, Assistant Teacher to the Elementary branches.

RATES OF TUITION, PER SESSION OF FIVE MONTHS.

Primary Department..... $12 50
Academic Department..... 15 00

COLLEGIATE DEPARTMENT.

Freshman and Sophomore classes..... 20 00
Junior and Senior classes..... 25 00

ORNAMENTAL DEPARTMENT.

Music on the piano forte, harp or guitar..... 25 00
Use of instruments..... 5 00
Vocal music..... 10 00
Drawing, with use of copies..... 12 00
Water and chromatic painting, each..... 15 00
Oil painting..... 20 00
Embroidery..... 10 00
Incidental expenses..... 2 00
Fee for Graduation and Diploma..... 5 00

No extra charge made for Modern or Ancient Languages.

Payment to be made at the close of each term. Board, including lodging, washing, lights and fuel can be procured in the village and immediate neighborhood, at ten dollars per month. Students will be received at any time during the session, and will be charged only from the day of their entrance to the end of the term. We would, however, respectfully urge all parents and guardians who design placing their daughters or wards in the institution, to do so at their earliest convenience, as it will tend much to the individual interest of the pupils and the general prosperity of the school, facilitating, as it will, a proper arrangement of the various classes in their respective branches of study.

School books, stationery, etc., may be had at any of the various stores in the village at the usual rates.

The scholastic year, embracing ten months, will be divided into two equal terms of five months, our immediately succeeding the other.

The first session commencing on the first Wednesday in October, and closing the last week in February; the second commencing on the first Wednesday in March, and closing the last week in July; at which time the annual examinations will be held, and the usual rewards and honors conferred. The vacation will embrace the months of August and September.

All applications for admission of pupils, etc., to be made to the President of the College. m1-1y

A SOUTHERN REMEDY.

Made by O. O. Woodman, New Orleans, La.

Has received the appointment from the proprietor for the sole agency of

Woodman's Cherry Expectorant,

the medicine that has created such an excitement at the North among the Physicians, and has been pronounced by all who have used it as being far superior to any Cherry Pectoral.

WOODMAN'S CHERRY EXPECTORANT

Combines the active medical qualities of the pure decoction of Wild Cherry Bark, and many other valuable ingredients that render it far better than any other cough medicine in this country.

RECOMMENDATION.

New Orleans, April 9, 1855.

Dear Sir—The public generally are fully aware of the thousands of remedies for diseased lungs, under the title of Sarsaparillas, Pills, Plasters, Liniments, etc., that are daily brought to their notice through the newspapers by way of advertisements. My object in writing this note for publication is to induce the public, or at least those who are afflicted, to use one that contains articles of real use in pulmonary diseases, and not nauseous that in nothing. I am acting most unprofessionally and derogatorily to the interests of Medical science and the regular practitioners of Medicine. I refer to Woodman's Cherry Expectorant, which is a scientific remedy that I have used with more success than any of the usual prescriptions used by physicians.

J. M. BATTLEHS, M. D.

This preparation has attained a wide celebrity from the universal success which has attended its use. For though coughs, colds, and in fact, any pulmonary complaints, this medicine, from its peculiar properties as a discolvent, and its soothing power to all irritations of the throat, will probably be preferred to any other offered to the public. As an appetizer, or dyspeptic remedy, it will also be found excellent, its natural and genial warmth keeping the digestive powers in proper tone.

Remember that this is the only cough medicine that has stood the test of the medical fraternity. It is sanctioned by, approved of, and recommended by leading physicians of New York city. Every bottle is warranted to give satisfaction or the money refunded. We guarantee it to be better than any Cherry Pectoral, Cod Liver Oil, or anything else ever extant.

For BRONCHIAL AFFECTIONS it will be found superior to all others.

Sold by O. O. WOODMAN,
New Orleans.
And by all the Druggists in the South. a5 5t

DRUGS, CHEMICALS, PAINTS, OILS, WINDOW-GLASS.

O. O. WOODMAN, WHOLESALE DRUGGIST,

Successor to Jarvis & Woodman.

CORNER OF COMMON AND MAGAZINE STREETS, NEW ORLEANS.

IMPORTER AND DEALER IN

CHOICE DRUGS, SELECTED MEDICINES, PURE CHEMICALS, ESSENTIAL OILS,

Medicinal Extracts, Fine Perfumery and Fancy Soaps,

PATENT MEDICINES, SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS, DRUGGISTS' GLASSWARE,

BRUSHES,

FRENCH AND AMERICAN WINDOW-GLASS, PAINTS, OILS, DYE STUFFS, ETC.

☞ Druggists, Physicians, Country Merchants and planters who purchase medicines, may rely upon being suited. Orders Promptly attended to.

300 DOZEN CHERRY EXPECTORANT—FOR THE CERTAIN CURE OF THE THIS, VIOLENT COUGHS, Croup, Bronchial Affections, Consumption, and all diseases of the lungs, in the incipient stage. Also for the relief of Consumptives, in the advanced stages of the disease.

This is an Anodyne Expectorant, prepared on the plan of combining the most active and efficient remedies usually prescribed by the Profession, in all their purity, affording a remedy which is found to give energy and certainty of effect, which cannot be had by using the same remedies as usually prescribed by the physician or apothecary.

It is not designed that this shall be a secret remedy, and the formula, with the proportion of each ingredient, will be readily submitted to physicians.

The cost of this preparation is such that it will not warrant the usual amount of Advertising and puffing resorted to by popular medicine dealers. It must make its way in public favor by its intrinsic merits alone.

The following is one of the many testimonials volunteered by physicians of the first standing:

FROM DR. W. M. DEASON.

GALLATIN, Miss., May 1, 1852.

O. O. WOODMAN—Dear Sir: I have given your Cherry Expectorant a fair trial, and am well pleased with its effects—better than any other article I ever met with. I would be pleased for you to send me a half a dozen bottles by the bearer.

Respectfully, W. M. DEASON.

Prepared and sold by O. O. WOODMAN, corner of Common and Magazine streets, New Orleans, La.; Also, by O. O. WOODMAN & CO., Wholesale Agents, Vicksburg, Miss.

DIRECT IMPORTATION FROM EUROPE—RECEIVING, BY LATE ARRIVALS, DIRECT FROM England, France and Germany, a large assortment of DRUGS, CHEMICALS, GLASSWARE, PERFUMERY, BRUSHES, etc. Among which are—

1050 boxes French Window-Glass, assorted sizes.
100 lbs Conrad's Hydriodate Potash.
500 ounces Pelletier Et Quinine.
500 ounces Howard & Kent, Eng. Quinine.
500 ounces Zimmer's German Quinine.
150 lbs Maufer's English Blue Mass.
100 lbs Maufer's English Calomel.
50 gross French Tooth Brushes.
6 gross fine Hair Brushes.
20 gross Camel Hair Pencils.
10 gross assorted Pomatums, French.
2 gross bill's assorted Pomatums, in tin cans.
20 reams Filtering Paper.
12 dozen White Plaster Skins.
12 dozen White Split Skins.
5 gross Toilet

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY A COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS FOR THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH—H. N. McTYEIRE, EDITOR.

VOLUME VI—NUMBER 12. WHOLE NUMBER 272.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 7, 1856.

$2 00 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE OFFICE—26 CAMP ST.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION OF NEGROES.

NO. VII.

In the remarks which we have already made on the management of our colored missions, and in those which are to follow, it is possible that some may suppose we have spoken too plainly of the possible defects in our plan of operations; and some may suppose that more may be done to that great department of our work. We have only to say that we judge differently. We believe it is sound policy to keep strict and watchful eye upon every department of our missionary work, and if evils exist, cure them at once; and if there be points at which abuses are likely to spring up, to indicate those points so that they may be properly guarded. None, except delinquents, will feel aggrieved by our strictures, as they ought to feel, and either retire from their manners or retire to a more congenial employment.

We may also observe that many of the abuses to which we have adverted are such as are very liable to occur.—We do not assume that they have all actually occurred—we will not affirm that at present, but leave that to be decided by the individual judgment of those who have been intimately acquainted with the history of that department of our work.

We fear that there has not always been a sufficient discretion in making appropriations, in consequence of which our missionary finances have become involved in difficulty, and to some extent in confusion.

Suppose, for instance, we are about to make appropriations for a mission to the colored people—on what principle is it to be made? The people raise so much—say two hundred or possibly five hundred dollars. This, however, is somewhat uncertain, and we wish the brother to have a good report, it is judged best to appropriate from the missionary funds some four or five hundred dollars, and authorize the brother to raise all he can besides.—We will suppose the brother to belong to the class previously referred to, who preaches only on Sabbaths, and does only little catechising. He takes the missionary appropriation which is only sufficient for the work he proposes, and possibly collects nearly or quite as much from his patrons. Now, these patrons belong, it may be, to two or more circuits. The preachers on these circuits make their missionary collections and report them at conference, and these various amounts go to swell the aggregate amount of missionary collections in that conference for the current year. But when the treasurer calls for the cash, the preacher replies that the amount has been paid over to Brother A., the missionary, who made one or two appointments in the bounds of his circuit; and this amount, of which notice, was not given to cash the drafts made by the Bishop, but was appropriated by the missionary to make up that part of the defined balance which he was to receive. But it was all missionary money, and the conference must have the credit.

Well, the annual reports from all the conferences come up to the general treasurer. The Missionary Board and the Bishops meet to make the appropriations for the current year. The question is asked, how much can we appropriate? The Treasurer answers, with the annual conference reports before him, such an amount, say $160,000.—Upon this data the Board proceeds to appropriate that amount. But behold, when the matter is sifted, it is found that not more than two thirds of that amount has ever been received by the treasurer; and as the drafts cannot be paid by conference reports, and as the treasury is minus one-third of the cash, one of the drafts must be protested, and the money borrowed at heavy interest. And a few years continuance in such a course, will involve in hopeless bankruptcy any concern, no matter what its capital. May not the present embarrassment of our treasury be largely owing to this system of management? To my mind there exists no doubt of it.

I understand that the Board at its meeting twelve months ago, saw this difficulty, and directed that the missionary committees of the conferences should estimate the whole amount necessary for the support of missionaries, and that the Bishops should draw drafts covering the whole amount. This has been done to some extent, and may to some extent remedy the evil; but objections have been urged to this plan. It is said that, in many instances under this plan, the missionaries will make no effort to raise missionary money, the spur of necessity being withdrawn. I would hope that this was not generally true, and yet there may be some truth in it.

After all, I know 'tis very difficult to devise any plan entirely free from objections. Possibly the plan recommended by the Board is as good as any, with some modifications. Perhaps, in most instances, the plan as it is, will answer very well. I am not sure however, that in many instances it will not work harmfully. Considerable discretion must be allowed to the presiding Bishop.

Whatever plan may be adopted, it seems to me that several matters should be understood and acted upon. The preachers on the circuits should be instructed in making their collections, to let the people understand that their contributions are for general missionary purposes, unless they specially direct otherwise; and when they do so direct, let the preacher keep a specific record of these directions, and so report to the general Treasurer, who should keep a similar record; and these sums should be sacredly appropriated to the objects specified.

It has always seemed very much out of sorts to me, for a preacher, who has been preaching or making addresses on the subject of missions all around his circuit, in all of which he has appealed to the wants of China and South America and the Indians, and all the rest of heathendom, then to turn round and before leaving the circuit pay over this money to a missionary to the negroes of some half a dozen plantations, to whom the preachers of the circuit might have extended christian instruction if they had not been so derelict of duty. I ask, is there no spice of dishonesty in a procedure of this sort?

Again, let no preacher, on any account, pay over a dollar of missionary collections to any missionary, except to cash a draft from the Bishop. It is certainly a strange fancy for a missionary with that sort of roving commission, to collect an undefined balance from his patrons, to claim the monies collected on a neighboring circuit for general purposes, as the contributions of his patrons. If any of them are resident on the circuit, and choose to direct the whole of their contributions to pay the missionary to their negroes, they have an undoubted right to do so; but in such cases let them make their contributions direct to the missionary, who should keep a correct account of it, and his account should be regularly audited by a committee of the quarterly conference of the circuit within which his mission is located, or else the annual conference should have a committee specially appointed for this purpose.—All the items of the case should be published either in the church paper generally patronized in the mission, or the general missionary report. It occurs to me that something of this sort is necessary, in order to prevent or correct mistakes, and to shield the missionary from suspicion. We cannot be too particular in any case where money is received or disbursed.

I am perfectly satisfied that we must reduce our operations in the great missionary field to a more rigid system, or we shall become more and more involved in debt and difficulty with each succeeding year. Our plans must be well digested, all the lines and landmarks must be distinctly marked out. The duties and responsibilities of all the agents engaged in this work, whether lay or clerical, must be plainly and definitely settled; and a prompt and uniform compliance must be required from each and every one.

The missionary cause and the high and holy interests involved in it, are too important to be left to the hasty impulses of boards of managers, however excellent. Whenever large sums of money are to be disbursed, and especially where those monies are collected from the poor as well as from the rich, and are given in view of a special object, it is of great consequence that there be specific limitations, and that due caution be used in exercising the disbursing power. More hereafter.

JAS. O. ANDREW.

BRUNSWICK LANDING MISS.—Rev. J. T. Dew writes that a "basket meeting," commenced on the 5th ult., and continued three days. "One of the most interesting meetings ever held in this valley." The P. E. Rev. J. Lusk and Bro. Mullins present and preaching.—The flock much strengthened in faith and in numbers also. Bro. Dew is making diligent use of the catechism on the plantations and testifies to its good effect.

Mitigation of Sorrow.

BY PONDERING ON FORMER MERCIES, AND THE SANCTIFIED FRUIT OF AFFLICTIONS.

How brittle and uncertain is the state of all things! There is nothing constant or permanent under the sun.—Every age demonstrates that various events confound the councils of the deepest politicians. To have confidence of future prosperity because a man stands upon a pinnacle of honor, is extreme folly. A day does not intervene sometimes between the highest fortune and the darkest grief of wretchedness.

Belshazzar, carousing in the temple of Belus, with the captive flagons of Jerusalem in the daytime was, on the night following, found drinking from a deadly cup mixed with his own blood.

He that stands upon the top of a wheel may justly fear a whirling precipice. When the sun stands in his meridian glory, then he begins to decline, and after the darkest hour of night the morning star begins to glitter out of the East. Sudden vicissitudes ought to render men cautious, and let the proudest Nimrods take heed of being too imperious. When gales are very favorable to the sail, the keel of a ship may be near sharp and swelling quicksands.

What is a matter of caution in prosperity should be comfort in adversity. One fallen to the ground can fall no further; his next duty is to rise. Former mercies in wonderful straits should erect our spirits in hope of future deliverance. The lion and the bear comforted David against Goliah.

Every storm escaped by the prudent mariner, adds to his dexterity in working his vessel amid tempests in future. 'Tis true of the saint, all storms hasten him to, and finally will land him in heaven at last. Meanwhile all his sufferings are heavenly gifts, and should be sanctified for a calm.

If God smites it is with a healing hand, and when he casts down, it is to revive again. It was said by Arnoldus, the famous physician, that "an incision made by a golden knife never swells."—The most acute afflictions only let out heart corruptions and hasten a cure.—The graces of saints are never more resplendent than in adversity, nor their subsequent growth more apparent.

Husbandmen say that thunder-showers make the grass to grow; that we may see it. It shoots quickly by the sulphurous rain and sunshine. Let us beware of a murmuring spirit when clouds of affliction gather over us, and drop fatness into the soul. (Psalm lv., 11.) Let afflicted persons remember that continual sunshine scorches a land into barrenness; and many a good soul loses much of its verdure by fair weather.—Our heavenly Father takes the rod into his hand of love; and when he whips his children, it is with twigs, cut from the balsam tree of Judea, which, though it smarts, it quickly cures.

Providence is often witnessed in sudden and notable escapes. It is related of one that was lame, who, being at Church when the Popish soldiers rushed in to murder, forgetting his crutches, ran away; and his spirits being briskly agitated by the fright, received the perfect use of his limbs! Such sudden deliverances drop down from Heaven.—From an old Author.

Churches never Destroyed by Benevolence.

The following is so true, that it cannot fail to be acknowledge by all:

It may serve to quiet the nerves of those timid pastors and church sessions, who are fearful that the pecuniary resources of the flocks intrusted to their spiritual oversight will be injured by excessive charity, that they will scarcely permit any benevolent cause to be presented to them, if we quote a quaint extract from a speech reported to have been made at the Bible meeting:

"Brethren, (said the speaker,) I have heard of churches starving out from a saving spirit; but I have never heard of one dying of benevolence. And if I could hear of one such, I would make a pilgrimage to it by night, and in that quiet solitude with the moon shining, and the aged elm waving, I would put my hands on the moss-clad ruins, and gazing on the venerable scene, would say: 'Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord!' If pastors would reflect, they would see at a glance that avarice destroys its thousands, but charity has no victims; and that the dangers to the prosperity of a church are all on the side of covetousness. The same spirit which leads men to complain of being called upon to give to objects of general benevolence, operates to make them niggardly in their support of the gospel at home. A church which gives nothing to foreign objects, rarely devises liberal things towards its pastor for a very long time."

THE MEAT-OFFERING.

BY THE VENERABLE ARCHDEACON LAW, M. A., RECTOR OF WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

"When any will offer a meat-offering unto the Lord, his offering shall be of fine flour." (Lev. ii. 1.)

Faith gleans rich lessons in the tabernacle's court. Rapid variety marks the scene. But every change still shows a changeless object. The varied rites have one grand purpose. Their several parts have mind—and that the mind of God. Each has an end—to illustrate redemption. Each has an office—to unfold the gospel. Each is a witness to life-giving truth. Scoffers are blind to Calvary's cross. It is no marvel that they find no Saviour here. But truly Scripture contains more of Christ than human eye has every yet discerned.

Reader, pause now, and ponder the Meat-offering. It holds the second place in the display of these Christ-teaching rites. May the great Spirit's rays so brightly shine upon it, that some new view of Jesus may appear!

God's wisdom terms it "The Meat-offering;" and justly so, because its larger part supplied the priest with food. Its substance and its use are the chief points which claim attention.

Its main material is flour (ver. 1.) Is no meaning in this choice? Mark, God's own mind selects it. His mind is the abode of wondrous thought. By what process, then, is flour formed? Earth yields the grain; repeated blows thresh it from the husks; the grinding mill reduces it to powder.

Reader, this thought glides easily to Christ. He stoops to be poor offspring of poor earth. He, whom no heavens can hold, is born the woman's seed.—And then what batterings assail Him! The earliest prophecy predicts His bruised heel. Hell spares no blow.—Earth's fury lashes Him with ceaseless rage. The strokes of justice crush Him to the dust of death.

O my soul, a suffering Jesus is your full salvation. A bruised God-man is your blessed hope. His wounds are your safe refuge. His stripes heal you. He was broken to make you whole.—He was crushed to raise you up. He groaned to bring you ease. He died that you may live.

The quality of the flour is distinctly marked. It must be fine. All coarseness must be sifted out. No impure speck may stain it.

Reader, see the lovely beauties of the Lord. His charms bring comfort to the anxious soul. Let but one flaw be found in Him, and salvation's pillar moulders into dust. Then cleansing would be needed for His own defects. No blood would then remain for others guilt. But He comes forth in all the glory of pure sinlessness. Thus He can take the sinner's place, and pay the sinner's debt, and cast a spotless mantle round His church. Thus we are beauteous in His beauty; fair in His fairness; comely in His comeliness; robed in His grace. Thus the Meat-offering sounds the gospel note, "He was made sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him."

Oil is added. Its many properties are emblems of the Spirit's grace. Christ's very name imports that all the Spirit was outponred on Him. When He appeared in earthly frame, it was the Spirit's workmanship, (Luke i. 35.)—When He ascended from the streams of Jordan, the Spirit, as a dove, descended on Him (Luke iii. 22.) When He approached His direst conflict with the power of hell, the Spirit led Him by the hand (Luke iv. 1.) When, on the altar of the cross, He gave His soul an offering for sin, the Spirit's might upheld Him (Heb. ix. 14.) When he burst the fetters of the grave, the quickening Spirit aided (1 Peter iii. 18.) His lips dropped wisdom—His steps were goodness—His hand was boundless power—His heart was overflowing love. It must be so. The God-man was the Spirit's home. God gave not the Spirit by measure unto Him (John xiii. 48.) The Meat-offering was rich in oil. Jesus abounded with the Spirit's grace.

Believer, are you conformed to your anointed Head? Are you the living temple of the Holy Ghost? "Be filled with the Spirit," is His trumpet-tongued command (Eph. v. 18.) Can He thus speak and not be ready to dwell fully in you? Can He be ready, and will you exclude Him? O! grieve Him not—wrong not your needy soul. Admit Him in His every gift. He is no Christian who is unlike Christ. He is unlike in whom the Spirit works no likeness.

Frankincense is sprinkled on the Mass.—Thus the Meat-offering scatters fragance round, and fills the senses with delicious joy.

And is not Christ the incense of delight, in heaven, in earth? The precious merits of His work regale each attribute of God. He brings full honour to their every claim. No Christ saved soul sits down in bliss but to add glory to Jehovah's crown, and to deck justice, mercy, truth, in more resplendent rays.

He, too, is perfume to His people's hearts. Say, ye who know Christ Jesus, is not His name "as ointment poured forth?" Is He not your bundle of myrrh?—your "cluster of camphire?" (Song i. 13, 14.) He blots out every sin. He bears away all curse. He heals all wounds. He dries all tears. He stills all conscience fears. He shows God reconciled—hell vanquished—heaven won. In Him the past has lost its terror. In Him the present is hope's clear watch-tower. In Him the future is an expanse of glory. Can there be frankincense more gladdening than these refreshing truths? Reader, grasp Him, and refresh yourself in this garden of sweet joy.

A FAMILY BIBLE.

You have one, reader, if you have a family? If not, you ought to have.—No piece of furniture so useful, so becoming in your house, whether you dwell in a log cabin or a palace. Not a small volme, but spacious and heavy; pre-eminent among other volumes; not in the library case but on the stand or centre table; of large print, so that an aged friend may read it with pleasure at family prayers; with ample register wherein are written marrages, births and deaths—names that specially concern you should be written in heaven. Neither too fine for use nor too mean for appearances—altogether as lovely, lasting and venerable as possible.

How would a ship look without compass and anchor on board? So is a home without a family Bible.

A grave and good specimen is before us, bearing the imprint "Nashville, John Locken, 1855," bound in Turkey morocco. The text conformable to the standard of the American Bible Society. Mr. Locken is the binder for the Southern Methodist Publishing House, which has been very fortunate in securing his services in that department. The plates of this edition are his, and he has an arrangement with the Agents, we suppose to their mutual advantage, for the sale.

The project of Revisionists seems not to impress far-sighted business men when they venture to bring out such a costly edition of the received text.

It is no irreverence to look narrowly at the quality of stone, hewed out by human hands, on which the commandments are written. So far, at least, a Bible may be criticised. This one bears inspection well; the paper is strong and white; the print clear and large; a double column of references running down the middle of the page. The Apocrypha is given. In the forepart is a digest of the contents of each canonical book, under its name. The appendix contains a copious index;—tables of Scripture measures, weights and coins; alphabetical proper names, with signification; Brown's Concordance and the Psalms of David in motre. This last especially is an addition to its value.

Several steel plate engravings illustrate places and persons alluded to in the sacred text. There is also a well arranged family register.

The volume is bound in the best style of the art; peculiar not so much for polish as compactness and strength. By tearing out leaves it may be torn to pieces; hardly otherwise. It will bear any quantity of pulpit hammering.

I HAVE NO TIME TO READ.—The idea about the want of time is a mere phantom. Franklin found time, in the midst of all his labors, to dive into the hidden recesses of all his philosophy, and to explore the untrodden path of science.

The great Frederick, with an empire at his direction, in the midst of war, on the eve of battles which were to decide the fate of his kingdom, found time to revel in the charms of philosophy and intellectual pleasures. Bonaparte, with all Europe at his disposal, with kings in his ante-chamber begging for thrones, with thousands of men whose destinies were suspended on the brittle thread of his arbitrary pleasure, had time to converse with the books. Cæsar, when he had curbed the spirits of the Roman people, and was thronged with visitors from the remotest kingdoms, found time for intellectual conversation. Every man has time; if he is careful to improve it as well as he might, he can reap a three-fold reward. Let mechanics make use of the hours at their disposal, if they want to obtain a proper influence in society. They can, if they please, hold in their hands the destinies of our republic; they are numerous, respectable and powerful, and they have only to be educated half as well as other professions to make way for the nation.

HOW THE IRISHMAN CONVERTED THE JAW.—A "real hard sinner," a native of the Emerald Isle, went to confession the other day to his parish, and so shocked the clergyman with a recital of his sins, that he exclaimed: "My son, did you ever do a good deed in your life?"

"I did," said Pat; "I converted a Jew once."

"How was that?" asked the confessor.

"You see," said Pat, "the long-nosed, pork-eating, rascally sheriff fell overboard, and I put after his carcase in a boat. I nazed him by the top-knot just as he was going down the second time, and pulled his head above the surface, and says I, "if I save you, will you be a Christian?" "I won't," said he; and with that I deposited his head about three feet under again. Pulled him up once more, and put the question anew, "Will you be a Christian?" to which he again answered "No," gruffly. I gave him another dip, brought him up, puffing like a porpoise. "Will you be a Christian now?" says I. "Y-e-s," says he, and his teeth were chattering for all the world like a monkey that had burned his toes. "Well," said I, "you are now converted, and you had better die in the faith;" and so saying, I held him under until his spirit had departed." It is about as difficult to learn what view the priest took of this story as it is to learn "what became of the sow."

LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIP BALTIC.

The U. S. mail steamer Baltic, Comstock commander, arrived at New York on Tuesday morning the 27th ult., at 7 o'clock. She left Liverpool on the afternoon of May 14th.

The steamer Africa arrived at Liverpool on the 12th inst.

The Baltic brings four days later intelligence from Europe. The news is interesting, but not of great importance:

It is stated from Constantinople that a defensive alliance had been concluded at Teheran, between Persia and the United States, and that the text of it had arrived at Constantinople, where it is kept very secret. (A commercial treaty must be meant.) It is reported from Hamburg that an American squadron is expected soon to enter the Baltic. On Friday the 9th instant, Russia, Sweden, and Odenberg signed a protocol at Copenhagen, agreeing to adopt the last proposition of Denmark for the capitulation of the Sound Dues, provided all other States interested do the same. Russia is reported to have demanded explanations respecting the joint treaty secretly concluded between France, England, and Austria, guaranteeing the independence of Turkey. As the rumor has not affected the Stock Exchange, it cannot be considered dangerous. Russia is about to commence another campaign, under Gen. Moomvieff, against the Circassians. Considerable excitement yet reigns in Belgium on the subject of the attempt of France to coerce the Press, and an ovation had been offered by the Belgian citizens to Count Vilain for his expressed determination to uphold the liberty of type. Paris correspondence, however, says that the French and Belgium Governments have come to an understanding in the matter, that Belgium will take more active measures to prevent the publication of appeals to assassination, and France will take an early opportunity of expressing satisfaction therewith. The affairs of Italy continue to excite a large share of attention. Count Cavour has presented two important notes to the Sardinian Chambers. The news of General Walker's battle at Rivas attracted some (but not much) attention in England.

The French Government is stated to have its vigilance particularly awakened towards the movements of the secret societies, which are becoming dangerous.

At the meeting of capitalists at the Treasury Office on the 13th, the Chancellor of the Exchequer stated that the proposed loan of five millions sterling was calculated to cover the whole service of the year, except two millions, for which he should propose to issue Exchequer bonds, but the two millions would not be required until the end of the present year, or, perhaps, not until the first quarter of 1857.

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday, 14, 2 P. M.—Since the above was written the London mail of this morning has come to hand, but does not seem to contain much of interest, excepting an editorial in the London Times, descanting on the forbearance displayed by England in the enlistment dispute, and the unreasonableness of Mr. Marcy in demanding the recall of Mr. Crampton.

Denmark.

In a protocol signed at Copenhagen on the 9th inst., Russia and Sweden formally adhered to the mode of capitalizing the Sound Dues proposed by the Danish Government. The Copenhagen correspondent of the Times is somewhat surprised that England, "whose interest it seems to be to watch over the independence of Denmark," should have declined to accede to the proposed capitalization, which is declared to be the only practicable solution; and he intimates that the sympathies of the Danish nation, who were great admirers of British institutions, "would be considerably impaired if Denmark's moderate and reasonable proposals should meet with opposition from the very country which has the solution of the question in its hands, and which of all States is the one best qualified to prepare a transition from the existing state of things to another state more consistent with the exigencies of the time, without violently making way with old traditions.

Russia.

The Emperor of Russia has issued the following manifesto on the subject of his approaching coronation:

We, Alexander II, Emperor and Autocrat of all the Russias, King of Poland, etc., make known by these presents: When we ascended our ancestral throne of Russia, and grand duchy of Finland, and the throne of Poland, which is inseparable from it, in the midst of severe trials, both for us and our country, we resolved in our heart to defer our coronation so long as the thunder of arms was not silenced within the limits of our realm, and the blood of our glorious Christian warriors, who had signalized themselves both by deeds of rare courage and by self-sacrifices, had not ceased to flow. Now that beneficent peace is restoring to Russia her former tranquility, we intend, in conformity with the example of the former pious Emperors, our predecessors, to be crowned, and to receive the prescribed annointment, and at the same time to have our dearly-beloved consort, the Empress Maria Alexandrowna, participate in the same. While we thus make known to our faithful subjects this our intention, which, with God's help shall be carried into execution in the month of August of this year, we invite them at the same time to join their prayers to ours, that God's blessing may descend on us and our government; that God may help us, while placing on our head the Imperial crown, to take upon us the oath and vow to live solely and alone for the good of the nations that are put under our rule; and may Almighty God enlighten all our thoughts, and inspire all our acts by the bestowal on us of His holy spirit.

ALEXANDER.

St. Petersburg, April 29, 1856.

The Czar of Warsaw announces that Russia is to commence a campaign this summer against the Caucasus. General Chruleff will have the command of the expedition under the superior direction of General Monravieff. The expedition will extend to Cagheetan, a distance of about sixty miles from the Black Sea coast.

In a recent speech to the nobility of Moscow, the Czar alluded to the report which had been spread to his intending to emancipate the serfs, and said that that was a change which could by no means be effected in a hurry. The present state of things, however, was one that could not last, it would, therefore, be very agreeable to him if the nobility itself would take into mature deliberation in what way a change could be gradually prepared for; and any propositions they might make on the subject would always be welcome to him.

Turkey.

The accounts from Constantinople are to the 1st instant. The exchange of the ratification of the Treaty of the 30th of March was known in the Turkish capital. The Sultan has requested, it is said, several Anglo-French divisions to remain for some time at Constantinople. It is thought this request has been caused by the state of things in the interior of Turkey. The grand revolt which has broken out in Arabia is the theme of general conversation; Egyptian troops are to be employed in repressing it. The journals are silent on the subject. The Smyrna papers state that the fanatics in Syria have massacred an English consular agent in Marasch and his family. Soleyman Pasha has put down the revolt in Magnesia and arrested the ringleaders.

The Sultan, on the application of the British Government for permission to erect a memorial church at Constantinople, has most liberally granted a piece of ground large enough for a church, schools, and parsonage.

THE OVERLAND MAIL.—Bombay papers to the 16th April have arrived in England. Profound peace continued to prevail throughout India. The Governor-General was at Calcutta. The pressure in the money market had given way. The banks had reduced their rate of interest two per cent. all around; and, as bullion in quantity was arriving both from England and China, a further reduction was looked for.

At Bombay, on the 15th April, there was a fair business in imports. Market for cotton piece goods not encouraging. Yarns tolerably steady, with a fair amount of transactions. English iron steady at former prices. Swedish bar rather lower. Steel and tin in fair request. Lead in good demand.

Exports—Cotton wool steady. Sheep wool in very good demand. Hemp generally in good request. Linseed and rapeseed dull. Cochineal somewhat difficult of sale.

Exchange steady.

Freights—To Liverpool and London tonnage may be obtained for immediate shipment at £4 5s. Linseed, £4 10s. Current rate, £4 7s. 6d.

Australia.

Melbourne papers to the 25th of February had been received at Liverpool.

A meeting was to be held by the Melbourne Chamber of Commerce on that day, to devise the best means of promoting the re-establishment of steam postal communication with Europe.

The amount of gold received at Melbourne for the week ending Feb. 23 was 51,154 ounces, and £32,530 in coin.

Lola Montez was playing at the Victoria Theater, Ballarat diggings, where she had had an encounter with Mr. Seekamp, the editor of the Times at that place.

A writer in the Times had made some remarks reflecting on the character of Lola, and a few evenings afterward, Mr. Seekamp called at the United States Hotel, where she was residing. Hearing he was below, she came down stairs with a whip, and laid it on his back with hearty good will. Mr. Seekamp retaliated with a riding whip, and ere long the combatants had each other literally by the hair. Some of the parties interposed, and they were separated, but not before life preservers and revolvers had been produced. At the theater next evening, Lola Montez was enthusiastically received, and at the close of the performance made a characteristic speech.

From Sidney the advices are to the 20th of February. The banks had adopted uniform rates of exchange, the quotations being 2 per cent. premium for selling, and par for purchasing. Some fresh discoveries of gold had been made at Ophir Creek. The total of 28 days' earnings of a party of diggers was 400 ounces, consisting principally of nuggets—one of which weighed 2 to 3 lbs. The opinion generally prevalent is that the Ophir country is one large rich gold field.

From Adelaide the news is to the 19th of February. A severe storm had visited the Macclesfield district, doing great injury to the crops. Flour continued firm at £25 per ton at the port, and there was no change in imported produce and merchandise. But little wheat was changing hands.

Latest Intelligence.

[Telegraph from London to Liverpool.]

The steamer Sultan arrived at Southampton this morning, bringing dates from Gibraltar to May 5th; Cadiz, 6th; Lisbon, 9th, and Oporto 10th.

The cutter Spider, belonging to the Royal Yacht Club, arrived at Lisbon from Cork on the 7th. The American bark Elizabeth, of New York, on bearing out of the Straits of Gibraltar, went ashore, but got released with the loss of a portion of her cargo.

Gen. Cass's Letter.

The following is a copy of the letter written by Gen. Cass to one New York Nicaragua meeting:

WASHINGTON, May 21, 1856.—Sir:—Your telegraphic dispatch inviting me to attend the meeting in the Park on Friday evening has just reached me. I cannot be there in person, and my engagements are such as to render it impossible for me to attend, but my sympathies are with you in this demonstration of public satisfaction at the wise and just measure of the administration, by which the existing government of Nicaragua is recognized, and will be encouraged to go on with its good work. I trust it will meet the cordial approbation of the American people. It cannot fail to do so, if they are true to the faith of their fathers. Since the commencement of our national existence it has been our principle to consider every foreign government a legitimate one which is received as such in its own country. This is the condition of the present rulers of Nicaragua, and it is no less our duty than it ought to be our desire to lend them the moral support they can derive from our recognition. I am free to confess that the heroic efforts of our countrymen in Nicaragua, excites my admiration while it engages all my solicitude. I am not to be deterred from the expression of these feelings by sneers, or reproaches, or hard words. He who doesn't sympathise with such an enterprise has little in common with me.

The difficulties which General Walker has encountered and overcome, will place his name high on the roll of the distinguished men of his age. He has conciliated the people he went to aid, the government of which he makes part is performing its functions without opposition, and internal tranquility marks the wisdom of its policy. That magnificent region, for which God has done so much and man so little, needed some renovating process, some transfusion by which new life may be imparted to it. Our countrymen will plant there the seed of our institutions, and God grant that they may grow up into an abundant harvest of industry, enterprise and prosperity. A new day, I hope, is opening upon the States of Central America. If we are true to our duty they will soon be freed from all danger of European interference, and will have a security in their own power against the ambitious designs of England, far better than Clayton-Bulwer treaties, or any other diplomatic machinery by which a spirit of aggression is sought to be concealed till circumstances are ready for active operation. I am, sir, respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

LEWIS CASS.

FRANCE AND THE UNITED STATES.—A Washington correspondent of the New York Herald, in giving an account of the efforts of M. de Sartiges, the French Minister, to induce the American Government to accept the explanation of Mr. Crampton and Lord Clarendon as satisfactory, gives the subjoined account of an interview between the Minister and Mr. Marcy:

He represented that the continuance of peaceful relations between England and the United States was the earnest wish of his master, the Emperor, who, since his accession to the throne of France, had personally, and through his representatives, evinced on every possible occasion a friendship to the Union. Mr. Marcy is said to have expressed satisfaction at the assurance given, and remarked that it did not correspond with other official statements which the United States had received from parties of reputable standing in their own country.

The Minister promptly interposed, and denied in the firmest manner the truth of any report adverse to the one which he had just made. The scene at this moment, according to representation, must have been one of interest, for Mr. Marcy, rising from his seat, excused his absence for a moment, when he returned from an adjoining room with an original dispatch in his hand, addressed to the Secretary of War, Mr. Davis, which he opened, and, by permission of M. Sartiges, commenced reading extracts therefrom.

"Now," said Mr. Marcy, closing the document, "what I have just read to you is from a report of an army commission which was sent out by this Government for the benefit of science; and as I do understand from the free assurance that you have given, that his Majesty, the Emperor, was ignorant of the language used by his War Secretary to the officers of this mission, to whom he not only declined extending the courtesies solicited, but added to the refusal an expression hoping 'that when they next meet it might be at the cannon's mouth.'" Mr. Marcy continued: "This language is further corroborated by a dispatch to this department from our Minister at Paris."

De Sartiges took a hurried leave.

ACTION OF THE MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE IN THE SUMNER CASE.—We take the following dispatch from the N. Y. Daily Times, of the 27th ult:

Boston, Monday, May 26, 1856.—The Senate today passed the following resolves by a unanimous vote:

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, That we have received with deep concern information of the recent violent assault, committed in the Senate Chamber at Washington upon the person of the Hon. Charles Sumner, one of our representatives in Congress, by Preston S. Brooks, a member of the House of Representatives, from South Carolina—an assault which no provocation could justify—a gross breach of parliamentary privilege—a ruthless attack upon the liberty of speech—an outrage of the decencies of civilized life, and an indignity to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Resolved, That the Legislature of Massachusetts, in the name of the free and enlightened people, demands for her representatives in the National Legislature, entire freedom of speech, and will uphold them in the proper exercise of the essential right of American citizens.

Resolved, That we approve of Mr. Sumner's earnest and fearless declaration of free principles, and his manly defense of human rights and Free Territory.

Resolved, That the Legislature of Massachusetts is imperatively called by the plainest dictates of duty, from a decent regard of the rights of her citizens, and respect for her character as a Sovereign State, to demand, and the Legislature of Massachusetts hereby does demand of the National Congress, a prompt and strict investigation into the recent assault upon Mr. Sumner, and the expulsion by the House of Mr. Brooks of South Carolina, and any other Members concerned with him in said assault.

Resolved, That his Excellency the Governor be requested to transmit a copy of the foregoing resolves to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to each of the Senators and Members of the House of Representatives from this Commonwealth in the Congress of the United States.

After the adoption of the foregoing resolutions, they were transmitted to the House for the action of that body upon them.

In the House the resolutions excited an animated debate, but after a slight amendment to the third, they were adopted by 187 against 23.

AMERICAN MEETING.—A meeting of the American party took place at the Court House, in this city, yesterday (Saturday, the 31st,) for the purpose of selecting delegates to the District Conventions, and also the State Convention, to be held in this city, the third Monday of June.

Dr. T. J. Buffington was called to the chair, and Joseph Nephler appointed Secretary. The President having stated the object of the meeting, a resolution appointing one hundred and thirty delegates was adopted, and a committee appointed to make arrangements for the Convention, after which the meeting adjourned.—[Baton Rouge Comet, 1st inst.

We learn from the Rochester American, of the 24th ult., that a very destructive fire took place in that city on that day, in which property to the amount of forty thousand dollars was destroyed, very little being covered by insurance

---

The last foreign news states that General Williams, the hero of Kars, has been made a baronet, with a pension of a thousand pounds per annum. He well deserves the compliment—the rank and the reward. Himself and Omar Pacha are the real heroes of the war.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The N. O. Christian Advocate.

TERMS—$2 50 per annum, in advance.

NEW ORLEANS:

SATURDAY, JUNE 7, 1856.

Harper for June, has been laid on our table by McGinnis.

EDINBURG REVIEW.—The April number of this sterling republication, by L. Scott & Co., has reached us. This is a favorable time to subscribe. See advertisement.

THE CIS-ATLANTIC BATTLE.—This book, otherwise entitled Sam vs. the Pope, by Rev. J. L. Chapman, has been laid on our table fresh from the press. It quotes from original sources against his holiness. For sale by McGinnis.

BAPTISED CHILDREN.—The Philadelphia Conference, at its late sitting, passed a resolution in favor of considering baptised children as probationers in the church—said children to be received into full membership at any time when the evidences of conversion are clear.

At the late session of the New Jersey Conference, a report on the "the relation of baptized children to the church," including a memorial to the General Conference upon the subject, was presented by the committee appointed at the preceding conference, and adopted.

COLYSEUM PLACE CHURCH.—The large and imposing plan of the Baptist Church of New Orleans is not yet filled out.—The tower is unfinished and other parts. When completed it will be an ornament to the city and an honor to the denomination. An agent, Dr. Witter, has been sent forth to gather funds.—We heartily wish him success in this agency.

HEALTH.—A report that may be characterised as absurd, went abroad weeks ago, that yellow fever had appeared here. We are under the impression that it will be a healthy summer—an impression we could not perhaps give any satisfactory reasons for. Certainly up to this time of the year, no city has been more favored, in respect of health, than New Orleans. The chief officer of the Charity Hospital, Dr. Austin, told us yesterday that no case of yellow fever was there—none had been this season. One that created some suspicion, turned out a jaundice. We shall be on the look out and report, without restraint, the true state of the case. If yellow fever comes we shall announce its advent.

MENTOR'S ARTICLES.

The seventh of these serials fell out of its order, and the succeeding one took its numerical denomination. This breaks the connection somewhat.

The burden of that number was a suggestion, respectfully submitted, that the whole present race of "Female Colleges" abandon all claim to such rank; cease to confer diplomas and to declare the education of young ladies complete at the close of their "course;" and with one accord assume the academic character and duties, and enter at once upon a thorough course of profitable mental discipline.

This brings in the suggestion of Mentor's last and concluding article. These articles speak for themselves. The author is not only a scholar but professional teacher. Some of the Alabama journals are republishing them, and thus bringing the public mind to bear on suggestions thorough and practical, and calculated to elevate the subject.

MILTON, FLA., May 6.—For the last week or ten days we have had a very interesting meeting going on in Milton. Our church is taking a stand here that it has never had before, and I am rather inclined to think that our Sabbath-School has had more to do with it than we are aware. The school has not only interested the children but has brought the parents to appreciate the privilege. Our Sabbath-School numbers over one hundred children and some eighteen or twenty teachers. Our P. E. D. Carmichael left us a few days ago, but not without leaving a deep impression of his official and moral worth.

L. P. G.

TUSCUMBIA, MISSOURI.—Rev. Bancroft, Turnersville, May 28, says: "Our little log church, tastefully decorated, was filled with an admiring crowd; windows full and many seated on surrounding stumps. The children acquitted themselves well in recitations. It was good to be there. With a good library, good superintendent and teachers, long may this school bless the community."

GENERAL CONFERENCE, NORTH.

Our correspondent at Indianapolis having failed to remit, we make up the substance of what is doing there from the Daily Western Christian Advocate:

Reports on slavery, the extension of the term of ministerial service, and the Presiding Eldership take precedence of all other business.

It has been decided not to extend, by a vote of 127 to 91; and not to change the Presiding Eldership, 143 to 72.

A Missionary Conference has been determined on for Germany, with $1,000 a year to publish suitable books, etc.

A German Sunday-School newspaper for this country is to be published at Cincinnati.

The African Bishopric is not easily disposed of. In reply to the question where he would be amenable, Dr. Durbin replied that the Episcopal jurisdiction was intended by the report to be limited exclusively to Africa. The Bishop would be a part and parcel of the Liberian Conference. If arraigned and expelled, he could come here for an appeal, as any member from that Conference can do.

BIBLICAL INSTITUTES.

As a sign of the times, we append part of the report of the Committee on Education, Dr. Thomson chairman, yet to be acted on:

The Committee on Education have had under consideration the subject of Biblical Institutes; and beg leave to report in relation thereto the following resolutions:

1. Resolved, That the General Conference reject all institutions for ministerial education which assume the sufficiency of merely educational qualifications for the sacred office, and most strenuously require that no candidate for that office be admitted to our Biblical Institutes and Departments for ministerial training without a certificate from the Quarterly or Annual Conference of its belief that he is divinely called to the ministry.

2. Resolved, That the General Conference look with approval on those Biblical Departments which are in connection with our Colleges, and which may hereafter be established in such connection, and upon our Biblical Institutes which now do and may hereafter exist separately for the education of such candidates; provided, always, that both these classes of ministerial institutions be encompassed with guards sufficient to protect them from heresy in doctrine, and error in discipline.

3. Resolved, That for the efficiency of this protective purpose the General Conference deem it indispensable that the trustees of such institutions be all members of the M. E. Church, and that at least one Annual Conference have the chartered right to supply all the occuring vacancies in such boards, and to have the acknowledged right to procure the prompt removal from institutions of any teacher or teachers whose instructions shall not harmonize with either the doctrines or discipline of the Methodist E. Church.

5. Resolved, That the General Conference would regard with decided disapproval any attempt greatly to multiply these institutions among us, as this could have no tendency but to enfeeble their salutary influence, and to exhaust the means of the church which should be otherwise applied.

BAPTISED CHILDREN.

Rev. Mr. Hibbard, on 21st, presented part of the report of the Committee on Revisals, which, whether adopted into the discipline or not is interesting as to the relation of baptised children to the church:

Question 1st. Are all young children entitled to Baptism?

Answer. We hold that all children, by virtue of the unconditional benefits of the atonement, are placed in a state of grace, and are therefore morally entitled to the benefits of baptism; but as infant baptism contemplates a course of religious instruction and discipline, it is expected of all parents or guardians who present their children for baptism, that they use all diligence in bringing them up in conformity to the word of God, and they should be solemnly admonished of this obligation and earnestly exhorted to faithfulness therein.

Ques. 2nd. What is the relation of baptized children to the Church?

Ans. We regard all children who have been baptised as placed in visible covenant relation to God, and under the special care and supervision of the Church.

Ques. 3d. What shall be done for the baptized children of our Church?

Ans. 1st. The preacher in charge shall preserve a full and accurate register of the names of all the baptised children within his pastoral care, the dates of their birth and baptism, their parentage and places of residence.

2d. As early as they shall be able to understand let them be taught the nature, design, and obligations of their baptism, and the truths of religion necessary to make them wise unto salvation; let them be encouraged to attend class, and to give regular attendance upon all the means of grace, according to their age, capacity and religious experience.

3d. Wherein they shall have obtained age sufficiently to understand the obligations of religion, and shall give evidence of a desire to flee the wrath to come, their names shall be enrolled in the list of probationers, and if they shall continue to give evidence of a principle and habit of piety, they may be admitted into full membership in our church, on the recommendation of a leader with whom they have met at least six months in class, by publicly assenting before the church, to the baptismal covenant, and also to the usual questions on doctrines and discipline.

4th. Whenever a baptised child shall, by orphanage, or otherwise become deprived of christian guardianship, the preacher in charge shall ascertain and report to the society or the leaders' meeting, the facts in the case, and such provision shall be made for the christian training of the child as the circumstances of the case admit and require.

But the tug of war is on the Slavery Resolutions—as men always find that question hardest to dispose of with which they have least business and acquaintance. The majority report of the Conference, Dr. Raymond, chairman, brought in an elaborate but weak argument, closing thus:

In view of these facts and principles, the committee recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, 1st., by the delegates of the several annual Conferences in General Conference assembled, that we recommend the several annual Conferences so to amend our General Rule on Slavery as to read—The buying, selling, or holding a human being as property.

Resolved, 2d., by the delegates of the several annual conferences in General Conference assembled, that the following be and hereby is substituted in the place of the present seventh chapter of our book of discipline, to wit:

What shall be done for the Extirpation of the Evil of Slavery? Ans. 1. We declare we are as much as ever convinced of the great evil of Slavery. We believe that all men, by nature, have an equal right to Freedom, and that no man has a moral right to hold a fellow being as property. Therefore, no slaveholder shall be eligible to membership in our church hereafter, where emancipation can be effected without injury to the slave. But, inasmuch as persons may be brought into the legal relation of slaveholders, involuntarily, or voluntarily by purchasing slaves in order to free them, therefore, the merely legal relation shall not be considered, of itself, sufficient to exclude a person who may thus sustain it, from the fellowship of the church.

Ans. 2. Whenever a member of our church, by any means, becomes the owner of a slave, it shall be the duty of the Preacher in charge to call together a committee, of at least three members, who shall investigate the case, and determine the time in which such slaves shall be free, and on his refusal or neglect to abide by the decision of said committee, he shall be dealt with as in the case of immorality.

Ans. 3. It shall be the duty of all our members and probationers, who may sustain the legal relation of slaveholder to teach their servants to read the word of God; to allow them to attend the public worship of God, on our regular days of Divine service; to protect them in the observance of the duties of the Conjugal and Parental relations; to give them such compensation for their services as may, under the circumstances, be just and equal; to make such provisions as may be legally practicable, to prevent them and their posterity from passing into perpetual slavery, and to treat them in all respects, as required by the law of love.

Ans. 4. It shall be the duty of our Preachers prudently to enforce the above rules.

Rev. J. A. Collins, with a strong minority, brought next day (24th,) a counter report, complaining that the majority report virtually propounded new terms of communion, and sought to do under statutory law what constitutional law would not allow—

Before this provision can be engrafted upon the Discipline constitutionally, the General Rule with respect to Slavery must be essentially altered, which can only be done by compliance with the proviso to the sixth restriction, which says—"Provided, nevertheless, that upon the concurrent recommendation of three-fourths of all the members of the several Annual Conferences, who shall be present and vote on such recommendation, then a majority of two-thirds of the General Conference succeeding shall suffice to alter any of the above restrictions, excepting the first article; and also, whenever such alteration or alterations shall have been first recommended by two-thirds of the General Conference, so soon as three fourths of the members of all the Annual Conferences shall have concurred as aforesaid, such alteration or alterations shall take effect." It is not proposed in the report of the majority of the committee to submit their action to the operation of this constitutional method, but to carry it by a mere majority of this General Conference, leaving the General Rule as it is, which, if successful, and the proposed chapter be placed in the Discipline, will be a palpable violation of the constitution.

* * * * * * * * * *

We respectfully suggest also, that in 1845, we repudiated the "plan of separation" to enable us to go to our brethren in the border work, and they received us expressly on the ground of the Discipline as it is, and because they were opposed to the policy of the Methodist E. Church, South, on the subject of slavery. And it does not seem to us expedient, or indeed just, now to enforce upon them further measures, which, in their judgment, will very seriously cripple, if not extinguish the work among them.

The Editor of the Chicago Advocate, taking notes, makes these general remarks: "The great difficulty in the management of Methodist jurisprudence seems to arise out of a tenacity to preserve, what we shall soon find impossible, an identity of mere customs and externals throughout our wide and extended connection. For our own part, we should be in favor of making a provision that would do away with the presiding eldorship in some localities, where circumstances have superseded the necessity, while, where it is wanted, we would have it preserved in all its integrity. But to confer upon the church such a privilege, in the estimation of the majority, as yet, would be deemed a dangerous latitudinarianism—a sad departure from "old-fashioned Methodism." But to the credit of this conference be it said, this latter phrase is losing its mythic charm, becoming stale and trite, and when employed, as it is by few, it excites nothing but the smile of forbearance or the frown of disgust."

Model Post Master.

Rev. John Sample, a local preacher to whom we are much indebted for looking after the interests of the Advocate, writes from Meadville, Mississippi. How much we lose yearly from the negligence of such Post Masters, and the want of such a friend as Bro. S. on the spot:

"MEADVILLE, MISS., May 20.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate, directed to Mrs. E. B., is not taken out of the office—has not been for two or three years, as the P. M. informs me—she having left Meadville long since. Had I been apprised of this sooner I would have notified you, but I have not resided here long."

The law makes it the Post Master's duty to notify publishers when papers are not taken from the office. Ought not subscribers give notice of their change of place? What a loss is here!

CANTON ROAD.—We learn that the road from Jackson to Canton will be completed in a few days. But for some damage to the embankments by the recent heavy rains, the "Iron Horse" would have startled the "Celestials" some days since.

The completion of this road brings Canton and the adjoining country to our doors, and as our market, this side of New Orleans, furnishes unquestionably the best facilities for our friends from that region, we may as well get ready to give them a welcome.

[Vicksburg Times.

VICKSBURG SHREVEPORT AND TEXAS RAIL ROAD.—The Vicksburg American says: This work is now progressing and hands are engaged in laying down the iron. More than a mile of track we are informed is already laid, of what we can no longer doubt is the first link in the Great Pacific Road.

If the prudence of reserve and decorum dictates silence in some circumstances, in others prudence of a higher order may justify us in speaking our thoughts.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Beggars—Imposters in Mississippi—St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum.

Bro. McTyeire:—Does this Institution belong to the city of New Orleans or the Roman Catholics? I ask because I think the people of the interior should be informed; and because there are strolling beggars going through the country on foot pleading earnestly for the poor orphans. I doubt there being such authorized to beg for that institution, and think you would do well to let us know, through the Advocate, whether they have sent those girls out that I have met in Woodville. One is a large Irish girl in black, the other about ten years of age. The one in black seemed quite indignant at the people here because they gave so sparingly.

There have been imposters through here within the last few months—recently proven to be such—and the people are a little incredulous to the tales about the poor orphans of St. Joseph.

One man, I don't know his name, I wish I did, living, I think, in St. Tammy Parish, has been through several times in the few years just past, showing a paper with an editorial, (I wish I knew the name of the paper,) stating that the man's wife was crazy—and that all his children, a large family, were idiots—not able to help one another—that the man was not able to work, and the people would do well to help him—that he was worthy to receive their charity.

Over the country he has gone—some places he was blind—at others, lame in the foot, or leg, or knee, or rheumatic, etc. In this way he obtained a large amount of money. But they have traced him to his home and find that he is a farmer, working fifteen hands.—What name ought to be given him and the editor?

Another, calling himself LeFever, is out from New Orleans on some magnificent and worthy expedition. He has a printed document commending him to the people, with Dr. Stone's Dr. Clap's and other prominent citizens' names to it. He has obtained quite a sum. But some persons about here did not believe the story, so they applied to Dr. Clap about this charity and beggar. He denies knowing any thing about either. Will the people be wise? Will they remember these cases? I think every such beggar should be taken up, punished and put to work.

HELMS.

REMARKS.—St. Josephs belongs not to the city of New Orleans further than location. Roman Catholics make of the poor orphan a stalking horse. In that name, as we have reason to believe, and it is believed here very generally, they procure money from the State Legislature and from generous and gullible people, to build churches, convents and monasteries.

If our friends abroad would know of an orphan institution that may be safely and liberally patronized, we point them to the Orphan's Home in the Fourth District. There brothers and sisters are received, and families of children are not separated—the only place of the kind known to us in this city. It is under Protestant influence and without endowment. Children are sent to day school, and there is a Sabbath-school maintained in the Home. Moreover, the managers of this Institution do not work in the dark, as do others. They make an annual report, publishing to the world their numbers, deaths, condition, receipts and disbursements.—Their books are open to inspection.—They can show what goes with the money contributed for the poor orphan. A showing many citizens of New Orleans would like to have from St. Josephs or the Camp street Asylum, and others presided over by priests and nuns.

This is not to pave the way for any one that may solicit alms for the Orphan's Home. When they send out a collector he will be properly authenticated. Two months ago, a stout top-shaven one, with meekest air, entered our office, book in hand, for donations to keep up the St. Bernard dogs.—Names of prominent citizens were down. Two days afterwards he was denounced as an imposter. These dogs have long since been endowed.

SWAN LAKE, LA. CONFERENCE.—Rev. W. G. McGaughey, pastor, writes:—"We commenced a two day's meeting at Swan Lake Church, May 16, assisted by Rev. D. C. K. Collins—protracted it nine days—had an addition to the church of nineteen members and about the same number of conversions. The membership greatly revived."

DEATH OF EMINENT MEN.—A Monod of Franco, one of the lights of Protestantism, and Rev. Dr. Beacham, English Wesleyan, died 22d April.

It is easier sometimes to keep a good conscience than a good name. Hold fast the former though you are robbed of the latter.

Notices of New Books.

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH; or, Piety and Usefulness Exemplified, in a Memoir of the Life of Samuel Hick, late of Micklefield, Yorkshire. By James Everett. Revised by Thos. O. Summers, D.D., Nashville: Stevenson & Owen—1856. Price 45 cts.

It is quite likely that the "Village Blacksmith" will not suit the taste of some of our friends—he does not suit our own exactly; but he pleases a great many people, as is evident from the fact that a great many editions of his Life have been issued in Great Britian and in the United States. Perhaps some of the incidents recorded by his biographer will stumble the faith of the reader; but we have been assured by some who had personal acquaintance with Mr. Hick—among whom was our lamented friend, the Rev. Geo. C. Cookman, who wrote an introduction to the first American edition of the "Village Blacksmith"—that the most marvellous statements in the work were corroborated by many credible witnesses. It cannot be questioned that the subject of this memoir was a man of great faith and zeal, and that he was eminently useful in the sphere of his peculiar vocation. We trust that the republication of these "short and simple annals" will meet with the Divine favor, and prove a blessing to thousands of readers.

CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY. By ADAM CLARKE, LL. D., F. A. S. Selected from his published and unpublished Writings, and systematically arranged. With a Life of the Author. By Samuel Dunn. Revised T. O. Summers, D. D. Nashville: Stevenson & Owen—1856. 12mo, pp. 420—price 75 cents.

In preparing this edition of Dr. Clarke's Theology for the press, we have done little more than correct the errors which crept into the former editions, and prepare a more copious Index. In numerous instances we have verified the text by reference to the Doctor's works. The "Theology" appears in the form of disjecta membra, having been selected from the voluminous writings of the learned author; but it was not thought expedient to attempt a more systematic arrangement than that which it received from Mr. Dunn. An occasional note of dissent from some of Dr. Clarke's views will not, perhaps, be considered out of place in the margin; while his clear statement, luminous illustration, and able defence of the doctrines of revealed truth, will justify the high recommendation which the work has received from competent judges, and which, were it necessary, would be fully endorsed by the editor of this revised edition.

SWITZERLAND: Historical and Descriptive. Edited by Thos. O. Summers, D. D, Nashville: Stevenson & Owen—1856. pp. 189—price 30 cts.

This book on Switzerland evinces great research and sound judgment—a great deal of valuable information being condensed and brought within a short compass. It is "written with a decidedly religious tone," and will be found a valuable addition to a Sunday-school or family library, with reference to which it has been carefully revised by the Editor. The Contents are as follows:—The Dim Distance—Seeds of Nationality—Heroism and Independence—The Reformation—Wars of Religion—A Long Peace—Overthrow and Restoration—Nature—Art—Society.

The Mountains Round About Jerusalem.

"As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people."—PSALM 125: 2.

The mountains round about Jerusalem are the following: the Mount of Olives, and the Mountain of Offense, so called from Solomon having erected altars on it to strange gods—these are parts of the same hill, and are on the east of Jerusalem; the Hill of Evil Counsel, on the south, so called from Caiaphas having a house here, in which he propounded to the Sanhedrim, his wicked policy of the expediency of putting Christ to death; and the Mount of Gihon on the west, with the heights of Mizpeh, and Scopus, but considerably farther off on the North. Of the four mountains by which Jerusalem is immediately surrounded, the Mount of Olives is the highest. Its height from the brook Kedron, which flows at its base, is reckoned at 600 feet. It is the first that meets the eye of the traveller who approaches Jerusalem from the Bethlehem or the Jaffa road; it is the first object also that he recognizes from what he has read of Jerusalem in the Bible and books of travel. Surveying Jerusalem from whatever quarter he may, surrounded and sheltered by its circlet of hills, there are, perhaps, few passages which the scene will recall more readily and more frequently to his memory, than this: "The mountains round about Jerusalem."

The agricultural branch of the Patent office is likely to grow gradually into an important agricultural bureau. The House has appropriated thirty thousand dollars—just six times as much as the appropriation last year—for the purchase of seeds, plants, etc., for general distribution.

Put the strongest minded woman in a bonnet shop, and it instantly will turn her head.

NASHVILLE CORRESPONDENCE.

Mr. Editor:—I am not sure that I should have troubled your readers again, but for two reasons. The first is, that for some time past there has been so little material for the gossips to work up, they are in danger of forgetting the trade, which would be a great social calamity. Their appetites are voracious; they are nearly famished; and my generosity will not permit me to withhold from them an occasional crumb of comfort. You have recently been on the ground, and probably was as much amused as myself at the confidential enquiries to which you was subjected. Pray Mr. Editor, who do you think Crotchet is?

The other and more urgent reason is a desire to correct a false impression which I understand was made by my last letter. I have but recently learned from reliable authority, that the report alluded to originated in a misapprehension, and hasten to say that injustice was done, unintentionally no doubt, to one whose zeal and self-sacrifice in the cause of the church are unquestionable. While I fully retain the sentiments expressed in that letter concerning complainers and fault-finders in general, it gives me great pleasure to make this explanation; and I will only add, that if it should afford to the one who feels aggrieved, as much satisfaction as it did to myself its object will be fully attained.

You will have heard before this that the signs of the times in Indianapolis are threatening. We understand that all the committees, or at least the leading men among them, are ultra Abolitionists, but the general opinion here is, that the party leaders in the northern church are insincere, and will scarcely dare to go the audacious lengths of their own propositions. Should they do so however, we may look for another division of our common family, as it is not likely that even those slaveholders who have been feeding and clothing northern preachers from principle, will carry their scruples so far as to give up their slaves in obedience to the mandates of the General Conference. With an occasional exception, so long as you do not touch a fanatic's purse, he will listen approvingly to your harangues on principle, but the instant you tell him that his possessions are sinful and must be given up, without other recompense than the acquittal of his own conscience, like the young man who went to our Saviour, he will go away always "sorrowful," and often angry.

Speaking on this much vexed theme reminds me of a man I once heard of, who, although a slaveholder, had become, as he thought, a thoroughgoing Abolitionist. While talking about it to a friend one day, his zeal in the good cause waxed hotter and hotter, until it boiled over with the following sensible declaration: "I'll not stand it any longer, I'll go and sell every nigger I've got, and get rid of the cursed traffic!"

Perhaps our northern brothren may arrange matters in a similar way. Certainly it can never be done by any plan less favorable to the pecuniary interests of their slaveholding conferences.

I am glad to be able to say that Nashville is steadily and rapidly improving. Many new buildings are in course of erection, and the projected railroads have given an impetus to all kinds of business. To be sure, the house-painter's or even the whitewasher's art, would, if resorted to, make a wonderful improvement in certain sections of the city, but we are not suffering as much on that score as our Yankee friends might imagine. For my own part, I like the gray and brown tints, left by time on walls and fences, and have always had a fancy that the eternal white of a New England village, would be wearisome to my eyes. Heterodox as it may be, I had rather see an ivy of twenty year's growth creeping round the windows, and nestling lovingly under the eaves of an old homestead, than to see it shining in the "newest and most approved style" of white and green paints.

You are aware that the old Court-House in the square has been burned down, looking much better, as some one maliciously remarked, in its character of a ruin than ever before. It is rumored that the authorities talk of removing the Market House, now standing by it, to somewhere on Broad street, and rebuilding the Court-House handsomely in the center of the square. This will be a fine improvement, and the sooner it is begun the better. A part of the burnt property on the square belonging to W. R. Elliston, Esq., our Missionary Treasurer, was sold by him the other day to Brother Thomas Evans, of this city, for a thousand dollars a running foot. The publishing house turns out a judicious investment. The ground could be sold to-day at 20 per cent. advance upon purchase price.

Every body at the publishing house is too busy to talk much to an occasional visitor, so that I have not much news from that quarter. I see by the last number of the Sunday-School Visitor that it has been enlarged. This is a decided improvement, but its increased size must add considerably to the labors of the editor, and it is to be hoped that all who know how to talk to children, (a rare accomplishment,) and feel an interest in this enterprise, will contribute to its pages.

We had hardly done regretting Brother Owens' resignation of his arduous post, when we were delighted by the announcement that the Bishops had appointed Brother Evans to succeed him. He arrived here with his family a day or two ago, and I venture to promise that the Methodists of Nashville will leave them no room to regret the far-famed hospitalities of their own State.

Bishop Pierce passed through here a few days since, on his way home from St. Louis. He preached on Sabbath night to a delighted audience, fully sustaining his splendid pulpit reputation.

So far as I have heard, the prospect for fruit crops in this neighborhood is very fair, especially the peaches. We have had much rain recently, and the farmers complain that the weeds are getting the start of them, but the rains have kept the river up, and the chances are good for getting an abundant supply of coal. It is to be hoped that enough will be brought down for winter use, as the inconvenience in this respect is often great.

On Saturday night last, a meeting was held in the Market-House, the object of which was to approve of the recognition by our government of Nicaragua as an independent republic. Ex-Governor Brown was one of the speakers. Gen. Walker is a native of this city.

The Louisville and Nashville Railroad is progressing rapidly towards completion, so that before many months we may hope to be in direct communication with New York, by this western route. Truly ours is a fast country.—No more at present,

Yours, truly, CROTCHET.

Nashville, May 19.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

IS IT NOT LYING?

Mr. Editor:—The writer hopes that you will not regard him as a poor, miserable, unmitigated pious misanthrope, who delights only in looking upon the dark shades of life, but as a simple, straight-forward, straight up and down lover of truth at all times, in all places, under all circumstances.

Not long since, while sitting in the neighborhood of quite a meek-looking, dignified minister, I heard him remark to a gentleman sitting by, "Well, somehow or other, I never could think of my appointments to preach," and turning to his wife he remarked, "Old lady do I not preach at ——, on next Sabbath?" Thinks I to myself, old man were you ever really called to preach, and do you really believe what you do preach; or do you wish your hearers to believe that you are a great man?—that it is not at all necessary for you to think of the time, the subject, or the occasion—so you but have time enough to reach the pulpit it is all that your astute intellect requires? If such is the case, you have missed your aim. Your hearers are not at all deceived; men of the most common sense and observation readily detect your objects, and while they pity you, they say in their hearts, poor man, he has lied not unto men, but unto God.

Another case was that of a young minister, just starting out, of good education, and who was in the habit of writing his sermons. Living at some distance in a neighboring county, he had been written to by the principal of a school to come over and deliver the commencement sermon, and perhaps a speech. He did so, and the next day, happening to fall in with him myself, during conversation he remarked that he had made no preparation whatever for the speech delivered the day before, that it had been gotten up hurriedly on the spur of the occasion, entirely unanticipated by him. Thinks I to myself, young man, what you say may all be very true, I don't know, God only knows, but I have my fears and misgivings. I know that five of the virgins took oil in their lamps, and five didn't; that five were called wise and five foolish. I know that you are in the habit of preparing and writing out your speeches; and I know too that you were apprised beforehand that it would be expected of you to preach and speak on the occasion; but ah me, I fear that you too, wish to make the impression that you are a great man; that your giant intellect needs but the spur of the presence of a popular assembly to work up and evolve its abundant treasures. God forgive me if I misjudge, but I fear that you too have lied, not unto men but unto God.

A SILENT OBSERVER.

POETIC LABOR.—Samuel Rogers was engaged on the Pleasures of Memory for nine years; on Human Life for nearly the same space of time; and Italy was not completed in less than sixteen years. Thomas Moore was frequently occupied three weeks in writing a song.

Judging by the enormous circumference of the dresses worn by young ladies in the present day, we feel inclined to assent to the truth of the old saw, that "a miss is as good as a mile."

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Notice.—Louisiana Conference Tract Society.—Cash received by R. J. Harp for the tract society in Madison Parish, La, April 22:

Sub by Mr. Jessee Stansbrough	$30 0
David M Stansbrough	5 00
J. T. C.	2 00
J. W. M.	2 50
A friend	10 00
A stranger on steamer Princess	5 00
Mr. F.	1 00
sundry persons	0 00
Total	61 50

Will at suitable times acknowledge receipts from the parishes.

Notice.—Florence Wesleyan University, Alabama.—The annual examination of the pupils of this Institution will begin on Wednesday the 4th of July next.

The order of exercises in addition to the examination will be as follows:

On Saturday evening Sophomore prize declamation; on Sunday commencement sermon, by Rev. O. Blue, of Alabama Conference; on Monday and Tuesday evenings Junior exhibition. On Tuesday it is expected that addresses will be delivered before the Literary and Literary societies, by gentlemen chosen for the occasion. On Monday, commencement day, addresses by the graduating class, degrees conferred, etc.

It is hoped that the committees appointed by the Conferences will be present. The friends of education, and the public generally, are respectfully invited to attend. The Trustees will hold their annual meeting on Saturday.

S. P. RICE, Sec'y. of Fac.

Notice.—Centenary Institute, Alabama.—The annual examination of the classes will begin on Friday the 27th of June, and close on the following Wednesday.

The commencement sermon will be preached on the following Sabbath by Rev. Wm. P. Harrison.

The annual address will be delivered by Rev. E. Colwin on Wednesday the 2nd July.

B. I. HARRISON, Sec'y.

Notice.—The examination of the pupils of Mansfield Female College will commence on Monday, the 30th July. Commencement day the following Friday, which will be the first of August, at which time the usual honors will be conferred on the graduating class, and addresses appropriate to the occasion delivered. The attendance of the patrons and friends of the Institution and the public generally is respectfully invited. The Visiting Committee of the Conference are also earnestly requested to be in attendance.

H. C. THWEATT, Pres't.

Notice.—A Camp meeting will be held at Plaquemine Brulee, in the Parish of St. Landry, to commence on Friday, June 20, 1850. Preachers and people are generally invited to attend.

B. F. ALEXANDER, P. C.

Notice.—On the 22d of June next, Bishop Andrew will dedicate the new M. E. Church in Enterprise, Miss., at which time he will also attend to the ordination of any brethren who may have certificates of election thereto, and who have not had an opportunity of having it attended to.

W. C. TURNER.

Notice.—N. O. District, 2d Quarter.—Camp Meetings Missions 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, May 18th at Sarah-ton Ronge, June 7th and 8th.

Bayou Lafourche and Bayou Black, June 14th and 15th, at Napoleonville.

Plaquemine and Point Coupee, June 28th and 29th, Bayon Poydras.

Contracted Meeting at Bayon Gros Teto 5th and 6th July.

Thoreon st., July 13th; Q. C. and L, F. on the 14th.

New Orleans Circuit, July 20th at Algiers, A. M.; Carrollton, P. M.; Q. C. 17th, in Carondelet basement.

Carondelet st., July 27th; L. F. 28th; Q. C. 20th.

Wesley, Soule and Winan's Chapels, Q. C. August 1.

Felicity st., August 3d, L. F. 4th and Q. C. 5th.

Thibodeaux, August 23d and 24th.

J. C. KEENER, P. E.

Notice.—Gainesville District, Alabama Conference, 3d Quarter.—Fork and Willow Pood Colored Mission, June 14th and 15th; Belmoet and Colored Mission, June 28th and 29th; Eutaw, July 12th and 13th; Livingston, July 10th and 20th; Warsaw, 26th and 27th; DeKalb, August 2d and 3d; Lauderdale, August 9th and 10th; Samterville, August 16th and 17th; Gainesville, August 23d and 24th; Macon, August 30th and 31st; Wahalah, September 6th and 7th.

T. Y. RAMSEY, P. E.

Wanted.—A situation as Teacher, by a young men of considerable experience. He is prepared to teach Latin, Greek, and the higher Mathematics. Apply to Rev. J. C. Miller, President of Centenary College, or either of its Professors. my17-3t

Episcopal Visitation.

ABERDEEN, Miss., May 17, 1855.

Rev. H. N. McTyeire.—You will oblige me by inserting the following as the official statement of the times of holding the sessions of the Conferences of the Fourth District of Episcopal visitation for 1856-7.

Texas Conference, at Kickapoo, Kan., Oct. 3, 1856
Miss'n do. at Chickasaw Acad'y. " 23, "
Texas Conference, at Paris, Texas, Nov. 5, "
Texas Conference, at Gonzales Texas, Dec. 3, "

This is the arrangement agreed to at the late meeting of the Bishops at Nashville, and published in the Nashville and Richmond Christian Advocates.—The plan of this work was, at first, opposed as you have published it, but see above is the one fixed on at that meeting. The balance of your statement of the plan is correct.

Your brother,

R. PAINE.

A learned writer, Dendy, says: "Dyspepsia to ensure his brilliant visions of poesy, ale raw flesh; and Radcliffe adopted the same plan. Green tea and coffee, if too sleep, induce dreaming. Baptista Porta, for procuring vivid rest and pleasing dreams, swallowed horse tongue after supper. Indigestion, and that condition which is termed a weak and irritable stomach, constitute a most fruitful source of visions. The immediate or direct influence of repletion, in totally alters the sensations and the disposition in waking moments, is a proof of its power to derange the circulation of the brain and the mental faculties in sleep. People who are troubled with indigestion, may surely get relief from Hoofland's German Bitters," sold exclusively in this country by Dr. C. M. Jackson, 418 Arch street, Philadelphia, and by his agents. See advertisement. my17 1m

A Masterpiece Outdone.—We have lately opposed that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was the Ultima Thule in medicine, and that nothing had been or would be invented which could at all surpass it in its Sun points of excellence as a medicine. But we are confidently assured by those competent to judge on the subject, that Ayer's new Pills exceed in high medicinal artistry even that widely celebrated embodiment of his skill. He has succeeded in making them not only pleasant to take, but so powerful to cure the large class of complaints which require a purgative remedy [Lancaster Argus, Ky.

They are for sale by J. WRIGHT & CO., and all city druggists. a19 2m

MARRIAGES.

On the 27th ult., by the Rev. C. D. Oliver, Mr. JOSEPH G. MOORE of Columbus, Miss., to Miss ELIZABETH T. GLOVER, daughter of Williamson Glover, of Forkland, Greene county, Ala.

On the 27th March, near Cuseta, Ala., by the Rev. J. W. Williams, Mr. JAMES H. ERWIN to Miss PHONETTA T. SIMMS.

On the 13th ult., Rev. Dr. Thornton, W. D. ROY, Esq., Editor of the Yazoo San, and Miss ELIZABETH, daughter of A. W. Chambliss, Principal of the Female Seminary at Castalian Springs.

On the 13th ult., in Columbus, Ga., by Rev. Dr. L. Pierce, Mr. T. W. ISBELL, of Tuskeegee, Ala., to Miss FRANCES AUGUSTA, daughter of James K. Redd, Esq.

On the 15th ult., at Homer, La., by Rev. Wm. C. Moreland, Mr. A. A. HARRISON to MISS EMILY A. FOSTER.

On the 15th ult., at Homer, La., at the residence of Wm. J. Hoykin, Esq., by Rev. J. T. Davidson, MR. N. M. MARTIN to Miss SARAH E. BOYKIN.

On the 15th ult., in Eutaw, Ala., by the Rev. Wm. Shapard, Mr. TOBIAS S. COOK and Mrs. MARTHA J. RODEN.

On the 20th ult., in St. Marys parish, La., by the Rev. R. H. Read, Mr. J. T. BALDWIN and Miss JENNIE GARRETT.

On the 10th ult., in Richmond, La., by the Rev. J. Hallberg, A. JUDSON GIBBS, M. D., of Philadelphia, Pa., to MARTHA A. GIBBS, of Madison Parish, La.

LIST OF REMITTANCES

Received at the Office of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, for the month of May, 1856.

A.		J.
R R Alexander	$7 00	J Littlejohn	2 00
H F Alexander	13 40
J Aedorson	3 80	M.
		H Mullins	5 00
B.		J S Moore	2 00
		E McFadin	2 00
F C Benuchamp	2 00	W E D Moore	2 00
J Brown	2 00	C K Marshall	5 00
G C Bruwer	2 00	J McDoeell	2 00
F T J Brundeu	12 00	J Mnttlhewe	2 00
G S Bonner	2 00	J McLennan	10 00
T W Blake	2 00	J Mnttlhews	2 50
J C Brown	5 00	J Muller	2 00
J Brown	2 00	G Martin	2 00
		P N Moore	2 00
C.		J Magee	2 00
		A P Morris	2 00
A J Coleman	13 00	S Meershoon	5 00
H Cetes	2 00	W A McCarthy	25 00
G Carlisle	17 00
D P Cullin	2 00	N.
C P Coursey	10 0	F Noble	2 00
S H Cox	30 00	J A Neely	4 00
J J Clark	2 00
O Clanaway	2 00	P.
J L Cottoe	2 00	D R Porter	2 00
A Castle	10 00	L Phillips	2 00
J J Cocks	2 00	M U Payne	2 50
D.		R.
W P Dickinson	4 00	R Riley	4 50
R Daugherty	5 00	Capt Robinson	4 00
T W Dorman	5 00	J W Reed	5 00
N S Davis	2 00	F P Ravisles	5 00
		J W Rush	9 00
E.		R Y Rew	5 00
G F Ellis	4 00	R H Read	2 00
S Equle	2 00	B P Roberts	1 00
		R E Redwood	2 50
F.		S.
J M Ford	2 00	R Speecer	2 00
J T Fowler	5 00	W Shapard	21 00
A Fan	2 00	F M Stovall	5 00
W Ford	15 00	A Skinner	2 00
J Freeman	2 00	A Smith	2 00
		F Schteler	2 00
G.		L J Scholar	13 00
W Garrett	5 00	F Sadler, jr	3 00
D Gry	2 00	L Sadler	2 00
A S Glenn	2 00	G Shaeffer	2 00
J T M Gregory	2 00
		T.
H.		P H Townsend	2 00
R B Hall	10 00	M D Thomasou	5 00
R C Hynson	2 00	A J Tully	2 50
J T Harris	2 00	S S Tully	2 00
A Hester	2 00	J W Towles	6 00
W C Hearn	2 00	R Trippett	2 00
E J Harwell	2 00	R Thompsoe	2 00
I		V.
E J Iglehart	2 00	H Venghan	6 00
		W R Vaughan	2 00
J.
Wm Jefforson	2 00	W.
H T Jones	5 00	Wm J Windham	9 00
J W Joues	2 00	D M Wiggins	20 00
		S B Wheatley	5 00
K.		S Woodbury	2 00
S J Kelly	2 00	B E Watkins	2 00
A E Klein	2 00	R A Woodward	2 00
T J Koger	25 00	W Webb	2 00
S Kidd	5 00	J L Wright	10 00
		L M Wilson	2 00
L.		M N Weathersby	2 00
H T Lewis	2 00	J W Weems	2 00
W Littlejohn	2 00

CHARTER ELECTIONS.—The city elections for Mayor, Recorders, Aldermen and Assistant Aldermen, etc., took place last Monday. Mr. Waterman (Am.) elected Mayor, over Mr. Elmore (Dem.) by 1,964. The entire ticket headed by Mr. W., elected, saving two Assistant Aldermen.

From the Louisville Journal, December 11, 1855.

DR. HODENHAMER.—The card of this distinguished physician, who has been for above two years past in New York, is in our columns, and we desire to call attention to it. Dr. B. resided for a number years in Louisville and New Orleans, but is now established in New York permanently.

Dr. B. in his peculiar department of practice has no living rival. He has devoted about eighteen years almost exclusively to the medical and surgical treatment of the diseases of the lower bowels, such as piles, fistula, fissure, falling of the bowel, etc., diseases which are most painful and distressing in their nature, and from which, as the most experienced physicians can testify, not one-fourth of our adult population are free. The successful treatment of these diseases is difficult under the most favourable circumstances, but Dr. B.'s success has uniformly been most extraordinary—utterly without parallel in this or other country. This success has been the result, in part, of his peculiar method, but more especially of his having devoted so many years exclusively to the treatment of a single class of diseases. Patients are continually flocking to him from distances of five hundred and a thousand miles, and never in vain.

The peculiarities of Dr. Bodenhamer's treatment are that it gives scarcely any pain whatever, that a radical, a perfect cure is effected with certainty, without the slightest danger, and in a very short time, and that his patients are always able to attend to their business, never being confined to their beds or their rooms, nor prevented from freely exercising or moving about wherever they please by either pain or complicated dressings. Dr. B. is of the old school of physicians, and has no concealments as to his practice; he cordially invites all physicians and others, who may feel an interest in the matter, to call and learn for themselves what his treatment is.

J. S. Redfield, 34 Beekman street, New York, has just published Dr. Bodenhamer's book on constipation, piles, fistula, etc., handsomely illustrated by plates, and especially addressed to non-medical persons. This book contains a very large amount of most valuable information for common readers, and is for sale at the bookstore of Messrs. Morton & Griswold in Louisville.

We ought to add that Dr. B. is a most kind hearted and just man, who will never make an improper charge against a patient. my30—3t.

A good article will always triumph over any pretended imitation. It has been said that every city is a paradise of humbugs; but let a really meritorious article, capable of doing all that is promised for it, and it will stand the test of any opposition dependent upon inflated notoriety; and Hostetter's famed Stomach Bitters bear evidence of this, for it has been taken hold of by the people and tried, and not found wanting in any case of dyspepsia, in any form. When these facts are known, why should it not be appreciated, and used by everybody. For sale by druggists and dealers generally. Wholesale by E. J. Hart & Co., 79 Tchoupitoulas street, Cady & Holmes, 7 Gravier street. je7 1t

MEDICAL CARD.

W. RODENHAMER, M. D., would respectfully inform his friends in the South and Southwest, that he has inaugurated himself in the city of New York, where he will continue to devote his whole attention to the medical and surgical treatment of Chronic Diseases, especially those of the Lower Bowel—such as Piles, Constipation, Fistula, Pleasure, Falling of the Bowel, etc. He has devoted a number of years to the treatment of those diseases in Louisville, Ky. and New Orleans, La.; and for the success attending his peculiar practice, as well as other information on the subject, he refers to his work on those diseases, lately published by J. S. Redfield, of New York, especially addressed to non-medical readers, and for sale at the bookstores of H. M. NORMAN and J. C. MORGAN, New Orleans.

Letters can be addressed to Dr. W. Rodenhamer, 46 East Twenty-First street, New York. my31 3m

The Hon. Roderick White, member of the New York Senate, and a distinguished politician of that State, died at Olean, on the 26th ult., of the cancer in the stomach.

Horatio Edson, another prominent citizen of that State, was dangerous ill, at last accounts.

Magnetic Telegraph.

ARRIVAL OF THE ORIZABA.

LATER FROM NICARAGUA.

TRANSIT ROUTE OPEN.

WALKER'S SUCCESS CONFIRMED.

[BY THE SOUTHERN AND NATIONAL LINES.]

NEW YORK, June 2.—The steamship Orizaba arrived at this port direct from San Juan del Norte.

She reports the Transit Route now open for the safe transportation of passengers and goods.

The news of Walker's successes at Rivas, and the subsequent abandonment of Nicaragua by the Costa Ricans, is fully confirmed by the advices of the Orizaba.

THE CINCINNATI CONVENTION.

The Contested Seats—Surmises and Speculations.

CINCINNATI, June 1.—The city is full to overflowing, and great excitement prevails. The friends of each candidate seem confident of success.

The Missouri Bentonite delegation has been excluded by the National Committee, to whom the question was submitted.

The New York contestants will go before the Convention, and it is intimated that the Convention will compel them to compromise by refusing to receive either delegation.

The Mississippi delegation has determined to vote for Pierce and Quitman.

The friends of Mr. Buchanan assert that the Sumner assault has gained that gentleman twenty votes.

A resolution will be introduced to exclude officeholders from future conventions.

CINCINNATI, June 2.—The Convention assembled at 12 o'clock, with Samuel Medary as temporary chairman. The Missouri Soft delegation forced their way into the hall, and, amid great uproar, excitement and fighting, were allowed to take their seats, when order was restored.

Serious Fight—Door Keeper Knocked Down.

CINCINNATI, June 2.—A serious fight took place when the Benton delegation from Missouri forced their way into the hall. During the fracas the door-keeper was knocked down.

The two New York delegations, not agreeing to compromise, were both refused admittence.

A Committee on Credentials, consisting of one from each State, was appointed, adding one for each of the contesting delegations.

A Committee on Organization, consisting of one from each State, was appointed.

A Committee on Resolutions was formed in the same way.

E. J. Moise represents Louisiana in the Committee on Organization, and Hon. Pierre Soule in the Committee on Resolutions.

Hon. Mr. Richardson, of Illinois, alluding to the violent entrance of the Missouri delegates, said that the Convention must protect itself against violence.

Mr. Hall, of Missouri, attempted to justify the chairman in recognizing him.

The Benton delegates finally withdrew amid loud cheers.

Other unimportant business was transacted amidst great confusion, and the Convention adjourned until ten o'clock to-morrow.

The Sumner Assault.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The Senate has adjourned until Thursday.

House—Two reports were made by the investigation Committee on the Sumner assault. The majority report is in favor of the immediate expulsion of Brooks, and strongly disapproves of the conduct of Kieth and Edmonson, as being aware of the contemplation of the assault and taking no measures to prevent it. Both reports were ordered to be printed.

Markets.

CINCINNATI, June 2.—Flour is unchanged; Mess Pork $16,25; Whisky 21½; Molasses 48.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Flour has declined. Slate $4,75; Wheat [illegible]. Mixed Corn 69. Mess Pork is a trifle lower; Whisky 26c.

FIRE AT BATON ROUGE.

BATON ROUGE, June 2.—The immense and valuable manufacturing machinery in the Louisiana Penitentiary was entirely consumed to-day, by fire. The fire originated, about one o'clock, in the picking room, and immediately spread to the looms, etc., all of which were entirely consumed. The loss will probably reach $200,000. The prompt energy of Mr. Hirart prevented any of the prisoners escaping. He ordered them to bring water to check the flames, and on their refusing, drove them into their cells and locked them up.

The fire is supposed to have been the result of friction. All the buildings of the east end are in ruins.

ADDITIONAL BY THE INDIAN.

LIVERPOOL, May 21.—Consols for money are quoted at 94¼.

Cotton Market.

The Arabia's news had depressed the market, and prices were weaker. The sales for three days amounted to 24,000 bales.

England and Costa Rica.

In the House of Lords, Clarendon stated that Costa Rica had applied to England for assistance against Walker, offering England the Protectorate of the country, but the Government had peremptorily rejected per propositions.

Cincinnati Convention.

CINCINNATI, June 3.—The Convention took a recess from twelve o'clock until four. Reassembled at the latter hour, but the business transacted was entirely unimportant.

The Committee on Resolutions will report to-morrow morning.

Convention adjourned until 10 o'clock to-morrow.

Upper Canal and Basin.

The monthly report of imports through the rear entrance of the port of New Orleans, is comprised in the following statement of receipts of produce, with 4,682 sacks of salt, which has come from Mobile for sale. The value of the domestic products are estimated at one hundred and five thousand dollars, excluding one item, that of saw dust, for which we cannot find any quotation in our local or foreign prices current. Our readers must not think that traders are getting pressed for objects of profit when saw dust is imported, for it is an article of great service. In the mean time, the steady increase of the business through this canal and basin strikes the reader with the very great importance and immeasurable good the Canal and Banking Company of this city has conferred on the commerce of New Orleans. The great exports of produce to the lake parishes, Alabama, Florida and Georgia, through this outlet, would astonish those who think that all the mighty trade of our city is confined to the receiving of merchandise at the levee from Northern States and the shipment of produce from the same.

There are now three outlets for the trade of the city, viz: the Canal and basin of the New Canal, the Carrollton and Jefferson Railroad and the Pontchertrain Railroad; with all of them, trade and travel is daily increasing.

It was reported some days since that the old Canal Carondelet and Bayou St. John, was open for the egress and ingress of vessels, but have received no confirmation of the report, and it is too far for us to travel to Bayou St. John to ascertain the preciseness of the report. The following is the report from the upper canal:

Receipts of Produce in the New Basin for the month of May, '56. Cotton, bales, 581; Lumber, feet, 4,021,000; Wood, cords, 4,430; Brick, 1,247,000; Staves, bdls., 16,600; Shells, bbls., 14, 900; Charcoal, bbls 31,000; Tar, bbls, 575; Shingles, 361,000; Laths, 146,000; Staves, 127,000, Rosin, bbls., 2 85+; Spirits Turpentine, bbls., 1,850; Saw dust, bbls., 500; Clapboards, 20,000; Salted Fish, bbls., 20; Timber, white oak, pieces, 21; Oakum, bales, 40; Cotton Bills, 15; Merchandize, boxes, 12; Deer Skins, bundles, 3; Beef Cattle, 100; Kiers, white oak, 100; Salt, sacks, 4,682; Hides, 200; Gunny Bags, bales, 20.

PROTEST OF DON MARCOLETA.—In the official protest against the recognition of the new government of Nicaragua, Don Marcoleta says he is wholly unable to discover the important and weighty reasons which caused the United States Government to abandon its former position. He quotes various extracts from Marcy's letters to opposition to the recognition, which he characterizes as a most flagrant violation of divine and human laws, and the encouragement and sure guarantee of filibusterism in Nicaragua.

Later from Texas.

The steamship Charles Morgan, Capt. Place, from Indianola and Galveston, arrived yesterday.

By this arrival we have Galveston papers to the 29th instant, and others from interior and coast towns.

The Galveston News, of the 29th, has the following account of a steamboat explosion:

The stern-wheel steamer Lizzy Lake was brought into our port yesterday by two sloops taking her in tow. After coming in we learned that while coming from the South-west Pass of Vermillion Bay, she exploded her boiler about forty-five miles from this city, on Sunday, at half-past one o'clock, killing and blowing overboard Capt. Montgomery, who commanded her, and, as we learn, was part owner, and scalding five of the crew, but not dangerously. The hull of the boat is not injured, but her deck and cabin immediately over the boiler have been entirely carried away.

The News learns that hands have been at work laying the foundation for the Sabine Pass Light-house, for the past two months. The News says:

The foundation is fifty feet square, made by digging several feet below the surface and laying three inch plank, and then covering them with cement, upon which heavy timbers are placed transversely.—These are covered again with cement, when another layer of timbers, twelve inches square, is placed; and finally, these are covered with inch plank and cement; which finishes the foundation, upon which the house is to be built of brick, ninety feet high. At this elevation the light can be seen a great distance, and will, doubtless, be a great advantage to the growing commerce of the Pass. It is situated on the Louisiana side of the Pass, and will be completed by October or November next.

The Civilian, of the 27th, has the following notice of the meeting in favor of Nicaragua, held on the evening of the 24th:

The meeting at Morlan Hall on Saturday evening, (which adjourned to last night,) was large and enthusiastic. The feeling of the crowd in favor of Nicaragua was evidently strong. It was a significant, suggestive sight to behold, as the chairman of the meeting, the first President of Texas, David G. Burnet, sustained by two Vice Presidents, Gen. Shermae and Judge Jacinto. And a Secretary, Mr. Oscar Farish, all soldiers at San Jacinto. The fire which animated their bosoms in 1836, seems to be unquenched in 1856.

Messrs. Burnet, McLeod, Waddell, Farish, Edwards, Forshey and Brown were appointed to prepare resolutions for the adjourned meeting.

The Austin State Times, of the 24th, has the following:

Edward Dougherty, Esq., District Attorney for the Twelfth Judicial District, is in the city. He represents the prospect for an abundant crop on the Rio Grande as very flattering. Business is rather dull at Brownsville.

The Dallas Herald has the following information of Indian depredations from Mr. McHenry, who, with a companion, visited Comanche county on the 20th of April:

They camped on the South fork of the Leon. The second night they were there, the Indians stole all their horses, four in number, three belonging to Mr. McHenry, the other to his companion. They pursued on the trail of the Indians for two days, until stopped by the high water of the Colorado. Found some beef scattered about as though dropped in haste. They returned without their horses.

Eight days afterwards, the Indians returned and stole all the horses belonging to a Mr. Logan, a settler in that region. Messrs. Mercer and Campbell raised a company of fifteen men and started in pursuit, determined not to return without finding them.

There is a flourishing settlement of some sixty persons at this place (in Comanche county) who deserve better protection, Mr. McHenry thinks, than they receive. He considers the troops stationed at Fort Chadbourn, the nearest military post, of no benefit to the exposed settlers in that region.

Late From Kansas.

We take the following particulars of the late transactions in Kansas from the St. Louis Republican of the 27th instant:

The steamer Star of the West arrived yesterday from the Missouri, bringing us a number of papers and extras from offices in that region, referring mainly to events of recent occurrence in Lawrence and thereabouts. We have also seen Judge Fain, who acted as United States Deputy Marshal and as Deputy Sheriff, in Lawrence, and who has given us some additional items of news. The Judge is now his way to Georgia, for his family, intending to return immediately to Kansas, to take up his permanent residence in Lecompton.

According to the reports before us, early on Wednesday morning, the United States Marshal, with the men who had obeyed his proclamation calling for aid to assist in the execution of certain writs in his hands, took possession of the mound in front of Lawrence. They numbered from four hundred to five hundred men. Between ten and eleven o'clock, the Marshal sent his Deputy, Judge Fain, into the town, with a posse of eight men, to execute the writs. They made four arrests, returned and delivered the prisoners to the Marshal and he dismissed his force.

The Lawrence people were disposed to exult over this result, declaring that they did not intend to resist his authority, although Reeder had set them the example of contemning it and that of the U. S. Judge of the Lecompton District. But when Marshal Donelson had performed his duty, Sheriff Jones, who had recovered from the wound received in the attempt to assassinate him in Lawrence, appeared on the scene and summoned the same men to aid him in a like service. He took about twenty men with him and rode into Lawrence. He stepped in front of the Free State Hotel—fitted up, as is well known, as a fortification—and calling for Gen. Pomeroy, demanded from him all the Sharpe's rifles and pieces of artillery about the fort, or hotel, giving him five minutes to decide whether he would surrender them or not, saying that he desired to effect his purpose peaceably and quietly. Pomeroy having consulted with others, agreed to deliver up the arms, and fifteen minutes further time was allowed to stack them in the street.

Col. Eldridge, who keeps the hotel, was then requested by Sheriff Jones, to move his furniture from the building, giving him two hours to do it in. But this he refused to do, and the posse entered and removed the most of the furniture into the street. The artillery was then placed in front of the hotel, and fired upon it until the walls began to fall, when fire was put to it and it was left in ruins.

The printing materials of the Herald of Freedom office, and of the Kansas Free State office, were then taken and thrown into the river. It was the express order of Sheriff Jones, that no private property should be injured, and particularly that Gov. Robinson's house should not be touched, but it became impossible to restrain the crowd, and the presses, etc., were destroyed, and, after a portion of the posse had left the town, Robinson's house was fired, but put out, and again set on fire and burned down. It was a two story frame. This was the extent of the damage to property. One man, who was observed attempting to make his escape from a house, during the heat of the excitement, was fired upon and killed; and a pro-slavery was dangerously injured by the falling of a brick from the hotel walls. Another pro-slavery man was accidentally shot, but he will probably get well.

Sheriff Jones gave Gen. Pomeroy a receipt for all the rifles and cannon surrendered by him to the authorities of Douglas county.

Jacob Branson, whose name has figured a good deal in the affairs of Kansas, was arrested on the 19th, by Deputy Sheriff Fain and four others. He was taken at his house. He threatened to shoot the officers, and put a rifle through the crack of the house but did not fire. His wife opened one of the doors with a pistol in each hand, and warned them not to approach a step nearer; but the trigger was not pulled. Finally, Branson agreed to surrender.

The evening before Lawrence was entered, a man was killed at Branson's bridge. He was hailed by the picket guard, refused to answer, started to run, and was fired upon and shot in the back.

The same evening two of the picket guard were out about one mile from Lawrence; they were met by five men from the town—were asked if they belonged to the Pro-Slavery party, and on answering that they did, they were fired upon, one of them receiving a shot in the arm—the other shot one of the assailants in the head—and both of them escaped.

Gov. Shannon, it was understood, would request that 100 of the regular troops should be stationed in Lawrence, 100 in Topeka, and 100 at Osawatomie. Sheriff Jones had some writs to serve at Topeka, and it was reported that about 100 of the malcontents had assembled at the Big Spring, to give him battle, but, after the occurrences at Lawrence, this will hardly be done. At Osawatomie Judge Cato, of the District Court, had been prevented from holding his court, by threats of violence to the Grand Jury from the Free-State men, and this precaution was deemed necessary.

There were about three hundred citizens of Lawrence still in town on Wednesday, and many of them were greatly exasperated at their leaders, because they had deserted in the hour of their difficulties, and they vowed that they would not again be found in resistance to the laws of the Territory. A good many were passengers on the Star of the West, returning to the East.

Wood, one of the great mischief makers in Kansas, is said to have fled to Cleveland, Ohio. Nothing was known of Reeder.

OPELOUSAS RAILROAD.—Summer Arrangements. The Board of Directors, with the view of inducing travel, and accommodation to excursion parties at a low rate during the summer months, have established the following tariff of charges to go to the regular stations and return the same day:

From Algiers to Bontte	$1 25
Bayou des Allemands	1 50
Raceland, Lafourche Crossing, and Terrebonne	2 00
Tigerville	2 50
Bayou Boeuf	3 00
Lafourch Crossing and Terrebonne to Tigerville and back	3 50
Lafourche Crossing and Terrebonne to Bayou Boeuf and back	1 00
Between intermediate regular stations, prices proportional.	1 25

Thirty-Fourth Congress—First Session.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Senate.—A number of petitions were submitted and appropriately referred. Sundry committee reports, of minor importance, received.

A number of private bills were introduced.

Mr. Weller offered a joint resolution that both Houses of Congress do adjourn on the 31st day of July next, at 12 o'clock, M.

Laid over.

Mr. Benjamin moved to take up the bill to provide for a universal code of marine signals.

The bill was then taken up, when Mr. B. explained it at length; after which it was passed.

Mr. Slidell said that he wished to explain in regard to the passage in the Baltimore Sun, purporting to be given before the Committee on Investigation. He read the passage which he referred to. The particular words were, "As I entered the lobby I recognized Mr. Slidell, of Louisiana, who retreated." He also referred to the statement in regard to Messrs. Douglas and Toombs. He did retreated in order that he might not interrupt Mr. Sumner's progress to a sofa. He made this statement in order that no false impression might be imbibed by the public on this subject.

Mr. Douglas made a personal explanation in regard to his conduct and position during the assault, and said that the statement that he was standing on one side of Mr. Brooks and Mr. Toombs on the other, was a misrepresentation. He had not heard that any one had intended to attack Mr. Sumner.

Mr. Toombs said that what Mr. Douglas said was correct. He further said that some gentlemen had condemned Mr. Brooks; he then said that he approved of it.

Mr. Butler said that he had come to the Senate determined to take the same responsibility which had been assumed by Mr. Brooks, but that he should not follow the matter up at present.

He said that Mr. S.'s remarks were not in answer to his speeches at all. He should reply to that statement in his speech on the resolutions of the Massachusetts Legislature.

Mr. Wade stigmatized the assault on Mr. Sumner as "murderous, cowardly, and dastardly," and proceeded to some further remarks.

Mr. Wilson said his "colleague had been stricken down by a brutal, cowardly and murderous assault."

Mr. Butler said "You are a liar."

Mr. Stuart called both gentleman to order, and asked that the debate be dropped.

Mr. Butler said that words had fell from his lips out of order, and asked that they should not be entered on the Journal.

Mr. Wilson continued explaining the statement of Mr. Sumner, saying that he knew he had made no mistake intentionally.

Mr. Foster said that he felt compelled, by the approval expressed by one Senator of the assault, that he was not restrained from speaking his disapprobation by fear.

Mr. Iverson moved to postpone the special order, and go on with the debate, on which motion the ayes and noes were taken, and the motion was lost and the special dispatch was taken up.

Mr. Cass rose to personal explanation on the Central American question.

House.—Mr. Smith, of Virginia, offered a resolution inquiring into the exact amount of service rendered by each officer on the active list of the Navy.

Mr. Walbridge, of Michigan, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported a bill granting alternate sections of land to that State for railroad purposes, amounting to 1,100,000 acres, and moved the previous question.

Messrs. Jones, of Tennessee, and Craige, of North Carolina, earnestly opposed the passage of the bill under the gag law, desiring time to discuss it.

Mr. Walbridge insisted, when

Mr. Jones moved to lay the whole subject on the table, and in the negative—ayes 67, noes 80.

The question recurring, shall the main question be put? the ayes and noes were being ordered when our report closed.

Louisiana Items.

The Vidalia Intelligencer of the 30th ult., says:

Early this week, at Vidalia, the river rose about an inch per day, it is now stationary.

From all sections of our own and adjoining parishes we are informed in regard to the cotton crop, that insects called "fice" have been and are still committing serious depredations. In many places the "stand" has been much injured, and some planters fear that it will be impossible to get a stand from their "re-plant" in time to make a crop. We now have warm dry weather, however, and hopes are entertained that the insects will soon disappear, and leave a tolerable prospect for another crop.

The corn crops throughout the country are said to be finer than ever has been known at this season of the year before, and with reasonably suitable weather a large yield may be expected.

The Alexandria Democrat of the 27th, says:

A few days since we visited several plantations in this vicinity, and are happy to say the crops indicate prosperity. A little rain at this time would prove beneficial. At this point the river is receding. For several days the weather has been extremely warm, notwithstanding our cities and towns are blessed with uninterrupted good health.

From the Shreveport South-Western of the 27th, we take the following:

The river is falling fast at this point, and the latest accounts from above report it low and declining. On the 13th, the R. M. Jones was aground on White Oak shoals. A few days ago the Hope struck a snag, a short distance above Fulton, which caused her to leak. Her officers entered a protest. On the 13th the Victoria, with a cargo of cotton, struck a snag, almost in sight of Fulton, was run ashore and sunk. A portion of the cotton floated down the river and was secured. The White Cliffs went up to the wreck, for the purpose of giving all possible aid. The Victoria was nearly new and one of the best light draught boats on the river. We understand she was only partially insured.

The Hope came down yesterday, with only half a load of cotton, and confirms the report that upper Red River is low and falling fast.

In coming up Red River, a few days ago, we were much pleased at the fine appearance of the young cotton and corn. They both promise luxuriant crops.

Green corn made its first appearance in our market this season on Monday morning. It was grown on Buzzard island, by Mr. Waite.

The Mansfield Columbian, of the 24th, has the following:

We have taken particular pains to inquire of citizens from every portion of our parish relative to the condition and prospects of the growing crops, and learned that all appearances now indicate and give promise of a heavy compensation to the husbandman for his industry and labor.

The Plaquemine Sentinel of the 31st says: The parish is suffering much for rain at the present time.

Mr. Brooks' Assault upon Mr. Sumner.

At the opening of the session in both houses of Congress on yesterday the attention of the two bodies was called to the rencounter which took place on Thursday afternoon between Hon. Preston S. Brooks, of South Carolina, and Charles Sumner, of Massachusetts. In the Senate the occurrence was briefly detailed by Mr. Wilson, after which Mr. Seward offered a resolution to raise a committee of five to investigate the facts, and report thereon, as well as to report the opinion of the committee. The resolution was adopted without objection, and the Senate proceeded to elect as the committee Messrs. Cass, Gayer, Pearce, Dodge, and Allen.

In the House Hon. Lewis D. Campbell brought the subject before that body by the introduction of a preamble, in which the alleged facts are briefly stated, and resolutions raising a committee of investigation similar to that appointed in the Senate. Mr. Campbell's preamble and resolutions were passed with but little discussion because of the application of the previous question. The Speaker appointed the following committee:

Lewis D. Campbell of Ohio, A. C. M. Pennington of New Jersey, Howell Cobb of Georgia, A. B. Greenwood of Arkansas, and F. E. Spinner of New York.

In each house the proceedings were based upon the assumption that Mr. Brooks made the assault on Mr. Sumner whilst in his seat and engaged in his public business.—In the House these facts were assumed in the preamble of Mr. Campbell, and in the Senate they were distinctly assumed by Mr. Wilson in his opening remarks. It is hardly doubtful that the proceedings to the two houses were the result of concert; and it is a fair inference, therefore, that the jurisdiction in the case is rested on the facts assumed, that Mr. Sumner at the time of the assault was not only in his seat, but engaged in his public duties as a Senator. As these seemed to be the only material facts about which there may be controversy, we feel at liberty to state, briefly what we think will be found to be the truth as to the occurrence.

The Senate had adjourned, and most of the senators

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Late from Denver.

The St. Louis Republican of the 27th, has the subjoined interesting intelligence:

The mail from Great Salt Lake City arrived last night, bringing no papers later than the 20th March.

The Convention to form a State Constitution was making rapid progress. It is worth while to note the proceedings of that peculiar people. The News of the 19th says:

The Delegates of the Convention from the various counties south of Green River, met in the Council Room on the 17th. The event was announced by the firing of cannon, and music from Capt. Ballo's band. Throughout the day, flags floated from the cupolas of the Governor's mansion and Council House, also from the tall flag poles on the Temple Block, and in front of the Deseret and Livingston, Kinkhead & Co.'s stores, from flag staffs on the roof of Gilbert & Gerrish's store, and from the roofs of many other public buildings.

At an early hour, a large concourse of citizens had assembled, anxiously awaiting the commencement of those deliberations and acts, which have for their object the addition of another star to the brilliant and rapidly spangled constellation styled "E Pluribus Unum."

The Convention organized by unanimously electing the Hon. J. M. Grant, President; Mr. T. Bullock, Secretary; Mr. J. C. Snow, Assistant Secretary; Mr. R. T. Burton, Sergeant-at-Arms; Mr. W. C. Staines, Messenger; Mr. T. Hall, Doorkeeper; and Messrs. D. Watt and J. V. Long, Reporters. At 12½ adjourned until 3 P. M.

We have omitted the notice, thus briefly, to the organization, not only because the reporters cannot report and transcribe at the same time, but because a minute detail would be out of place in the News, especially since it is designed to print in pamphlet form whatever the Convention may deem beneficial. Still, we shall take occasion to keep the public informed of such noticeable doings as may be of interest to them.

In the afternoon, the freedom of the Convention was unanimously tendered to his Excellency the Governor, the United States officers of the Territory, Prest. H. C. Kimball, the members of the Legislative Assembly, Hons. E. Snow, A. Lyman and E. Hunter; Hon. Elias Smith, Probate Judge of G. S. L. county, and the Aldermen of G. S. L. city.

From the same paper of the 20th, we copy:

The Convention is still sitting, and the business before it is being distributed with reasonable diligence and apparent harmony and unanimity. The various committees have digested the portions of the Constitution assigned them; a standing special committee of seven men, good men; a standing special committee of five was appointed to whom to refer the reports as they are presented by the Convention; and on Monday, 23d, a special committee of three was appointed to amend, arrange, consolidate and report all matter previously reported. By leave of the Convention, the special committee and the standing special committee had a session on Tuesday, 24th, and on the afternoon of the same day unanimously reported the "Constitution of the State of Deseret." Chief Justice Kinney dissenting only on one point, viz.: he preferring to have the Judges of the Supreme Court elected directly by the people, rather than by the General Assembly.

The State of Deseret will have her Senators and Representatives knocking at the doors of Congress for admission, before the close of the present session.

The Northwest.

The following article, which we copy from the Boston Traveller, combines, from official sources, a variety of useful information in regard to a region that is now comparatively unknown, but is developing with unexampled rapidity. The country about Lake Superior was first explored in 1641 by the Jesuits of Canada, under the auspices of the Governor-General, Celleron de Blainville. But it was not till very recently that any definite information in regard to its vast mineral wealth was spread before the world in the very able report of Dr. Houghton to the Legislature of Michigan. During the last thirteen years this field of enterprise has been largely cultivated, with various success, by its pioneers. But it is now that still other sources of attraction have been discovered. The whole series of the great lakes are calculated by the Atlantic Coast; and the climate hold out the most promising inducements to invalids. In a letter from Port Huron, at the foot of Lake Huron, we find the following, with the exception of Missouri, or Newport for the Virginian, we can now name the spot in the United States where the Pilot for a pair of lungs can be most confidently steered to Health. Let us see what Mr. Jackson, of Detroit, says of it:

Lake Superior.—The spring of the navigation has already opened large numbers to Fond du Lac, and as soon as the wonderful properties of the climate of Lake Superior are witnessed, the excursion will become a very common one.

Mr. Owen says of this neighborhood that no portion of the world is more favorable for its climate. In the most delightful spot in the world; and for invalids, especially such as are afflicted in the liver or lungs, the sudden change sometimes produces the most surprising and beneficial effects." Dr. Jackson, in his official report on the geology and typography of Lake Superior, says that none of the American lakes can compare with it "in healthiness of climate during the summer months, and there is no place so well calculated to restore the health of an invalid who has contracted it from the depressing miasma of the fever-breeding soil of the Southwestern States."

With such attractions, now that the marvels of Lake Superior are rendered of such easy access by railroad, we shall look for no inconsiderable exodus from the old States, temporary or permanent, to seek regions so rich in every form of material wealth, and so blessed with a climate so invigorating and propitious.

American Game Fowls.—Far away from the great cities, half hidden in the foliage, was the modest log hut of a man, half trapper, half fisherman, and more than half ranger. Of course his name is Smith. He was married, and he and his wife in this one little chamber led the happiest of existence, for on an occasion she would not object to go twenty miles to hear the Baptist minister preach.

One evening about sundown they were both together in their little cabin—she knitting stockings for the next winter's season, he cleaning the barrel of his fowling piece, all the parts of which were lying disjointed about him—both busy, and neither uttering a syllable.

By degrees a dull but regular sound breaks upon the silence of the wilderness. The steamer is ascending the river, making the best of its way against the stream. But neither Smith nor his wife pays any attention; he goes on cleaning his gun, she knitting her stockings.

The sound increases, further; a thick smoke rises upon every side; a formidable explosion was heard; one would have said it was a discharge of several cannons, at once. The log hut had issued; the vessel was sunk; every thing was destroyed.

Smith and his wife did not look up: he went on cleaning up his gun, she knitting her stocking, for accidents of all sorts are so common.

But this was one which was to interest them more nearly, for instantly had the explosion ended before the roof of the cabin took fire, and something heavy descended through the aperture. This something was a man, who dropped down from the air, without, however, disturbing either—he still cleaning his gun, she still knitting her stocking.

But the traveler, so rudely introduced, seemed rather astounded at his descent. After a few minutes, however, he recovered his coolness and began to look about him, when his attention at last upon the hole through which he had just arrived. "Ah, my man," said he, at length, addressing Smith, "what's the damage?"

On this Smith, who had not given up his work, put aside his rifle, and, looking up to estimate his loss at a single glance, came to this reflection, "Ten dollars."

"You be hanged!" roared the traveler. "Last week, in the explosion I happened to be in with another steamer, I hit through three flights in a very little time, and they only charged me five dollars. No, no, I know what's the thing in such matters. Here's a couple of dollars; and if that won't do go and see me, and be reasonable."

Life Insurance.—The Mutual Life Insurance Company of Detroit has issued policies to the amount of $1,000,000 during the past year.

Chased by a Bear.

The following extract from "The Hunters' Feast," forms the conclusion of a narrative by the "hunter-naturalist," about a "Deer Hunt in a Dug-out." He and "Dick" were after venison in their canoe by torch-light:

"We had scarcely passed this point, when my attention was attracted by a pair of fiery orbs that glistened out of some low bushes upon the left bank of the river. I saw that they were the eyes of some animal, but what kind of an animal I could not guess. I knew they were not the eyes of a deer. Their peculiar scintillation, their lesser size, the wide space between them—all convinced me they were not deer's eyes. Moreover, they moved at times, as if the head of the animal was carried about in irregular circles. This is never the case with the eyes of the deer, which either pass hurriedly from point to point or remain with a fixed and steadfast gaze.

I knew, therefore, it was no deer; but no matter what; it was some wild creature, and all such are alike the game of the prairie-hunter.

I took aim, and pulled trigger. While doing so I heard the voice of my companion, warning me, as I thought, not to fire. I wondered at this admonition, but it was then too late to heed it, for it had been uttered almost simultaneously with the report of my rifle.

I first looked to the bank, to witness the effect of my shot. To my great surprise, the eyes were still there, gleaming from the bushes as brightly as ever.

Had I missed my aim? It is true, the voice of my companion had somewhat disconcerted me; but I still believed that my bullet must have sped truly, as it had been delivered with a good aim.

As I turned to Dick for an explanation, a new sound fell upon my ear that explained all at the same time, causing me no slight feeling of alarm. It was a sound not unlike that sometimes uttered by terrified swine, but louder and more threatening. I knew it well—I knew it was the snort of the grizzly bear!

Of all American animals, the grizzly bear is the most to be dreaded. Armed or unarmed, man is no match for him, and even the courageous hunter of these parts shuns the encounter. This was why my companion admonished me not to fire. I thought I had missed it: it was not so. My bullet had hit and stung the fierce brute to madness; and a quick crackling among the bushes was immediately followed by a heavy plunge: the bear was in the water!

"Good heaven, he's after us!" cried Dick, in accents of alarm, at the same time propelling the dug-out with all his might.

It proved true enough that the bear was after us, and the very first plunge had brought his nose almost up to the side of the canoe. However, a few well-directed strokes of the paddles set us in quick motion, and we were soon gliding rapidly down stream, followed by the enraged animal, that every now and then uttered one of his fierce snorts.

What rendered our situation a terrible one was, that we could not now see the bear, nor tell how far he might be from us. All to the rear of the canoe was of a pitchy darkness, in consequence of the screen of birch-bark. No object could be distinguished in that direction, and it was only by hearing him that we could tell he was still some yards off. The snorts, however, were more or less distinct, as heard amid the varying roar of the waterfall; and sometimes they seemed as if the snout from which they proceeded was close up to our stern.

We knew that if he once laid his paw upon the canoe, we should either be sunk or compelled to leap out and swim for it. We knew, moreover, that such an event would be certain death to one of us at least.

I need hardly affirm, that my companion used his paddle with all the energy of despair. I assisted him as much as was in my power with the butt-end of my gun, which was now empty. On account of the hurry and darkness, I had not attempted to reload it.

We had shot down stream for a hundred yards or so, and were about congratulating ourselves on the prospect of an escape from the bear, when a new object of dread presented itself to our terrified imaginations. This object was the sound of falling water; but not as before, coming from some tributary stream. No. It was a fall of the river upon which we were floating, and evidently but a very short distance below us!

We were, in fact, within less than one hundred yards of it. Our exertions, in consequence of being a happy man; would that I could be like you!' Hold fast by your faith, and I will respect, even where I cannot believe. What has occurred shall never happen again.'

A deep and solemn silence followed, and the dinner was spoiled, according to the guests, to whom the King gave the signal to disperse long before their appetites had been satisfied. Ziethen was preparing to withdraw with the rest, but Frederick, taking him by the hand, whispered, 'You, my friend, come with me to my cabinet.'

The Domestic Relations and Private Life of a Lion.

Let us sketch the story of the lion's life, beginning with his marriage, which takes place towards the end of January. He has first to seek his wife; but as the males are far more abundant than the females, who are often cut off in infancy, it is not rare to find a young lady pestered by the addresses of three or four gallants, who quarrel with the acerbity of jealous lovers. If one of them does not succeed in disabling or driving away the others, Madam, impatient and dissatisfied leads them into the presence of an old lion, whose she has appreciated at a distance. The lovers fly at him with the temerity of youth and exasperation. The old fellow receives them with calm assurance, breaks the neck of the first with his terrible jaw, smashing the leg of the second, and tears out the eye of the third. No sooner is the day won and the field clear, than the lion tosses his mane in the air as he roars, and then crouches by the side of his lady, who, as a reward for his courage, licks his wounds caressingly. When two adult lions are the rivals, the encounter is more serious.

An Arab perched in a tree one night, saw a lioness followed by a tawny lion with a full grown mane; she lay down at the foot of a tree, the lion stopped on his path and seemed to listen. The Arab then heard the distant growling of a lion, which was instantly replied to by the lioness under the tree. This made her husband roar furiously. The distant lion was heard approaching, and as he came nearer the lioness, roared louder which seemed to agitate her husband, for he marched toward her as if to force her to be silent, and then sprang back to his old post, roaring defiance at his distant rival. This continued about an hour, when a black lion made his appearance on the plain. The lioness rose to go toward him, but her husband guessing her intention, bounded toward his rival. The two crouched and sprang at each other, rolling on the grass in the embrace of death. Their bones cracked, their flesh was torn, their cries of rage and agony rent the air, and all this time the lioness couched and wagged her tail slowly in sign of satisfaction. When the combat ended, and both warriors were stretched on the plain, she rose and smelt them, satisfied herself that they were dead, and trotted off quite regardless of the uncomplimentary epithet which the indignant Arab shouted after her. This Gerard tells us, is an example of the conjugal fidelity of my lady; whereas, the lion never quits his wife, unless forced, and is quite a pattern of conjugal attentions.

Our lion then is married, let us say. He is the slave of his wife. It is she who always takes precedure; when she stoops he stoops. On arriving at the douar (the collection of tents—what we call a "village,") for their supper, she lies down while he leaps into the inclosure, and brings to her the booty. His watches her while she eats, taking care that no one disturbs her; and not until her appetite is satisfied does he begin his meal. Toward the end of December, they seek an isolated ravine, and there she presents her lord with one, two, and sometimes three puppies, generally one male and one female. If the reader has ever seen or handled a puppy lion, he will understand the idolatry of mother and father. She never quits them for an instant, and he only quits them to bring home supper. When they are three months old their weaning commences. The mother accustoms them gradually to it, by absenting for longer and longer periods, and bringing pieces of mutton carefully skinned. The father, whose habitual demeanor is grave, becomes fatigued with the frivolous sports of children, and for the sake of tranquility removes his lodging to a distance, within reach, however, to render assistance if required. At the age of four or five months, the children follow their mother to the border of the forest, where their father brings them their supper.

At six months old they accompany their father and mother in all nocturnal expeditions. From eight to twelve months they learn to attack sheep, goats, and even bulls; but they are so awkward they usually wound ten for one they kill; it is not till they are two years old that they can kill a horse or bull at one bite. While their education is thus in progress, they are ten times more ruinous to the Arabs, since the family does not content itself with killing the cattle required for its own consumption, but kill that the children may learn how to kill. At three years old the children quit home and set up for themselves, becoming fathers and mothers in their turn. Their places are occupied by another brood. At eight years the old lion reaches maturity, and lives to thirty or forty. When adult he is a magnificient creature, very different in size, aspect, color and disposition from the lion to be seen in the menageries and zoological gardens—animals taken from the mother's breast, bred like rabbits, deprived of the fresh mountain air and ample nourishment. As an indication of the size attained by lions in a state of nature we may cite the fact mentioned by Gerard, that the strongest man in the cavalry regiment to which he belonged, was unable to carry the skin and head of the lion Gerard had killed.

An Amusing Mistake.—A gentleman of doubt was going out in his carriage to make some calls with his wife, when, discovering that he had left his visiting cards, he ordered his footman, recently come into service, to go to the mantel-piece in his sitting-room and bring the cards he should see there. The servant did as he was ordered, returned the articles to be used as he was directed, and off started the gentleman, sending in his footman with cards wherever the "not at home" occurred. As those were very numerous, he turned to the servant with the question: "How many cards have you left?"

"Well, sir," said the footman, very innocently, "there's the king of spades, the six of hearts and the ace of clubs."

"The deuce!" exclaimed his master.

"That's gone," said John.

(From Dr. Deeds's Table Traits.)

Courage and Religion of a German General.

There is a story told in connection with the great Frederick, which is a good table trait in its way. Joachim Von Ziethen was one of the bravest of the generals who stood by Frederick the Great in victory or defeat. He was the son of a poor gentleman, and had little education save what he could pick up in barracks, camps and battle-fields, in all of which he figured in early youth. If his head was not over-ballasted with learning, his heart was well freighted with that love for God of which some portion, as the disclaimed lecturer on Ecclesiastical History in King's College tells us, is in almost every individual without exception, and forms the sheet anchor which shall enable him to ride through the storms which keep him from his desired haven of rest. He became the terror of the foes of Prussia; but among his comrades he was known only as "good Father Ziethen." He was remarkable for his swiftness at once of resolve and execution, and in remembrance, as well as illustration thereof, a sudden surprise is spoken of by an astonished Prussian as "falling on one like Zeithen from an ambush."

Now, old Ziethen, after the triumph achieved in the seven years' war, was always a welcome guest at the table of Frederick the Second. His place was ever by the side of the royal master whose cause he had more than once saved from ruin; and he only sat lower at the table when there happened to be present some foreign royal mediocrity, illustriously obscure.

On one occasion he received a command to dine with the King on Good Friday. Ziethen sent a message to his sovereign, stating that it was impossible for him to wait on his Majesty, inasmuch as that be made a point of never omitting to take sacrament on that day, and of always spending the subsequent portion of the day in private meditation.

A week elapsed before the scrupulous old soldier was again invited to the royal dinner-table. At length he appeared in his old place, and merry were the guests, the King himself setting the example of uproarious hilarity. The fun was running fast and furious, it was at its very loudest, when Frederick, turning to Ziethen, smacked him familiarly on the back, and exclaimed:

"Well, grave old Ziethen, how did the supper of Good Friday agree with your sanctimonious stomach? Have you properly digested the veritable body and blood?"

At this blasphemy and amid the thunders of pealing laughter, the saluting artillery of the delighted guests, Ziethen leaped to his feet, and, after shaking his gray hairs with indignation, and silencing the revelers with a cry as though they had been dogs, he turned to the godless master of the realm, and said, words if not precisely these, certainly and exactly to this effect:

"I abnu no danger; your Majesty knows it. My life has always been ready for sacrifice, when my country and the throne required it. What I was, that I am; and my head I would place on the block this moment, if the striking of it off could purchase happiness for my king. But there is One who is greater than I, or any one here; and He is a greater Sovereign than you, who mock Him here from the throne in Berlin. He it is whose precious blood was shed for the salvation of all mankind. On Him, that Holy One, my faith reposes. He is my consoler in life, my hope in the presence of death; and I will not suffer his name to be derided and attacked when I am by, and have voice to protest against it. Sir, if your soldiers had not been firm in this faith, they would not have gained victories for you. If you mock the faith and jeer at those who cling to it, you only lend a hand to bring yourself and the State to ruin."

After a pause he added, looking the while at the mute King:

"What I have spoken is God's truth; receive it graciously."

Frederick was the patron of Voltaire, who had dared to say at his own table that what it had taken God and the twelve Apostles to build up, one man (Voltaire) would destroy. But Frederick was now for the moment more deeply moved by what had been uttered by the unphilosophical Ziethen, than anything that had ever fallen from the brilliant but irreligious Voltaire. He rose, flung his left arm over Ziethen's shoulder, offered his right hand to the brave old Christian general, and exclaimed: "Ziethen, you are a happy man; would that I could be like you!" Hold fast by your faith, and I will respect, even where I cannot believe. What has occurred shall never happen again."

A deep and solemn silence followed, and the dinner was spoiled, according to the guests, to whom the King gave the signal to disperse long before their appetites had been satisfied. Ziethen was preparing to withdraw with the rest, but Frederick, taking him by the hand, whispered, 'You, my friend, come with me to my cabinet.'

Startling and Interesting Facts

CONCERNING

CHOLERA, DIARRHEA, DYSENTERY, COLIC, Summer Complaints, etc.

A fact that should startle is this! One feels a slight uneasiness in the bowels, a slight diarrhea comes on, which is little thought of: in a short time, in a few hours, perhaps, seldom days, it is attended with sickness of the stomach, a most sinking weakness, rapid discharges, coldness, cramps, agonies, blackness, collapse, DEATH—and yet all this fatal result from a disregard of the warning, premonitory Diarrhœa, and neglect of a wise provision of a safe and sure remedy that kind Providence has made easy to all.

That remedy is made public from the strongest desire to rescue the exposed, under the best substantial conviction that it is certain in its good effects, and with it on hand, no one heeding the warning and using the remedy, need be a victim to the Cholera.

DR. RILLINGS'

CARMINATIVE and ASTRINGENT SYRUP

IS THIS SURE REMEDY.

By the advice and urgent request of hundreds, whose lives have been saved—of many even when apparently in the very last struggles of death—he has been induced to make still more efforts to give a wider publicity to a remedy so greatly successful.

The perfection which he and others ascribe to this remedy may appear beyond the power of medicine to possess, yet the truthfulness of the claim is most thoroughly established, and will be fully confirmed by calling on the individuals who have witnessed its effects, and used it with the complete success, some of whose names we are authorized to give.

For Cholera, Colic, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Bloody Flux, Summer Complaint and Weakness of the Bowels, this medicine is offered as a certain remedy. This is the medicine that arrested that horrible disease so prevalent among the Mexican soldiers. The officers first commenced its use, after which they gave it their soldiers, and cured in every case without an exception. I would refer to the officers and others who served in the war with Mexico. Sold by

O. O. WOODMAN,
corner of Common and Magazine streets, New Orleans.
J. WRIGHT & CO.,
21 and 151 Chartres street.
JOS. TUCKER, Mobile.
W. H. FOX, Natchez, Miss.

my24 1m

WORMS, THEIR SYMPTOMS AND CURE.

AMONG the most common symptoms of worms, are irregularity of the bowels, giddiness, pallor, a dry spasmodic cough, an intermittent appetite, a disagreeable breath, hardness and protuberance of the abdomen, wasting of the flesh, irritability, tingling of the ears, occasional nausea, leaden dullness of the eyes, indisposition to attention, and restless slumbers; wherever these symptoms appear administer FINER'S CANADIAN VERMIFUGE, and in forty-eight hours relief will be obtained; in a week a radical cure will be effected, and health, strength and appetite will be completely restored.

For sale in New Orleans, wholesale and retail, by

J. WRIGHT & CO.,
Nos. 21 and 151 Chartres street, sole proprietors.

☞ Sold by all the Druggists. je5 1t

SPLENDID ARCHITECTURAL WORK.

CHAPEL AND CHURCH ARCHITECTURE, with designs for PARSONAGES. By GEORGE BOWLES, Roxbury, Mass.

This work is designed to meet a want which has been long felt. Among all denominations of Christians, plans for chapels and churches of moderate cost have been needed, from which committees may select a style appropriate to their wants, and not too expensive for their means. This want the author has endeavored to meet, by presenting a series of designs, ranging in estimated cost from $1,500 to $20,000. He has also added designs for country and city parsonages, such as will commend themselves to the good taste of all. The working plans for these drawings are not furnished, for the reason that the work would be too costly, but all such plans and specifications can be had on application to the author. The principal design of the work, however, is to enable committees to decide on some style previous to making application to an architect, so that they may convey their ideas and wishes clearly. With this end in view, the work is commended to the public.

At a meeting of the Boston Conference of Methodist Ministers, the following resolution in regard to the above elegant and timely work, was passed unanimously:

BOSTON, Feb. 25, 1856.—The Committee appointed to examine Plans of Church Architecture, by Brother George Bowles, have attended to their duty as far as they have been able, and would report the following:

Resolved, That the Plans and Sketches of Church Architecture, designed and drawn by Brother Rev. George Bowles, evince, in a high degree, correctness of taste and skillful execution, combining in themselves, to an extent seldom equalled, beauty, economy and convenience; and we feel confident that the publication of the work would be of essential service to the churches in this country.

This superb work is now ready in one elegant folio volume. It contains over forty elegantly executed Lithographic Designs, with ground plans and interiors executed in the highest style of art, bound in cloth, price $10 per copy, with a liberal discount by the hundred. All orders to be addressed to the publishers,

JOHN P. JEWETT & COMPANY,
Boston.

JEWETT, PROCTOR & WORTHINGTON,
Cleveland, Ohio.

SHELDON, BLAKEMAN & CO.,
New York.

J. C. MORGAN, New Orleans.

And for sale by the trade generally. my17 3t

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS—PILLS THAT ARE PILLS—Professor Hayes, State Chemist, of Massachusetts, says they are the best of all Pills, and annexed are the names who certify that Dr. Hayes knows, viz:

LEMUEL SHAW, Chief Justice Supreme Court of Mass.
HENRY WASHBURN, Governor of Mass.
W. C. PLUNKETT, Lieut. Gov. of Mass.
EDWARD EVERETT, late Sec. of State and Senator of U. S.
ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Ex-Speaker House Rep. U. S.
ABBOTT LAWRENCE, Minister Plenipot. to Great Britain.
JOHN B. FITZPATRICK, Catholic Bishop of London.

MEN THAT ARE MEN!!!

Among the diseases this Pill has cured with astonishing rapidity, we may mention

Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache, arising from a foul stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, and pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Ulcerous and Cutaneous Diseases, which require an evacuant Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach; such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout and other kindred complaints, arising from a low state of the body, or obstructions of its functions. They are the best Purgative Medicine ever discovered, and you will but need to see them once to know it.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass., and sold by every respectable druggist in the United States.

J. WRIGHT & CO., Wholesale Agents.

NEW VOLUMES OF THE FOUR GREAT BRITISH REVIEWS, VIZ:

EDINBURGH, NORTH BRITISH, WESTMINSTER, AND London Quarterlies and Blackwood's Edinburg Magazine (Monthly,) commence with the North British for November, 1855, and the other Reviews and Blackwood for January, 1856.

TERMS—

For any one Review or Blackwood.....per annum $3 00
Blackwood and one Review or any two..... 5 00
For Blackwood and the four Reviews..... 10 00
For four copies to one address..... 30 00

☞ Postage (which should be paid quarterly in advance) on the four Reviews and Blackwood to any post office in the United States only 80 cents a year, viz: 14 cents a year on each Review, and 24 cents on Blackwood.

LEONARD, SCOTT & CO.,
Address, post-paid, 54 Gold street, corner of Fulton New York.

THE XXth VOLUME OF THE SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE (improved and enlarged) will commence June 1st, 1856. Now is the time to subscribe. Terms, $2 per annum, paid in advance. If payment is delayed six months, $2 50—if one year, $3. When enlarged to the contemplated size it will be the largest religious weekly published in the South.

All Ministers of the M. E. Church, South, are empowered to act as Agents. They are allowed 12½ per cent. on all collections—and the paper is put to them at $1 25 per annum. The collection and forwardlog of $10, entitles an Agent to the papee one year. Address E. H. MYERS, Editor,
Charleston, S. C.

my26 1y

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

FACULTY—Rev. H. C. THWEATT, D. D. President and Professor of Mental and Moral Sciences, Belles-Lettres and Ancient Languages.

A. R. REMBERT, M. D., Professor of the Physical Sciences and Mathematics.

Mr. CHRISTOPHER PLAOGE, Professor of Music.

Miss L. BATES, A. M. Instructress in English Literature, Modern Languages, Music, Drawing, Painting, Embroidery, etc.

Mrs. PLAOGE, Instructress in Music and the French Language.

Miss E. K. CHARLES, M. E. L., Instructress in Primary Department.

Miss MARY E. CROWDER, M. E. L. Instructress in Academic Department.

——, Assistant Teacher in the Elementary Branches.

RATES OF TUITION PER SESSION OF FIVE MONTHS.

Primary Department..... $12 50
Academic Department..... 15 00

COLLEGIATE DEPARTMENT.

Freshmen and Sophomore classes..... 20 00
Junior and Senior classes..... 25 00

ORNAMENTAL DEPARTMENT.

Music on this pianoforte, harp or guitar..... 25 00
Use of Instruments..... 5 00
Vocal music..... 1 00
Drawing, with use of copies..... 12 00
Water and chromatic painting, each..... 15 00
Oil painting..... 20 00
Embroidery..... 10 00
Incidental expenses..... 2 00
Fee for Graduation and Diplomas..... 5 00

No extra charge made for Ancient Languages.

Payment to be made at the close of each term. Board, including lodging, washing, lights and fuel can be procured in the village and immediate neighborhood at ten dollars per month. Students will be received at any time during the session, and will be charged only from the time of their entrance to the end of the term. We would, however, respectfully urge all parents and guardians who design placing their daughters or wards in the Institution, to do so at their earliest convenience, as it will tend much to the individual interest of the pupils and the general prosperity of the school, facilitating, as it will, a proper arrangement of the various classes to their respective branches of study.

School books, stationery, etc., may be had at any of the various stores in the village at its usual rates.

The scholastic year, embracing ten months, will be divided into two equal terms of five months, one immediately succeeding the other.

The first session commencing on the first Wednesday in October, and closing the last week in February; the second commencing on the first Wednesday in March, and closing the last week in July; at which time the annual examination will be held, and the usual rewards and honors conferred. The vacation will embrace the months of August and September.

All applications for admission of pupils, etc., to be made to the President of the College. my1 1y

A SOUTHERN REMEDY.

Made by O. O. Woodman, New Orleans, La.

HAS received the appointment from the proprietor for the sole agency of

Woodman's Cherry Expectorant,

the medicine that has created such an excitement at the North among the Physicians, and has been pronounced by all who have used it as being far superior to any Cherry Pectoral.

WOODMAN'S CHERRY EXPECTORANT

Contains the active medical qualities of the pure decoction of Wild Cherry Bark, and many other valuable ingredients that render it far better than any other cough medicine in this country.

RECOMMENDATION.

NEW ORLEANS, April 9, 1855.

Dear Sir—The public generally are fully aware of the thousands of remedies for diseased lungs, under the title of Sarsaparillas, Pills, Plasters, Liniments, etc., that are daily brought to their notice through the newspapers by way of advertisements. My object in writing this note for publication is to induce the public, or at least those who are afflicted, to use one that contains articles of real use in pulmonary diseases. I am conscious that in so doing, I am acting most unprofessionally and derogatorily to the interests of Medical Science and the regular practitioners of Medicine. I refer to Woodman's Cherry Expectorant, which is a scientific remedy that I have used with more success than any of the usual prescriptions used by physicians.

J. M. MAITLAND, M. D.

This preparation has attained a wide celebrity from the universal success which has attended its use. For though coughs, colds, and in fact, any pulmonary complaints, this medicine, from its peculiar properties as a discolvent, and its soothing power to all irritations of the throat, will probably be preferred to any other offered to the public. As an expectorant, or dyspeptic remedy, it will also be found excellent, its natural and genial warmth keeping the digestive powers in proper tone.

Remember that this is the only cough medicine that has stood the test of the medical fraternity. It is sanctioned by, approved of, and recommended by leading physicians of New York city. Every bottle is warranted to give satisfaction or the money refunded. We guarantee it to be better than any Cherry Pectoral, Cod Liver Oil, as anything else now extant.

For BRONCHIAL AFFECTIONS it will be found superior to all other remedies.

Sold by O. O. WOODMAN.

And by all the Druggists at the South. New Orleans. a5 5t

DRUGS, CHEMICALS, PAINTS, OILS, WINDOW-GLASS.

O. O. WOODMAN, WHOLESALE DRUGGIST,

Successor to Jarvis & Woodman.

CORNER OF COMMON AND MAGAZINE STREETS, NEW ORLEANS.

IMPORTER AND DEALER IN

CHOICE DRUGS, SELECTED MEDICINES, PURE CHEMICALS, ESSENTIAL OILS,

Medicinal Extracts, Fine Perfumery and Fancy Soaps,

PATENT MEDICINES, SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS, DRUGGISTS' GLASSWARE,

BRUSHES,

FRENCH AND AMERICAN WINDOW-GLASS, PAINTS, OILS, DYE STUFFS, ETC.

☞ Druggists, Physicians, Country Merchants and others who purchase medicines, may rely upon being suited. Orders promptly attended to.

300 DOZEN CHERRY EXPECTORANT—FOR THE CERTAIN CURE OF COUGHS, COLDS INFLUENZA, Croup, Bronchial Affections, Consumption, and all diseases of the lungs, in the incipient stage. Also for the relief of Consumptives, in the advanced stages of the disease.

This is an Anodyne Expectorant, prepared on the plan of combining the most active and efficient remedies usually prescribed by the Profession, in all their purity, affording a remedy which is found to give energy and certainty of effect, which cannot be had by using the same remedies as usually prescribed by the physician or apothecary.

It is not designed that this shall be a secret remedy, and the formula, with the proportion of each ingredient, will be readily submitted to physicians.

The cost of the preparation is such that it will not warrant the usual amount of Advertising and puffing resorted to by popular medicine dealers. It must make its way in public favor by its intrinsic merits alone.

The following is one of the many testimonials volunteered by physicians of the first standing:

FROM DR. W. M. DEASON.

GALLATIN, MISS., May 1, 1852.

O. O. WOODMAN—Dear Sir: I have given your Cherry Expectorant a fair trial, and am well pleased with its effects—better than any other article I ever met with. I would be pleased for you to send me a half a dozen bottles by the bearer.

Respectfully, W. M. DEASON.

Prepared and sold by O. O. WOODMAN, corner of Common and Magazine streets, New Orleans, La.; Also, by O. O. WOODMAN & CO., Wholesale Agents, Vicksburg, Miss.

DIRECT IMPORTATION FROM EUROPE—RECEIVING, BY LATE ARRIVALS, DIRECT FROM England, France and Germany, a large assortment of DRUGS, CHEMICALS, GLASSWARE, PERFUMERY, BRUSHES, etc. Among which are—

1,250 boxes French Window-Glass, assorted sizes.
200 lbs Coxeed's Hydriodate Potash.
1,000 ounces Pelletier Fr. Quinine.
800 ounces Howard & Kent, Eng. Quinine.
300 ounces Zimmer's German Quinine.
150 lbs Maudet's English Blue Mass.
100 lbs Maudet's English Calomel.
30 gross Fredch Tooth Brushes.
6 gross fine Hair Brushes.
20 gross Camel Hair Pencils.
1,000 assorted Pomatums, French.
2 gross hf lbs assorted Pomatums, lo lbs cans.
12 dozen White Plaster Skins.
12 dozen White Split Skins.
5 gross Toilet Soaps, French.
French Surgical Instruments.
6 dozen French Regulating Syringes.
10 lbs Kreosote.
10 lbs Iodine.
3 cases Carb. Magnesia.
200 bunches Violin Strings.

FROM THE BEST AMERICAN MANUFACTURERS—

1000 ounces of Quinine, Power & Weightman.
50 ounces Sulphate of Morphine.
10 ounces Acetate Morphine.
50 ounces Strychnine.
100 lbs Am. H. K. Calomel, 1 bot.
200 lbs Am. H. R. Calomel, in 25 lb boxes.
30 kegs ref. Salt Petre.
25 dozen Chloride Soda.
75 lbs Chloroform.
100 lbs Citric Acid.
10 demijohns Aqua Ammonia.
10 demijohns Sweet Spirits Nitre.
10 lbs pure Nitrate Silver, sticks.
5 lbs pure Nitrate Silver, crystals.
10 lbs Alum.
6 bbls Ground Alum.

I WARRANT ALL POWDERED DRUGS SOLD BY ME AS STRICTLY PURE—HAVING been selected personally in their crude state, and powdered for my sales. Among which are—

200 lbs Powdered Ipecac.
250 lbs Powdered Gum Rhubarb.
150 lbs Powdered Cantharides.
150 lbs Powdered Cinchona, red.
250 lbs Powdered Cinchona Yellow.
300 lbs best Powdered Bird Cayenne.
150 lbs Powdered Gum Arabic.
1000 lbs Powdered Cream Tartar.
200 lbs Powdered Tartaric Acid.
35 lbs Powdered Extract Colocynth.

JUST RECEIVED, BY LATE ARRIVALS FROM NEW YORK—

2 bales India Senna.
1 cask Aloes, Socna.
5 bales fresh Hops.
10 baskets fresh Tapioca, 50 lbs. each.
10 cases Calcined Magnesia.
20 cases Cooper's Sparkling Gelatine.
5 bbls Camphor.
1 can, 40 lbs, Oil Bergamot, pure.
1 can, 40 lbs, Oil Lemon, pure.
20 bbls No. 1 Irish Moss.
20 bbls No. 1 American Glue.
3 bbls Painters' White Glue.
1 cask Madder.
3 cases White Wax.
3 cases Extract Liquorice.
3 cases Gum Arabic, select.
1 cask Gum Arabic, common.
1 case Flake Manna.
3 gross Coxe's Sparkling Gelatine.
1 case, 175 lbs, best Turkey Opium.
27 gross Balsam Capsules.
8 gross Castor Oil Capsules.
10 kegs Pearl Barley.
6 kegs fresh Tamarinds.
100 dozen Room's Scotch Snuff.
100 dozen Preston & Merrill's Yeast Powder.

☞ Arrangements have been made to receive, direct from Saratoga, a regular supply of CONGRESS WATER.

PAINTS, OILS, AND WINDOW-GLASS—

10,000 lbs Pure White Lead.
10,000 lbs No. 1 White Zinc Paint, Am.
200 lbs French Rose White Zinc Paint.
20 casks French Yellow Ochre.
6 bbls Copal Varnish.
6 bbls White Damar Varnish.
5 bbls Japan Varnish.
2 bbls Coach Varnish.
600 gallons Spirits Turpentine.
500 gallons English Linseed Oil.
50 casks English Venetian Red, to arrive.
60 bbls Lamp Black.
1000 boxes American Window Glass, assorted sizes from 6 by 10 to 24 by 30.
100 kegs Yellow Ochre, in oil.
100 kegs Venetian Red, in oil.

Together with all the various colors, dry and in oil.

200 DOZEN DR. BILLINGS' CARMINATIVE AND ASTRINGENT SYRUP—AN INFALLIble remedy for Cholera Infantum or Summer Complaint of Children, Cholera Morbus, Diarrhœa or any irregularities of the bowels. The long and successful experience in the use of this remedy, by the inventor, in the treatment of all the diseases for which it is recommended, together with the highly respectable testimony which accompanies the bottles, is sufficient evidence of its efficiency in the cure of the above affections of children, Diarrhœa, Cholera Morbus and Dysentery, in growu persons, entitle it to the confidence of the community.

200 DOZEN WOODMAN'S EXTRACT JAMAICA GINGER—IT IS ELABORATELY PREPARED from carefully selected articles of the best quality; it possesses, in a concentrated form, all the valuable properties of the Jamaica Ginger, and is warranted to be free from all irritating or other proper

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY A COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS FOR THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH---H. N. McTYEIRE, EDITOR.

VOLUME VI—NUMBER 13. WHOLE NUMBER 273.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 14, 1856.

$2 00 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE. OFFICE—36 CAMP ST.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION OF NEGROES.

NO. VIII.

Perhaps it may be thought by some that if the recommendations of the former number in reference to making missionary collections be carried out, the planters will direct all their contributions to the colored missions, and we shall make but a meagre showing in our collections for foreign missions. Be it so, we shall then at least know what we can depend on, and make our arrangements accordingly, without the hazard of involving the church in debt, which, I hold, we are specially bound to avoid. If at the close of the year we find, in looking to the treasurer's cash books, that we have not money enough to enlarge our missionary field as we ought to do annually, and on a liberal scale, why we must be content to confine ourselves to present limits, even though other churches leave us far in the rear. If we find that the treasury will not justify us in sustaining all our present missions, why we must begin to cast about to see which of them we can best spare. It may be painful to the Board and to the Bishops, we may be deeply mortified, but there will be no alternative. The five hundred thousand members of the M. E. Church, South will have willed it so because they were too poor, too ignorant, or too stingy to enable us to do otherwise.

But of all this I entertain no very strong fears. Many of the planters are not only rich but men of enlarged views, and will not be content with simply giving at home. They too wish to have some hand in the great work of evangelizing the heathen world; but if not, and they demur to doing anything except for the benefit of their own families; then we make what we deem a fair proposition. We say to them, "Now do you planters provide for your own households, as you are bound before God and man to do; have your negroes instructed in the things of God; employ a faithful preacher for this purpose and pay him yourselves; this you ought to do, and not, on any consideration, to devolve his support on other people." Oh you, whose annual income counts by thousands, for which you are indebted to the toil and sweat of your slaves; is it a great boon if you, from their own earnings appropriate a few hundred dollars to have the word of God carried to their cabins, that they may live to love and serve that Almighty Being who is your Master as well as their's? Do you demur at the cost? Remember man, your reckoning at the bar of God! A settlement which you must soon make, and which you have no power to avoid or postpone. Come, go to all your quarters and call up all those negroes which you are already in prospect appropriating to your sons and daughters; call them all up before you; look on the countenance of each; mark them well, and remember that you will meet them again, and they will be strong witnesses either for or against you. And then get you away to the woods or to your closet, and on your knees make your confession to God. Beg him to forgive your delinquencies, and then and there vow to perform your duties to these too much neglected members of your household.

But to our proposition again—

We propose then to all such planters, that they give their means to evangelize the negroes of their plantations; and if they will honestly do that part of the work, we'll excuse them from any further contributions to missions; we will throw ourselves upon the masses who hold but little of this sort of property. What think you of our proposition?

We notice some other possible difficulties which may arise in connexion with this work. Every colored mission must of course be in some Presiding Elder's District, and the Presiding Elders of the conference and the Bishop must ask for information in reference to its state and the standing of the missionary among the people of his charge and the patrons. But, unfortunately, the Elder spends so little time in the mission that he can give very imperfect information on either of these points. The consequence may be that a preacher, especially if he be a sort of favorite with the Presiding Elder, may remain on the work long after he has ceased to be useful or generally acceptable to the negroes or their owners; and in such cases the mission declines, and the cause of missions to the slaves in that section of country suffers great loss. Yet for these flying visits of the Elder, which really have been of little or no service to the work, he has to be paid some stipend annally from the missionary treasury. And this difficulty may be particularly felt if the Presiding Elder be not a man of good judgment, zeal and industry.

There is yet another point which involves harmful results. Under the influence of an opinion which it is to be feared prevails but too extensively, that intelligence and improvement are not required in him who preaches to negroes, the missionary becomes indolent and careless to study, the consequence is that he declines in ministerial gifts; for it will always be found that when a preacher ceases to study and improve himself in view of his glorious calling, his preaching becomes stale and uninteresting; and in the same ratio it ceases to interest his own mind and heart. There is no freshness, no vitality in his discourses, and he pursues his glorious calling as a grievous boudsman, to which he is lashed like a slave to his task. No marvel if he backslides after a while.

Now it is very important that this wrong notion be banished from the earth. The work on a colored mission requires a man of good sense and general information, and he ought to be just as studious and strive to improve himself just as much as though he were called to preach to the most elevated classes of society; and indeed he will be often called to do so. The planters and their families are supposed to be generally people of intelligence to whom he ought to preach and with whom he ought to be able to associate as a well-bred and christian gentleman, and when the planters find that their missionary is a man of that class they will pretty generally be among his hearers, and might be brought to God through his instrumentality. Such cases have frequently occurred in the history of our missions; but at any rate the fact that the missionary is a man of such character would be a very strong and influential recommendation of our work to the public favor and confidence. Besides, it is a mistake that any sort of a preacher will do for the negroes alone, provided he can sing well and make a big fuss. Both of these may be some recommendation, but negroes are quick to detect any obvious attempt at too much coming down in style or manner to them because they are negroes; nor are they slow to resent it. It is well that he who preaches to them should be plain and simple in his style; that he should labor to make the truths which he inculcates plain and easy of comprehension; but all this is perfectly compatible with a chaste and pure style and a sermon full of good sense.

It may be also true that the preaching to this class of our people should be in a good measure colloquial in its form. But this affords additional strength to our position, as this sort of preaching requires that the preacher be a man of good sense and general information, and one who has studied human nature well, and who has especially analysed the character of his hearers in order that he may be able to wield the pulpit to good effect.

Let us ask, are we sure that this sort of colloquial preaching is not best for other folks too? Do not the scriptural exemplars strongly recommend this style of teaching, and do not christian ministers sometimes err fatally when they seem to regard it as if it were merely designed to afford them an opportunity of displaying to the eyes and ears of the multitude their skill in logic or rhetoric or metaphysics, or their great proficiency in natural science or in classical literature? Let the preacher be profound in all these, but they are of but little service to him if they have not enabled him to present the great truths which he is to teach free from ostentation and display of self. And let the preachers bear in mind that the really learned and sensible portion of their hearers don't go to church to hear them display their knowledge of the things above specified, but to learn the truths of the gospel of the grace of God, and that even the learned and wise are much more likely to be converted to God by the plain, simple and unadorned preaching of the cross of Christ, than by the ministers of an opposite character.

We shall now close this number.—Possibly at some future day we may present some additional thoughts in connection with this subject.

J. O. ANDREW.

PRODIGAL SON.—A young wife remonstrated with her husband, a dissipated spendthrift, on his conduct. "My love," said he, I am only like the Prodigal Son, I shall reform by-and-by." "And I will be like the Prodigal Son, too," she replied, "for I will arise and go to my father!" And accordingly off she went.

Sincerity is an opening of the heart. We find it in very few people; and that which we generally see is nothing but a subtle dissimulation to attract the confidence of others.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Good Men as well as Good Measures.

Mr. Editor:—Many of your readers know that I am no politician, and those who do not will now know it, if they take the trouble to read this brief article. I have never voted for a President. I am told this is a criminal neglect of one of the first duties of a good citizen, and am asked what would be the result if all others pursued the same course. I reply that such is not a supposable case. The people are too ready to exercise the right of suffrage, and it is not likely that my humble example will influence the action of one citizen in this respect. But, Mr. Editor, I am not the less patriotic, in love of our common country I yield the palm to no one, but I think in the relation I sustain to society I can render my country better service by promoting to the extent of my humble influence, sound morals and good neighborhood among the people. I think I can do this much more effectively by abstaining from partisan affiliation in politics.

There ought to be a conservative element somewhere among those powers that are supposed to be the authors and controllers of public opinion. This conservative element, so far as I can see, does not exist in the political press or in the partisans who aspire to fill public stations. Perhaps the pulpit is the next most powerful agent in modern society. It seems becoming the grave and benevolent character of the pulpit that it should be its peculiar office to quiet the agitations and pour oil upon the troubled waters of public opinion.

Politics have moral aspects and bearings, and it is that I may be free to write and speak about the moral aspects of public matters that I abstain from any connection with partisan politics. The minister of the gospel is not free to write and speak of the moral aspects of public matters; if he is known to be a partisan, a large number of his hearers will be ever suspecting all he says as being of partisan tendency. As I shall be free from any such suspicion, I propose to write a plain spoken paragraph or two upon what I take to be purely a moral point in politics.

I have read a thousand times and one, "measures, and not men"—this is given forth as the motto and guiding principle of all parties. It is most likely that this motto originated in something good—devotion to principles rather than men. But however true this may be, this motto has long been employed to shield unworthy and incapable men from the condemnation of a patriotic and intelligent public. I wish to say that I think it is the religious duty of christian and law-abiding citizens to look to the moral character of those who aspire to be public men, as well as to the character of public measures. I would like to know what measures—no matter how good—are worth in the hands of incapable men who have no capacity to execute them with efficiency? I would like to know what measures are worth in the hands of an aspirant for office, whose moral character proclaims him corrupt and destitute of principle? Why it is written upon such a man as legible as a placard upon a city house wall "to let." Such a man, no matter what may be his professions, seeks his own and not the public good. Like any other unctionable commodity, he is "for sale" to the "highest bidder." Measures in such hands are mere ropes of sand, to be broken whenever it shall seem the interest of the corrupt demagogue to do so.

We cannot think that public stations necessarily corrupt those who fill them. Why then do we hear so much complaint of corrupt and ignorant men of all parties being in office? Why do we hear from our national and all our State capitals of so much bargain and corruption—of so much drunkenness, lewdness, gambling, profanity and Sabbath breaking? Simply because the people have directed their whole attention to measures, and not to the character of those to whom the measures have been committed for enactment and execution. What can be done to remedy the gigantic evil? This can be done. Let the people see to the men as well as to the measures. Do not suffer a few grog-shop and whisky-loving politicians to nominate and dictate to you who shall be your candidates and who shall represent your principles. Do not, when such nominations are made, vote for them, because they are professedly good Democrats, Americans or Whigs. We think you cannot thus vote regardless of the moral character of candidates, without violence to elevated patriotism and sound morals. Shall good men through the force of mere partisan drill vote for men for public trust whom they would not trust in any private relation, or even touch with a pair of tongs? Surely they should not. Let the men who have the deepest stake in the material, educational and moral interest of society do their duty in this respect. Let them see to it that the primary political meetings are called to meet in respectable places, that they attend them, and see to it that none but honest and capable men are nominated for public trust. Thus the evil may be cured. But so long as the moral and solid men, the yeomanry of the country, stand aloof and suffer talking demagogues about the drinking shops and country villages to manage all their weighty interests, matters will never be mended.

Let the virtue and intelligence of the country be urged to look to men as well as to measures. Select good and capable men, who are identified with all the best interests of the country, and depend upon it, they will not go very far astray. Encourage such men to aspire for public trust, and exert yourselves to protect their characters from the abuse of corrupt and reckless men, who will seek by vulgar slang and epithet to pelt them from the field. Shield good men from such, for there are many vile enough to pelt an angel, and befoul, if they could, his robes of celestial purity. Thus shall good men but subserve the best interest, and long sustain the institutions of our common and beloved country.

J. B. WALKER.

New Orleans, June, 1856.

Religion in the United States.

We hear much of the spiritual degeneracy of our day, and of the rapid diminution of candidates for the gospel ministry, and yet if statistics carefully gathered may be depended upon, evangelical ministers were never more numerous in proportion to the population than at the present moment; and notwithstanding the vast emigration of Romanists and open infidels, the ratio of church members the to population is larger than thirty years ago. We would not apologise for the worldliness and spiritual apathy of our churches, or the want of earnestness and devotion in the ministry, but we honestly believe that American Christianity was never, as a whole, purer in doctrine, or more vigorous in its aggressive attacks upon a wicked world than now.

The Foreign Missionary, the organ of the Old School Missionary Board, gives the following statistics of ministers, church members and population at three different periods:

YEARS.	POPULATION.	MINISTERS.
In 1832	13,713,342	9,537
In 1843	18,768,822	17,073
In 1854	25,953,000	25,427

Or thus:

In 1831, 1 Minister to every 1,437 souls.
In 1843, 1 " " 1,003 "
In 1854, 1 " " 1,020 "

RELATIVE NUMBER OF COMMUNICANTS.

In 1832—Population		13,713,342
Deduct under ten years of age		3,657,245
		10,055,999
Of whom communicants in Evangelical churches		1,342,461
In 1843—Population		18,768,822
Deduct under ten years of age		5,784,554
		12,984,268
Of whom communicants in Evangelical churches		2,544,763
In 1854—Population		25,953,000
Deduct under ten years of age		7,371,000
		18,582,000
Of whom communicants in Evangelical churches		3,337,822

Or thus:

In 1832, 1 communicant to every 7½ souls.
In 1843, 1 " " 5 "
In 1854, 1 " " 5½ "

The Indian Churches.

INDIAN BUREAU.—Interesting Intelligence from Kansas Territory.—The Commissioner of Indian Affairs has received recent advices from the Shawnee and Wyandott agency of a highly important character. It appears that a whiskey grocery was established about the 1st of April among the Wyandott Indians, who patronized it quite freely. The consequence has been a series of disorderly and lawless acts.

The Methodist Church North, and the Methodist Church South were burned to the ground. The causes are as follows: The door of the Northern church was left unlocked after preaching in the morning, for the purpose of holding Sabbath school in the afternoon. In the meantime, the church was entered by several Indians, who took the Bible, containing some valuable records, from the desk and burnt it up. This led to inquiry and the discovery of the offenders, who were told of the magnitude of their crime. Becoming displeased, a few nights afterwards they set fire to the church and burned it down; which act caused much dissatisfaction among certain other members of this tribe, who in return burned the Southern church. These churches were brick buildings, and the loss will fall heavily upon the societies. The Indians also burned several private houses of the different factions, besides committing other outrageous acts.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Hope of Reward and fear of Pain.

Mr. Editor:—A well-written article appeared in your paper of the 19th ult., under the learned title "Theologia Germanica." The writer evidently has two purposes prominently in view as he writes—first to create an interest among your readers in "Theologia Germanica"—second, to call Dr. Summer's attention to it as a work suited to the wants of the church. The ultimate object is to secure a wide circulation and general reading of "Theologia Germanica" under the endorsement of our church.

I doubt not Mr. Harris' article has created a desire in many minds to read his author. I thank him for so well-written a review. But there are ominous words in the conclusion of the article. Mr. H. gives us the work in a nutshell, where he says "Theologia Germanica" believes in a religion standing equally above the hope of reward and the fear of pain in time and eternity." Now whatever merit may be claimed for "Theologia Germanica" on the score of morality, beauty of style, or anything else that may please the mind, certainly no Bible reader will claim any merit for the work on the score of sound doctrine. I say no Bible reader, for I fear many who read, nay who think and preach about Christianity, are not Bible readers, or I think, less of religious sentimentalism would be found in the church. It seems that the abounding luxury of this luxurious age, is already making an impress on the public mind, and religious sentimentalism is taken for religion. What else leads to a laudation of "Theologia Germanica?" If the above is a correct synopsis of the work, we do not hesitate to say the theory there taught is false, or the Bible is not true, as must appear to every thinking mind who reads the following with many other plain scriptures.

Mr. H. tells us "Luther failed to see the second—the great corrollary of Theologia Germanica." "If we walk in the light as he is in the light, we shall have fellowship, etc." Let us not commit Luther's blunder, and walking in the light, we first observe the light shines expressly to notify us of danger. When that light was in the world, he said emphatically "fear him who can destroy both soul and body in hell." And long before, God said, "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." God was so unwise then as to appeal to fear in Adam, in his primitive innocence and purity. Again, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." "Fear the Lord," "Fear the Lord and walk, etc." "Learn to fear the Lord." "Now, therefore, fear the Lord." These are only a few of the multitude of scriptures, teaching the Bible reader in almost every chapter to fear God, and appealing in multiplied ways to the principle of fear as a chief element in our nature to be turned to religion's account. "Let us have grace whereby we may serve God with reverence and godly fear." Fear then in Paul's account is a christian grace. Jude says, "Others save with fear." So Paul and Jude together make fear a saving grace.

As to hope, it is equally anti-scriptural to exclude it as an element in christian character. Moses, according to Paul, "had respect to recompense of the reward." To strengthen Abraham, God said, "I am thy exceeding great reward." The Psalmist says, "In keeping his judgments (laws) there is great reward." "To him that sheweth righteousness shall be a great reward." "Behold the Lord God will come—his reward is with him." What meaning is to be attached to such passages of Scripture as these if the theory we oppose be true? "Heirs of God, joint heirs of our Lord Jesus Christ."—"The earnest of our inheritance." "The inheritance of Saints." "The reward of the inheritance." "An inheritance incorruptible, etc." Here as on fear the light is so bright that it is difficult to select from the many plain passages, all going to prove the same doctrine of hope as a main pillar in the temple. The christian system is built on the two great principles of our nature repudiated by "Theologia Germanica." We are saved by fear."—Paul. "We are saved by hope"—Jude. Finally, our Lord places the whole matter just on this ground in the commission under which every true minister preaches the gospel, "He that believeth shall be saved, he that believeth not shall be damned."

It is an entire misapprehension of man's nature and of the Bible to exclude either fear or hope from religion. And whatever the system may be, or purpose to do, which excludes hope or fear as a chief element, it is not the Christian religion, nor can it save a soul from death.

Without fear how shall the "dead in trespasses and sins" be aroused? Without hope how shall the despondING, penitent and faint-hearted christian be made strong? Without them what is the gospel? Not a cunningly devised fable, but a silly, powerless dream of a madman's brain.

With great respect for "Theologia Germanica" and Mr. Harris,

I am, W. P. BARTON.

Yazoo City, May 21, 1856.

IMPORTANT FROM NICARAGUA!!

Retirement of the Costa Ricans.

THE ORIZABA AT NEW YORK.

By the mail on Tuesday we received New York papers as late as due. The steamship Orizaba arrived at that port on the 1st., bringing important intelligence from Nicaragua, the material portion of which we subjoin:

The transit route through Nicaragua is again open, the Costa Ricans having left the country without another battle.

The cholera made its appearance among their troops at Rivas, owing to the dead being left unburied after the battle. President Mora, with his staff, left on the 24th of April, and the army followed immediately. Gen. Walker landed at Virgin Bay on the morning of April 30th, and found that the last detachment of the enemy had left only six hours previously. Gen. Canas, the Commander-in-Chief of the Costa Ricans, after President Mora left, wrote to Gen. Walker a letter, commending to his care a number of sick and wounded Costa Ricans, whom he could not remove, and offered to exchange twenty-five Americans, whom he said he held as prisoners, for them, when they were recovered.

The elections are being held in Nicaragua, and it was considered certain that Rivas would be elected President.

"The Vanderbilt party," that is, those agents and others who remain in the interest of the Old Transit Company, aided the Costa Ricans during their invasion of Nicaragua, notwithstanding the slaughter of innocent Americans at Virgin Bay.

Gen. Walker is in good health and spirits.

There is no sickness in the army, excepting at Granada, where the fever had been very severe, several Americans having died with it.

H. B. M. frigate Eurydice and steamer Hornet were at San Juan del Norte, but made no opposition to the passengers going up the river or on shore. There were no other vessels in port on the 24th. The brig C. H. Sampson left for New Orleans on the 22d.

[From El Nicaraguense, May 24.]

NEWS OF THE WEEK.—The enemy have evacuated the State, and are now in Costa-Rica. The most reliable reports estimate the loss of Gen. Mora at 1200 men, in those who were killed in battle, wounded and since died, and taken off by disease.

Gen. Walker, with a larger part of his army, left this city for Virgin Bay on Tuesday evening, and arrived at that place at daybreak next day, just six hours after the enemy left San Juan del Sur. He found at Rivas a large number of the enemy sick and wounded, together with a letter from Gen. Jose Maria Canas, commander of the Costa Rican forces, entrusting these men to the generosity of Gen. Walker, and proposing at some future time to exchange American prisoners for them. They were taken care of by the General. Gen. Walker returned to Granada Thursday, and after remaining in this city two days, again departed this morning for Virgin, where the headquarters of the army will be temporarily fixed. The utmost entire strength of the American force is now stationed on the line of the Transit.

Brigadier Gen. Fry will command in the department the garrison consisting of the Second Light Infantry Battalion.

The family of Col. Wheeler, U. S. Minister, will leave for the Atlantic States in the steamer this morning. Col. Wheeler accompanies his family to San Juan del Norte, from whence he will return immediately.

Lieut. Col. Brewster, of the First Rifle Battalion, died in this city on Tuesday night, after a short illness of three days.

The Government still continues at Leon, and its stay there is yet of uncertain duration.

Several prisoners of State are now in the guard-house, but what their ultimate fate will be we are unable to determine.

(Correspondence of El Nicaraguense.)

VIRGIN BAY, May 14.

GENERAL PROSPECTS.—No news of importance to report in connection with the army. The health of the troops continues good, although there have been some sickness and death since the army arrived here.

The General having wisely concluded that the enemies of peace and their own country shall furnish their full quota of support to those who are endeavoring to establish the prosperity and peace of the State upon a solid basis, there has been lately no want of wholesome food for our men, and consequently no murmuring is heard on account of empty stomachs and hard fare.

The steamer Virgin has been plying for several days between this port and Ometepec, from whence we have received provisions, horses and cattle, and a few subjects for "tight rope performances," unless they can prove themselves innocent of the charges preferred against them. The Servile party will find out by and by that treason, conspiracy to murder, and rebellion will not pay; and that it will be better to be quiet, at least, if not patriotic, when their native soil is invaded by a foreign foe.

Rivas begins to exhibit signs of returning life; but it will be a long time before the marks and scars of battle are entirely eradicated from her walls.

For several days past there has been in circulation a rumor that the Costa Rican Gavernmnat has sued for peace. Be this as it may, there is a political storm brewing in that State before which the Servile party will fall down like ancient oaks before a whirlwind.

Last week two of the Santa Rosa men reached this place, after wandering about and suffering for six or seven weeks. They had been protected and concealed by one or two natives, and finally brought in by them in a small boat across the lake. There is a report that more of the men who escaped from that field are on the Islands in the lake, and may yet return.

We learn that but about 1200 out of the 1700 Costa Ricans who left San Juan under President Mora, reached La Union, and a large number of those in the most miserable condition. The balance had sickened or died by the way, or deserted the ranks.

Virgin is again filling up with residents, and business once more begins to revive; and with the return of peace and the re-establishment of the Transit Line, this department will begin to prosper like all other countries where Americans are interested.

EXPEDITION TO CHONTALES.—Some ten days since Gen. Goicouria, with Capt. Raymond's Company of the Light Infantry Battalion, left Granada to suppress the movement of the Servilists in Chontales. The expedition landed at Santa Baldo where they discovered a party of Lancers. The latter were immediately fired upon with effect when they quickly dispersed in every direction. Proceeding to Acoyapa they found the town deserted, but after some search a few persons were found and a proper example was made of one who was known to be deeply implicated in the rising. After levying a contribution of one thousand dollars upon the town, an amount long due to the government—the party proceeded to Juigalpa, where they met and quickly defeated a large force of the Legitimists, here, too, an example was made, and the contributions due from certain parties in that region were collected. Proceeding down to San Lorenzo Hacienda several prisoners were taken, and one body of Servilles of considerable number was dispersed. From San Lorenzo the party proceeded to Comolapa, where another example was made, and where the party made collections of money and effects to a considerable amount. From Comolapa the Company came gradually to Granada without meeting any serious resistance from the Servilles, and the party was highly successful in the objects of their expedition, as well as fortunate in their escape from loss in killed or wounded, only one man of the party, Lieut. W. Lewis, being hurt, and he was but slightly wounded in the cheek. The killed of the Servilists amounted in all to ten, their wounded being quickly concealed by their friends.

FUNERAL OF CAPT. WALKER.—On Thursday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, Capt. James Walker, of Company A, 2d Light Infantry Battalion, died at Massaya, and was buried in this city yesterday.

Capt. Walker was the youngest brother of Gen. Wm. Walker, and only arrived in this city about 3 weeks ago. Owing to an exposure in the service of the State he was seized with inflammatory rheumatism, which subsequently resulted in his untimely death.

Before his death, Capt. Walker confessed himself, and received the holy sacrament administered by the Catholic Church; and his last wish was to be buried as a true believer in that religion.

After his death a party of sixteen natives was detailed to bring the corpse to this city. This morning, under the charge of Captain Williamson, Quartermaster, a suitable coffin was provided, and at 11 o'clock the funeral procession formed on Heina street, and, accompanied by the heads of the civil department, the garrison soldiers, and a large and brilliant army of native and American officers, together with Americia citizens in town, proceeded across the Plaza, and to the Cathedral, where high mass was performed in the presence of a large attendance of the population. Afterwards the funeral cortege moved off to the cemetery, and the body was interred with the solemn ceremonies of the Catholic religon.

ELECTION IN NICARAGUA.—In this country the elective franchise extends to every male inhabitant of 18 years, against whom there is no criminal prosecution, and who is not charged with being a dissolute and vicious man. The voters elect delegates, who assemble in the capitals of the different departments and elect Representatives, Senators, and a President. A man must be twenty-three years old to be a delegate, twenty-five to be a Representative, and thirty to be a Senator or President.

The election on Sunday last, as most public days in the Republic come on Sunday, was concluded with the greatest decorum. The candidates for the Presidency were all of the same political faith, the only dispute being between the Democrats of Leon and Granada. Don Patricio Rivas, the present popular President, was supported by the people of Granada, and General Mariano Salinar, a great favorite, by the people of Leon. A few votes have been cast for Don Nordeste Ramirez, of Leon. The struggle is between Rivas and Salinar, and it is impossible to determine at present who will be the next President of Nicaragua.

The election in Granada proceeded by cantons or wards, each ward of 4,000 persons electing one delegate. The people generally took great interest in the result, and the number of votes ran larger than at any election in Granada. To the governments and people abroad, this significant fact cannot be avoided, that the Republic of Nicaragua expresses the will of the people. All its actions emanate from their silent expression, and every movement it has made has been undertaken by the concurrence of the great body of the people. To ignore, then, the fact of our absolute independence, is to deny to the inhabitants of Nicaragua the right of self-government.

PEACE IN THE NORTH.—A courier arrived in town yesterday, from Leon, bringing dispatches from the President. The Northern States are still quiescent, and as the rainy season is about commencing, no fear of an invasion need be apprehended during the next six months. At the expiration of that time, if hostilities should be determined on, Nicaragua will be able to send into the field an army, not only sufficient to defend our own territory, but to carry the contest into any adjoining State which may wage a war against us.

GOVERNOR OF THE MERIDIONAL DEPARTMENT.—Gen. Walker has appointed Brig. Gen. C. C. Hornsby to the command of the Meridional Department, comprising Guanacaste and Rivas. Gen. Hornsby has accepted the trust, and in his address to the people lays down as the basis of all his actions, justice to the people over whom he is appointed to rule. The position thus conferred is probably the most responsible one in the State, and no one is better qualified to fill it than the soldier whom the General has selected.

U. S. MINISTER.—We have every reason to believe that the reported recall of Col. Wheeler, U. S. Minister to this Republic, and the appointment of Mr. Heiss to fill his place, is altogether without foundation.

RIVAS, April 26, 1856.

Wm. Walker, General-in-Chief of the Nicaraguan Army:

Obliged to abandon the place of Rivas on account of the appearance of the cholera in the most alarming manner, I am forced to leave here a certain number of sick men, whom it is impossible to carry away without danger to their lives; but I expect your generosity will treat them with all the attention and care their situation requires.

I invoke the laws of humanity in favor of those unfortunate victims of an unfortunate calamity, and I have the honor of proposing to you to exchange them for more than twenty prisoners, who are now in our power, and whose names I will send you in a particular list for making the said exchange, when they may be quite re-established from sickness.

Believing that this my proposal will be admitted, according to the laws of war, I have the honor of subscribing myself, with feelings of the highest consideration, your most obedient servant,

(Signed) JOSE MA. CANAS,
General-in-Chief Costa Rican Army.

THE WOUNDED.—The wounded officers and soldiers of the army, now in the hospital or under medical treatment, are now in a condition of convalescence.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.—Surgeon S. C. Coleman promoted Surgeon with the rank of Major.

First Lieut. I. C. Jamison, promoted Captain, Company D, First Light Infantry.

Second Lieut. D. Barney Woolfe, promoted First Lieutenant Company D, First Light Infantry.

P. Truly, appointed First Lieutenant, and attached to First Light Infantry.

Wm. Clarendon Young, appointed First Lieutenant, and attached to Second Light Infantry.

SAD NEWS.—A courier arrived in this city yesterday, from Leon, carrying dispatches to Gen. Walker, and also bringing information of the dangerous and probably fatal illness of Edmund Randolph, Esq.

DIED.—Nathaniel Parker Potter died at Granada, April 27th, aged 27 years, 1st Lieutenant of Company D, First Rifle Battalion. Lieut. Potter was a native of Albany, N. Y. He emigrated to California in 1848, joined Gen. Walker in the Lower California expedition, was the first to follow him to Nicaragua, was an active participator in the capture of Granada, and received the wound from which he died while gallantly charging the enemy in the second battle of Rivas.

Thirty-Fourth Congress—First Session.

WASHINGTON, June 2d.—Senate—Mr. Bright being absent, Mr. Stewart presided. He laid before the Senate the message from the President about Central American affairs, already published.

A resolution was adopted that when the Senate adjourns on Thursday, it be to the Monday following.

The presiding officer laid before the Senate a letter from Preston S. Brooks to Mr. Bright, in which he disclaims any intention of offending against the privileges of the Senate by his assault on Mr. Sumner, but he says that he felt bound to chastise him for the insults to his State and to his relative, and having sought him in vain elsewhere, he deemed it proper to inflict that punishment here; the Senate not being in session, he did not think he was breaking any breach of privilege.

The letter was read and laid on the table and ordered to be printed. Adjourned.

House.—Mr. Campbell, of Ohio, from the select committee on the assault on Senator Sumner, made a report, concluding as follows:

Whereas, the Senate of the United States have transmitted to this House a message complaining that Preston S. Brooks, a representative from the State of South Carolina, committed upon the person of Charles Sumner, a Senator from the State of Massachusetts, while seated at his desk in the Senate Chamber, after the adjournment of that body on the 22d of May last, a violent assault, which disabled him from attending to his duties in the Senate; and declaring that said assault was a breach of the privileges of that body.

And whereas, from respect of the privileges of the House, the Senate have further declared that, inasmuch as the said Preston S. Brooks is a member of this House, they cannot arrest him, and, a fortiori, cannot try or punish him for a breach of their privileges; that they cannot proceed further in the case than to make their complaint to this House; and that power to arrest, try and punish devolves solely on this body; and whereas, upon full investigation, it appears to this House that the said Preston S. Brooks has been guilty of the assault complained of by the Senate, with most aggravated circumstances of violence; that the same was a breach of the privileges not only of the United States Senate, but of the Senator assailed and of this House, as a co-ordinate branch of the Legislative department of the Government in direct violation of the Constitution of the United States, which declares that Senators and Representatives for any speech or debate in either House shall not be questioned in any other place. Whereas, this House is of the opinion that it has the power, and ought to punish the said Preston S. Brooks for the said assault, not only as a breach of the privileges of the Senator assailed, and of the Senate and House as declared by the Constitution, but as an act of disorderly behaviour; and—

Whereas, it further appears from such investigation that Henry A. Edmundson, a representative from the State of Virginia, and Laurence M. Keitt, a representative from South Carolina, sometime previous to said assault, were informed that it was the purpose of said Mr. Brooks to commit violence upon the person of said Charles Sumner, for words used by him in debate as a Senator in the Senate, and took no measures to discourage or prevent the same, but, on the contrary, anticipating the commission of such a violation, were present on one or more occasions to witness the same, as friend of the assailant. Therefore,

Resolved, That Preston S. Brooks be and he is forthwith expelled from this House as a Representative from the State of South Carolina.

Resolved, That this House hereby declares its disapprobation of the said act of Henry A. Edmundson and Laurence M. Keitt in regard to said assault.

Signed by Mr. Campbell, of Ohio, Mr. Spinner and Mr. Pennington.

Hon. Howell Cobb, from the minority of said committee, submitted a minority report, arguing that no breach of privilege, under the Constitution, had been committed, and the House had no power to go beyond the Constitution in deciding that the breach of privilege had been committed.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The N. O. Christian Advocate.

TERMS—$2 00 per annum, in advance.

NEW ORLEANS:

SATURDAY, JUNE 14, 1856.

HARD TIMES THE BEST FOR BENEVOLENT COLLECTIONS.

St. Paul found it so in the 1st century among the Corinthians—the "abundance of whose poverty" abounded unto the "riches of their liberality!" Bishop Pierce found it so in the 19th century among the Ouachitta people. We think he gives the philosophy of it—and forever is taken away the discouraging plea of hard times, in the face of a collection for benevolent purposes.—Extract from his letters of "Western Travel:"

"The Ouachita Conference opened Wednesday morning, 7th November. The preachers were very generally present. The reports of our church interests within their bounds were for the most part encouraging, except in relation to what are now called "the finances." Poorly paid themselves, the preachers brought up very little missionary money and hardly any Conference collections. The apology for this deficiency was low rivers and hard times. I have no doubt the brethren honestly believed that nothing could be got by asking, and, with sad heart and yet with good conscience, they cast anchor and longed for better days. But they were mistaken. A good cause and an earnest pleader can always raise money. Nor do "the times" make much difference. When money is scarce, almost every man feels it is not worth while to be covetous and to hoard, and he will give some of the little he has.—When every thing is flush and promising, men have larger ideas, new plans, and endless ways of investing, and they feel very reluctant to give at all. At any rate, it is the duty of the preachers everywhere to bring the noble enterprises of the church before the people—all the people, and by special effort, argument and appeal, invoke their aid. Let all every where do their duty, and we shall hear no more of an empty Missionary Treasury, nor will the superannuated preachers, the widows and orphans, any longer get scorpions for fish, or stones for bread."

The Proposition.—What think you of Bishop Andrew's proposition for the relief of the Missionary Treasury? It is a financial homily. Will the Bishop give us more?

Bishop Kavanaugh.—We have a letter from the Bishop, May 21st, written at San Francisco. He and Mrs. K., were well. Our other advices report him very extensively circulating and working. We should judge matters were rather a gloomy aspect there.

✓ Shipwrecks.—Those of Columbus, Miss., and M[illegible], Ala., are at a very heavy [illegible]. Our friends will please make remittances in gold dollars or larger bills.

New Head New Type and Enlarged.—The Southern Christian Advocate begins its 20th volume! May it go on and infinitum. A handsome dress of type, tastefully put on, and an enlargement of the sheet that was before large enough to hold so many good things, mark the era. For the Southern to improve is like "morn rising upon noon."

Idolatry in the United States.—Buddha has been formally inaugurated on American soil. After many disappointments, the Chinese population of San Francisco have imported a wooden god and all the paraphernalia of their worship for the purpose, and erected them as a permanent institution in its midst. The festival, as it was called, commenced on the 4th and was continued to the 8th, occupying five days. The edifice in which it was held was erected in 1853, and is situated in Pine street. It is of singular style of architecture, the entrance being through narrow and devious passages, having on each side high walls. A general invitation was extended to the people of San Francisco, through the press to visit the building, and all who availed themselves of it were treated with politeness.

Death of the Rev. Alexander McCaine.—The Rev. Alexander McCaine, of the Protestant Methodist Church, died in Augusta, Ga., on Sunday night, the 1st instant. Mr. McCaine was the founder of the Methodist Protestant Church.—He was born in Ireland, but came to this country when he was little, if at all, over twenty years of age. He early became a minister of the gospel, and was probably among the very first Methodist preachers who visited Western Georgia. He must have been, at his death, somewhere near eighty-five years of age. He died at the house of his only daughter.

OPPONENTS OF METHODISM---THEIR MOTIVES AND CHARACTER.

We never could understand, upon any explanation creditable to them, why other churches oppose the Methodist Episcopal. If any denomination have a right to comity and good will from all who love the Lord Jesus and labor for the coming of his kingdom, it would seem that ours has.

Methodism is, Episcopal in government, believing it not contrary to the letter of the New Testament, altogether agreeable to its spirit and most efficient for carrying out its purpose. But Episcopacy is not held in that overbearing and exclusive sense which unchurches all others. Do any think the Presbyterial or Congretional form of church government most Apostolic?—Let them have it and practice it too. If they "hold the Head," there is no bar to their being considered and treated as christians.

Those turned over to uncovenanted mercies by a pretentious theory of succession, may contest the vaunting claims of high churchism and Romanism. But for [illegible] breaking the peace of the church, in this, they are only contending for their ecclesiastical status and their rights in the church.

And as to Baptism:—If any choose to immerse, there is plenty of water and Methodism does not forbid the copious use of it. Plunge, dip, pour or sprinkle, either way, so that the proper subject is baptized in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. If our members become disatisfied and wish to go to some church not of "the same faith and order," they go without hindrance and with a certificate of good standing. If the members of other churches come to us and to the Lord's table as spread among us, provided, their cardinal believing and daily living be right, we receive them, "not to doubtful disputations." It is the Lord's fold and not ours. It is the Lord's table and not ours. None of His people can complain that we are close and refuse them recognition, that we are bigoted and unchurch them. If they are determined to pick a quarrel, they may. But they are without excuse.

In the matter of election and predestination:—Calvinists being right, in vain shall Arminians preach and pray, for they cannot increase or diminish the elect number. While we cry "make room—lengthen the cords—open the door wider—ye all may come and live," there is nothing here offensive to human charity or divine glory. We magnify the atonement. We encourage men with hope and alarm them with a sense of personal responsibility. And all, in a way that upholds the law and reserves the final judgment; that exalts Christ, through repentance and faith, as the only Saviour. While proclaiming free grace and universal salvation our teachings are not chargeable, (severe moralists being judges,) with laxity. Likewise as to the final perseverance of the saints. If they are going to hold out we shall not hinder them. On the other hand, our warnings against backsliding and apostacy are well meant; illustrated, in their necessity, by sad examples; and not only consistent with the letter of scripture but our doctrinal system. Occasionally, the prosecution of a free-grace call and world-commission, may jostle against the limitations of other systems, and vindicate its propriety. In such a cause, something may be pardoned to the spirit of love and all comprehending humanity; but the zeal of opponents it is difficult to account for, or their attacks upon us.

Methodism has never been united to State, and with force resisted dissent. There is not a single spot upon her escutcheon of martyr blood—a single record of persecution in her history—except what she has endured.

Does Methodism neglect the poor, fawn upon the rich, resist light and knowledge, oppress men, corrupt the gospel, suppress the Scriptures?

We might safely trust an enemy to answer. Notwithstanding certain ecclesiastical busy-bodies are anxious to talk us down, write us down, prophesy us down. With honorable exceptions, their organs teem with invectives on our government. Our Episcopacy vexes their righteous souls exceedingly. Our movements are the objects of vigilant attention and invidious comment. They do so tenderly compassionate our members. Miserable, down-trodden, ignorant, benighted people!

With a strange self-denial they lose sight of their own affairs to attend to ours. Brotherly love quickens their smartness at intrigue and vituperation. They champion the members against the class-leaders, the class-leaders against preachers, preachers against Presiding Elders and all against the Bishops.

The frequency and virulence of attacks by certain church presses, pulpits, preachers and people, suggest the inquiry—What moves them? What do they expect? What could they answer if called to account for maltreating their Lord's servants?

The opposition of the world can be accounted for—also of the flesh and the devil. That of these professed Christians we are compelled to attribute to what remains in them of these elements; A native intolerance—partisan pride—envy.

If any one, exercising the charity that hopeth all things, and considering the facts, will propose a kinder pretext, we shall be glad to hear it.

These busy bodies in other church's affairs are now busy in several quarters. Our attention is frequently called to them, and the question put, "Have you nothing to say? Though the accusations are false, ought they not to be answered?"

Their motives and character having been hinted at, we shall, at another time, speak of the best method of dealing with them.

General Missionary Intelligence.

We give below a statement of the Receipts of the several Benevolent Societies, as reported by them, for the past year, and of the present condition of their respective Treasuries.

We are mainly indebted to the New York Times for this Recapitulation.—The amounts as given are exclusive of grants from the Bible and Tract Societies, and the United States Government for education among the Indians.

The societies are arranged in the order, first, of those whose receipts are in advance; and secondly, of those sustaining a falling off in their income, when compared with the year previous.

American Board of Foreign Missions—$310,427 77; gain, $4,649, 93; in debt, $20,507 90.

American Missionary Association,—$52,326 30, of which $53,502 33 were expended for Foreign Missions; gain, $7,532 48: in debt, $5,027 63.

Episcopal Board of Domestic Missions.—$42,286 64; gain, $3,841 99; in debt, $170 04.

Board of Domestic Missions of Reformed Dutch Church.—$15,257 27, in 1854; last year, about 4000 in advance; but the exact sum is not reported.

General Assembly's Board of Education, (O. S.)—$46,201 22; gain, $63 93; balance on hand, $2,234 91.

American Bible Union.—$46,721 24, donations and sales; gain, $11, 378 80; balance on hand, $4,903.73.

Western College Educational Society.—$19,391 14; gain, $1,587 75; in the treasury, $144 15.

Missionary Society of M. E. Church South.—$154,654 53; gain, $9,401 29; in debt, $40,000.

American Bible Society.—Donations and legacies, $138,728 67; loss, $23,275 57. From sales of Bibles and Testaments, $208,038 42; loss $24,207 84.

American and Foreign Bible Society.—Donations and legacies, $28,429 31; loss, $7,715 48. From sales, $11,604 97; gain, $652 45; in the treasury, $44 49.

American Tract Society.—Contributions, $147,398 13; loss, $8,735 35. From sales, $265,875 73; gain, $6,750 73; in the treasury, $2,613 56.

American and Foreign Christian Union.—$63,833 80; loss, $11,833 80; in debt, $12,288 37.

General Assembly (O. S.) Board of Foreign Missions.—$138,797 90; loss, $1,922. 15; balance on hand, $87 07.

Episcopal Board of Foreign Missions.—In fifteen and one-half months, $75,919 72; in the preceding year, $59,582 23; in debt, $2,639 14.

American Baptist Missionary Union.—$102,327 58; loss, $11,072 36; in the treasury, $16,804 31.

Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, North.—$209,304 04; loss, $7,208 01; balance, $35,920 16.

General Assembly's Board (O. S.) Domestic Missions.—$71,834 47; loss, $3,373 33; balance, $5,539 70.

Baptist Home Missionary Society.—$45,965 55; loss, $3,138 13; in debt, $44, 446 59.

American Sunday-School Union.—Missionary Department, $63,429 22; loss, $3,050 70. Book Department, $184,227 33; in debt, $6,062 43.

American Seaman's Friend Society.—$22,610 19; loss, $3,653 10; balance, 20 50.

American Colonization Society.—Donations and legacies, $58,700 73; loss, $2,321 25. From emigrants, $17,174 68; loss, $14,692 59; in debt, $11,000.

The sum total of donations and legacies to these twenty-two societies in their last reported year is $2,018,486 13. This is indeed a gratifying fact—a large amount to be expended for purely benevolent purposes—and speaks well for the American Churches; yet the amount is far less than our ability and the honest demands which are made upon us will sustain.

E. W. Sehon, Miss. Sec'y.

Nashville, May 30, 1856.

The London Watchman comes to us freighted with the speeches made at the Public Breakfast at the London Tavern, given in ald of the Wesleyan Mission to China, where the snug little sum of $3500 was quietly raised for that enterprise; and at the Anniversary of the Wesleyan Missionary Society at Exter Hall, where the speaking and feeling on the great subject were of the highest order. A new speaker, the Rev. Wm. M. Punshon, was on the platform, if he lives, we predict he will be there again. It is refreshing to read the stirring addresses made on that occasion, and especially so to see that, in a year of war and taxation, the Wesleyans raised £119,122 4 9 for the cause of Missions. This, we think, is more than they ever raised before in a single year. With only half the numerical strength of the M. E. Church, South, the British Wesleyans have raised half a million of dollars for Foreign Missions, and we have raised some ten thousand for our single foreign mission, and a hundred and fifty thousand for the domestic work, which the British Wesleyans would not consider missionary work at all. We must do better—we absolutely must. We wish our Advocates could find room for some of the speeches made at the London meetings.

Withdrawal of Lands in Louisiana.—We learn, says the National Intelligencer, of the 2d inst., that the Commissioner of the General Land Office is taking the necessary steps for the withdrawal from market of portions of the public domain in Louisiana for railroad purposes, in accordance with a recent act passed by Congress.

Rather Severe.—The absence of Edward Everett, Rufus Choate, and Robert C. Winthrop, from the "indignation" meeting at Faneuil Hall, having been made the subject of severe comment, on the part of certain factious persons, the Boston Courier, while disclaiming any intention to offer any apology in behalf of the absentees, deems it a duty to say "that the character of the preliminary meeting of Friday evening, and those who occupied the platform on that occasion and spoke, were sufficient to justify any rational man for absenting himself from the subsequent meeting."

Progress of Memphis.—The trade of Memphis, says the Eagle, of a late date, under the magic influence of railroads, is advancing with giant strides. Take the single article of cottom. The total receipts this season up to the present time, (dating from the 1st September last) amount to 288,072 bales, against 186,047, at the same time last year—showing an increase, so far, of over 100,000 bales! or, an increase of $5,000,000 in the trade of Memphis, in the article of cotton alone!

The Norfolk Herald, of the 4th inst., says the new steam frigate Roanoke was taken out of the dry dock yesterday at 10 o'clock, and placed under the shears, preparatory to hoisting in her boilers, machinery, etc.

The President has officially recognised Mr. Andreas F. Walla as Vice Consul for Brazil at New Orleans.

DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

Fish River Mission, Ala. Conference, May 27, 1856.

Rev. H. N. McTyeire, Assistant Treasurer of the Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South:

I now write my report for the first and second quarters of the Fish River Mission in one, having had considerable riding, and requiring some time to arrange the work.

This Mission was formed at the last Alabama Conference, and it takes in the lower or South end of Baldwin county, Ala., and that part of the Escambia adjacent to Pensacola, in Florida, and it takes in two appointments from the Escambia Circuit, to which I have been able to add some three or four others.

The country is generally thinly settled and the rides long. The Fish river country is being settled up by a respectable class of enterprising, industrious men, principally engaged in the turpentine and lumber business.

I have organized a church of some fourteen members. At Hollywood also we have a church. We cannot boast as in thickly populated countries of large congregations, but those who do attend are generally attentive to the word preached. I had like to have forgotten that I have appointed a class leader in the commencement, and directed attention to this duty according to the old usages of the church.

Upon the whole we are inclined to think that there is a chance for much good under the blessing of the Lord, to be effected in this too long neglected portion of God's moral vineyard.

I hope the friends of missions will pray for us, that sinners may be converted and saved. ZACHEUS BOWLING.

Montgomery Mission, June 6, 1856.

As I have not reported up to this time the condition of my charge, suffer me to trouble you with a very brief report.

The Montgomery Colored charge is in prosperous condition at this time.—There is a gracious revival in progress at this church. We now number about eight hundred members, probationers and all. We also have a Sabbath-School of one hundred and eighty scholars, this is however, the number on our book, not all of which attend regularly. This school is conducted by Mrs. Wm. Knox, of this city. This excellent lady is doing much for the children of color in this city. May the Lord bless her and give us many more such for this great work. J. W. BROWN.

Lower Deer Creek, Mississippi Conference, May 19.

Brother McTyeire:—It will no doubt be gratifying to the friends of the cause to hear that the Lord is at work on Lower Deer Creek Mission. Up to the present date more than one hundred have joined among the colored people, and many have been converted. There is also considerable interest manifested among the whites. Some have joined, and I hope more will, that the good work may go on until many who are now if their sins shall be happily converted, and become pillars in the church of God.

Fond hope, and why may it not be realized? God hath the power and will work an answer to prayers.

I have one appointment to the whites. This is generally well attended by respectful and attentive hearers, and I hope the interest now manifested will continue to increase, until all in reach of the church will be found regularly in attendance.

I have several appointments to the colored people which are well attended, four of these are in the week. May the Lord cause masters to feel the importance of having their servants instructed in the doctrines of christianity, that they may not think it a loss of time to have them instructed in the week.

I attend to the catechism regularly on eight plantations, which I consider not the least part of my duty, but are of the greatest means of doing good among the blacks. It always makes me happy to find the Lord among the whites, and when I see the poor colored people happy in the love of God, it always sends a thrill of joy to my heart.

E. E. McLELLAN.

Tensas Colored Mission, La. Conference, May 20.

In compliance with the request of my Presiding Elder I send you a report of this mission.

It was commenced the first of last August. Yellow fever and other obstacles retarded the work for some time, and some of those obstacles still remain. But we have fourteen appointments to servants, and one to a white congregation. We have received this year on probation,

Whites,	8
Colored,	146
Last year,	75
Total,	229

The mission is in a prosperous condition. I suppose from twelve to fifteen hundred negroes attend our appointments, only five of them being on single plantations. The children are catechised, etc. But while we preach to this small number, we are within reach of some four thousand or more. Oh that men could feel their responsibility, give their consent and build chapels for their servants to worship in.

Yours in Christ,

E. W. GRISWOLD.

Villula Colored Mission, Ala. Conference.

This report of the above mission involves the first and second quarters.—Forty-five have been admitted on trial; one expelled; three baptised. I have eleven appointments, all to be filled on Sabbath except one, and that in three weeks. I ride twenty miles and catechise and preach from three to four times a day—hard work, try it who will.

The number of catechumens is not yet ascertained. We have good congregations, and considerable interest is manifested by some of the patrons. Others are rather indifferent. We have good meetings at most of the appointments. Children improve fast. A more full report hereafter. WM. H. ADAMS.

CHURCH ITEMS.

It is said that Mrs. Garrett's bequest to the Methodist Biblical School at Chicago, Ill., amounts to $300,000.

The Rev. Zebulon Butler, D. D., Pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Port Gibson, Miss., has resigned his charge by reason of impaired health.

Rev. Mr. Coxe, of Baltimore, lately elected to be their Bishop by the Protestant Episcopal Convention of Texas, has declined.

The Rev. Dr. Palmer, of Columbia, S. C., has accepted the pastorship of the Presbyterian Church on Lafayette Square, of this city, twice tendered him. Salary $7,000 per annum.

Bishop Cobb, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in Alabama, has been presented by his friends of the Convention of Mobile with one thousand dollars, and leave of absence for a European trip.

The Cumberland Presbyterians, whose creed is Calvanism and a mixture of Arminianism, and whose field of operations is almost exclusively confined to the Western country, now consists of 84 Presbyteries, 1000 ministers and 100,000 communicants. Their General Assembly met in Louisville, Ky., on the 15th May, when Rev. Milton Bird, President of Princeton College, Ky., was elected Moderator. One hundred delegates were present. This body originated in an act of discipline by the General Assembly condemning the Cumberland Presbytery for licensing and ordaining men who were not college men. The Presbyterian Herald, of Louisville, says: "We are gratified to learn from the Boards of Missions and Education, that efforts are in progress to systematize the benevolent operations of their churches, and to raise the standard of ministerial education amongst them. Indeed, a prominent member of the body expressed the opinion to us, that in ten years more the licensing or ordaining of a young man without a classical and theological education by one of their Presbyteries would be a rare occurrence. Quite a number of their Synods report colleges or academies under their charge, and they have a Theological Seminary for the whole church in operation."

At the Indianapolis General Conference of the M. E. Church, North, the following order in managing appeal cases has been adopted by recommendation of the Bishops:

1. Motion to take up.
2. Motion to admit.
3. Appellant state the ground of his appeal.
4. Reading of the charge and specifications.
5. Reading of the testimony.
6. Defense of the appellant.
7. Reply of the delegates.
8. Final reply of the appellant.
9. Decision of the General Conference.

✓ Losing a Text---D. O. Shattuck.

A North Carolina paper comes to us with the following anecdote in which the Judge of the Supreme Court of California, and late President of Centenary College figures, in character:—

"This gentleman, since become eminent in Mississippi as a minister of the gospel and a learned jurist, was a pedlar in North Carolina. This was while he was a young man, and previous to his connection with the church. He had a brother of moderate abilities who was a Baptist preacher. This brother was accustomed to preface a rather poor discourse, by saying that during the past week he had selected a text; but that since his arrival at the church, God had taken his text from him and given him another. Judge Shattuck, (then plain David,) was a little mortified at this habit of his brother, and determined to break him of it. He did it in this wise: One day he said, "Brother, I wouldn't preach for the God for whom you preach." In astonishment the question was asked, "Why not?" "When you have leisure, you select a text and get it so you could preach on it; but when you arrive at the church he takes it from you, and gives you another, upon which you cannot preach at all!" The cure was effected perfectly and permanently.

The moral intended by this incident is—do not make apologies in the pulpit. The application may be wider than its original area.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Heathenism in the Midst of Christendom---An Incident.

In my travels as agent of the Bible and Tract Society, I came to ——. I was instructed to call on ——, as he was a prominent member of our church there. I did so—eat breakfast and dinner with him and paid him a dollar for them when I left. He would not buy a tract or book, nor give a cent to the society.

I visited several families and offered books for sale, but sold only two for one dollar and five cents, and gave away tracts and pamphlets worth sixty-five cents.

I found the people very anxious to get novels of a certain character—wanted the last work by Mr. or Mrs. so and so. One young sap-head said he had no taste to read religious books, that he had studied law because he did not want to be bothered with religion.

What will gentlemen of the blue bag say of this young limb? Is he a fair representative of the corps? Is that the idea that men study law because they do not want to be bothered with religion?

Well, I've heard some say they did not think a lawyer could be religious. This sap-head might confirm them in the faith.

What a chance to have an intelligent argument and faithful representation of a man's case in a Louisiana court, if this man, who never bothers his brain by thinking of religion, be employed in the case. Will not those who have weighty and important cases to be tried in the courts of Louisiana be sure to get a strong man, who can devote his whole time, talent, brain and intellect to their cause, than get this nice, smart young man?

O how the halls of justice will ring with sound, solid argument? But I am overwhelmed. Exeunt AGENT.

NEW BOOKS.

The Great Supper not Calvinistic: being a Reply to the Rev. Dr. Fairchild's Discourses on the Parable of the Great Supper. By Leroy M. Lee, D. D. Edited by Thos. O. Summers, D. D. Nashville: Stevenson & Evans—1856. pp. 354—price 50 cents.

This is a good book. It is well written. It is an unanswerable defence of "the doctrines of grace," comprehended in the Arminian, as contrasted with the Calvinistic system. The latter embracing the "horrible decree," savors more of wrath than of grace, as the author of this treatise clearly demonstrates.—We are sorry that there is any necessity to engage afresh in the quinquarticular controversy; but there is such a necessity—it is forced upon us by the vigorous, zealous, and unremitting efforts of our Calvinistic brethern to propagate their peculiar and pernicious principles, and their misrepresentations of our views of God's impartial love to the world. The book before us is well adapted to do good service in this controversy, and we bespeak for it an extended circulation. The subjects discussed are thus set forth in the Table of Contents:—Introduction—General Observations on the Parable—The Atonement: its Sufficiency—The Design of the Atonement—The Atonement: its Design—Human Ability—Human Inability: Calvinistic Theory—Human Inability: Impeachment of Methodism—Human Inability: Scripture Doctrine—Eternal Election—Election Explained—Election Proved—Infant Election—Infant Damnation.

A Refutation of the Theological Works of Thos. Paine, not noticed by Bishop Watson in his Apology for the Bible. By Thos. O. Summers, D. D. Nashville: Stevenson & Evans.

In noticing the third edition of this work, it may not be improper to say to those who have not seen it, that the author thoroughly examined the theological works of Mr. Paine before he attempted their refutation—that he omitted to notice nothing in them of any weight, except what was noticed by Bishop Watson—and that competent judges have considered the book a concise, satisfactory answer to all the cavils of Mr. Paine. We hope its extended circulation will, by the Divine blessing, be productive of good.—The Refutation can be procured by itself—price 25 cents; or bound up with the Apology—price 45 cts. The Agents are about bringing out a new edition of the Apology, which will be free from a few typographical errors found in previous editions.

Joseph Brown; or, The Young Tennessean, whose life was saved by the power of Prayer. An Indian Tale. Edited by Thos. O. Summers, D. D. Nashville: Stevenson & Evans—1856. Price 25 cents.

The following beautiful and interesting tale was written by a lady of Tennessee. She gathered her materials from authentic sources, and wove them into a pleasing and edifying narrative. Joseph Brown, the hero of the tale, is still living in the State of Tennessee—a noble specimen of those brave men who penetrated the forests and canebrakes, and broke the soil of this Western region—

"Where nothing dwelt but beasts of prey,
Or men as fierce and wild as they."

What the pioneers and first settlers of the Western country had to encounter, particularly in their exposure to the craft and cruelty of the red men of the forest, no pen can adequately describe. Our young friends, however, will be able to form some idea of it by the perusal of this little volume. The importance of youthful piety will also be impressed upon their minds, by seeing it so beautifully exemplified in the case of Joseph Brown. The Contents are as follow:—The Tennessee River—The Emigration—The Western Wilds—Descending the River—Capture by the Indians—Joseph's Life in Great Peril—Merciful Deliverance—Hard Times—Narrow Escapes—Joseph's Sisters, Jane and Polly—Indian Horrors—Heroism of Joseph—War between the Indians and Whites—Release of Joseph, Jane and Polly—Hardships endured by Joseph's Mother—The good Chief McGillevray—Release of Joseph's Mother and Sister Elizabeth—Settlement in Tennessee—Battle of Nickojack—Joseph Brown a Clergyman.

The dismissal of Mr. Crampton calls to mind the case of Mr. Jackson, the British Minister, who was dismissed in 1803, for grossly offensive conduct. He had just returned from Denmark, where he had been insolent and overbearing. Our government would not submit to his arrogance. The Secretary of State informed Mr. Jackson that no further communication would be received from him. Mr. Pinckney, our Minister to England, made a representation of Mr. Jackson's conduct to the British government, and he was recalled. Fifteen months elapsed before a successor was appointed.

Death of Hon. John M. Niles.—This gentleman, formerly Senator in Congress from Connecticut, and Postmaster General under President Van Buren, died in Hartford on Saturday, 31st ult., in the sixty-ninth year of his age.

We learn from a dispatch that a gentleman from this city, stopping at the Galt House, Louisville, was robbed of $4,500 on the night of Sunday, June 1st.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Summerfield, June 2, 1856.

Dear Editor:—Since I wrote you last meeting in this place has closed, numbering some forty or fifty conversions. Among them, some remarkable cases. Several old men that have long lived out of God are now happy in a Saviour's love.

Rev. C. C. Calloway, the agent of the Southern University, spent some days here, got in cash and good subscriptions about $2000. Will get, we hope, $500 or more, in this place.

I wish our people felt as do I, the great importance of this enterprise. These church schools are truly its nurseries. We must keep out their heads educated, holy, zealous Methodists, and God-fearing men, who, while they are cultivating the head may always feel it secondary to the training of the heart. $2000, donated, will pay tuition and board in perpetuity to a young man who might not otherwise get an education. The thought is delightful, to have borne a part in the formation of christian character in young men, giving them such mental training as shall fit them for Church or State, when we are gone.

Let us keep this before the people. My mind runs back to old Lagrange College and the many young men who were educated there that are now filling high places as well as useful in the church. One poor young man, whose board was paid privately by friends, is dead and gone to heaven I trust, yet while he lived was instrumental in converting a thousand souls. Who that has the means will not consent to engage in this great work?

Yours Truly, B.

Watts and Charles Wesley.

"If Whitfield was a born orator Charles Wesley was a born poet. Nine-tenths of the hymns in the British Wesleyan collection are his; besides which he published several other volumes of poems, and his unpublished works would fill five or six octavos more. Watts was before him in the field, but no one ever asserted that he copied Watts. On the contrary, the two poets, so thoroughly agreed in their theme, and so equal in their merits can be more dissimilar in their manner. Watts has greater variety—Wesley has greater intensity. Watts thinks the congregation who will sing what he is writing—Wesley pours out the impressible effusions of his own soul. Watts sounds the depths of the sinner's heart—Wesley triumphs in the fulness of the Saviour's grace. Watts exhibits the thoughtful sedateness and almost melancholy of a student who seldom went abroad—Wesley exhibits the freshness, vigor, and vivacity inspired by country air, raging mobs, and hallelujahs of converted sinners. Watts is careful lest he should make his congregation say too much—Wesley expresses the most ardent feelings in the strongest language. Watts is seen at the foot of Pisgah, looking with pious longing towards the summit:—

"'Could I but stand where Moses stood,
And view the landscape o'er,
Not Jordan's stream, nor death's cold flood,
Should fright me from the shore'—

while Wesley stands singing on the mountain top—

"'The promised land, from Pisgah's top,
I now exult to see;
My hope is full (oh, glorious hope!)
Of immortality.'"

Behold he Pruyeth—Acts 9. 11.

But had Paul never prayed before this remark was made concerning him. He undoubtedly thought he had; and yet his prayers were counted as no prayers. Being a Jew, resting in the law and making his boast of God—being a Pharisee of the straitest sect, and a desciple of Gamaliel he had often addressed to God a form of words; but he had never had any proper sense of his own sinfulness, had never poured out his soul in true penitence and sorrow for sin, and had never depended for audience and acceptance with God on the mediation and advocacy of Christ, and therefore had never prayed.

And it is to be feared that there are many such persons!—many who think that they are praying ones, and yet who have not for the first time poured out their hearts in real prayer. There is still an obstruction between them and the ear of God, still a wall between them and heaven.

Reader, examine your prayers; see if they are an effusion of the soul; see if you draw nigh unto God after a spiritual manner; see if your dependence is in Christ alone; and see whether christian gifts and graces are yours because you have ardently desired them and the Hearer of prayer has granted your desires.—S. W. Bapt.

Mr. David Hadden, an old and highly respected merchant of New York, died in that city on the 2d inst. He had been engaged in business in New York for more than fifty years, and was a director of the American Exchange Bank, of the Life and Trust Company, and of the Gas Light Company, and was at one time president of the St. Andrews Society.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Notice.—The Trustees of the Southern University are hereby informed that the annual meeting of the Board will be held on the Fourth of July. Very important business will be transacted.

E. WADSWORTH, Sec'y Board.

June 4, 1856.

Notice.—Florence Wesleyan University, Alabama.

FLORENCE, ALA.—The annual examination of the students of this institution will begin on Wednesday 2nd of July next.

The order of exercises in addition to the examination will be as follows:

On Saturday evening Sophomore prize declamation; on Sunday commencement sermon by Rev. O. R. Bloe, of Alabama Conference; on Monday and Tuesday evenings junior exhibition. On Tuesday it is expected that addresses will be delivered before the Alumni and Literary societies, by gentlemen chosen for the occasion. On Monday, commencement day, addresses by the graduating class, degrees conferred, etc.

It is hoped that the committees appointed by the conferences will be present. The friends of education, and the public generally, are respectfully invited to attend. The Trustees will hold their annual meeting on Saturday.

S. P. RICE, Sec'y. of Fac.

Notice.—Centenary Institute, Alabama.

The annual examination of the classes will begin on Friday the 27th of June, and close on the following Wednesday.

The commencement sermon will be preached on the following Sabbath by Rev. Wm. P. Harrison.

The annual address will be delivered by Rev. F. Baldwin on Wednesday the 2nd July.

H. I. HARRISON, Sec'y.

Notice.—The examination of the students of Mansfield Female College will commence on Tuesday, the 29th July. Commencement day the following Friday, which will be the first of August, at which time the usual honors will be conferred on the graduating class, and addresses appropriate to the occasion delivered. The attendance of the patrons and friends of the Institution and the public generally is respectfully invited. The Visiting Committee of the Conference are also earnestly requested to be in attendance.

H. C. THWEATT, Pres't.

Notice.—A Camp meeting will be held at Plaquemine Brulee, in the Parish of St. Landry, La., beginning on Friday, June 20, 1856. Preachers and people are generally invited to attend.

B. F. ALEXANDER, P. C.

Notice.—On the 22d of June next, Bishop Andrew will dedicate the new M. E. Church at Enterprise, Miss., at which time he will also attend to the ordination of any brethren who may have certificates of election thereto, and who have not had the opportunity of having it attended to.

W. C. TURNER.

Notice.—N. O. District, 2d Quarter.—German Missions 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, May 18th at Sarapara.

Baton Rouge, June 7th and 8th.

Bayou Lafourche and Bayou Black, June 14th and 15th, at Napoleonville.

Plaquemine and Point Coupee, June 28th and 29th, at Bayou Poydras.

Protracted Meeting at Bayou Gros Tete 5th and 6th July.

Morgan st., July 13th; Q. C. and L. F. on the 14th.

New Orleans Circuit, July 20th at Algiers, A. M.; at Carrollton, P. M.; Q. C. 17th, in Carondelet basement.

Carondelet st., July 27th; L. F. 28th; Q. C. 29th.

Wesley, Soule and Wiman's Chapels, Q. C. August 1.

Felicity st., August 3d, L. F. 4th and Q. C. 5th.

Thibodeaux, August 23d and 24th.

J. C. KEENELL, P. E.

Notice.—Gainesville District, Alabama Conference; 3d Quarter.—Fork and Willow Pound Colored Mission, June 14th and 15th; Belmont and Colored Mission, June 28th and 29th; Eutaw, July 12th and 13th; Livingston, July 19th and 20th; Warsaw, 26th and 27th; DeKalb, August 2d and 3d; Lauderdale, August 9th and 10th; Scuttlerville, August 16th and 17th; Gainesville, August 23d and 24th; Macon, August 30th and 31st; Wahalak, September 6th and 7th.

T. Y. RAMSEY, P. E.

Wanted.—A situation as Teacher, by a young man of considerable experience. He is prepared to teach Latin, Greek, and the higher Mathematics. Apply to Rev. J. C. Miller, President of Centenary College, or either of its Professors. my17-3t

Extract from a letter by the Rev. Mr. Churchill, of Boston, who is now traveling for his health in the East:

"It gives one an ever present idea of the expansive enterprise of his countrymen, to find their commodities of commerce continually in his path wherever he goes. I have not visited any considerable city of Turkey, where I did not find the medicines of my country represented by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. In Smyrna, Aleppo, Jaffa, Jerusalem and Constantinople, we see in each, on the door post of some bazaar, the peculiarly American cast looking iron card, of Dr. Ayer, saying in a language which not one in a thousand of the passers by can read, 'Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for Coughs, Colds and Consumption, sold here.' In a shelf behind the cross-legged missionaries, are seen the bottles with their English, Spanish, French and German faces turned towards the crowd, and on inquiring we are told that foreigners are not the only purchasers, but the true believers themselves waive their trust in fate to try this product of American skill, when they find there is no other cure for them.

"I was told yesterday that the Cherry Pectoral had been presented to the Sultan, and is now in constant use in his harem, and in the hospitals of the Empire."

Dyspepsia.—There are but few who do not at some time experience the unpleasant effect of temporary indigestion, such as a sense of fullness, weight and uneasiness of the stomach, foul tongue, bitterness in the mouth, nausea, sick headache, etc., etc. All such feelings are evidence of approaching dyspepsia, which should always be checked and cured by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which are known to be an infallible remedy for all such complaints. To this thousands will testify who have tried them and proved the facts. Hostetter's Bitters are for sale by our principal druggists and dealers generally. Sold wholesale by E. J. Hart & Co., No. 79 Tchoupitoulas street, and Cady & Holmes, 7 Gravier street.

A learned writer, Dendy, says: "Dryden, to ensure his brilliant visions of poesy, ate raw flesh; and Mrs. Radcliffe adopted the same plan. Green tea and coffee, if we do sleep, induce dreaming. Baptisia Tinctoria, by procuring quiet rest and pleasing dreams, swallowed horse pidgne after supper. Indigestion, and that condition which is termed a weak or irritable stomach, constitute a most fruitful source of visions. The immediate or direct influence of repletion, in bodily absorbing the sensations and the disposition in waking moments, is a proof of its power to derange the circulation of the brain and the mental faculties in sleep. People who are troubled with indigestion may surely get relief from Hoofland's German Bitters," said exclusively in this country by Dr. C. M. Jackson, 120 Arch street, Philadelphia, and by his agents. See advertisement. my5 1m

A Masterpiece Outdone.—We have lately supposed that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was the Ultima Thule in its line, and that nothing had been or would be invented which could at all surpass it in its fine points of excellence as a medicine. But we are confidently assured by those competent to judge on the subject, that Ayer's new Pills excel in high medical artistry even that widely celebrated embodiment of his skill. He has succeeded in making them not only pleasant to take, but powerful to cure the large class of complaints which require a purgative remedy.—Louisville Argus, Ky.

They are for sale by J. WRIGHT & CO., and all city druggists. ap12 2m

WISER'S CANADIAN VERMIFUGE.

LOCUSTS are not more destructive to vegetable than intestinal worms are to the health of children. Most of the medicines prescribed for them are however nearly as bad as the disease; the mercury, antimony, etc., with which they are impregnated being corrosive poisons; not so WISER'S CANADIAN VERMIFUGE, an innocuous, purely vegetable extract, which never fails to remove the disease, and invigorate the general health of the sufferer.

Be particular and remember the name "Wiser's Canadine Vermifuge." This is the only article that can be depended on. For sale in New Orleans, wholesale and retail, by

J. WRIGHT & CO.,

Nos. 21 and 151 Chartres street, sole proprietors.

Sold by all the Druggists. jel4 1y

MARRIAGES.

On the 29th ult., by the Rev. John Pipes, Mr. JOHN G. MILLER to Miss MARY A. E. SCRIBER, both of Ouchita Parish, La.

DEATHS.

Near Gosport, Clark county, Ala., on the 30th ult., WM. J. HEARIN, son of Wm. J. and Susanna Hearin, aged 2 years, 10 months and 7 days.

The little cherub boy thus rudely torn from the parental embrace, is but the more securely folded in the Saviour's arms. "Suffer the little children," said he, "to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God." "And he took them up in his arms put his hands upon them and blessed them."

"God forbids the cherubs stay,
God recalls the precious lean,
He to early rest is gone,
He to paradise is fled."

Suggsville, June 3, 1856. W. K. N.

On the 27th ult., in Holmes county, Miss., Mrs. MARY ANN ANDERSON.

Sister A., was born in Williamsburg District, S. C., May 21 1795. She departed this life in the full assurance of a glorious immortality. She professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, nineteen or twenty years since. Evincing at all times a true Christian faith, and her life was adorned with an enlightened piety not common. Nature had bestowed on her more than usual gifts. She was possessed of a strong mind and judgement which secured to her the respect of a large circle of friends, but best of all her religion was of that all sustaining character that enabled her to bare up under affliction for years before she died.—Grace was sufficient for the long and hard trial. It was the privilege of the writter to visit her several times in her last affliction, found her always the same confiding Christian, not only willing to do but also to suffer the will of her heavenly father. She possessed a remarkable degree of patience, not disposed to murmur or complain, but when ever interogated on the subject of her future prospects said, her way was clear.

H. WILLIAMSON.

On the 7th ult., at her residence in Macon county, Ala., Mrs. MARTHA V., wife of W. Z. M. Yancey.

She embraced religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church at a camp meeting held in Autauga co., in 1842, under the ministry of the Rev. John Tally. In 1850 she sought a deeper work of grace, and obtained the blessing of perfect love, and ever afterward claimed the blessing and defended the doctrine, and fully she exemplified her profession by cheerfully submitting to two years' sickness and signified her readiness to depart and be with Christ; or to continue on a bed of affliction, being fully assured that her present sufferings were light when compared with the joys that awaited her.

A SISTER.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

HISTORY OF EUROPE, from the fall of Napoleon to the accession of Louis Napoleon, by Sir Archibald Alison, Bart., 2 volumes. New York: Harper & Bros.

The historian, scholar and general reader, will greet with much pleasure the advent of this recent publication. It is indeed a most desirable accession to our literature. The previous writings of Alison have not only received deserved praise, but have engaged the profound thought of the ablest statesmen of our day. The earlier portion of the time of which this work is the record, was characterized by untional peace, and consequently the moves upon the chequerboard of governments were slow, deliberate, and looking to the future. But though to the casual looker-on they may have seemed unimportant, yet, the result has proved that each step, though wary, had in it a motive and purpose.

The subject treated is divided into five periods. First: the entry of the Allies into Paris, after the fall of Napoleon. Second: the establishment of a liberal form of Government in France in 1819. Third: the adoption, after two years debate, of the Reform Bill in England in 1831. Fourth: the undeviating constancy of Sir Robert Peel and the English Government, during the adverse times of 1842; and the overthrow of Louis Philippe, inducing wide-spread revolution. Fifth: commencing with the results consequent upon the fall of Louis Philippe, and terminating with the accession of Louis Napoleon to imperial power. This period is perhaps, beyond all precedent, fruitful of exciting and momentous topics. In glancing over the many and great social and national changes that then occurred, it would almost seem as though Europe had been one vast volcano, its pent up fires raging to bring down destruction upon all within their limits. Our author has closely and discriminatingly treated this vast and exciting subject.

No work ever issued from the press, is better entitled to the attention of those who would, from the past, learn lessons for the future, than the one under review.

VAGABOND LIFE IN MEXICO. By Gabriel Ferry. New York: Harper & Brothers.

A lively and interesting sketch of a six years' residence in Mexico. The author has adroitly and pleasantly mingled many attractive stories of hair breadth scapes and laughable adventures, with valuable information in regard to the manners and habits of the Mexicans. The book will well repay perusal.

SELECT ORATIONS OF CICERO. Translated by C. D. Yonge. New York: Harper & Brothers.

This new translation of these world-wide known orations, seems to be thorough and accurate. It is certainly unnecessary for us to refer particularly to a work ranking so high among the classics. It is well bound, and would adorn any library.

A TREATISE ON ARITHMETIC. By Elias Loomis. New York: Harper & Brothers.

A work entitled "A Course of Mathematics" some years since, issued by the same author, and which has attained general approbation, warrants in asking attention to the present. We have no doubt it will prove valuable to our schools and colleges, as well as to those whose avocations make requisite a knowledge of arithmetic.

We are indebted to the publishers by the kindness of Mr. H. D. McGinnis, No. 36 Camp street, for copies of the above mentioned works.

From the Louisville Journal, December 11, 1855.

DR. HOHENHAMER.—The card of this distinguished physician, who has been for above two years past in New York, is in our columns, and we desire to call attention to it. Dr. B. resided for a number years in Louisville and New Orleans, but is now established in New York permanently.

Dr. H. in his peculiar department of practice has no living rival. He has devoted about eighteen years almost exclusively to the medical and surgical treatment of the diseases of the lower bowels, such as piles, fistula, fissure, falling of the bowel, etc., diseases which are most painful and distressing in their nature, and from which, as the most experienced physicians can testify, not one-fourth of our adult population are free. The successful treatment of the e diseases is difficult under the most favorable circumstances, but Dr. H.'s success has uniformly been most extraordinary—utterly without parallel in this or other country. This success has been the result, in part, of his peculiar method, but more especially of his having devoted so many years exclusively to the treatment of a single class of diseases. Patients are continually flocking to him from distances of five hundred and a thousand miles, and never in vain.

The peculiarities of Dr. Bodenhamer's treatment are that it gives scarcely any pain whatever, that a radical, a perfect cure is effected with certainty, without the slightest danger, and in a very short time, and that his patients are always able to attend to their business, never being confined to their beds or their rooms, nor prevented from freely exercising or moving about wherever they please by either pain or confinement. Dr. H. is of the old school of physicians, and has no concealments as to his practice; he cordially invites all physicians and others, who may feel an interest in the matter, to call and learn for themselves what his treatment is.

J. S. Redfield, 34 Beekman street, New York, has just published Dr. Bodenhamer's book on constipation, piles, fistula, etc., handsomely illustrated by plates, and especially addressed to non-medical persons. This book contains a very large amount of most valuable information for common readers, and is for sale at the bookstore of Messrs. Morton & Griswold in Louisville.

We ought to add that Dr. B. is a most kind hearted and just man, who will never make an improper charge against a patient. my30—3t.

NICARAGUAN CORRESPONDENCE.

CHONTALES, April 5th, 1856.

The land of gold and silver, the far-famed mines of Chontales, bounds the Northern shore of Lake Nicaragua, and is so well situated for commercial as well as agricultural pursuits, that ere long, if the tide of revolution and democratic supremacy continues its course until this great country is completely under the sway of our race, this district will become as famous for its productions, as Cienaga, and for its gold and silver as Ophir of old. In all my travels in this department, I have been impressed a thousand times with its advantages for every industrial pursuit that man can follow; its healthiness; the richness of its soil; its clear, pure streams; the purity of its atmosphere; its romantic valleys, lofty mountains and extensive plains, over which roam thousands of cattle, mules and horses—in fact, with everything connected with the wants of a civilized and industrious people. From Granada to Hualé, the port of the district on the Lake, is about forty miles, and from thence to Rio Mico, where are the gold washings and quartz mines, the distance is about nine leagues. In this country, all distances are defined by leagues, and miles are never mentioned. The Mico is the principal stream or tributary of Hewlfelds, which crosses the Mosquito valley, or great Eastern plain of Nicaragua, and joins the sea some twenty leagues North of San Juan del Norte. The region of the mines is elevated some three thousand feet above the level of the ocean, and the trade winds of the tropics, constantly blow over those great plains that surmount the summit-level, rendering this one of the most delightful sections of country in all Central America. It is a singular fact, that all that region between the Mico and the Lake is almost destitute of timber, except along the streams and upon some of the steepest hillsides, whilst the whole country between that country and the Caribbean Sea, is covered with a dense forest of every species of wood that grows within the tropics.

Every bar in the Mico, and many of its tributaries, contains a fortune in gold, and it only needs the experience and industry of California miners to develope the hidden treasures of these streams. I found the quartz, bearing either gold or silver, (and much of it contains both,) to be very soft and easily pulverized, and all, without exception, extremely rich. There are no large "lumps," however, as is the case in much of the California quartz, and in early diggings, as it is called; but the absence of these is made up in the extreme softness and richness of the rock. This entire region abounds in mill-sites, and the eastern hills are covered, with wood, from whence can be easily obtained any quantity of lumber. These rich, rolling prairies, need no "clearing" and no preparation for the cereals, except the plow. The Acrucia flourishes in great vigor, and in two years it forms an impervious and lasting hedge. Besides this, there are several kinds of thorn-bush, which are superior to the English hawthorn, or the Texas thorn, for hedging. There is ample stone of every quality for building, including limestone; and in my ramblings over the burnt fields, near the streams, I found a great variety of stone, which the lapidary could soon transform into beautiful ornaments, and which, if they were in New Orleans or New York, would be extremely valuable. California diamonds must give way to the Chontales chrystals. In ancient times, this region must have supported an immense population; and, in many places, I stumbled upon the broken columns and crumbling towers of ancient edifices, that gave evidence of a glory and splendor of which these present people have not the slightest glimpse. Stephens should have visited Chontales. These ruins, scattered far and wide on almost every hand, should be depicted by a pen abler than mine to do them justice. Who will enter this fruitful field of description and antiquarian research?

The principal productions now grown by the natives, are sugar cane, corn and plantain, with a few beans, ("frijoles,") or rather, I should say, they grow without cultivation. The cane is superior in every respect to that of Louisiana, and when once it is planted, it will grow with little or no cultivation or labor. The product per acre is much larger than in the States or even Cuba; and the labor necessary for a plantation of 500 acres in Louisiana would be sufficient for 2000 acres here. Cacao or chocolate grows everywhere, tame and wild; and an estate of that article, if well tended and properly cared for, would be of immense value to the proprietor; yet so listless and idle are these people, that even upon the large haciendas just enough is gathered to serve the family of the proprietor. The chocolate of Nicaragua is the richest of any in the world, and tastes so different from that you have at home, you would not know the article made at the restaurants of St. Charles street and the markets of New Orleans. But as we get it from the hand of a skillful "mugher" here, one thinks indeed it is fit for "the gods," as its Greek patronyme indicates—Theobroma. The haciendas of Chontales, like those of the other departments, are fast going down to ruin; civil wars and revolutions speeding them onward to desolation. Most of the proprietors are partisans of the Servilcists or Aristocratic faction, and they can no more keep their hands out of politics than can the members of the "old Albany Regency clique." Faithless among themselves, treacherous to all, they would ride on to ruin, if death itself stood before them. Yet, so far, I have been neither molested nor in any way disturbed by any of them, and if Nicaragua can once obtain a position among the nations, these men will either go elsewhere to nurse their schemes of rebellion and revolution, or quickly descend to a level with their democratic fellow-citizens.

It is from these people that Costa Rica and other States have been encouraged to join in a league against the present Government of Nicaragua, and in fact if war at last comes upon us, these traitors to their own country will be justly chargable with all its fearful evils. Hitherto I have been in hopes of a permanent peace, and have so written you, but after mingling much with the class I speak of, I am prepared to hear almost any day of war within the State, as well as upon its frontiers. And "Cui bono?" they have not the slightest reason to give, nor the shadow of an excuse for their internecine predilections; indeed, most of them now owe their lives and estates to the wisdom and generosity of Walker, for the native democrats are as unscrupulous as they are enthusiastic, and spurting under their long years of wrong and persecutions from these serviles, they have often demanded of Walker the lives of the leaders and the confiscation of their property. It has been my duty, and the aim of all the Americans in this country, to soften down these asperities upon both sides, and maintain towards each and all an open, frank and candiding course of conduct, so as to give no excuse for complaint against our people. But this will not do the work. Power, rank, station, are the objects they have in view, and neither patriotism, love of country, or sense of duty to themselves or their fellow-countrymen, can make them yield up their pretensions to "Legitimacy" and "Hidalgodom." Like the French Bourbons, they cling to that miserable dogma of their political faith, and they would gladly accept the throne (Troun glorioso,) even if they had to march over the dead bodies of every man, woman and child in the land. They would rather rule in a desert than dwell peaceably in a paradise.

You have a glimpse of the party opposed to democracy, which in Central America means something. The democrats wish to reconstruct the Union, and model its constitution and the whole governmental system after the great Republic of the North, and with this I leave your readers to reject or sympathize with their cause and its final success, but which is yet doubtful, unless the American element is greatly strengthened in Nicaragua.

Mas encore,

LAFAYETTE.

SEGOVIA, April 17, 1856.

Messrs. Editors: Leaving Chontales three days ago, I crossed the high Mico range ten leagues north west of Libertad, and gradually descended to the plain of the upper Escondido, as it is called. I finally brought up at this old town, called Matagalpa, and propose to give you a letter from another gold and silver region, far richer in "washings," though not more beautiful nor grand in scenery than the one I have left, and from whence I wrote you a few hasty lines some two weeks ago. But little of the distance between Chontales and Segovia is destitute of the presence of gold, and in fact, I have found it almost everywhere, on the hillsides, in the streams among the roots of grass, in the rotten debris of granite ledges, on the open plain, and in the sand. The land, too, (I mean the soil,) is everywhere rich, capable of the highest cultivation, and fruitful of every production. On the high plains above, and even immediately around Matagalpa, wheat is grown to a considerable extent; and wherever it is cultivated, it flourishes in great vigor, although the production per acre does not average much above the product in Illinois and our rich Western lands. It may seem rather an unnatural bread for one and the same plantation, (I like that word best, don't you?) or hacienda to produce, but I have seen coffee, tobacco, cocoa, corn, wheat, sweet potatoes, oats, beans, peas, limes, oranges, bananas, plantains and arrow root, all flourishing vigorously on the same farm, and as if indigenous to the soil.

Don't believe it that, for it is so, I did not believe it till I saw with my own eyes, and now I know it to be true. A Pennsylvanian, named Gordon, who has been in this country six years, and has one of the finest haciendas in the world, has tried, as he says, to see how many of the productions of this climate could be grown on one section of good land, and has thus proven that all can be made to flourish in the same field, and all with the same vigor. It only needs a little care and attention to have every comfort which nature can provide to enable one to dwell here in a perfect paradise. Of your uplands every kind of vegetable and cereal production of the earth leap into vigorous life to bless the hand that sows the seed, whilst in the streams gold glitters in all its purity to repay the industry of him who gathers it up. The gold ore of the quartz, as well as that of the washings, is of the same character in this region as in that of Chontales; but both are in greater abundance, and capital and labor are better paid in producing it. The surface of the country is much more broken, rocky and abrupt here than in Chontales, and far more of the land must remain at waste; but even upon the steep hill-sides and along the rugged cliffs, the vine can be profitably cultivated, and the fresh strong winds that fan these high regions must be extremely favorable to their healthiness and freedom from those diseases that often destroy them in Spain and France. The old quartz mills that have been so long in operation in this region, are just now mostly idle on account of the late disturbances with the Indians that inhabit the mountains east and north of this, but as they have withdrawn and are again quiet, the proprietors and laborers are preparing to return and recommence operations.

An American party has recently purchased a quartz mine near this place and are bringing out a regular crushing mill from the States. I happen to know that said mill has already reached Granada and is probably awaiting transportation to this place.

The forests that cover the mountains are of the same character of woods that grow in all Central America—cedar, gum, dyewood—indeed, the whole catalogue of useful, ornamental and precious woods flourish in this climate.

What a land of waste lies here, and how criminally neglectful of the innumerable blessings that surround them are these idle, thriftless, semi-civilized people? No winter ever blasts the productions of toil and care, or chills the blood of man or beast; and even the heat of summer is tempered to a most healthful degree by the ever-refreshing breeze. And can it be that Almighty wisdom has fashioned such a land as this, and bestowed upon it so many advantages, only to rust out and waste forever in idleness? Or rather, was it not given to man for his benefit, his home and dwelling? It must be so; and the time cannot be distant, when another and a better—yes, I say, a better—race will people these hills and valleys, and cover them with fruitful fields and blooming gardens, and dot them over with rustling towns and cities. Millions of happy, civilized people might dwell here, where only a few thousand half-savage, ragged, idle and ignorant beings hardly stay.

The echoes of revolutions and wars still sound among these mountains, and it seems music to the ears of a race that has so often mingled in and been affected by them; and yet they have learned nothing from the many great lessons which their civil discords and commotions should teach, but which a stranger can read on every wall and tower. The "disunionists" of the States should all, every one of them, not excepting Horace Greeley, visit Central America, if they would learn the practical effects upon the country which their mad schemes would entail upon a continent, if carried out successfully.

I have not yet been able to visit the mines, as I wish to and must leave for Granada to-morrow, as it is not yet considered safe for an American to travel through the mining district, and my time is limited; but I have seen enough here to induce me to revisit Segovia when peace shall once more smile over the land. But I can conscientiously invite emigrants who are desirous of seeking for homes in Nicaragua, to settle here; and if there was one unfavorable circumstance against the country, I would speak of it.

We have found here, as in Chontales, many precious stones; and when the geologist shall explore these regions with a scientific and a practical eye, he will develope a rich multitude of productions that can be found nowhere else on earth.

And here let me stop to say that a courier has just come in from Honduras, and reports that President Santos Guardiola had recalled the few troops that he had previously ordered down to the frontiers to cooperate with San Salvador against Nicaragua, and that he had also ordered all the servile refugees and conspirators from Nicaragua away from the lines into the interior towns, there to remain under strict surveillance. This, doubtless, is true; and if true, the great "northern league" against Walker is broken; and within a few days past, I have heard these natives talk significantly about a democratic revolution in Costa Rica. Why not? These fellows always get news months in advance of us white folks. It is curious how they get their information, and as their predictions have always come true about this war, I begin to think that it may, indeed, be the fact that a revolution is brewing in that State.

To-morrow, I am off for Granada, from whence you shall hear from me, Vanderbilt to the contrary notwithstanding. I made my supper this evening upon green corn, boiled in the husk and brought on the back of a "muchacho" five miles to market. We had some fine sugar-cane, also, by way of dessert, with oranges freshly plucked from a tree in front of our host's door. You can boast of your ice, juleps, etc., but you can't beat the variety upon our table this afternoon. So good-bye. "Mais encore,"

LAFAYETTE.

GRANADA, May 1st, 1856.

Messrs. Editors—On the 29th ult., I wrote to you, just as we were on the start for Virgin Bay and San Juan del Sur, in pursuit of the Costa Ricans and to clear the Transit Route of all obstructions, provided we met any. As we only "marched up the hill" to have the pleasure of "marching down again," and as orders are given to close the mail to-day, I will add a few lines more to the letter of the 29th. We embarked in the evening of that day about four hundred troops, all told, Gen. Walker in command, and yesterday morning early rounded up opposite to the burnt wharf at Virgin. As we did so, a small party of Americans was seen to come down to the flagstaff opposite the Transit Company's house and hoist the stars and stripes. At sight of this, our troops gave three as hearty cheers as ever came from the glad throats of men; but at the same time there was a shadow of disappointment visible on almost every brow, for we had come down to surprise, and we were to be disappointed of our game, as the signal proved. The race was lauded as soon as possible, and we learned that the enemy had all left Virgin and Rivas the day before for San Juan, on route for Costa Rica, Mora himself leading the way by a start of several days in advance of his army, declaring he had been deceived by the "Servilcs" who had joined his army. However, we were not sure but we might yet get hold of some of them, and the command was given to march to San Juan. We were soon under way, and had gone about four miles down the San Juan road, when Gen. Walker met a courier from there with a letter from Hernandez, the Commander of the Costa Rican forces, stating that he left behind him at Rivas some two hundred sick and wounded, recommending them to Walker's mercy, and promising to exchange prisoners with him when they were all well. As we were also told that the entire army was gone by water to Costa Rica, and there being no necessity for marching the whole American force there, we were countermarched to Virgin—two companies sent to occupy San Juan, one to Rivas, and the balance were left at Virgin under command of Gen. Hornsby, to wait further orders. Gen. Walker and his aids, and a few officers returned last night to this place. It is but an act of justice to the Costa Ricans proper, to say that Mora disavowed the act of burning the wharf at Virgen and the killing of the Americans, saying that he would pay for all property destroyed and ordered all prisoners to be treated according to the rules of war. The acts of barbarism and cruelty were done by order of the Nicaragua serviles, and several of the officers were immediately disgraced by Mora when he came up with the main body of his army and learned what had been done. The transit route is again clear, and five hundred American troops now occupy the road. As the mail closes to-day the Nicaraguense will not be published until Saturday, so you will get more by this steamer.

The cholera has raged terribly among the Costa Rica troops during the last few days, carrying off nearly five hundred of them. Gen. Walker refuses to receive propositions of peace from Costa Rica.

LAFAYETTE.

Later from Havana.

ARRIVAL OF THE QUAKER CITY AT MOBILE.

The U. S. mail steamship Quaker City, Capt. Shufeldt, arrived at Mobile on Monday morning, the 9th instant, having left New York on the 2d instant, at 12 M. She arrived at Havana at midnight, on the 6th, and left Havana at noon, on the 7th, making the run from New York to Mobile in six days and eighteen hours, including twelve hours detention at Havana. This is the quickest trip that has yet been made, faster even than the rapid run of the Quaker City on a former occasion.

There is nothing of interest reported from Havana; the health of the city and island was good. Business was dull, owing to the stringency of the money market.

The U. S. steam frigate Merrimac, Capt. Prendergast, was at Havana, to sail for Key West on the 8th, where she would remain until the 1st of July, to make some repairs to her propeller.

Capt. Shufeldt reports that on the 8th instant, in lat. 26:44 North, long. 85:13 West, he passed the ship Wasp, of Liverpool.

We have papers from Havana, by the Quaker City, to the 7th instant, inclusive.

"La Prensa," in its issue of the 7th instant, commences the publication of a paper entitled "Walker in Nicaragua," written in the most bombastically allusive and distorting style, full of "sound and fury, signifying nothing."

Later from Texas.

The steamer Mexico, Lawless, commander, from Indianola and Galveston 5th inst., arrived here Tuesday morning, bringing ninety-nine passengers, twenty of whom were on deck.

The San Antonio Texan says that on the 20th ult., Capt. Oakes, of the 2d Cavalry, went on a scout from Fort Mason, with twenty-two men, and fell in with a party of Indians, supposed to be Comanches; one was shot dead, and eight others wounded, the others scattering to give the alarm in their camp.

We are informed by a gentleman who has just arrived in our city from Fort Mason, that Capt. Oakes has had another conflict with the Indians. Captain Oakes may now be considered one of the most successful Indian fighters on the frontier.

The Matagorda Chronicle learns that on Caney, the worm is committing ravages on the young cotton.

The Houston Telegraph says: We learn from an intelligent gentleman just down from Tarrant county, that the prospect of the wheat crop is good—much better than was anticipated a few months since. The wheat has recovered from the severity of the winter, and looks quite promising.

The Empire Mills, on the Sabine, five miles below Madison, were burned on the 31st ult. The Galveston News says:

The loss, amounting to $15,000, falls on Mr C. A. Bulkley, of this city. The mills were the best in the State. In addition, 100,000 feet of lumber were destroyed.

FOR NEW MEXICO.—A party of twelve men recently passed through San Antonio for New Mexico, their object being to explore the silver mines of that country. The Texan says of Mr. C. D. Postan, (who is the leader,) and his company:

They have been sent out to explore the Sonora valley by a company, chartered under the name of the "Sonora Exploring and Mining Company." This company has a capital of $100,000, and is at present controlled by the following officers: President, Maj. J. P. Heintzleman, of U. S. A.; Financial Agent; Edgar Conklin, of Cincinnati; T. Butler King, A. H. Gray, J. Waggoner and others, shareholders in the Pacific Railroad, are also shareholders in this company.

It is an established fact that some of the richest silver mines in our country were once worked in what is now called the "Sonora country," but for several generations they have been lost. It is a well known fact, too, that immense masses of native silver ore pass through our city to New Orleans, and that came from somewhere in that direction. We have seen several thousand dollars worth of this ore lying on the counter in a mercantile house in our city.

SPAIN AND MEXICO.—The Baltimore Advertiser, of the 2d inst., says:

The difficulty between Spain and Mexico is said to be serious, but we scarcely credit it. The amount claimed by Spain as losses incurred by Spanish subjects during the struggle of Mexico for independence is six millions. Mexico has called for revision of these claims urging that some of them are fraudulent. Spain refused this demand, and Mexico endeavored to enforce it by compelling the complainants to deposit their titles with ample security for the amounts already paid thereon, threatening to confiscate the property of the Spanish holders should they refuse to do so, and actually carrying out the threat in several cases. This is resented by Spain, and a squadron has been dispatched to Vera Cruz to back its complaints. The task to be executed by this squadron, embracing nine or ten vessels, comprising in all one hundred and sixty guns, is variously stated. By some a bombardment of Vera Cruz is predicted, whilst others assert a blockade only will be attempted. A new Spanish Minister accompanies the squadron which left Havana on the 23d ultimo.

INSURRECTION IN HAYTI.—Boston, June 2.—The Traveler publishes extracts from a letter bearing date, "Aux Cayes, Hayti, May 10," which states, that a formidable insurrection had broken out in that part of the island against the Emperor Soloque. The writer says: "A body of from 2,000 to 3,000 insurgents took possession of a post between this place and Pingrey last night, with the view of attacking the town to-day. The military authorities were only aware of this at 7 o'clock this morning. The alarm drums were immediately beaten and every male adult in town was ordered to join the troops. At 10 A. M., the troops marched out with the citizens that had joined them, but being but 500 strong it is probable they will not make an attack on the insurgents, but will content themselves with defending the entry of the town till re-enforced."

A postscript to the letter, under date of 11th, A. M., adds:

"The alarm drums are again beating. It is said that the troops sent out are repulsed, and the insurgents are pushing forward. People are running distractedly through the streets closing stores, etc."

IMPORTANT CASE.—The New York Evening Mirror, of the 3d instant, has the following:

A suit brought by Millbank & Co., against Denlstoun & Co., to recover $14,9[illegible] for an alleged breach of instructions, and the negligent disposition of five thousand barrels of flour consigned by the plaintiffs in New York to the defendants in Liverpool, was tried for the fifth time in the Superior Court, on Saturday last, the former ones having resulted in the disagreement of the jury. A verdict was rendered for the plaintiffs for $7,829 16.

MAIL MISSING.—We take the following from the Mobile Register of Sunday last:

The bag containing the entire letter mail from this city to the East, which left here on the morning of the 21st ult., is missing. There is no trace of it after leaving this post-office. The postmaster at Montgomery, six days after it was due there, sent an enquiry to the office in this city to know if a mail had been forwarded on that day—the presumption until then being that it had been forwarded from Montgomery by mistake and would be returned. Nothing, however, has transpired in relation to it, although every effort is being made to ascertain its whereabouts. We also learn that the mail of 9th April from New York disappeared in some mysterious manner, and that no tidings have been received of it.

FATAL ACCIDENT IN ST. LOUIS.—We copy the following from the Intelligencer of the 2d:

About 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, as the ferry boat America was preparing to leave the landing on this side, a stranger, whose name we could not learn, went on board and seated himself upon the pitman of the engine. When the engine was put in motion, he was caught in the machinery and so badly crushed that he died in a short time afterward. The very next trip of the boat, a barber named Philip Solomon, who lived on the corner of Second and Almond streets, was instantly killed by being caught between the boat and the staging where she lands. He, with several others, was in a skiff, and, thinking that the ferry boat was likely to come in collision with it, attempted to climb upon the staging, when the boat caught him just above the hips. He never spoke afterward.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN OPELIKA.—We learn that a destructive fire occurred at Opelika, Ala., on the 4th inst., destroying the hotel, and other buildings adjacent.

We learn that Jas. Gordon Bennett, the defendant in the Fry libel case, has determined to pay the damages, $6,000, given by the jury at the close of last week.

Mississippi Telegraph.

THE CINCINNATI CONVENTION.

Pierce and Douglas Withdrawn.

BUCHANAN NOMINATED!!

MR. BRECKENRIDGE FOR VICE PRESIDENT.

CINCINNATI, June 5.—The Convention went into balloting with the following result:

First Ballot—James Buchanan, of Pennsylvania, 135½; Franklin Pierce, of New Hampshire, 122½; Stephen A. Douglas, of Illinois, 33; Lewis Cass, of Michigan, 5.

Second Ballot—Buchanan, 159; Pierce, 119½; Douglas, 31½; Cass, 7.

Third Ballot—Buchanan, 139½; Pierce, 119; Douglas, 39; Cass, 5½.

Fourth Ballot—Buchanan, 141½; Pierce, 119; Douglas, 30; Cass, 5½.

Fifth Ballot—Buchanan, 140; Pierce, 119½; Douglas, 39; Cass, 5½.

Sixth Ballot—Buchanan, 135; Pierce, 107½; Douglas, 28; Cass, 5½.

Seventh Ballot—Buchanan, 143½; Pierce, 89; Douglas, 58; Cass, 5½.

Eighth Ballot—Buchanan, 147½; Pierce, 87; Douglas, 56; Cass, 5½.

Ninth Ballot—Buchanan, 146; Pierce, 87; Douglas, 56; Cass, 7.

Tenth Ballot—Buchanan, 150½; Pierce, 80½; Douglas, 59½; Cass, 7½.

Eleventh Ballot—Buchanan, 147½; Pierce, 80; Douglas, 63; Cass, 5½.

Twelfth Ballot—Buchanan, 148; Pierce, 79; Douglas, 63½; Cass, 5½.

Thirteenth Ballot—Buchanan, 150; Pierce, 77½; Douglas, 63; Cass, 5½.

Fourteenth Ballot—Buchanan, 152½; Pierce, 79; Douglas, 63; Cass, 5½.

The Convention adjourned at a quater before five.

SECOND DAY.

CINCINNATI, June 6.—The Cavention re-assembled at ten o'clock, and proceeded with the balloting, with the following results:

Fifteenth Ballot—Buchanan, 158½; Pierce, 34; Douglas, 118½; Cass, 4½.

Mr. Pierce Withdrawn.

At this juncture the name of Franklin Pierce was withdrawn by the

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

[From the Journal of Commerce.]

MARBLE HALL.

Poem of a Little Life that was but three Aprils long.

BY T. B. ALDRICH.

Have you not heard the Poet tell
How came the dainty babie Bell
In this world of ours?
The gates of Heaven were left ajar:
With folded hands and dreamy eyes
She wandered out of Paradise!
She saw this planet like a star,
Hung in the depths of purple even—
Its bridges running to and fro,
Over which the white-winged Seraphs go,
Bearing the holy Dead to Heaven!
She watched a bridge of flowers—those feet,
In the far days did not bear the hate
Of the celestial explosive!
They fell like dew upon the flowers!
And all the air grew strangely sweet!
And thus came dainty babie Bell
Into this world of ours!

She came and brought delicious May!
The swallows built beneath the eaves;
Like customers in and out the leaves,
The robins went, the livelong day;
The lily-work in the notarian bell.

And o'er the porch the trembling vine
Seemed burning with its veins of wine;
O, earth was full of pleasant smell,
When came the dainty babie Bell
Into this world of ours!

O, babie, dainty babie Bell!
How fair she grew from day to day!
What woman nature filled her eyes,
What poetry within them lay!
Those deep and tender twilight eyes,
So full of musing, pain, and bright
As if one yet stood in the light
Of those oped gates of Paradise!
And we loved babie more and more;
O never in our hearts before
Such baby love was born;
We felt we had a link between
This real world and that unseen—
The time of deathless morn!
And for the love of those dear eyes,
For love of her whom God led forth—
The mother's being ceased on earth
When babie came from Paradise!
For love of him who smote our lives,
And woke the chords of joy and pain,
We said, sweet Christ!—our hearts bent down
Like violets after rain!

And now the orchards which were ours
All white and rosy in their bloom—
Filling the crystal heart of air
With sugared sunshine of perfume,
Were thick with yellow juicy fruit;
The plums were globes of honey rare,
And soft-cheeked peaches blushed and fell!
The grapes were purpling in the grange;
And time wrought just as rich a change
In little babie bell!
Her spirit form more perfect grew,
And in her features we could trace,
In unusual curves, her mother's face:
Her expectature ripened, too.
We thought her lovely when she came,
But she was holy, saintly now.
Around her pale and lofty brow
We thought we saw a ring of flame!

Sometimes she said a few strange words
Whose meaning lay beyond our reach:
God's hand had taken away the seal
Which held the portals of her speech!
She never was a child to us;
We never held her being's key!
We could not teach her holy things;
She was Christ's self in purity!

It came upon us by degrees;
We saw its shadow ere it fell.
The knowledge that our God sent
His messenger for babie Bell!
We shuddered unimagined pain,
And all our thoughts ran into tears!
And all our hopes were changed to fears—
The sunrise into dismal rain!
Aloud we cried in our belief:
"O, smite us gently, gently, God!
Teach us to bend and kiss the rod,
And perfect grow thy grief!"
Ah, how we loved her, God can tell;
Her little heart 'cased in ours—
They're broken caskets—babie Bell!

At last he came, the messenger,
The messenger from unseen lands:
And what did dainty babie Bell!
She only crossed her little hands!
She only looked meek and fair!
We parted back her silken hair;
We laid some buds upon her brow—
Death's bride arrayed in flowers!
And thus went babie Bell
Out of this world of ours!

LINES

Suggested on hearing the Hon. Edward Everett deliver his lecture upon the "Character of Washington."

I sat amid an eager crowd
His world-famed eloquence to hear—
The champion of our nation's laws—
Who charmed a listening Senate's ear;
And while expectant thought was quick
To strike wild notes from fancy's lyre,
I painted deep dramatic force,
An eye of flame, a tongue of fire.

He came—so simple, quiet, grave,
With noble and majestic mien,
The "Statesman" and the "Patriot"—
With massive brow, and eye serene,
One of those men I deemed was lost
Forever with that chosen band
Who fought, with hearts like well-tried steel,
For Freedom and their Native Land.

He spoke—each flitting care of life—
Each earth-born thought of hope or fear,
Receded as too mean to hold
Its paltry place, when he was near.
Virtue, sublimed to angel height,
In glowing colors met the view;
Virtue, so opening heaven's gates,
Some portion of its light shone through.

And Washington alone the theme—
His life, his childhood, manhood, age,
The warrior, statesman, patriot,
The wise, unselfish, thoughtful "sage,"
And those that we so long had held
High on the storied lists of fame,
Sank as if veiled in clouds of night
Contrasted with that mighty name.

And he who spoke had power to feel
Much lofty aim for human good,
When man, even in his fallen state,
Claims with the angels brotherhood;
And reflex power, and polished guile,
And all our thoughts ran into tears!
And all our hopes were changed to fears—
And mighty deeds that shake the world,
Measured with strength of goodness, seemed
Like Lucifer to ruin hurled.

Ah! not till then had I believed
That eloquence like this could be;
The actor's studied tricks of art,
Appeared so poor, so tame to me,
When words whose purity recalled
The dew arising to the sun,
Forever blent the immortal names
Of Everett and Washington.

What is Noble?—BY CHAS. SWAIN.

What is noble? To inherit
Wealth, estate and proud degree?
There must be some other merit
Higher yet than these for me!
Something greater far must enter
Into life's majestic span;
Fitted to create and center
True nobility in man!

What is noble? 'Tis the fire
Portion of our mind and heart;
Link'd to something still diviner
Than mere language can impart:
Ever prompting—ever seeing
Some improvement yet to plan;
To uplift our fellow-being,
And, like man, to feel for Man!

What is noble? Is the sabre
Nobler than the humble spade?
There's a dignity in labor
Truer than e'er pomp arrayed!
He who seeks the Mind's improvement
Aids the world in aiding Mind:
Every great commanding movement
Serves not one—but all mankind.

O'er the forge's heat and ashes,
O'er the engine's iron head,
Where the rapid shuttle flies
And the spinn'd web fills the thread;
Thro' la labor, toil'd by millions,
Each manufactory of the hour,
Thence is guided still extending
Science—and its world of power!

Mid the dust, and speed, and clamor
Of the loom-shed and the mill;
Mid the clink of wheel and hammer
Great results are growing still!
Though too oft by Fashion's creatures,
Wrath and warfare vapy be blazed,
Commerce need not hide its features;
Industry is not ashamed.

The London Chronicle, after giving a description of the late great review of the English fleet at Spithead, says:

"One useful truth we learn from this review;
It shows what we could but can ne'er do."

An Army Officer Resigned.—The resignation of Capt. Samuel G. French, Assistant Quartermaster and First Lieutenant Third Artillery, has been accepted by the President, to take effect May 31, 1854.

INHUMAN.—Mr. Smith gives a policeman a large sum of money to wake him in the morning. Mr. Smith is, therefore, like a new Easter drama—He's "got up regardless of expense."

The Turks consider that their Sultan has made a great approach to European customs, from the fact that he has reduced the number of ladies in his harem from 1000 to 350.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIP INDIAN.

The steamship Indian arrived at Quebec, on the 31 inst., she brings no political news of importance. The following is all we have been able to extract from our exchanges:

England.

The weather in England has been very boisterous, and several vessels had been driven ashore. The British bark Mary Wilson was on the rocks.

THE CENTRAL AMERICAN QUESTION.—In the House of Lords on Monday evening, the earl of Clarendon, in reply to a question by the earl of Elgin, said that the letter signed E. Hammond was a genuine document, and that it arose from the following circumstances:

The agent of the Costa Ricans in the country, and some agents in the South American States, had, ever since the attack of Walker on the government of Nicaragua, appealed to the government of this country to assist them in defending themselves.

A great variety of projects had been laid before Her Majesty's Government for the acceptance of a Protectorate by this country, and giving them material assistance. To all those requests Her Majesty's Government had invariably replied in the negative, declaring that they would have nothing to do with the troubles of the States of Central America; but at the same time, the Government expressed itself extremely sorry for the attack on Nicaragua and the diplomatic wants which followed, which is especially regretted because the property of British subjects had not only been endangered, but actually sacrificed by Walker—therefore, Her Majesty's Government would be very glad if Walker's enterprises were not carried further; but they again and again said thet with the affairs of Central America they had determined to have nothing whatever to do, and that all their action would be limited to sending just that sufficient naval force to the coast of South America which would be adequate for the protection of British property.

Mr. Wallinstein, who made the application on behalf of Costa Rica, was greatly disappointed at this answer, and spoke of the vast amount of British property there, which, he said, ought to be defended by a naval force.

Since Walker took possession of Nicaragua he had disposed of a good deal of British property by force alone, and Her Majesty's Government had communicated with the Government of the United States in the matter, and he would read an extract from e dispatch of Mr. Crampton on the question. There had been no disguise whatever with the U. S. Government. The object of the British Government avowedly had been to protect British interests. On the 5th of March, Mr. Marcy said he eatirely disapproved of the existing state of things in Nicaragua, and thought it likely to cast a shadow upon the reputation of the United States. He observed that he knew no better plan of proceeding than for the United States and the British Government to combine for the protection of the citizens of the United States and the subjects of Great Britain.

The annual statement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer has been laid before Parliament. The estimated revenue for the current year is set down at £67,166,000, showing a deficiency of £8,873,000.

The Crimean Board of Industry, after a session of twenty-three days, closed its investigations on Monday.

Riots were anticipated in London, on account of the withdrawal of military bands from the parks on Sunday evenings, but the last Sunday passed off quietly.

Turkey.

Dispatches from Vienna state that letters had been received from Constantinople announcing that a convention had been concluded between the Porte and the Western Powers, and adding that the evacuation of the Turkish territory by the troops of the allies will be completed in six months.

Russia.

It is reported via Berlin, that Gen. Sir Wm. W. Williams, had arrived at St. Petersburg, and would shortly leave the Russian Capitol for England.

The London Times' Berlin Correspondent writes that the Emperor had given his whole fleet a new arrangement, in consequence of the events of the war. At present, the Russian fleet consists of three divisions, making a total of forty-three vessels of war and three transports. Of the former, nine are steamers.

Trade continued dull at St. Petersburg. Holders of tallow were unwilling to settle at prevailing prices.

The coronation of the Emperor Alexander was fixed to take place in September.

The Relations Between England and France.

The London correspondent of the Philadelphia Pennsylvanian thus writes about the relations of France and England:

"The deep and daily increasing sympathy between the Courts of St. Petersburg and Paris, is exciting the liveliest alarm among our British aristocracy, although the wily Palmerston and his Cabinet affect to ignore its existence. However, although peace has been concluded, yet the labors of the Recruiting Sergeant have not ceased, and the nervous anxiety of our Government to raise an army and to disembody the militia, is apparent to the dullest observer. Land, unlike all other species of property, has not been originally acquired by industry, but by successful robbery or sycophancy; and the present generation are broaching carious questions relative to the titles of our oligarchy, founded on the gift of a feudal sovereign, or the suppression of a monastery when Henry VIII arbitrarily "turned church lands to lay." In fact, the aristocracy feel perfectly aware that their tenures depend solely on the influence of diplomacy in the courts of Europe, and it is a remarkable circumstance in the secret history of the revolution of 1688, that the unfortunate James the Second lost his crown—not for the unconstitutional oppression of his subjects; not because he professed the Catholic religion; not because he abdicated de jure—but because he declared that the 'Ruessells,' 'Cavendishes,' etc., should disgorge their plunder of the Abbey lands. This was the real cause of William the Third being invited to the British throne. Louis Napoleon has lived long among us, and has deeply studied our political history and the social relations of our several classes, and, depend upon it, he will avail himself of his knowledge at no distant day. He knows that England is wealthy and defenseless, and that although her wealth can create a navy and her commercial seamen man it on an emergency, yet, that her treasury could not procure her an army, nor her military colleges produce an officer capable of commanding one. Nothing is now more firmly believed in England than that the late war was secretly fomented by the French Emperor, for the purpose of testing her resources. If so, Cronstadt, Revel and Riga have smiled at our navy. Mr. Crampton will inform him where we expect to raise men to fight our battles; and the present 'Crimean Commissioner of Inquiry' will elucidate the skill and competency of our commanders. Louis Napoleon further knows that a proclamation for the resumption of lands would convert the apathy of our community into decided hostility to our government, who look with distrust on an armed militia lest another Cromwell should be found in their ranks. Sir Robert Peel felt that, to give her middle classes a virtual interest in the soil of Ireland, was indispensable to her own internal tranquility, and the peace and safety of an empire threatened each instant with dismemberment; this he extensively effected through the agency of 'The Encumbered Estate Court,' but this establishment wrought the transfer of land from the oligarchy so effectually, as to threaten their very existence as a separate order in that Island; and a proposal to introduce a similar measure into England and Scotland was consequently violently opposed in the utmost consternation by the British Aristocracy. Late events have proved that England possesses few continental allies, and thus, should a hostile junction of Russia with France be formed against her, the English nobility might tread in the exiled wanderings of their French compeers of 1789.

"The daring project of the Arch Duke Constantine to invade the Island of Great Britain, has made a deep impression on the minds of our statesmen, and preparations to defend the southern shore of England are now the theme of anxious discussion, and a work published by Mr. Ferguson, on the national defenses, has attracted the marked attention of our military authorities. So open are the present fortifications that he calculates that only ten minutes would elapse between a screw steamer coming within range of our guns and her becoming master of Portsmouth! About ten years since, a French invasion was considered to be neither an impossible or an improbable event, and, accordingly, the Parliament of the then day voted a considerable sum to construct permanent defenses at Portsmouth, Gosport, Duvenport, Guernsey, Alderney, etc. These works were eagerly commenced, but the revolution of 1848, which buried Louis Phillippe from his throne, slackened our zeal, and they thenceforth proceeded rather languidly. However, Mr. Ferguson's system of fortification differ so widely from those of his predecessors, Vauban, Cohorn, Montalambert, etc., that these late lines, together with those erected in the days of Charles the Second, William the Third and George the Third are comparatively worthless. His plan has, indeed, all the merit of simplicity, consisting merely of three successive tiers of ramparts, armed with three thousand guns, extending from Frater Point to the western extremity of Stokes' Bay—placed four thousand five hundred yards from the dock-yard, quite beyond the range of shot or shell, faced by a ditch two hundred feet wide, with fifteen feet of water—the whole to be formed of earthworks alone. Conflicting opinions prevail among our military men, as to the superiority of Mr. Ferguson's design, but the necessity of some fortifications on our Southern coast is admitted by all parties, even by those who hypocritically smile at the danger they are meant to avert. Louis Napoleon is as treacherous as he is smooth-tongued. The perjured Consul of the Inciolable Republic is the crowned despot of to-day, and our French ally of 1856 might possibly be our French invader of 1857."

LATER FROM CENTRAL AMERICA, CALIFORNIA AND OREGON.

ARRIVAL OF THE DANIEL WEBSTER.

Popular Revolution in San Francisco.

QUIET RESTORED AT PANAMA.

Arrival of the Passengers per Minnie Schaffer and Daniel Webster at Nicaragua.

The Transit Route Open.

The U. S. mail steamship Daniel Webster, Henry Churchill, commander, arrived yesterday morning from San Juan and Aspinwall, with passengers and mails. We are indebted to Mr. M. B. Hart, her accommodating purser, for the following memoranda:

The U. S. mail steamship Daniel Webster, Captain Churchill, left New Orleans 23d May, and reached San Juan on the morning of the 28th, at 6 o'clock. Schooner Minnie Schaffer was lying outside the bar waiting for a fair wind to enter the harbor. The Daniel Webster landed her passengers, fifty in number, and proceeded to Aspinwall, where she arrived next morning at 6 o'clock, and forwarded the balance, one hundred and twenty, immediately to Panama by railroad. The George Law arrived next day at 7 o'clock, with six hundred and fifty passengers, who also proceeded to Panama. Steamer J. L. Stephens arrived from California, with seven hundred and fifty passengers and two millions of treasure. The Panama Railroad is in excellent working order—the passengers making the transit from ocean to ocean with comfort and safety in four hours. The agents and conductors of the road are entitled to much consideration for the care and comfort of passengers crossing the Isthmus, and also the company's physicians that are stationed on the road for their kind and humane treatment to the wounded and distressed by the late accident, who state that they had every care and kindness shown them that they could have had in any part of the United States.

All is quiet at Panama. Sloop-of-war St. Mary is still in port, and received Mr. Commissioner Corwine, who arrived per George Law, with a salute of fifteen guns. Mr. Corwine, on his arrival, notified the Governor of Panama of his commission.

Fifteen hundred natives are constantly employed on the Panama Railroad, quarrying stone and improving the route. Iron bridges are to take the place of wooden ones, with stone abutments.

British gun brig Hermes arrived at Aspinwall, from San Juan, June 1st, and left on the 4th for Jamaica. Bark Pilot Fish and brig E. Drummond are to sail in a few days for the States. No sickness at Aspinwall and weather delightful.

The Daniel Webster cleared for New Orleans on the 4th, at 6, P. M., and the George Law the same day for New York, with passengers and treasure. The Webster called at San Juan next day, at 8 o'clock, P. M., for passengers, and left at 11 same night. The report of the detention of the steamer Orizaba and the blockade of the port of San Juan by the English men-of-war was premature, as nothing of the kind took place or was intended. This information was gained by personal inquiry. The Minnie Schaffer's passengers, 120, together with those of the Webster, 50, embarked together next day after their arrival, and went up San Juan river unmolested. Left in port H. B. M. sloop-of-war Eurydice and schooner Minnie Schaffer. The Hon. Cortland Cushing died at Punta Arenas on the 24th ultimo, of the fever of the country. His funeral was attended by his nequaintances and many others, among whom were Captain Tarleton and other officers of the British ship Eurydice; English and American Consals were present. The latter read the funeral service at the grave. The transit is in possession of Gen. Walker. Considerable sickness prevails among his troops, viz: cholera, vomito and dysentery. The Costa Rican army has retired from Nicaragua to their own frontiers, it is said, with the loss of one thousand five hundred men in battle and from sickness. General Walker has made his headquarters at Leon, and marched all his troops from Virgin Bay and San Juan del Sur to that point. In Costa Rica a revolution is said to have broken out during the absence of President Mora, headed by an influential family named Castro. The Costa Rica mail is now conveyed to the Atlantic, via Cutbargo, to Salt Creek, forty miles south of San Juan del Norte.

June 9th, latitude 24:34, longitude 87:30, passed ship William H. Wharton, of New York; same day passed ship John.

California.

By the arrival of the Daniel Webster we have San Francisco papers to the 21st May inclusive. We take the following summary from the Alta of the 20th, which contains all the news of the previous fortnight:

The most startling intelligence of the fortnight is the assassination of James King, of William, Esq., editor of the Evening Bulletin, by a man named Jas. P. Casey, formerly a convict in Sing Sing Prison, N. Y., and latterly proprietor of the Sunday Times, of this city. It occured on Wednesday, the 14th inst., at about 5 o'clock, P. M., in Montgomery street, at the corner of Washington, and was committed by cowardly shooting him through the left breast, without any warning. The assassin was taken into custody, and a most intense excitement was created among the people, who manifested a strong desire to lynch the perpetrator of the deed on the spot. The difficulty grew out of some publications in the respective papers of the parties.

The Vigilance Committee turned out with two thousand armed citizens on Sunday, the 18th, and proceeded to the County Jail, and demanded the person of the prisoner Casey, and the Sheriff surrendered him, as successful resistance to such a force was perfectly impossible. They also removed Cora, the murderer of Gen. Richardson, from the jail to the Vigilance Committee head quarters, and will probably try them both by a people's jury, and punish them accordingly. It is thought they will both be hung. The whole was consummated with but little excitement, but created a deep sensation in the community. The conduct of the Committee meets with the approval of almost the entire community, who are anxious to see a regeneration here.

A melancholy accident occurred on the 5th inst., at the May Festival of the Turn Verein Society, by the premature discharge of a cannon, with which two men were firing a salute. Both were horribly mutilated about the arms, and one of them, Charles B. Daget, died on the following day from the injuries received. The other, H. S. Tabor, a German, has had both hands amputated near the elbow, and is doing well.

The City Comptroller has submitted a report of the finances of the city for the current year, by which he shows that there has been a saving in the annual expenses of the city of about $1,500,000 from last year. This reform is attributed to the operations of the new charter, under which we have been working since July last.

State.

The past fortnight has been marked by stirring events in California.

Immediately after the departure of the last steamer, efforts were made in many parts of the State to organize volunteer companies to go down to Panama, to protect passengers on the Isthmus, and if necessary to chastise the natives of Granada for the late slaughter of Americans. Public meetings were held on the Plaza in this city, and many patriotic speeches were made, and persons enough appeared ready to go on the expedition, but it was finally thought advisable to postpone any action until the arrival of the next steamer.

The State Council of the American party met at Sacramento, on the 13th inst., with a good representation from all parts of the State. Resolutions were adopted removing all secrecy and the different degrees. Also endorsing the Nebraska question and the nomination of Fillmore and Donelson.

The difficulty in the Democratic party in this State has recently been revived by a correspondence between M. S. Latham, Collector of this Port, and several Democrats who claim that he has not shown certain members of the party sufficient consideration in his official favors. The complaint comes from that branch of the party called "Purifiers," or who claim to be contending for a reform in party matters.

President Pierce has been addressed on the subject.

Col. Zobriska, of Sacramento, (Democrat,) and Geo. C. Bates, Esq., of this city, (Republican,) after making several attempts to have a public political discussion at Sacramento—which was prevented by the dislike of the people to listen to a discussion of the principles of the Republican party—finally got a hearing, and the debate came off before a large audience in front of the Orleans Hotel.

An attempt was made on the 6th instant to fire the steamer Young America, on her passage from this city to Marysville, and within five miles of Sacramento. One of the state-rooms had been engaged, and every precaution taken to successfully burn the boat. Everything about the room was saturated with camphene, and one or two full cans were also in the room, for the purpose of more rapidly communicating the flames to all parts of the boat. The torch was applied at about three o'clock in the morning, when all were sound asleep. Fortunately the flames were extinguished before they extended beyond the room where they originated.

Captain Wm. Galloway, a partner in the vessel, was subsequently arrested upon suspicion of being guilty of the offence, and after a full hearing before the Mayor of this city, was held to answer before the Grand Jury, on bail of $8,000. The evidence was entirely circumstantial, and such as cannot possibly convict a man of his universal good and irreproachable character.

We have dates from Utah to the 2d April; the only news of importance is the adoption of a State Constitution by a Convention, and the appointment of delegates to Washington to ask admission into the Union.

Gov. Johnson has undertaken the removal of the Notary appointees of his predecessor; and the refusal of the first removal to surrender the seal of office, brought the matter into the courts, and was decided in favor of the present incumbent in the District Court, but it will be taken to the Supreme Court, where the decision may be reversed.

W. T. Sherman, Esq., of Messrs. Lucas, Turner & Co., has been appointed by the Governor Brigadier General of the San Francisco Division of the State military forces.

Later from Oregon.

By the arrival of the Columbia at San Francisco, we have papers to the 15th May.

From the Oregonian of that date, we learn that the campaign against the Indians in the northern portion of the Territory is at an end, and that the country above the Dallas will soon be in undisputed possession of the Indians, the volunteers having all been disbanded. From the South, the Oregonian has the following:

From Mr. Bradbury, of the South, we learn that the volunteers, numbering two hundred and fifty, under Gen. Lamerick, surprised a band of Indians encamped on a bar of Rogue river, near the meadows, and firing upon them, killed about thirty, and completely routed the remainder.

The volunteers lost none, and had two wounded, one (a Mr. Mercer of Capt. Wilkinson's Company,) badly, and it is feared mortally. He was brought into the hospital at Deer Creek, and it is thought has died before this.

The Indians fought for some time, but finally retreated. Gen. Lamerick made preparations to follow, hoping to strike an effectual blow. The volunteers captured ten horses.

Mr. H. also states that a Mr. McHarkness, of Grave Creek House, while carrying an express from Grave Creek to Gen. Lamerick, was fired upon; he fell from his horse, and was horribly mutilated by the Indians, while alive, as the wound was not mortal.

LATEST NEWS FROM PUGET SOUND.—We learn, says the Oregonian, from Mr. E. T. Gunn, editor and publisher of the Puget Sound Courier, who arrived in this city on Wednesday morning last, that considerable alarm still exists along the Sound in relation to the Indian war. That the volunteers and regulars were all taking the field, to concentrate their forces, expecting to meet the Indians in a large body near Fort McAllister, on South Penirie, between the Puyallup and Nisqually rivers. An encampment had been found in a swamp near by, from which, it is supposed about 150 Indians had just left. Fresh signs of men and horses were seen in abundance close around, and it is probable there were spies in the immediate vicinity. Lieut. McKibben, with a command of twenty regulars, left Fort Stellacomm for that region on Wednesday of last week, by way of the Nisqually, and Lieut. Kuntz, with the same number, on Thursday, by the Puyallup. Major Van Bokkelen, and Capts. Swindel and Hubbeson, of the volunteers, with their different commands, had moved in the same direction. The volunteers still garrisoned Fort McAllister.

Late and Exciting News from Kansas.

We take the following letter from the St. Louis Republican of the 3d inst.

WESTPORT, May 27.—The Abolitionists are again under arms; so soon as the militia dispersed, they began to murder in the dark. There is no open fight in them. For pure thing a year the fanatics in Lawrence have been swearing that they would fight before surrendering. On the 21st, they had a fair chance for a daylight fight, but that is not what they want. When there was a chance to kill Jones in the daytime, while discharging his duty, no one dared to do it, but when night came many were ready, and it was done—the world knows how dastardly. To-day we got an authentic news of the murder of several citizens on Pottowatomie Creek, in cold blood. Yesterday, an extra was published at Independence about the massacre, a copy of which was sent you to-day, without comment, along with my letter, giving a detailed account of the siege at Lawrence. A letter was received here to-day, signed by well-known persons, confirming the news. Five men are known to be killed. A. P. Wilkinson, a member of the Kansas Legislature, who was humorously called "The gentleman from Osswatomie," was dragged from the bed in which his wife was lying sick, she begged for her husband's life, but the only answer replied was that she had "kind friends." He was cut to pieces. An old man by the name of Doyle, and two sons were slain—one of them, a lad, had his hands and ears cut off by the Abolitionists, and after suffering for some time, they quartered his head.

Then there was a Mr. Sherman whom they butchered, so that his wife could hear the death blows and the dying groans. What can be said of these things? They exceed the barbarities of the savage. If the Abolitionists are men of blood, why not shed it as men? Because they are not men. At Lawrence it could have been done; but no, they go where they are the stronger party, and kill in the dark.

Within a few days, many families have arrived here from Hickory Point, in Kansas, who were driven from their farms, and in some cases their negroes and horses stolen. The negroes were told that they could go to Missouri and be slaves, or stay and be free. Those that remained were armed—some would not remain.

What is to be the end of these outrages? If they do not cease soon, they can only end in war and extermination of one or the other party, and you can easily guess which that will be.

It was thought that destroying the hotel and printing-offices in Lawrence would quell the rebels. They have been boasting that the pro-slavery party, or Missourians, as they call them, were afraid of Sharp's rifles, and it was believed that when it should be proved to them that they did not fear them they would be submissive. They run with the rifles again in their hands that they had sworn to fight with, and begged for quarter. It was granted; but so soon as the troops dispersed to their homes, Sharp's rifles are being flourished again. They will have one more chance to use them. H. C. F.

MR. EVERETT ON THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES.—Hon. Edward Everett, on the occasion of delivering his famous address on the life and character of Washington at Taunton, Mass., on Friday the 30th ult., after alluding to the pleasure with which he always dwelt on his theme, continued as follows:

"But with the satisfaction which I feel at addressing you at this time, are mingled profound anxiety and grief. A sadness which I strive in vain to repress overwhelms me at the occurrences of the past week; and serious apprehension forces itself upon my mind that events are even now in train with an impulse too mighty to be restrained, which will cause our beloved country to shed tears of blood. Through all her borders, in generations yet to come, civil war with all its horrid train of pillage, fire and slaughter, will be carried on without the slightest provocation against the infant settlements of our brethren on the frontiers of the Union. The worse than civil war raging for months unrebuked at the Capitol has at length with a lawless violence, of which there is no parallel in the annals of constitutional government, stained the floors of the Senate Chamber with the blood of a defenceless man; and he a Senator from Massachusetts.

Oh! my good friends, these are events which, for the good name, peace, and safety of our country, it were well worth all the gold of California to blot from our record! They sicken the heart of the patriot, of the good citizen, of the christian. They awaken gloomy doubt whether the trials, sacrifices and sufferings of our fathers for the sake of founding higher and purer and freer civilization in this Western continent, than the world has yet seen, have not been in vain. For myself, they fill me with sorrow, too deep for tears! I am not ashamed of the weakness, for I sorrow, not for myself—my few remaining years, running too rapidly to a close do not allow me to attach much importance to anything this side the grave, which concerns me individually. But I sorrow, far beyond the power of words to express, for the objects of affection which I leave behind—for my children, and country! And God is my witness, that if by the laying down of my poor life this hour I could undo what has been done in the last two years, beginning with the disastrous repeal of the Missouri compromise, I would willingly and cheerfully make the sacrifice. Did I not think there is a healing charm in that attachment of veneration to the character of Washington—almost the only remaining kindly sentiment which pervades the whole country, and in the contemplation of that character, there is a spirit, a wisdom to guide and love—to sooth and unite, I would even now throw myself upon your indulgence to excuse me from the duty of the evening."

VICKSBURG, SHREVEPORT AND TEXAS RAILROAD.—We have information direct from the eastern division of our road. The work is progressing rapidly and everything moving on as prosperously as could be expected, or almost even desired. It is expected that the grade will be completed to Monroe, a distance of seventy-four and a quarter miles, by the first of January next, and the iron laid as far out as the Bayou Mason, a distance of about thirty-seven miles. When the iron is laid to that point the road will pay, in fact it would be an excellent road if it never extended an inch further.

In a little more than twelve months from this time the cars will run to Monroe, and what is more, the whole road with its equipments will be paid for. The Company is now, and will be, at least until then, entirely out of debt. It is the determination of the Board to keep entirely free from debt until there is such an amount of work completed as to form a solid basis of credit, when, if desired, they can go into the market with their bonds, and get any amount that may be required for future operations. This even will not be necessary to the success of the work, as no deficiency of means is anticipated, but it may be thought advisable, when the cars reach Monroe, to anticipate the resources of the Company in order to press forward the work more rapidly. The contractor on this end of the work fully calculates on running the cars to the Texas line by the 1st of May, 1858.

[Shreveport Democrat, 29th.

The statistical returns of Providence, R. I., show that patent medicines are manufactured there by the thousand barrels. Two establishments of this description in that city, render the enormous product of 1,000 barrels and 432,000 bottles of medicines amounting to $700,000.

MEDICAL CARD.

W. BODENHAMER, M. D., would respectfully inform his friends in the South and Southwest, that he has permanently located himself in the city of New York, where he still continues to devote his whole attention to the medical and surgical treatment of Chronic Diseases, especially those of the Lower Bowel—such as Piles, Constipation, Fistula, Fissure, Falling of the Bowel, etc. He has devoted a number of years to the treatment of those diseases in Louisville, Ky., and New Orleans, La.; and for the success attending his peculiar practice, as well as other information on the subject, he refers to his work on those diseases, lately published by J. S. Redfield, of New York, especially addressed to non-medical readers, and for sale at the bookstores of B. M. NORMAN and J. C. MORGAN, New Orleans.

☞ Letters can be addressed to Dr. W. Bodenhamer, 46 East Twenty-first street, New York. my31 3m

Startling and Interesting Facts

CONCERNING

CHOLERA, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY, COLIC,

Summer Complaints, etc.

A fact that should startle is this: One feels a slight uneasiness in the bowels, a slight diarrhœa comes on, which is little thought of in a short time, in a few hours, perhaps, in a few days, it is attended with sickness of the stomach, a most sinking weakness, rapid discharges, coldness, cramps, agonies, blackness, collapse, DEATH—and yet all this fatal result from a disregard of the warning, premonitory Diarrhœa, and neglect of a wise provision of a safe and sure remedy that Kind Providence has made easy to all.

This remedy is made public from the strongest desire to rescue the exposed, under the best substantial conviction that it is certain in its good effects, and will fill its mission, no one heeding the warning, and using the remedy, need be a victim to the Cholera.

DR. BILLINGS'

CARMINATIVE and ASTRINGENT SYRUP

IS THIS SURE REMEDY.

By the advice and urgent request of hundreds, whose lives have been saved—of many even when apparently in the very last struggles of death—he has been induced to make still more efforts to give a wider publicity to a remedy so greatly successful.

The perfection which he and others ascribe to this remedy may appear beyond the power of medicine to possess; yet the truthfulness of the claim is most thoroughly established, and will be fully confirmed by calling on the individuals who have witnessed its effects, and used it with complete success, some of whose names we are authorized to give.

For Cholera, Cholic, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Bloody-Flux, Summer Complaints and Weaknesses of the Bowels, this medicine is offered as a certain remedy. This is the medicine that arrested that horrible disease so prevalent among the Mexican soldiers. The officers first commenced its use, after which they gave it their soldiers, and cured in every case without an exception. I would refer to the officers and others who served in the war with Mexico. Sold by

O. O. WOODMAN,
corner of Common and Magazine streets, New Orleans.
J. WRIGHT, & CO.,
21 and 151 Chartres street.
JOS. TUCKER, Mobile.
W. H. FOX, Natchez, Miss.

my24 1m

SPLENDID ARCHITECTURAL WORK.

CHAPEL AND CHURCH ARCHITECTURE, with designs for PARSONAGES. By GEORGE BOWLES, Roxbury, Mass.

This work is designed to meet a want which has been long felt. Among all denominations of Christians, plans for chapels and churches of moderate cost have been needed, from which committees may select a style appropriate to their wants, and not too expensive for their means. This want the author has endeavored to meet, by presenting a series of designs, ranging in estimated cost from $1,500 to $20,000.

Designs for country and city parsonages, such as will commend themselves to the good taste of all. The working plans for these drawings are so minute that the master-builder will be enabled to be too costly; but all such plans and specifications can be had on application to the author. The principal design of the work, however, is to enable committees to decide on same style previous to making application to architects, so that they may convey their ideas and wishes clearly. With this end in view, the work is commended to the public.

At a meeting of the Boston Conference of Methodist Ministers, the following resolution in regard to the above elegant and timely work, was passed unanimously:

BOSTON, Feb. 25, 1856.—The Committee appointed to examine Plans of Church Architecture, by Brother George Bowler, have attended to their duty as far as they have been able, and would report the following:

Resolved, That the Plans and Sketches of Church Architecture, designed and drawn by our brother, Bro. George Bowler, evince, in a high degree, correct taste, ability and skill in execution, combining in themselves, to an extent seldom realized, beauty, economy and convenience; and we feel confident that the publication of the work would be of essential service to the churches in this country.

This superb work is now ready, in one elegant folio volume. It contains over forty elegantly executed Lithographic Designs, with ground plans and letterpress executed in the highest style of art, on tinted cloth, price $10 per copy, with a liberal discount by the hundred. All orders to be addressed to the publishers,

JOHN P. JEWETT & COMPANY,
Boston.
JEWETT, PROCTOR & WORTHINGTON,
Cleveland, Ohio.
SHELDON, BLAKEMAN & CO.,
New York.
J. C. MORGAN, New Orleans.

And for sale by the trade generally. my17 3t

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS—PILLS THAT ARE PILLS.—Professor Olmsted, late State Chemist, of Massachusetts, says they are the best of all Pills. Among the eminent are the men who certify that Bost, Hayes Know, viz:

LEMUEL SHAW, Chief Justice Supreme Court of Mass.
EDWARD EVERETT, late Governor of Mass.
W. C. BUCKNELL, Lieut. Gov. of Mass.
EDWARD EVERETT, Ex Sec. of State and Senator of U. S.
ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Ex Speaker House Rep. U. S.
ABBOTT LAWRENCE, Minister to the Court of Great Britain.
JOHN B. FITZPATRICK, Catholic Bishop of London.

MEN THAT ARE MEN!!!

Among the diseases this Pill has cured with astonishing rapidity, we may mention

Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache, arising from a foul stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Slight Inaction of the Bowels, and pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Pleasures and Cutaneous Diseases, which require an evacuant Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach; such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout and other kindred complaints, arising from a low state of the body, or obstructions of its functions. They are the best Purgative Medicine ever discovered, and you will be pured to use them once to know it.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass., and sold by every respectable druggist in the United States.

my24 2m J. WRIGHT & CO., Wholesale Agents.

MRS. READ'S SEMINARY.

BATON ROUGE, LA.—This institution is open for the reception of Misses wishing to pursue a regular course of study. Grounds have been purchased at Greenwell Springs, in the pine piney woods country, about seventeen miles from Baton Rouge, and buildings are being erected for the use of the school during the summer and fall months of the year.

dec16 ff

PLANTATION AND GARDEN FERTILIZERS.

THE subscriber has constantly on hand the following concentrated manures, a single trial of which will prove to the most incredulous their value as a restorer of fertility to worn out soils, and their adaptation to increasing largely the products of the Garden and Orchard.

Numerous testimonials from gentlemen who tried them last season have been received, all of whom concur in saying that their experiments were satisfactory and profitable beyond their anticipation—

PHOSPHATED GUANO,
In barrels of about 250 lbs, at 2 cents per lb.
SUPER PHOSPHATE OF LIME,
In barrels of about 250 lbs, at 2 cents per lb.
COARSE ORGUNIE BONES,
In barrels of about 175 lbs, at 1¾ cents per lb.
FINE GROUND BONES,
In barrels of about 200 lbs, at 1¾ cents per lb.
PERUVIAN GUANO,
In sacks of about 140 lbs, at 2½ cents per lb

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY A COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS FOR THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH—H. N. McTYEIRE, EDITOR.

VOLUME VI—NUMBER 14.
WHOLE NUMBER 274.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 21, 1856.

$2 00 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.
OFFICE—36 CAMP ST.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

THE BLIND PREACHER.

HIS BOOK—A DIALOGUE BETWEEN A BLIND MAN AND A DEAF MUTE—WHICH IS MORE UNFORTUNATE TO BE DEAF OR BLIND?

Last month we had the pleasure in this place of listening to Mr. Bowen, of the Dutch Reformed Church. Mr. B. is blind and has been so from the time he was six months old. In his discourse he took occasion to inform us what has been done and what is still being done for the amelioration of the blind. He gave many facts and statistics that were new to the most of us, and interesting to us all. His object was to arouse in the heart a sympathy for this unfortunate class, that they may be directed to those institutions established for their education, and also to arouse in the minds of his hearers sincere gratitude to God for the sense of sight, for whatever is done for the blind man he is yet an object of pity.

He asserted that all that had been done for the blind had been accomplished through the influence of Christianity. That it was the meek and loving Redeemer, who first showed real pity for them when he listened to their plaintive cry for help, and opened their eyes in the land of Judea, and all that has been done to enlighten their minds and to make the burdens of life lower and brighter, and often to make life a pleasure, is but the reflection of the benevolence which first gushed from the heart of the world's Saviour.

Egypt, with all her glory—her arts and sciences, had no place in which the afflictions of mankind could be relieved. There was a hospital for the sick, mean animals which she abjectly worshipped, but no place where the affliction of man could be assuaged. Amid the proud domes that rose in all parts of classic Greece, none of them showed the spot where the blind were taught. And Rome, proud Rome, in vain do we look on her seven hills for a place that was consecrated to relieve the misfortunes of the blind. But the religion of Jesus, religion not understood by the scoffing Infidel, has come to their rescue, and they are made to feel that the great part of christianity sympathises with their condition, and reaches forth the hand to their relief. And while they feel that their minds are ennobled by education—that they are able to read God's holy word, and see that heavenly light which came down from from heaven, and to feel that it now shines in their pathway, whereby they can see the road that leads from the darkness of this world to the light of a glorious immortality, they are continually reminded of the benevolence of Jesus, by whose love they are enabled to bow in humble submission to God's unscrutable providence.

Though the blind are now educated, yet this perishing body must be provided for, and for this purpose Mr. Bowen has gathered the several essays which he had written at various times and for different periodicals, and published them in book form, which he now sells. The book is octavo, of four hundred and forty-two pages, well bound in cloth—the print is clear and the paper beautifully white. In it there is the likeness of the author, and a short sketch of his life. The sketch is too short, we felt that when reading it, and we hope that in the next edition it will be enlarged.

The reader will find in the book sketches of the lives of the most eminent blind men, who, notwithstanding the many disadvantages under which they labored made—

"Their lives sublime,
And departing left behind them,
Foot-prints on the sand of time."

In the book also is given a history of the different institutions for the blind in christendom, as well as a description of the mode whereby the blind are educated. Let all who have the opportunity buy the book, styled "A Blind Man's Offering," not only because by the sale of it a worthy minister makes a living, in part, for himself and family, but because the book is really interesting, and gives us ample information on subjects which we generally know very little about. It will stir within us an interest for an unfortunate class of our fellow beings, and arouse us to do more to ameliorate them. We have often discussed in our own minds which is the most unfortunate, the blind or the dumb mute. We had thought that the first were; and would rather be deprived of all the other senses than that of sight. We confess that we began to lose confidence in our conclusion while reading a dialogue in our author's book, which he says he once heard between a blind and deaf mute, the mute writing his ideas on a slate and a third party reading them to the blind which is as follows:

D. "It must be a sad life to you never to see the earth, the sea and the sky."

B. "But I can converse with those around me, and I am delighted with the voices of those I love."

D. "I too can converse, as I do now with you. I can see the 'human face divine' and those beautiful flowers, pointing to a vase by his side."

B. (Growing more excited,) "But you cannot study to the same extent that I can, the abstract sciences—intellectual and moral philosophy. You cannot while away your hours with music at the piano-forte."

D. "I can read the book of nature; I can look upon you smiling landscape."

B. "I can listen to the voice of birds and the music of flowing waters, and enjoy with deep delight the perfume of ten thousand flowers."

D. (Smiling,) I too can enjoy their fragrance and admire their hue, and yesterday I beheld the masterpiece of Michael Angelo, instinct with life and beauty."

B. "Last night I listened to the music of Beethoven and the poetry of Goethe."

D. "I can read poetry in the smiling faces around me."

B. "Smiles do not always wreathe the face. You can see the cheek blanched, the sunken eye, and all the marks which time and decay make upon the former to sadden the heart.—I hear only the voices of my friends, whose music can never die, and, as it has been truly said,

"I only know that they grow old
By counting happy years gone by."

With this we close our notice, hoping that should any of our readers have the opportunity of becoming acquainted with Mr. Bowen, they will be as much interested in conversing with him as we have been. ITINERIS.

Franklin, La., June 4, 1856.

Bishop McIlvaine on Fashionable Amusement.

It is well known that one of the chief recommendations of the Episcopal Church, to a pretty large class of people, is the latitude which is given in some parts of the country, to its members to engage in worldly amusements, which are forbidden by other evangelical churches. A Cleveland correspondent of the Due West Telescope, tells the following good anecdote of Bishop McIlvaine of Ohio:

"A number of years ago, in a village near this city a few fashionable christians came to the conclusion that the Methodists and Presbyterians, who had churches there, were entirely to strict in their disciplinary arrangements, and they came to the conclusion that they would get up an Episcopal church, so that they could have more latitude, and a wider field for enjoyment. They sent for Bishop McIlvaine, who came and preached them a heart-searching, sin-rebuking, gospel-moving sermon, and left them to consider farther upon the subject. They deliberated among themselves, and finally came to the conclusion that Bishop McIlvaine was not a whit better than the Presbyterians and Methodists, and that they might just as well remain in Scylla as to run upon Charibdis."

Well would it be for the Episcopal and all other churches, if they had a few more Bishop McIlvaines in them.

Auburn College.

The Board of Trustees of the "East Alabama Male College," met 8th May 1856, for organization. Officers elected:

Rev. J. B. Glenn, President.
Col. R. Flewellen, Vice President.
F. W. Dillard, Secretary.
Isaac Hill, Treasurer.

The following gentlemen were elected as an Executive Committee, for one year from the date of this meeting, to-wit:—Rev. J. B. Glenn; Jas. B. Ogletree, I. Hill, C. Raiford, and W. T. Davis.

A committee, consisting of Revs. E. J. Hamill, W. G. McDaniel, Lewis Dowdell, S. Armstrong, Col. F. W. Dillard, and John P. Nall, Esq., were appointed to draft an Address to the different Quarterly Conferences, Presiding Elders and Preachers of East Alabama, setting forth our plans and desires, and asking their hearty co-operation in this great Church enterprise.

Messrs. John P. Nall, J. W. Kidd, A. Frazer, and Adam Hardin, Esqrs., were appointed on the Building Committee in place of those gentlemen heretofore appointed by the late Executive Board, and not now members of the Board.

It was determined to commence the building so soon as $75,000 in good subscriptions was obtained—the point is nearly attained.

PRAYER.—Prayer, is the messenger that sends for Christ from heaven; and he will come.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Making Trucks—A Revival.

Mr. Editor:—In the prosecution of my labors as Tract Agent, I left home on the 10th of May, went on the cars at Selma, and in a few hours was set down at Columbiana, now the upper terminus of the Alabama and Tennessee Railroad. This village is the county seat of Shelby and is built adjacent to the high lands which divide between the Cahawba and Coosa valleys. I suppose there are about thirty resident families, some dry good stores, some groceries, some workshops and offices, together with a fine new Court House of brick; a jail of huge limestone, and iron grating enough to scare people into good behavior, but has not always had that effect; a tolerable academy, and an old church, in its best days worth about two hundred dollars.

I was, by appointment, to preach the funeral of Rev. Levi Moore, which I did, to a large congregation, on the second Sunday in May. This deceased brother formerly resided in this place, and since his death his family returned to be among old and true friends. He was born in South Carolina in 1818, and died in Bluntsville on the 28th day of November, 1855, aged 37 years. He had been a professor of religion and member of the church about fifteen years. Some of the time he served as class-leader, some as a Local Preacher, three years as an Itinerant, one of them under the direction of the Presiding Elder, and two in connection with the Alabama Conference. He was a man of strong bodily powers and natural good sense, but almost wholly uncultivated in mind. His first and second year's travel were on the Maplesville Circuit, in which he endeared himself to the people and made very rapid improvement as a preacher. His last year was on Blount Circuit, which included twenty-four appointments in each four weeks. To reach these mountains are to be crossed that might almost appall an Alpine hunter. What this good brother and his family endured for the sake of preaching salvation to that people, will perhaps never be written. So it was that hard and continued labor and study brought on sickness, from which he might have recovered, if allowed to rest long enough. But it was the close of the year, he heard the murmurs of the church members for the loss of a single appointment. As soon as able he was in the saddle and away. Relapse followed relapse until the weary wheels of life stood still. How he was paid, or rather supported, and how the last red was exacted from his widowed wife and fatherless children for Doctor's bills and the decencies of burial, I will not tell. I must however make one honorable exception, one Doctor out of three, who did not charge the dead preacher—he was a Baptist. When will some people claiming to be church members, learn that preachers can be sick and will die if compelled to work when they are not able, and when will they learn that they and families must be fed and clothed like other folks? That is, with the use of money.

But to return from this seeming digression—such were the signs of solemnity in the congregation that I continued the meeting on Monday night, and as the good Spirit seemed to indicate from day to day, and night after night, until Sabbath night of the 25th we closed, having had about fifty conversions, forty-four whites, and eight colored joined the M. E. Church, South. Four joined the Presbyterian Church, and others will. I am a poor hand to parade before the public and glorify the instrumentalities. Suffice it to say that a few of us did our best in the fear of God to put forward so good a work. All felt and many said, "it is the Lord's doing, and it was indeed marvelous in our eyes," for the oldest inhabitants said they had never seen any thing like it in the whole history of the village.

The collection made for the tract cause the first Sabbath I preached amounted to sixty-three dollars, which was very good, every thing considered.

I disposed of some thirty-five dollars worth of books. I felt acutely the disappointment of myself and others, by failure to go forward to Talladega, Jacksonville and intermediate points, but if I had done so it was evident the meeting would not go on, and reconciled myself a little by a change of the verbiage of that old Wesleyanism, "Getting knowledge is a good thing, but saving souls is better."

The good brethren were making arrangements to build a new and larger house of worship; of course this gracious visitation will greatly quicken their zeal in the matter. The place is one of the preaching places on the Harpersville Circuit. Brother C. H. Nicholson is in such a state of health as makes it necessary for him to desist entirely from preaching, and at this time they greatly need an efficient man. But "the Lord will provide." The sum of all is that I have not traveled as many miles, nor collected as much money for the tract cause as usual, but I preached fourteen times, besides singing, praying, exhorting and talking, and if the souls professing are saved at last in heaven, all will say "well done!"

Yours, truly,

F. G. FERGUSON.

Summerfield, May 20, 1856.

GENERAL CONFERENCE, NORTH.

DOINGS AND ADJOURNMENT.

This body adjourned 4th inst. We give a summary:

Ten new Conferences have been made, making in all forty-eight—forty-six in the United States, one in Africa and one in Germany. Baltimore remains intact, though some provision is made for division by her own action.—Kentucky disappears. Texas and Arkansas still figure. Vermont and New Hampshire are consolidated.

The German Mission Annual Conference embraces also the missions in France and Switzerland, where the German language is spoken, and possesses all the rights, powers and privileges of other Annual Conferences, except that of sending delegates to the General Conference, and of drawing its annual dividends from the avails of the Book Concern and Chartered Fund.

Bishop Simpson read a paper as an expression of the opinion of the Bishops, clearly in accordance with that part of the report of the committee which provides for a change in the general rule so as to allow of the appointment of Missionary Bishops to foreign missions, limiting their Episcopal jurisdiction to the same. This required a a two-thirds vote of the General Conference.

Upon calling the yeas and nays, the result was—yeas 159, nays 27. So the motion prevailed.

The Conference then amended the second resolution so as to authorize the Liberia Annual Conference, by a two-thirds vote, to elect a Missionary Bishop for themselves, under the direction of the Bishop now having Episcopal charge of Liberia, aided by the corresponding Secretary, and with the concurrence of all the Bishops he may be ordained, limiting his Episcopal jurisdiction expressly to Africa. This was adopted, and thus making it possible to obtain a Bishop for Africa.

The restriction was taken away restraining to four years in a city successively. The Bishop is now at liberty to station the preachers as he judges best, except that he shall not allow any one to remain in the same circuit or station more than two years successively.

On Education Dr. Thompson reported very full and satisfactory statistics, from which it appeared they have 19 Universities and Colleges, with nearly 100 Professors and 2000 students—75,000 volumes in the various college Libraries—about 98 seminaries, with over 300 teachers and 14,500 pupils. The value of college property, buildings, libraries, etc., $500,000; total endowments, $1,500,000. Two Theological Seminaries, one at Concord with an endowment of over $25,000, and one at Evanston, near Chicago, called the Garrett Theological Institute, with an endowment of $300,000, by the will of the late Mrs. Garrett—six Theological Professors and 109 Theological Students. The whole amount of library property is estimated at $3,130,000. These statics do not indicate that the Methodist Episcopal Church is declining.

The resolutions appended to the report have some significance. One of them provides that service in a College or Seminary under Conference care is considered as service in the regular work; so that a preacher may be received into full connection, and ordained to the Holy Ministry, though he may not have traveled, as it is usually expressed. There is a resolution also advising that hereafter no College should be taken under patronage unless it have a clear endowment of $100,000. All these resolutions were adopted.

The committee on expenses of delegates reported that the whole amount of expense was $10,693; amount of receipts from all the Conferences, $7,267; deficiency, 3,426. The Conference ordered this deficiency to be supplied by the Book Concerns, in the proportion of two-thirds by the Book Concern at New York and one-third by the Book Concern at Cincinnati.

Dr. Durbin moved the Conference to an important step. To authorize the Board of Managers of the Miss. Society to use their discretion, with the concurrence of the Bishops, to establish a Missionary Seminary, or provide Missionary instruction for young men devoted to the missionary work; provided no missionary funds, not specifically given for this object shall be used in accomplishing the object.

The ratio of representation was fixed—not more than one for every twenty-seven, nor less than one for every forty-five.

The office of Corresponding Secretary of the Tract Society was dispensed with, and its duties devolved upon the Editor of the Magazine.

It is thought Rev. John Seys will probably receive the appointment of Missionary Bishop in Africa.

Bishop Simpson and Dr. M'Clintock were elected Delegates to the British Conference; and Dr. Raymond, Rev. Wm. Hamilton and Dr. Berry to the Canadian Conference.

Buffalo was selected as the seat of the next General Conference.

On 30th May the great vote was taken, (see Advocate of 7th inst.) on the resolutions of the Committee on slavery. The debate had been on the second resolution of the majority report, introducing a new chapter in place of the old 7th, more stringent and in fact proposing new terms of membership. Its friends at first were flush, but the alternate threats and entreaties from Baltimore and the border, and the evident unconstitutionality, acknowledged even by those who wished to do what they could not do, lessened their chances every hour. Rev. A. Stevens dealt the final blow.

On account of ill-health he had prepared his speech in manuscript, and it was read for him by Dr. M'Clintock.—We take the following abstract from an Indianapolis paper:

"He was opposed to the report, because he thought it in opposition to the constitution of the Church.—He regretted this opposition, inasmuch as there was so much in it that was good. He looked upon the proposition of the report as unconstitutional—as a new rule of membership. He did not regard it as an explanatory declaration of the old rule. The purchase of slaves was prohibited, while the acquirement of them by inheritance and natural increase was permitted. He directed the points of his speech to show the conflict of the report with the General Rule; gave a history of the rule on slavery, and in so doing went over a considerable portion of ground.

His reference to legal authorities, in what he stated to be parallel cases with the one now being discussed, were well placed, and the arguments adduced sound and logical. His speech throughout was able and loyally. Simple slaveholding, he said, by the existing General Rule, was authorized, but it did not discriminate between its moral and legal bearing.

After the reading of the written portion of his speech, he took the floor, and made some concluding remarks. If an enemy had devised it, the report could not have been more unfortunately worded. It had a flaw which would annul it now, and annul its applications, if enacted. He was a man of expediency. He was anti-slavery, true to its cause, yet he wanted to act wisely, and prudently, and right.

The speech was strong, able, and searching throughout—anti-slavery in sentiment, yet conservative in its adherence to the constitution.

A direct vote was not come to on this resolution. It was laid on the table for taking the vote on the first—not called up again.

On the 1st resolution for changing the constitution. Yeas 121, nays 95.—A two thirds majority being necessary, it failed.

June 2nd officers were elected:

T. Carlton was elected Principal Agent of the Book Concern, at New York, by acclamation. L. Swormstedt Principal Agent at Cincinnati, in the same way.

For Assistant Agent at New York, votes stood:—James Potter, 114; Benjamin Griffin, 65.

Assistant Agent at Cincinnati:—Adam Poe, (re-elected,) 116; Luke Hitchcock, 82.

Editor of Christian Advocate and Journal:—Abel Stevens, 136; F. G. Hibbard, 66; Geo Peck, 5.

Editor Western Christian Advocate: Calvin Kingsley, 115; Charles Elliott, 73; B. F. Crary, 20.

Editor of Quarterly Review:—D. D. Wheedon, 108; J. McClintock, 99.

Editor of Sunday School books:—D. Wise, 123; A. M. Osbon, 61; D. P. Kidder, 17.

Editor National Magazine and Tracts: J. Floy, 125; J. H. Perry, 79.

Editor Ladies' Depository, and books, at Cincinnati:—D. W. Clark, by acclamation.

Editor of Northern Christian Advocate:—F. G. Hibbard, 118; W. Hosmer, 94.

Editor of Pittsburgh Christian Advocate:—Dr. J. N. Baird, by acclamation.

Editor of North-western Christian Advocate:—J. V. Watson, (re-elected,) 132; T. M. Eddy, 69.

Editor of Christian Apologist, (German,) and German books:—W. Nast, D. D., by acclamation.

Editor of Central Christian Advocate: First ballot. J. H. Power, 26; B. F. Crary, 55; C. Elliott, 28; J. Brooks, 76. Second ballot. J. Brooks, 114; B. F. Crary, 67.

Mr. Pearn was elected Editor of the Pacific Christian Advocate by acclamation.

Mr. Thomas was elected Editor of the California Christian Advocate.

Missionary Secretary:—J. P. Durbin, 123; M. Raymond, 86.

Thirty-Fourth Congress—First Session.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—The Senate was not in session.

House of Representatives.—The House met at half-past twelve o'clock. There were some thirty or more members on the floor, intermixed with whom were half a dozen lacqueys. The session lasted about a minute. When the motion to adjourn was carried, a member exclaimed, "eight dollars soon earned," and this was endorsed by a burst of laughter.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Senate.—Mr. Bright being absent, Mr. Stuart was elected President pro tem.

On motion of Mr. Adams, the bill to amend the naturalization law was made the order of the day for Saturday next.

Mr. Trumble introduced a bill to restore order and peace in Kansas, proposing to bring it under the territorial government of Nebraska.

House.—By the reading of the Journal of Saturday it appeared that Mr. Edwards had given notice of his intention to introduce a bill for the removing the seat of government from Washington to some point in Ohio, within five miles of Cincinnati.

Mr. Jones, of Tennessee, moved to strike out the notice, contending that it would not appear as there was no quorum present on that day.

Ninety two members only voted, and for want of a quorum the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON, June 10, 1856.—Senate.—Mr. Thompson called attention to the fact that, from the reading of the journal, it would appear that Mr. Stuart had been elected permanent President pro tem. of the Senate, when he was chosen to fill the chair in the absence of Mr. Bright, only. He presumed that the error was inadvertently made.

Mr. Butler thought Mr. Stuart was duly elected, and that, as there could be but one President pro tem. at a time, he thought the journal was correct.

Mr. Seward thought that Mr. Stuart would be entitled to the chair on the return of Mr. Bright. The subject was then dropped.

Mr. Foster introduced a bill changing the register of the British bark Resolute.

Mr. Mason stated that this vessel was abandoned by her crew, in the Arctic ocean, and that she was found and brought in by American sailors.

He thought the United States Government should purchase the vessel of her discoverers, refit her, and return her to the British Government.

Mr. Foster heartily concurred with Mr. Mason, and withdrew his bill, that his idea might be put in operation.

Mr. Crittenden called attention to the Kansas disturbances; thought there had been debate enough; it was now time to act. It was time to allay the excitement, to quiet the troubles, to remove the cause that kept the strife alive, and put an end to the civil strife that vexes the whole country, and endangers the safety of the Union. Here is no place to inquire which party is most to blame. Let peace be restored, and then let the laws take their course, and the guilty be punished.

The resolution empowered the President to employ Gen. Scott at the head of the United States troops to quell the disturbances in Kansas.

He advocated the project, saying that the name of General Scott would do much toward that end. The General would go there with his sword in his left hand, and peace, gentle peace, in his right. He asked the immediate passage of the resolution.

Mr. Mason was speaking against the resolution when our report closed.

House of Representatives.—Tuesday, June 10, 1856. The Speaker announced the first business in order to be the question of correcting the journal, which was not disposed of on yesterday, for want of a quorum.

The yeas and nays being called, no quorum voted.

Mr. Washburne, of Maine, moved to go into Committee of the Whole, to enable such members to make speeches as were prepared!

Mr. Washburn, of Illinois, moved a call of the House; which being ordered, 121 members answered to their names.

Mr. Bardingame, of Massachusetts, presented resolutions of that State in relation to the Sumner affair; which were ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

Mr. H. Marshall called the attention to the bill confirming California land grants, which had been made the special order for to-day, which, by general consent, was made the order for to-morrow, at one o'clock.

The yeas and nays were being taken on Mr. Jones' motion to amend the journal, by striking out Mr. Edward's notice of a bill to remove the Capitol, when our report closed.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Senate.—After our report closed, Mr. Mason continued his remarks against Mr. Crittenden's resolution, which was as follows:

Be it therefore resolved by the Senate of the United States, That the President be, and he is hereby, requested to employ the military services of Lieut. Gen. Scott in the pacification of Kansas, and in the immediate direction and command of all the forces employed, or to be employed, for the purpose, under such instructions, and with such authority and power as the President can and may think proper to give and to confer upon him.

Mr. Crittenden replied that Gen. Scott was an old man, and the President might feel some reluctance to ordering him upon that distant service; and, under the circumstances, he could see no harm in making the suggestion to him.

Mr. Seward expressed himself as being in favor of the proposition to send Gen. Scott to take command of all the government troops in Kansas; but he thought, inasmuch as the Senate was but one branch of Congress, it would be well to have the resolution changed into a joint resolution, having the concurrence of the House of Representatives. He was also in favor of striking out the preamble, as all the facts in relation to the subject were well known to the President and to the country.

The further consideration of the resolution was then postponed until to-day.

On motion by Mr. Brown, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill for the relief of certain actual settlers and cultivators who purchased lands subject to graduation within the limits of the Choctaw cession of 1830, at a less rate than the true graduated price, under the "act to graduate and reduce the price of the public lands to actual settlers and cultivators," approved the 4th of August, 1854; which was amended and passed; and the title was amended by adding the words "and for other purposes."

The Navy Efficiency bill was then made the special order for Thursday, at one o'clock, when the Senate adjourned.

WEDNESDAY, June 11.—Senate.—Mr. Stuart resigned the chair as President of the Senate pro tem.

Mr. Stuart moved that Mr. Bright be re-elected as President pro tem.

The motion was carried, and Mr. Bright resumed the chair.

Mr. Bright then made a short address, citing precedents to show that, in appointing Mr. Stuart to fill the chair during his absence, he did not intend to assume authority which did not belong to him, and which had been heretofore exercised in similar cases.

Communications were received and read from the Secretaries of the Treasury and of the War Departments.

The Massachusetts resolutions in regard to the assault upon Senator Sumner, were laid before the Senate by the Chair.

Mr. Butler gave notice that he should speak on the resolutions to-morrow, and moved that they be printed.

Mr. Hamlin moved that 5,500 copeys of the agricultural portion of the Patent Office Report be printed. Carried.

Mr. Hamlin called up the bill to amend an act requiring foreign regulations of commerce to be laid annually before Congress; which was passed.

Mr. Crittenden called up the resolution to send General Scott to Kansas; and, on objection, called for the ayes and noes on the question of taking up.

Mr. Yulee should vote against taking up, as the Senate was so thinly attended.

Mr. Brown should vote against the resolution, as it would tend to divide the responsibility of the Executive Department.

Mr. Bell should vote for it for the reason advanced by the mover of the resolution.

Mr. Toucey was speaking against taking up the resolution, when our report closed.

House of Representatives.—The Speaker laid before the House a communication from the President in answer to a call of the House for information in regard to the action of the leading European Powers on the subject of privateering.

Also, a communication in regard to the imposition of additional duty on leaf tobacco by the German States; which were severally referred and ordered to be printed.

The House then resumed the consideration of the correction of the Journal reported for several days. No quorum having voted, a call of the House was ordered.

Mr. Haven, of New York, wished to know whether the call was intended for any practical result, or merely to consume time in child's play?

No quorum having voted, Mr. Craig, of North Carolina, moved an adjournment. Lost.

Here our report closed.

It is stated that coffee can be successfully cultivated in the south part of California, and that it will eventually become an article of export from that State.

WHERE THE GOLD HAS GONE TO.—During the last four months the sum of $16,000,000 in gold and silver has been shipped from England to the East.

BUSINESS AND SUGAR.—Although there is twice the amount of business now doing that there was at the same time last year, yet when it is placed in juxtaposition with the spring and winter months, there is a great falling off. In some branches of trade the demand for merchandise has been so much beyond the supplies that duplicate stocks have to be ordered to meet the increased demand. This may be accounted for in the increased ability of the country to pay for additional supplies, and from the fact that last year many sections of the country had to do without the regular yearly stock of goods, from the suspension of communication. Many thousands of dollars have been invested in luxuries this season, which have been, from the paucity of means for two or three years past, dispensed with; and although the accounts received from the cotton-growing region are, in the aggregate, of the most favorable character, the accounts from the sugar section are directly of a reverse nature, and if the market for sugar is to be governed by the immutable laws of supply and demand, it would not surprise us that sugar next fall opened at ten cents per pound. A statement is before us of the estimated consumption and distribution of sugar for the year 1855:

SUGAR.

Great Britain, tons	419,000
United States	380,000
Continent of Europe	256,000
Including beet root	148,000
	413,000
Canada and Provinces	20,000
Portugal	10,000
Sweden and Denmark	9,000
Mexico and South America	15,000
Spain	70,000
Russia	15,000
China and all sugar producing countries not mentioned	30,000
Total	1,381,000
Estimated production of 1856	1,357,000

Thus requiring from the stock at the commencement of 1856, to make up the quantity for its consumption, supposing it to equal that of 1855 | 24,000

We thus see that the production of sugar has not increased in the same ratio as its consumption—the latter stimulated by the low prices ruling for several years past. Now that prices have, for nearly a year, been remunerative, production will soon be again stimulated. By the table above, we see that the production in 1854 exceeds that of 1855 by 57,000 tons.

By the above tables we find that the following has been the large increase in the consumption of sugar in twenty-three years:

	1833.	1856.
Production of the world, tons	1,500,000	2,869,000
Consumption, including beet root, lbs	1,248,000,000	2,762,000,000

The apparent production in 1856, gives only a slight excess over consumption, but it is believed that the actual consumption in 1856 will be in excess of production.

Beet root sugar figures largely. We are not aware but that just as good sugar can be made from corn stalks in the green state. However, it is plainly perceivable that the consumption of sugar in the world is already outstripping its production. For the last quarter of a century production and consumption have been, as it were, combatting for supremacy. Whether the advance in the value of cotton will tend (and still further aided by the vicissitudes of the climate) to curtail the cultivation of cane, can only be determined by another year corresponding with the last.

In early times sugar was only regarded as one of the luxuries of life. It has now become one of its necessaries, and its consumption is likely to increase as population enhances. The question now arises, how is the world to be supplied? It may well be answered, quien sabe. A plantation in Louisiana, devoted to the sugar culture, may be deemed of more intrinsic value than half of the gold mines and prospecting in California.

THE CURRENT OPERATIONS OF THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.—On the 9th of June there were of Treasury warrants entered on the books of the Department:

For redemption of Texas debt	$84,473 09
For the redemption of stocks	96,754 65
For the Treasury Department	1,845 50
For Customs	30,496 82
For the Interior Department	2,516 94
War warrants received and entered	59,952 58
War repay warrants received and entered	27,885 61
On account of the Navy	66,049 25
Repayment on account of the Navy	885 77
From miscellaneous sources	2 72
From Customs	31,062 50

FROM THE PLAINS.—St. Louis, Monday, June 9.—The steamer Genoa, from Fort Pierre, 29th ult., arrived here yesterday. General Harney completed a treaty with the Sioux Indians on the 23d. The Indians have suffered severely from hunger during the winter. A company of voyageurs from the mouth of the Yellow Stone River, April 15, report an unusual quantity of snow on the mountains. The Genoa brings 11,000 robes and furs. She met, on the 30th ult., the United States steamer William Baird, bound for Fort Pierre.

WHAT RAILROADS CAN DO.—In the year 1850, before the completion of its railway system, the State of Ohio had an aggregate amount of taxable property rated at $439,876,340, and in the year 1844, after the completion of the system, the value of the same description of property is set down at $869,877,354, very nearly double. Nothing can more forcibly illustrate the wonderful effects of railway improvements upon the prosperity of a State. Ohio has entered more largely than any other member of the confederacy upon the development of the system of railways.

FROM FAYAL.—The Bark Azor, Captain Burke, arrived at Boston on the 10th inst., from Fayal, which port she left on the 13th May. There was only one American vessel in port at the time she left Fayal, and that was the ship Adrian, Hunter, from Baltimore for Belfast, which had previously put into that port leaky. We were in hopes of hearing from that vicinity ere this some tidings of the long looked for ships Ocean Queen, Captain Smith, and Driver, Capt Holberton; tho former left London, on the 12th of February, and the latter on the 15th of the same month from Liverpool, both for New York. There were a large number of steerage passengers on board of each of these vessels.

THE GUANO CONVENTION.—This body met at the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, on the 10th inst. Hon. H. G. S. Key, of Maryland, was elected President, and the following gentlemen Vice Presidents, John Jones, Delaware; H. H. Cocke, Virginia; Dr. Holt, North Carolina; D. Jay Browne, New York.

A MAMMOTH ROOM.—The largest reading room in the world is now nearly completed in the British Museum. It is circular, 140 feet in diameter, and 140 feet in height. The tables will accommodate 400 readers. The wrought iron book cases will contain 102,000,000 volumes. The cost of the room will be about $400,000.

During a severe thunder storm, a few days ago, says the Newburyport (Mass.) Herald, the lightning came down upon a pasture of Charles Titcomb, Esq., of Kensington, N. H., descending perpendicularly into the earth for about thirty feet, so as to form a good well of water. The hole is about as big as a barrel, and it was formed without throwing out any earth.

The voluntary contributions of the people of the United States to religious and benevolent institutions are among the most gratifying evidences of modern enlightenment. The receipts of nineteen of the great Christian organizations for the year ending in April last, were $1,849,893 48, being an increase of $207,946 87 upon the receipts of the previous year.

The furniture, wines, horses and carriages of the Hon. Mr. Crampton, late British Minister to the United States, were sold at auction in Washington on the 10th inst. Mr. Sartiges, the French Minister, has leased Carolina Place, Mr. Crampton's late residence.

We learn from the St. Louis Republican of the 9th inst., that the river, opposite that city, was beginning to rise slowly, and that the upper Mississippi was reported to be rising.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The N. O. Christian Advocate.

TERMS—$2 00 PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE.

NEW ORLEANS:

SATURDAY, JUNE 21, 1856.

Lake Providence District, La.—We have received news from the Presiding Elder, Rev. N. A. Crawford. On the second round of quarterly meetings over one hundred conversions reported, and many accessions to the church.

[illegible].—Proposals for building a church at Brashear City, will be received at the office of the N. O. Christian Advocate. Plans and specifications can be seen at this office until the 1st of July. Address Rev. J. C. Keener.

Daily.—The Semi-Weekly Creole came out in neat form on Monday as a daily paper.

African College.—We learn from the Northern Christian Advocate that the Cincinnati Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church has entered vigorously upon the project of a college for the education of free colored men. The trustees have purchased a very excellent property near Xenia, in Green county, Ohio. The establishment, called the "Tawawa House," was built for a watering place, and cost $50,000.—The whole was bought for $13,000.—General Conference has approved the measure.

A Field for Ministers.

That is, first, a place where they are wanted—and secondly, a place where, if they are the right sort, they will be supported.

Louisiana has yet to be appreciated as a field for doing good, by the preachers who are crowding older Conferences. Rev. R. J. Harp, succeeded, by personally pleading its destitution before the Memphis Conference last year, in obtaining through the Bishop ten transfers. There is yet room.

We append in confirmation the following, from the Tennessee Baptist, giving the exploration of a portion of the lower Mississippi Valley—which is a valley of dry bones:

Lake Providence, La., April 15, 1856.

Brother Graves—During the last three months I have been acting as a missionary for the Mississippi Convention and I have baptised sixty-six persons, and raised pledges to the amount of seven hundred dollars. As it will soon be in my power to attend the approaching meeting of the Mississippi Convention, I will remark that I have seen a region of country up and down the father of waters, where I suppose twenty Baptist Ministers could be usefully, and profitably employed. Let me remark that the Methodist, and Presbyterian denominations are making vigorous efforts to establish themselves in this interesting region. Last year the Memphis Conference sent ten ministers to this region, who are all handsomely supported.

I know of no minister in this region who does not get from a thousand to fifteen hundred dollars a year. This is the region in which Baptist ministers could do good and get good. Yours truly,

JAMES HUMPHREY.

Horrors of War.

"In heaven," said a minister whom we recently heard preach, "there will be no quarterage to pay nor paid; there will be no dead disciples, no foreign Christians, no blight of intemperance, or poverty, no war there."—Wending our way home, the last words, like an echo kept ringing in our ears, "No war there, no war there!" There are great evils and great curses in the earth, but none, reader, so great as the curse of war. Opening one of our exchanges recently we saw the statement that in France, to help to carry on the Crimean war, one hundred and sixty thousand young men were annually impressed—that is, caught and driven from home into the army. And so horrible is the war in the eyes of even French mothers, that many of them have permanently put out the eyes of their children, and have hewed off the toes, and broken the fingers and arms of their sons, in the hope, by so doing, to keep them at home. But notwithstanding these maimings, many of these fingerless and toeless young men have been compelled to go and fight and die on the battle-field. As we write, the bones of how many young men lie bleaching or rotting in the Crimea! How many a home in England, and Ireland, and Scotland, and Turkey, and Russia, and France, has been made desolate by the violence of war!

"Hame never cam' he," says the old Scotch ballad, and a world of sorrow it tells:

"[illegible] and bridled and booted rode he,
A [illegible] his footman, a sword at his knee;
But [illegible] and saddle, a' bloody to see,
And [illegible] the steed, but hame never cam' he!

Sisters cam' his gray father, sobbing sae hair;
Mithers cam' his auld mither, tearing her hair;
Sisters cam' his sweet wife, wi' bonnie bairns three,
Ane on her bosom, and twa at her knee.

[illegible] the flood-flood, a' foamin' and hot;
[illegible] his sweet wife, and sank on the spot;
[illegible] his gray father, weeping sae free;
[illegible] cam' his steed—but hame never cam' he!"

CONSTITUTIONAL METHODISM.

SOME THINGS SUGGESTED BY THE LATE GENERAL CONFERENCE AT INDIANAPOLIS.

Few constitutions could stand such persistent racking as the Methodist Episcopal has stood. A Northern church cut off from Southern conservatism, inflamed by presses and pulpits, suffering pressure from without and agitation within, has been able to weather the ten years strife now concluding, and to protect the rights of a minority against a fanatical majority. That little book, the Discipline, has been their salvation. Should it not survive another such decade, what it has already achieved is enough to inspire the strongest confidence in its wisdom and veneration for the fathers who laid its measures and its checks.

Keep to the constitution—a strict construction. These are not canting phrases. In the dealing with Bishop Andrew, in 1844, Southern delegates stood upon that ground. There were others who slackened towards expediency—others, natural allies of the South. They, in 1856, about being sacrificed in course, are only saved by insisting on a strict construction. Keep to the Constitution. To that instrument they owe everything, and ought to feel penitent for past treatment of it. Let it be cherished by us all.

The debate was mainly on the resolution to insert in the Discipline, in place of that old ninth section, a regulation more stringent, defining non-slaveholding or emancipation as a condition of membership. Many were willing to vote it at all hazards. Others who liked it and could have stood something even stronger, saw that the proposed statute stretched beyond the organic law. The progressives were thrown into confusion and their leaders helped the rout.

The tug of war shifted to the Constitution. Here the majority of the General Conference is not enough for a change. A two-thirds vote is required to put it upon its passage. If successful, the alteration recommended must pass round to the Annual Conferences and receive the concurrence of three-fourths of all their members before becoming a law.

The resolution proposing to change the present constitutional rule on slavery so that it shall interdict the "buying, selling and holding of human beings as property," was put 30th May, and received 121 votes out of 216; 144 were necessary to its success. Then it must have gone out before the pastors of the church, in contact with the people, and received the vote of 3000 out of 4000.

Such a victory did constitutional Methodism achieve for those who rallied under it in the face of a fanaticism that threatened to sweep away all barriers. But another such victory would ruin them, if indeed they ever see another. The majority was able to fill the offices going to make up public opinion, and they did it. They have taken possession of the press bodily.

Dr. McClintock, the ablest review Editor of the country, is superceded by one Dr. Whedon, an abolition failure, notorious for a higher law sermon. The latter was of the 121; the former of the 95. Dr. M's speech contained some rather smarting paragraphs for the majority:

May God grant His wisdom to guide us in speaking and in our writing, at this great crisis of our church's history. Mr. President, the spirit of our ministerial convocation is given in the words of the Apostle. "We have not received the spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." It is a spirit of courage, not of pusillanimity. We need to be brave men; after godliness, perhaps courage is our greatest need. But our courage is to be tempered and animated by love; not tempered into weakness, or stimulated into rashness. It should always be under the guidance of that wise discretion to which the Apostle gives the name of "a sound mind." If we need to be brave in order to do right on the southern border, to stand up against the pro-slavery sentiment, we may need it also on our northern border; to stand up against a fanatical abolition sentiment. It is easy enough, anywhere, to go with the crowd; any coward can do that.

Dr. Floy being authorized to bring out anti-slavery tracts, they may be looked for. He was of the 121. Mr. Hosmer of Northern Advocate was rabid. He is superceded by Mr. Hibbard, a decent Editor, but one of 121. The rebuke is personal. Dr. Elliott said he agreed with Dr. Bond. He was on all sides, at times. He is set aside for a man of principle—but of the majority. The Great Western is to send out no uncertain sound hereafter. Mr. Wise has been taken out of the Boston Yat the Herald, dyed in the wool and dripping, to edit the Sunday-School books and paper. Mr. Watson, of the North-Western Advocate, deserved to be re-elected for his cleverness, provided his sentiments were acceptable.—He also was of the 121. The Advocate and Journal, the "Long Tom" of all the Advocates, and hitherto the Malakoff of conservatism, is in the hands of Abel Stevens! Porter, of New England, is one of the Book Agents: Porter, Stevens, Wise and Whedon, at 200 Mulberry street! The lights of ultra Boston transferred to conservative New York. Old Dr. Bond's ghost must occasionally be seen about there. Mr. Stevens is a mighty Editor, and will, with others, make his new position tell the next four years. He spoke against the proposed statutory law—his heart was with it—his head against it. As he afterwards explained, he was too good a friend to anti-slavery to see it blunder and prejudice itself by an unconstitutional step. But he went in for the constitutional change—was one of the 121. The main positions are occupied, the trenches advancing and the lines closing in—the sappers and miners working—Sebastopol must yield. It is only a question of time.

The Indianapolis debates brought out strongly the constitutionality of the M. E. Church, South. We would not disturb their title of "The Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States," how little soever propriety in it. But our own church should drop the suffix "South," needlessly irritating to prejudice and suggestive of sectionalism; and claim her true scope and constitutional character as "The Methodist Episcopal Church in America."

IS THE CHURCH A DEMOCRACY?

Often is it boastfully proclaimed that the Baptist Church is a Democracy—the Congregational a pure Democracy—the Presbyterian is Democratic. These political sounds are rung with special force against Methodism. "It is not Democratic" say objectors, as though that decided its fate as a branch of the Church of Christ. The True Union, of Baltimore, Md., copies from the Western Watchman, another Baptist paper, some sensible sayings on this subject, whether "a true church of our Lord Jesus Christ is a Democracy." The article spikes several small guns that our people are wont to hear thundering:

"A democracy," says Webster, is a form of government in which the supreme power is lodged in the hands of the people." Is a church of Christ such a government? In what respect has a church the rightful exercise of supreme power? In receiving whom it will as members? No. It may receive none, except those whom Christ has received. Has it the power to prescribe its own terms or conditions of membership? No. These are all prescribed, and the church may not change them in a single particular. May a church prescribe the form or rite of admission? No. That is all prescribed, and the church may not change the ordinance. May a church determine what offices it will have according to its own ideas of propriety? No. It has no power to create or establish any office whatever. May a church set apart what time it pleases for worship? No. May it expel its members for any cause it pleases? By no means. May it define what are offenses, and what punishment is proper to them?—Never. May a church enact whatever laws for the government of its members it deems expedient in the exercise of its "supreme power?" No one pretends it. In what sense then is a church a democracy?—What "supreme power is lodged in the hands of the people," in a church of Christ?

What then do they mean who call a church a democracy? Do they know which they mean? Perhaps they mean that a church is not an oligarchy or an aristocracy. But, because it is not, then does it follow that it is a democracy? Not at all.

The truth is, a church is like itself, and nothing else. There is no other form of human society like it. There never can be, in this world. Its members are peculiar, its design is peculiar—it can be compared to nothing this side of heaven itself.

No, the church is not a democracy—it is a monarchy, a theocracy, a Christocracy. It has no legislative powers. Its powers are all executive. It "is subject unto Christ." So long as it obeys Him, by executing His laws, and doing His will, it is a church, and no longer. If a church should presume to exercise the "supreme power," of democracy, it would cease to be a church.

The entire "power" belonging to a church is to obey. True, it is to sit in judgment on the trial of offenders, but only as Christ's jury, to execute His laws, and is accountable to Him for their faithful execution. True, it must decide on the admission of members; but the only question for them to decide is, whether the Lord Jesus Christ will be pleased to have them admitted. True, it may define what it understands to be the doctrines of Christ, but it may not add to, or take from them, in the least particular.

Let no one so degrade the "house of God, which is the church of the living God," as to call it a democracy. We need no such arts to make the church popular. Even the fundamental idea of democracy, that of equality, does not belong to the church of Christ. For, instead of claiming equality of prerogative, its members are instructed to practice on the opposite principle. "Likewise ye younger, be in subjection to the elder; yea, all of you be in subjection one to the other, and be clothed with humility." A democracy is a place for debate; a church is a place for learning and for prayer. In a democracy the majority rules; in a church the Lord rules, making known His will by His word and spirit, through the minds and hearts of all the humble, teachable, praying disciples. It is no wonder that those who regard the church as a democracy, turn it into a place of debate, of party making and of strife.

Let us rise from these low, earthly, political ideas of the church, to the teachings of it in the word of God. It is a spiritual house, built of living stones, an habitation of God through the Spirit, the household of God, the body of Christ, the type of heaven. A true church is a divine mystery; heaven sojourning on earth. It is the communion of saints, who are here to grow up in all things, into him who is the Head, who loves it and gave Himself for it. Let us honor and reverence, and love the church for the sake of its Lord."

Take a Paper for your Wife.

A friend, says an exchange, not long since, told us a story in relation to one of our subscribers which contains a good moral for Husbands, and also furnishes an example for wives which is not unworthy of imitation under similar circumstances:—

The subscriber referred to, said our friend, in the presence of his wife, said it had been his intention to call at the office, pay up his arrears and discontinue his paper.

His wife very promptly asked:

"Why do you intend to discontinue the paper?"

"Because," said the husband, "I am so much away from home on business, and have so little time to read, there seems to be little use in my taking a paper."

"Yes," she replied, "it may be of but little use to you, but it is of great use to me. I remain at home while you are gone. I wish to know what is going on in the world. If you discontinue the paper, I will go straight to town and subscribe myself.

As the paper has not been discontinued, we suppose the wife's reasoning was conclusive.

The moral of this incident must not be overlooked.

CORRESPONDENCE UP THE RIVER.

High Water and its advantages—Signs Northward—An Evening Scene—Cairo and its appearance—Natural Curiosities and fossils of the wicked—Cliffs and Rocks—Minerals and Railroads.

The advantages of a full river to the seeing voyager are manifold. The Mississippi itself is more majestic in high water. It is most itself and most natural. It seems to be the state it was born to. Not like the transient and ephemeral freshets of smaller waters which are forced and unnatural to them. High water becomes its dignity—it sets well—it gives a fullness and rotundity to its grandeur, and seems to tell us that all subordinates have paid their tribute. We see to better purpose, not looking up and vainly attempting to penetrate beyond the banks, but from the eminence of the flood looking up and down upon the fields and scenes. This circumstance makes a vast difference in the notes and enjoyment of a traveler. The scenery of the river, that which is made up of its islands, points and bends, is enhanced. The islands especially are better defined—they are more perfectly insulated, and the chutes which separate them from the shore in their full tide, give breadth, beauty and variety. It is then to be counted a particular felicity to find ourselves on this great water when it rolls its greatest volumes—when it rejoices like a strong man to run a race.

The monotony of the great river is in every body's mouth, but it is the monotony of the sublime, from which there is no descent. There is a geographical variety. In going to St. Louis we pass how many States? Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, Tennessee, Missouri, Kentucky and Illinois. These States as we move along are associated with our earliest ideas of them as they were painted on the atlases of our school days. Mississippi is red, her hills and bluffs are like the color on the maps. Tennessee is dark green. Kentucky is blue, like her favorite grass. Arkansas and Missouri are yellow, like gamboge. Such is the power of association. Children think of the various States as they have seen them in their geographies. Every one of them has its color. This is the concrete conception, and its illusive influence is felt when we have the painted maps and look at them from the deck of a steamboat as they lie upon the real earth.

As we proceed northward there are some noticeable changes. The cypress and the moss are left behind in Louisiana, and the live oak and the magnolia. The banks are higher with a bluff or a little promontory here and there. Above Memphis the artificial embankments, the levees, are rarely seen, and the natural water elevation has a safe appearance. The crops are not so far advanced, and the staple products are different. As we near the mouth of the Ohio cotton disappears, and on the river corn is the main object of cultivation. I left the corn in Louisiana in graceful tassel, looking over the tops of the fences. Up here it is yet in the blade, and not large enough to make a field look green.

Another indication of our northing is the protracted evening twilight. With good company we hasten to the hurricane roof to see the sunset and its effects upon the scenery. In Louisiana the sun goes down quickly—you can see him drop below the horizon and presently it is dark. Here, with such dignity as becomes a king, he retires slowly, and his motion is as difficult for the eye to mark as it is to detect the movement of the hour hand of your watch. For a space he lingers behind the trees, and his beams play and dart amongst their tops like laughter in the face of humor. At last

"The evening sun hath made a golden set,
And by the bright track of his burning car,
Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow."

And now nature mixes her dyes and paints the world. The clouds, the woods, the waters, all take up the colors of the parting day and reflect them variously. Gradually the features of all mingle and the tints mix. The scene dissolves, and the rent mantle of the setting sun in twilight patches, fades and is lost in the night. Then the stars come out one by one, until the milky way, like a Mississippi of light, a river of stars, flows overhead, and the young moon, with its thread-like horns, like a silver mantel, is suspended just above the dip of the western horizon.

Where the Ohio debouches into the Mississippi we witness a magnificent confluence. The difference in the color of the two rivers is not observable at this time, but possibly there is a temporary cause. Cairo is on the narrow and sharp point made by the meeting of the waters. Illinois literally comes to a point here. The place has about six good houses in it, and a substantial wharf-boat on the Ohio river side.—This is the way the town fronts. As we lie at the landing the Ohio appears of surpassing beauty, and its ascent is more inviting to the eye than the Mississippi, whose channel at the point of intersection is marred by a long, low island, of rather late formation.

The Illinois Central Railroad, which goes to Chicago, has its terminus here where the two rivers meet. The cars and track are seen from the deck of our boat. From Cairo to St. Louis we have two hundred miles of more pleasant western travel than is afforded by the eight hundred miles we have left behind us. We touch at Cape Girardeau after tea. It is a town of fifteen hundred people on the Missouri side, and forty miles above Cairo. All we can say of it is that it is a city on a hill, and that most of the adult population is at the landing. Above this place two or three hours run are some natural curiosities. Well for us, the fog kept us from passing them till sunrise. First, there is the Devil's Tea-table, something very like a table of rock standing on one leg, upon an elevated point of limestone. Then there is the "Grand Tower," another limestone formation of a round form, perfectly insulated, and looking like a work of art in the regularity of its outline. It lifts its head, covered with stunted shrubs, sixty feet above average water mark, and has a diameter of about fifty feet. Next comes bold ledges, and high, not detached, on the Illinois shore, called the "Devil's Bake-oven." And finally, in the list is the "Devil's Back-bone," a hilly ridge which looks like the back of a mammoth porpoise. A friend suggests that this region contains nearly all the fossil remains of the wicked.—I am unable to throw any light upon the origin of these names, or even to guess by what law of association they have been given to these objects.

St. Genevieve is very picturesque and apparently larger than Cape Girardeau. In this city an inferior kind of marble is obtained, known in New Orleans as the Missouri or St. Genevieve marble. If I am not mistaken, the front and steps of Carondelet Church are made of this material. Every thing here is founded on rock. At the landing, one mile above the town, there were several piles of what appeared to be well seasoned hickory wood, but it turned out to be pig iron. There are mines of both lead and iron in the vicinity, and the mineral resources of this section, when developed, will equal those of any country in the world. For some fifteen or twenty miles above St. Genevieve the prospect is varied and beautified by ranges of hills which retreat obliquely from the river, and sometimes attain to the dignity of second or third rate mountains. They could not be arranged in a better manner for scenic effect. When these in their full outline cease, we have a continued bulwark of rocky heights extending nearly to St. Louis. They are confined to the Missouri side of the river, and look like a range of hills with one-half split off by long action of the river current at their base. I do not remember having seen any description of them.—Even Mme. Pfeiffer says nothing of them. Many of them rise from the water and lift their heads at least a hundred feet. You can hardly believe that this is nature's own mason work, and that the trowel and square had nothing to do with it. There are round towers, arches, niches, castellated walls laid with varigated stones, and domes and pinnacles, and there are forms of natural sculpture standing on the brow of the high walls, or apparently chiseled in relief beneath the natural cornices. Some of these structures are partly concealed by shrubs which grow in terraces along their sides, and some of the fluted columns and projecting tiles are partially clad in vines which clamber and mantle luxuriously around them. There is a railroad in considerable forwardness called the "Iron Mountain Railroad." Its course is along the river bank for about twenty-five miles, where it diverges to the iron region. I have been informed that the distance of the terminus from St. Louis is between eighty and ninety miles. Two or three miles of the track is laid, and the entire grading along the river is done. From the boat the work looks like a narrow shelf, cut in the abrupt side of nearly perpendicular bluffs, and but a little above high water. Seven days brings us to St. Louis. The Belfast is a good boat, albeit she is rather slow. Safety and great comfort are her chief recommendations. But enough of these rambling thoughts;—My next will be of St. Louis, that of it which may be seen and heard.

WOODSMAN.

June 8, 1856.

Freedom of Speech.—Singularly enough the law of Sweden allows freedom to the press, while it denies the freedom of speech. The efforts of Christians are thus mainly directed to the formation of Tract Societies, and the circulation of religious periodicals.

God made for some of the martyrs a prison sweet as a garden of flowers; what then will be heaven? If afflicting mercy be so great, what will be crowning mercy?

Christianity a Trust.—Bishop Butler has well said, "Christianity is to be considered as a trust, deposited with us in behalf of others, in behalf of mankind."

Complaint is the largest tribute heaven receives and the sincerest part of our devotion.

APPEAL OF THE BISHOPS.

Below we give the Appeal of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in behalf of the cause of Missions. It was prepared at the request of the Board of Managers at the last annual meeting.

THE APPEAL.

The Board of Managers of the Parent Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, at their recent meeting in Nashville, requested the bishops to address the Church in behalf of the great interest they represent.

After a careful examination of the various fields of labor, the appropriations of the past year, the necessities of the present, and the probable receipts of the Society, the conclusion was inevitable, that some missions must be abandoned (or greatly injured by insufficient support,) or our people stirred up to increased liberality. This conviction was so strong, that to avoid financial embarrassment in the future, the Board felt themselves constrained to cut down the appropriations in each Annual Conference to the very lowest point, consistent with the occupancy of our present missionary fields. Satisfied of the propriety and Christian obligation of every enterprise in which we were engaged, to retreat was considered a dereliction of duty, alike criminal and fatal. Anxious, moreover, to occupy new territories commended to their notice by their geographical relations and the social affinities of their inhabitants, no less than by their destitution of a pure Protestant Christianity, it was resolved to maintain our ground among the Indians—in China—in California, and among the colored people, and to invoke the aid of the Church, and the friends of missions, not only to sustain us where for years we have been sowing the seed of the kingdom, but to equip us for travel "into the regions beyond."

The Methodist Church is essentially missionary in her organization—missionary in her doctrines, her spirit, and her policy. To spread scriptural holiness in the earth is our avowed mission. Our claim as an apostolic Church rests upon our imitation of the Master, who went about doing good, and of the early preachers and disciples who well nigh evangelized the world. Our works are to be our credentials. What we have done is written. The past is secure.—The first century of Methodism was an heroic age. The triumphs of our fathers gleam upon every shore, and live in the admiration even of our enemies.—What are we doing? is another question full of interest to us a denomination and as individuals. It is a test of the zeal, self-denial, and industry of the ministry, and of the personal piety and consecration of the membership. If any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his. One of the chief characteristic of that spirit was pity for the world—an earnest absorbing desire for the glory of God in the salvation of men.—Without attempting to adjudicate the comparative claims of domestic and foreign missions, but embracing both in aggregate and detail, we ask the question, Is there any scriptural proportion between our present plains and our intelligence, wealth, and resources as a people? With four missionaries in China—a feeble Conference in California—an Indian mission contracted in its territory, and but half supplied with men—the slave population of the South partially, very partially, furnished with the gospel—are we doing our duty?—Ought not all these fields to be greatly enlarged—efficiently manned? Nay, ought there not to be mission stations all along the western border of Texas—in New Mexico—in Central and in South America? We know your answer. It is affirmative. The case is too plain for debate. So the Board thought and felt. They longed to enter in and possess the land. But an empty treasury arrested their steps. Right on the borders of the most inviting region, white unto the harvest, they have encamped, awaiting the response of the Church to their call for men and means. One hundred and fifty-four thousand six hundred and fifty-four dollars and fifty-three cents is the sum total of the missionary collections of the last year. And this from more than six hundred thousand members! Now is the Church willing that this shall be considered as the exponent of her conscience and her faith—her zeal and charity—her love to Christ and the human race? We hope not. We believe not. We have confidence in our people, their good sense and their sterling piety, and entertain no doubt that if the preachers everywhere would properly present the claims of missions, their contributions would not only redeem the treasury from collapse, but empower the Board and bishops to heed every Macedonian cry addressed to them. We have long been persuaded that one prominent cause of our general shortcoming was the want of information among the people as to the main facts in our operations. The limited circulation of the Treasurer's Report, and, indeed, of our Church papers, and we will add the want of proper effort on the part of the ministry, have perpetuated this state of things. By way of argument, illustration and motive we present a tabular statement of members and contributions in each of the Annual Conferences:—

	Members.	Contributions.
South Carolina	79,005	$26,626 00
Alabama	60,584	23,264 [illegible]
Georgia	72,510	18,[illegible]
Virginia	40,390	12,[illegible]
Memphis	30,266	11,[illegible]
Mississippi	30,421	11,[illegible]
North Carolina	44,593	10,[illegible]
Tennessee	42,762	7,[illegible]
Louisiana	11,719	6,[illegible]
Holston	41,145	5,[illegible]
Florida	12,846	4,[illegible]
Texas	11,883	3,[illegible]
Kentucky	24,202	3,[illegible]
Missouri	17,095	2,[illegible]
Onachita	10,297	2,[illegible]
East Texas	14,826	2,[illegible]
Louisville	25,417	1,[illegible]
St. Louis	19,526	1,[illegible]
Indian Mission	3,648	1,[illegible]
Western Virginia	8,354	1,[illegible]
Arkansas	11,370	[illegible]
Pacific	1,069	[illegible]

This table we present that each Conference may judge for itself of what has been done and what ought to be done. It is not intended to glorify some and to reproach others. By no means. Indeed, the rule of proportion cuts off boasting. The best, the foremost, are far behind their capabilities. The least, the last, no, farther. Considering the age, resources, and more systematic organization of the older Conferences, the showing discredits them rather than their younger sisters. The new Conferences, stretching as they do over vast territories, where society is as yet in a formative state, every thing comparatively unsettled, give promise in the collections of triumphant competition in the gracious contest of doing most for the missionary department of the Church. Let South Carolina, Alabama and Georgia, each raise this year thirty thousand dollars they have respectively pledged, and the other Conferences observe the same proportion of membership and contributions, and the treasurer's next report will gladden [illegible] Zion from the Atlantic to the Pacific. We should have two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, at least, wherewithal to send out more preachers, to establish schools, and to project and sustain new enterprises.

Let every preacher resolve to do his duty, not faithfully, but patiently, among the rich and the poor. Do not, brethren, content yourselves with a timid appeal, make an earnest plea—beg for a dying world. Remember you represent the people, and do not reproach them for your neglect. If you fail in presenting the subject, their reputation for liberality is involved; is compromised. It is unjust to the people you serve, it ought to be to you a controling reason for diligence and zeal. Bestir yourselves in the name of Lord. The time is short in which you can labor for Christ. Now is the hour, the only hour in which you may express by action your sense of boundless obligation to the great Redeemer. Next year your tongue may be employed in celestial praise. Make yourself an example to those who may come after you. Sanctify your memory. Determine, by the grace of God, to leave the Church holier and the world better than you found them. To do good and to communicate forget not, for with such sacrifices God is well pleased.

To the membership let us say, the conversion of the world demands a liberality proportioned to the grandeur of the enterprise. As believers in the prophecies of the Old and promises of the New Testament, an emancipated race, singing hosanna to the son of David, must rise up before us in all the freshness and inspiration of a glorious reality. We must believe in it, pray for it, and consecrate our money to its achievement. The work is to be done by the Church of Christ. This is the order of the gospel—the command of God. There must be more faith—banish wavering and all uncertainty—more intense love to Christ and his cause—to subdue worldliness of spirit—more decided action, to make the deliverance of a world in bondage to sin the concentrating point of holy enterprise. To do our part in this divine work we must consider as belonging to our personal religion—our future salvation—Is there one among us who may not double his gift this year? Will you not purpose in your heart to do it? Dear brethren, "first give yourselves to the Lord," and "then as God may prosper you" "lay in store. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver. And God is able to make all grace abound toward you, that ye, having always sufficiency in all things may abound to every good work."

Naval.—A full complement of mechanics is now busily engaged at the Navy-Yard in fitting out the United States storeship Supply, in compliance with orders from the Department at Washington to that effect. Her destination has not yet been made known.

The United States sloop of war Vincennes, Commander John Rodgers, sailed from Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, on the 26th of March for the United States, via Tahiti.

The United States steamer Colorado, on the stocks at Gosport (Va.) Navy Yard, is now approaching completion. She will probably be launched on the 19th inst.

Mr. Jabez B. Ball, an old and highly respected citizen of Tallahassee, Fla., died in that city on the 5th inst., of apoplexy.

Princess Phillippa, a sister of the negro king of Mosquito, is now a servant in the house of a colored preacher named Smith, at San Juan.

A dispatch dated Boston, June 9th, says dates from Hayti to the 27th ult. confirm the previous reports of the insurrection at Aux Caves, but the Government succeeded in putting down the movement.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Notice.—The annual examination of the young ladies of the Marion Female Seminary will commence on Tuesday, the 7th of July, and close on Thursday.

On Tuesday night the young ladies of the Junior class will read compositions, the exercises being frequently relieved by music.

The annual concert will take place on Wednesday night, in the Town Hall.

The exhibition in crape work, worsted work, wax fruit and flowers, will be in a room appropriated to the purpose.

The exercises of the graduating class will take place in the Town Hall on Thursday, A. M.

The public are respectfully invited to attend.

JAMES K. ARMSTRONG,
June 4, 1856.

Notice.—The Trustees of the Southern University are hereby informed that the annual meeting of the Board will be held on the Fourth of July. Very important business will be transacted.

E. WADSWORTH, Sec'y Board.
June 4, 1856.

Notice.—Quarterly Conferences for Montgomery District, Alabama:

LaFayette Circ't, Standing Rock,	June 28th and 29th.
Talasee Circuit, Mt. Pleasant	July 5th and 6th.
Montgomery Circuit, Bethel	" 26th and 27th.
Tuskegee Station	August 2d and 3d.
Tuskegee Circuit, Cotton Valley,	Aug. 8th 9th & 10th
Andrew Cold Miss'n " "	Aug. 8th 9th & 10th
Montgomery Station	Aug. 16th & 17th.
Montgomery Col'd Charge and Cotoma Col'd Mission	Aug. 16th & 17th.
Taderille Circuit	Aug. 23d and 24th.
Camp meeting, Crescent camp ground	Aug. 29 & Sept. 3d.
Crawford Circuit camp ground,	Sept. 5th & 7th.
Tchee col'd miss'n " "	Sept. 5th & 6th.
Salem Station	Sept. 11th.
Oak Bowery Circuit	Sept. 20th and 21st.

S. ARMSTRONG, P. E.

Notice.—Centenary Institute, Alabama

The annual examination of the classes will begin on Friday the 27th of June, and close on the following Wednesday.

The commencement sermon will be preached on the following Sabbath by Rev. Wm. P. Harrison.

The annual address will be delivered by Rev. E. Baldwin on Wednesday the 2nd July.

B. I. HARRISON, Sec'y.

MARRIAGES.

On the 16th inst., by Rev. T. J. Koger, at the residence of Mr. John C. Holcombe, Col. ARCHIBALD M. GRIFFIN to Mrs. ANNA BEALE, all of Mobile, Ala.

On Thursday last, at the residence of Mr. James Fisher, on Bayou Teche, by the Rev. C. A. Frazee, Mr. WESLEY STEEN and Miss ISABELLA SMITH.

On the 3d inst., in Copiah county, Miss., by Rev. A. L. Potter, Rev. JOHN B. BOWEN, of the Mississippi Annual Conference, to MISS REBECCA L. MILLSAPS of Copiah county.

On Thursday, the 15th ult., by the Rev. H. C. Thweatt, Mrs. ROSANNA CLARK, SON to W. F. ALLEN, Esq., all of Mausfield, La.

On the 28th ult., at Beech Island, S. C., by Rev. G. D. Boardman, Mr. SAML. W. TROTTI, of Barnwell, C. H., to Miss CAROLINE VIRGINIA HATFIELD, of Augusta, Ga.

DEATHS.

Died—On the 27th ult., in the 57th year of his age, in Yazoo county, Miss., RICHARD STAMPLEY.

Although a moral man, industrious and peaceable, and the father of a large and interesting family, he never united himself with the church until last July, when he joined the Methodist at Mount Olivet. For this time he was faithful. In my frequent visits to him during sickness, when we worshipped together, he seemed to retain a firm hold on the Redeemer, but could not realize great and triumphant grace. But some twelve hours before death every cloud vanished. His funeral was preached by the Rev. Dr. Wurd, and we trust great good was done.

L. D. LANGFORD.

Died—On the 7th inst., in Macon, Ga. Mrs. FREDONIA C. WATSON, eldest daughter of the late Major James P. Holmes, of Fort Gaines, Ga.

Thus has passed away from earth one of the loveliest of her sex, and of Christian characters. She was truly a precious and a cherished gem to her kindred and friends.

In the bloom of her womanly freshness, health and beauty, she was married. Judicious and candid friends who knew her at that season testify, in the light of delightful recollection, to the frankness, intelligence, and nobleness of her character. But the hopes of her bridal morn were in a great measure cut off.—Her youthful and manly husband sickened and pined, and finally fell a victim to relentless disease. Yet, during the several years of his invalid life, she devoted herself with unsurpassed tenderness and assiduity to his comfort and to the care of his health. Thus, doubtless, were sown in her person those seeds of disease which rendered her, for years, the subject of intense bodily suffering.

Her last illness was long and painful to the last degree. Her bodily agonies were indeed excruciating. Yet, under all the afflictions she exhibited the fortitude and patience of an humble and submissive christian. She was a glorious example of what the religion of Jesus can do for woman. Most piously trained in its precepts and practices from her earliest years; from its inspiration ever cheerful and amiable under all her distresses, sanctified in her gifted intelligence, the light and joy of her friends, and dutiful and useful in all her relations—she was in truth a daughter of Christ," as a corner stone polished after the similitude of a palace." Frequently, in her last sickness, she gave evidence of the steadfastness of her faith and comfort in God. Upon her dying day, she several times responded to her inquiring relatives, that she had no fears—"she was not afraid"—and when asked for the reason, she answered with emphasis—"Christ is the rock of ages."

A half hour before her death, her terrible bodily anguish in a great measure subsided, and, finally, she fell sweetly and placidly asleep in Jesus.

The soul of our sister is gone—
To heighten the triumph above,
Exalted to Jesus's throne,
And clasped in the arms of his love.

T. B. RUSSELL.

Macon, Ga., June 9th, 1856.

Wanted—A Situation as Teacher—A gentleman who has had ten year's experience in conducting both male and female schools, and who can furnish all requisite testimonials as to ability and past success, desires a situation, or the superintendence of some institution of learning. A young lady of eminent qualifications, and of considerable experience in teaching both in the North and South, also wishes a situation.

Address immediately "Teacher," Pleasant Hill, DeSoto Parish, La. jun19-5t

☞ In Time of Peace Prepare for War.—The warm weather is at hand, and as experience is the best teacher in the universe, we would advise all who are affected by the change of season to get a supply of Dr. J. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, as a stand by for the summer. Last year during our sickly times, these Bitters were proved invaluable, as a tonic agent, and it will be well to profit by the experience and lay in a supply in time. For sale by druggists generally. Sold wholesale and retail by O. O. Woodman, corner Common and Magazine streets, and John Wright & Co., 21 and 151 Chartres street. jn21 1t.

CALIFORNIA ITEMS.

From our exchanges, by last mail, we got a few items of religious interest.

SABBATH-SCHOOL CELEBRATION.

The Nevada Democrat, May 14, gives an account of what must have been pleasant to witness:—

The children in attendance at the Sabbath-School of the M. E. Church South, with their teachers, parents and friends, went out to a grove near Hughes' race-course, on Thursday last, where they met the school from Grass Valley, to attend a grand May-day Picnic.

The children assembled in large numbers, about 9 o'clock in the morning at Rev. Mr. Gober's Church where they formed in procession and marched to the foot of Broad street, were they took carriages and were conveyed to Mr. Hughes'. They then, in connection with the Green Valley Schools, under the management of Mr. Staats, their Superintendent, marched in order to the grove, where a platform had been erected for the Queens, Maids of Honor, and speakers.

After crowning the Queens and finishing off these ceremonies:—

The exercises were then continued by singing, by the children, and by speeches and dialogues, in which the following members of the Nevada school participated:—Miss Florence Edwards, Masters Wm. O. Womack, A. E. Womack, Geo. Cain, Henry A. Tweed, Henry Cohn, Geo. Womack, Thos. Cain and Oscar Coho. The speaking was excellent—in fact some of the speeches were rendered in a style that would do honor to children of a much larger growth, and judging from the prolonged plaudits gave universal satisfaction.

The children were then set at liberty, and after partaking of the bounteous supply of edibles provided for the occasion, sports of every kind were entered into with a spirit which were enjoyed to the fullest extent, by both old and young, making the woods reverberate with their merry peals of laughter, until the day was far spent. They were then reassembled, and four prize books were presented to Misses Anna Day, Josephine Biggs, Celia Purdy, and Master Benjamin Roscoe, of the Grass Valley school, by Mr. Staats. Rev. Mr. Gober then delivered an appropriate address, when the exercises closed and all returned to their homes, pleased and gratified by the evident marks of improvement exhibited by all the children, satisfied with the budding prospects of our great Pacific empire.

To the Rev. Mr. Gober and to his accomplished lady credit is due for the zeal that they manifest in the cause of Christian education, and for their pleasing efforts to contribute to the happiness of the young.—To works like theirs, the rising generation will owe whatever future happiness they may reap in the paths of virtue.

BISHOP K. AT WORK.

The San Francisco Christian Advocate May 16, says:

Bishop Kavanaugh of the M. E. Church South, who has been spending some months on this coast, passed the last Sabbath in this city. He has now spent two Sabbaths in San Francisco; and, in each instance, has occupied the pulpits of the M. E. Churches. His discourses have been marked by purity of sentiment, felicity of expression, beauty and force of illustration; and a most refreshing unction. His claim to the apostolical succession is valid, and his labors among us have heightened our estimate of "Christianity in earnest," as a divinely instituted agency for the saving of men. He is doing the work of an evangelist in the State; every where diffusing the savor of a kindly, Christian influence, tending to the harmony and consequent efficiency of Methodism in the land. He gave a lecture on Tuesday evening last, in the Congregational Church, for the benefit of the German M. E. Church, in course of erection under the direction of the Missionary, Rev. A. Kellner.—The subject—Spiritual Christianity—was presented in a manner suited to impress the audience with just views of the real genius of the Gospel—its essential spirituality, as distinguished from any and every form of ritualism—views of Christianity but too little understood, and when professed but to slightly appreciated—views which, nevertheless, ought to obtain and prevail every where.

A correspondent of Auburn Advocate draws a gloomy picture of Protestant sluggishness and Papal activity:

Rev. Mr. Rollinson of the Bush St. Baptist Church, left by the last steamer for the Atlantic, it is understood not to return. It was announced some months since, that he was to be succeeded by Rev. Dr. Magoon, of New York city, but this turns out to be one of the flashes of San Francisco. Instead of receiving a popular pastor, that congregation has lost a very excellent Church property. Since Mr. R. left, and on the very day of his departure, the church was sold to the French Catholic congregation, for $15,000. It costs the Baptists $11,000. $20,000 of funds devoted to the cause of Protestantism here, has thus gone to the benefit of Rome. This scrap of news will indicate what you well know, and what I stated in a former communication, that here, as everywhere, the emissaries of His Holiness are shrewd in the management of their affairs. They are bold and confident in this land, and they will yet show us that they can appreciate positions of advantage.

The Pacific Recorder, Baptist, after several earnest struggles to live, has expired—its subscription list passing to the Pacific (Congregational and Presbyterian.)

The Presbyterian has a letter, in no wise more encouraging:

In regard to the religious condition of this community and State, it may be said that the cause of Christ is very much under a cloud here. Most of the ministers labouring in this field seem to me dispirited, and I am told by one who has been much among them, that there are some who would be glad to get back to whence they came.

An anecdote was related to me of a good brother, who, applying for accommodations at the public house in a certain village, was informed by the polite landlord that he was sorry that he could not receive him, but really it would injure his business to have a clergyman under his roof—his boarders would not be able to swear, and would feel embarrassed!

Recent Publications.

The Earnest Man.—Life of A. Judson; by Mrs. Conant—Phillipps & Sampson: Boston.

Rather an affected title, but really an affecting narrative of christian heroism, worthy of Apostolic days. Judson's planting the church in Burmah, his faith, suffering and success, is a manual for missionaries and missionary Boards. It will teach, among other lessons, patience. Its circulation will act on the missionary spirit of the times like a pair of bellows on a feeble flame. It would pay the Boards to circulate it gratuitously. Whether we stay or go to foreign lands this book will make us missionary.

Life and Adventures of Robert D. Romaine; by himself—Phillipps & Sampson, 1856: Boston.

Vassall Morton; by Francis Parkman; Phillipps & Sampson: Boston.

Readable trash—these two and well got up.

We have these volumes from the Publishers through B. M. Norman, 14, Camp street—where they are for sale.

NICARAGUAN CORRESPONDENCE.

GRANADA, April 22, 1856.

With this I send you a copy of El Nicaraguense, from which you will gather such prominent facts as will give you a glimpse of recent affairs. You will see that Mr. Toothy, who accompanied the Schlesinger party into Guanacaste, was taken prisoner, but his life saved because of his being one of your correspondents. Bloody and cruel as Mora has shown himself to be towards other prisoners, even he respects those who represent the press, and we are all in hopes that Toothy has fared no worse than mere imprisonment, and if he stays much longer in Costa Rica, his companions in arms will have the pleasant task of unbolting the doors of his prison, even if it be in San Jose. The steamer San Carlos left Granada for Castillo on the evening of the 10th inst., carrying Padre Vijil as Minister Plenipotentiary, to the United States, Dr. Secor, as his Secretary of Legation, Maj. J. P. Heiss, bearer of dispatches from Col. Wheeler, and several private persons as passengers. The latter number was small, because of Gen. Walker's refusal to grant passports out of the country; a measure which, to the applicants for them, was doubtless annoying, but the wisdom of which just at this time might be easily demonstrated.

After the return of the army from the battle at Rivas there was a general despondency and gloom upon all faces. We were cut off from the States, and little hopes of reinforcements arriving very soon, remained; the march and battle had reduced the actual force to less than 500 men, and we looked daily for the enemy to attack Granada. Indeed, we have had, for the last ten days, a most uncertain and dismal time, but this morning life, joy, hope and animation are in every countenance. The gun of the San Carlos roused every one from their slumbers, and soon the news spread that the steamer, with 500 men for Walker, had come in. Great was the excitement, and even the stolid, despairing natives, joined in the general joy, and as the recruits from the States marched up to the Plaza, headed by a fine band, and carrying the flag of Nicaragua, they were cheered, as only Americans can cheer. The natives shouted and danced, and ran hither and thither, chatting, laughing and crying "Vive los Americanos," whilst the Americans, citizens, soldiers and all, hurried forward to welcome friends, inquire the news, or ask for letters and papers from the States. This reinforcement just at this time, is a God-send, I assure you, and the care-worn face and heavy brow of the General-in-chief tells plainly the relief that he experienced at once more beholding recruits from the States. As yet, very little is known in this city of what is going on in Rivas, San Juan del Sur and Virgin Bay; except that Mora is fortifying the former and is daily being reinforced from Costa Rica and from the servilists in Nicaragua. We have learned that Gen. Mora, brother of the President, was killed in the battle of the 11th, also Gen. Buscha and many of their superior officers. They acknowledge also a loss of killed and mortally wounded of over 700 men, besides many missing. The wounded of Walker's men are all doing well; not more than three or four have died of their wounds since the fight. You have already the list of killed, wounded and missing. The Costa Ricans burned their own and our dead, but the awful stench created by the bodies, or some other cause, has superinduced the cholera, which we learn is raging fearfully among the Costa Rican troops.

When the war began, Gen. Walker adopted a new system in raising the native forces, being aware of the unreliability of that portion of the army when the men are pressed into the service. He simply asked the natives to volunteer if they would join the war at all, or if they would fight from principle they must do so voluntarily, he being unwilling to have a reluctant soldier in the Democratic ranks. This was a stroke of policy that at once strengthened his own cause, and to a great extent disarmed the servilists, many of whom immediately gave in their adhesion to Rivas; and if they do not assist the Democrats, they, at least, do not oppose them. Very soon, the native force increased to 1500 men, headed by Generals Chilon, Mendez and Jerez. To them was assigned the task of defending Leon and the Northern frontier, in case the armies of the Northern States moved on that line, leaving all the American troops to collect around Walker. As the news is confirmed that Honduras and Salvador have withdrawn from the League, recalled and dispersed their levies, and received our Commissioners in a friendly manner, a part of the native forces are marching hither, and are hourly expected in Granada to join the General-in-Chief.

It is certain now, also, that Guatemala has recalled her army, and will await the result of the war, leaving Costa Rica and Nicaragua alone in the field.

President Rivas and his Cabinet are still in Leon, but so soon as the tumult of arms subsides, they will return again to Granada.

The servile partisans have very recently endeavored to get up a revolt in the District of Chontales, but the plan was not well sustained, and the people have again dispersed to their homes. This Department was always a stronghold of that party, but recently many Americans have traveled through the District to examine the mines, and their general good behavior has done much to soften down the prejudices that the Chamorrites have tried to create against us.

Since the battle of Rivas, Walker has been endeavoring to remodel the muskets of his men, so as to use the Minnie ball. In this he has succeeded, and the experiment with the Mississippi rifle and the same ball, proves that weapon to be a better arm than the Minnie guns taken from the Costa Ricans at Rivas.

The passengers for California that came by the new line, have been sent forward by land to the port of Realijo, as the Costa Ricans are still in possession of San Juan del Sur and Virgin. The appointment of Padre Vijil as Minister to the United States, is an extremely popular one, and all parties seem to feel confidence in the success of his mission. The Padre has been the firm and unchanging friend of Walker and the Americans, since they have been in Nicaragua; and although he has not the talents of a Richelieu, yet he has a kind and honest heart, and will do all he can for the good of weak and struggling Nicaragua.

The battle at Rivas demonstrated to Gen. Walker the necessity of a thoroughly drilled and disciplined force, and now the army is put through a thorough exercise every day. The result of the 11th, would have been far different had the men observed any discipline whatever; and instead of 600 killed of the enemy, he might have been completely crushed out. When you hear of another battle, you will hear of a different story of the field. Many of the boys, after the 11th, declared that they were well satisfied with their experience in military glory. In fact, there were few but who wished that they could be at home again. But the arrival of reinforcements has brightened up their hopes, and they now talk of another fight with all the confidence of tried veterans. They say, "just give us another fight and we'll finish Costa Rica."

Business is dull, and at present the war absorbs every thought and feeling of the people. What will be the end of all this, is hard to see; but hope is once more brightened up since our connection with the States is again complete. The mails, in this country, are ten times more uncertain than they are in the States, and we hardly know whether letters get through or not. I have had neither letter nor paper since I left home, January 28th, and I begin to think I shall get none.

LAFAYETTE.

GRANADA, April 25th, 1856.

Messrs. Editors—To the eyes and ears of the well-schooled, self-governing and peaceable American, the every-day scenes now passing like a phantasmagoria in this city, and, indeed, throughout all Nicaragua, are strange, if not wonderful; and are calculated to inspire the mind with bright hopes, or fill it with gloomy forebodings, just as it may be calculated to catch the wild enthusiasm of the times or draw in the darker shadows of old-fogyism. Last night we heard that Mora was but a short distance off with all his ferocious army; but as no reveille was heard, and no stir at head-quarters seen, the rumor soon died away like its thousand predecessors, each of which have, for the moment, been the topic of discussion. The fact is, that Mora and his troops are still at Rivas, and Walker is preparing as fast as he can to pounce upon them once more, and with a force that will insure a result somewhat more satisfactory than the one of the 11th inst. Foraging parties are out in every direction to gather up forage, horses, mules and cattle for the army; and the intention is to mount as many men as it is possible to do, so that when the army does move, it can do so with a celerity and secretness that will outstrip the many spies in our midst and confound the enemy with a blow when least expected.

We learn from spies on our side that the cholera is raging at Rivas, and from thirty to forty of the troops fall per day by that disease.

The gloom and darkness that hung over us after the affair of the 11th, has nearly passed away, the new comers having given a new impulse to the public heart; and even the passengers for California, all of whom are still here, have caught the war fever, and a volunteer company got up from amongst them, offered their services for four months, and at the parade last evening they were publicly accepted by the General-in-Chief. These volunteers, together with those who came out by the last steamers designed for the army, make an addition of over 300 fresh men; and the General can now enter the field at the head of at least 600 able-bodied men; leaving 100 to garrison Granada and at least 200 at the posts upon the San Juan river. Generals Mendez and Chillon are hourly expected in from Leon and the North with 500 native troops; besides these, we have here now, in garrison, about 150 natives. These latter perform the out-picquet duty, but the plaza is guarded at night by American sentinels, and many a story is told of the rigidity with which they enforce their duty.

This State needs arms for her soldiers, and if her friends in the States could forward five hundred or a thousand good rifles, it would be of the greatest service and aid her cause far more than money. We have powder and ball enough, but only a few good guns. The arm that is best liked here is the Mississippi rifle. It is a powerful weapon, besides being short, light, and will answer for mounted rangers as well as infantry. The rainy season will set in now in about two weeks, and General Walker will probably move upon the enemy before that time, as the rains will prevent any very long marches, besides it is absolutely necessary to drive the Costa Ricans out of Rivas, Virgin Bay and San Juan Sur, before they are too strongly fortified to be driven out. Mora thinks that by retaining possession of this end of the Transit route he can ultimately prevent all reinforcements to Walker, and by some sudden "coup de main" massacre us all. The cholera, however, is raging so hard among his troops that the work of fortification goes on but slowly, and, in order to keep up the spirits of his soldiers, he has his band play constantly on the plaza. Mora is a weak-minded old man of some sixty-five years, easily imposed upon by others, and as easily led into any act, no matter what, that promises the least hope of success; and we are all well aware that this war is not of Mora's choice altogether, but that he has been led into it by the English Government and those scheming, traitor servilists, from Nicaragua, almost all of whom have been, in person and property, in times past, the objects of General Walker's generosity and magnanimity. The recent withdrawal of San Salvador and Honduras from the league against Nicaragua has inspired new hopes in our people of all classes, and we are now well assured that Guatamala has withdrawn her army from our frontiers, and, with Honduras and Salvador, will wait for the decision of this contest with Costa Rica. Those States, as well as Costa Rica, had the assurance of the English Consul at Greytown, that if they would unite and try to "crush out" the Democrats of Nicaragua they would be assisted by England and France, but the arrest of the Costa Rica mail rider at Serapaque river, early in March, by the agents of this Government, disclosed the whole plot. General Walker sent the letters of the intermeddling Consul to President Pierce. The Consul bearing that his letters, together with one from Lord Clarendon, was on board the New York steamer, demanded them of the captain and made threats of what would be done in case he refused. In the meantime these letters were copied and the duplicates sent to the New York Herald, with instructions not to publish them until Mr. Marcy had received and thoroughly digested the originals. These letters were addressed, by the Consul and Lord Clarendon, to the Secretary of State of Costa Rica, and you may see, ere this, have had them in the New York press; at any rate, I will give you the gist of them. The Clarendon letter assures the Costa Ricans that if they will raise an army of five thousand men for the purpose of exterminating the Americans from Nicaragua and Central America, his Government will furnish arms, ammunition and money, for the army, etc., etc. The Consul's letter calls the Secretary's attention to the Clarendon letter, urges speedy action by Costa Rica, and adds, in a rather gloomy tone, that he fears it is too late now to exterminate the American element from this country, etc., etc.

The American people can now get a key to all these warlike demonstrations against Nicaragua, and they can judge who is to blame for this bloody episode that has involved the lives of some twenty American citizens, men, women and children, at Virgin Bay, while under their own flag, the destruction of their property and the inhuman and barbarous proclamations of Mora. Walker tried, in good faith, to avoid a collision with Costa Rica. He is clear of all blame, and now, mayhap, Uncle Sam will have a word to say in the settlement.

LAFAYETTE.

VIRGIN BAY, May 6th, 1856.

Messrs. Editors—As there are several passengers going to the States by this steamer, I will continue my record up to date, and, if possible, I will forward with this a number of last Saturday's Nicaraguense. On Thursday last, the General removed his head-quarters from Granada to this place, the enemy leaving abandoned the entire country, and in such haste as to leave behind much ammunition and many guns and a number of their wounded and sick. They completely sacked Rivas, taking everything they could carry away, and robbing the inhabitants who remained in the city of everything eatable and drinkable they could find. This invasion of the Costa Ricans has been one continued scene of ravage, plunder and devastation, and yet, just as they quit the country, in the extremest haste, their Commander-in-Chief has the impudence to write General Walker that he "expected that he (Walker) would take care of the sick which he left behind in Rivas." General Mora, before he left the country, declared that all these marauder-like acts were done by the Chamorristes in his army; but why did he allow them to do so, and why did he not pay the people in and around Rivas for whatever his army took for its use? As the smoke and obscurity that enveloped the Costa Rican army while it was here clears off, we find less and less in their conduct to admire, and now that they refused our offers of peace, rejected with scorn, our Minister invaded our territory, and murdered our citizens, and sacked our cities, all for no good cause whatever, we think that we are justified in returning the compliment with just as good interest as the case may require. Rivas is a city of barricades. Immediately after the action of the 11th ult., the Costa Ricans, fearing another attack in that city, went to work and fortified it—as it never was fortified before. At the entrance to the Plaza from each street, a wall of wood, stone, or adobe was thrown up so as to form a breast-work; the houses on the Plaza were all perforated for muskets to fire through, and the churches were all surrounded with a wall, behind which the soldiers could rally. It is really astonishing how much work they did in so short a time, and all for nought. There was an enemy amongst them that no barricade can stop—the cholera—and it did the work of an attacking army. It is known now that during the last few days the Costa Ricans stayed in Rivas, they lost about eighty per day, and out of all the thirty-seven hundred that came down into Nicaragua, only about two thousand returned. Their actual loss in killed, wounded and missing, by the battle of the 11th ult., was upwards of one thousand. The dead bodies of Costa Ricans line all the by-paths out of Rivas and San Juan Sur, and even around this place we have found several bodies in various stages of decomposition. The next movement of General Walker will be towards Costa Rica, but not until he has a force sufficient to ensure success. How this may be looked upon in other parts of the world is of little matter now, for we have suffered from an enemy who attacked us without reason or a cause that can be justified before the world, and, having failed to conquer Nicaragua, and having rejected our friendly advances with scorn and disdain, there are none so lost to honor now as to advise Walker to a peace with them until they have felt the avenging blow, and until they have given "indemnity for the past and security for the future."

As that was good Democratic doctrine once upon a time with Pierce and his friends, we like the doctrine now as a good plank in the platform of the Democrats of Nicaragua. The sentence of the Court Martial that tried Louis Schlesinger, was read last evening upon parade. The Court decided that he (S.) should be degraded from the rank of Colonel and that he be shot whenever found, and his name be published throughout the civilized world. The charges were negligence, cowardice, and desertion, etc., etc. And if he ever falls into the hands of the Nicaraguan army he will pay the penalty of his shortcomings. Those Legitimists who now fall into Walker's hands meet with their deserts. They have assisted to their utmost to bring this war upon their State and country, and now they will find that they cannot sport with impunity with the peace and welfare of the people of Nicaragua. A few evenings since (night of the 3d inst.) the camp was enlivened by a reunion of those who sailed from San Francisco one year ago with General Walker in the brig Vesta. It was the first anniversary of that event, and the few of the original 56 who were in camp met at the General's headquarters and had a jolly time for several hours. Of the immortal 56 there yet remain alive and in good health, forty, who are still in one way or another attached to the Army of Nicaragua and the fortunes of General Walker. The landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock was an event that is considered worthy of being commemorated by public demonstrations of the most extensive character, and I predict that the anniversary of the landing of the 56 in Nicaragua to aid the Democrats of Central America to regain their liberty and reconstruct the Confederation of 1821, will be celebrated upon as grand a scale and with as much joy and happiness as is the anniversary of any event in the history of this continent. The election that was held in this State on the last Sunday of April, for Senators and Representatives, resulted altogether in favor of the Democratic party, and the next session of the Legislature which is called to take place in Nicaragua on the third Sunday of this month, will doubtless be governed by principles of that party and reflect in its acts the impulse which has been given to it by the American element now in the State. The failure of Costa Rica to effect the conquest or extermination of the Democrats in this State will give an immense impulse to that party in all the other States of Central America, and you may not be surprised to hear of revolutions in Honduras, Salvador and Guatamala, and even in Costa Rica, before two months shall pass away. Servilism in this State is dead forever. The party has sunk to a level with the Tories of the revolution. Its warmest friends have abandoned it and declare that they cannot sustain men who can shed the blood of their own people without a better cause than merely want of power and station; and the murder of American citizens by them in cold blood here at Virgin Bay and the burning of the wharf of the Transit Co., are acts that will weigh them down until not a man in the State will dare to say he is a Legitimist. Thus far all is well, but the next move upon the board is as uncertain as the weather of the coming day. General Walker has just said there should now be no peace with Costa Rica with his consent. Adios.

LAFAYETTE.

Later from Texas.

The steamship Perseverance, Capt. H. Sheppard, arrived from Indianola and Galveston, whence she sailed on the 15th inst.

We extract from our Texas files the following items.

There has been considerable excitement in Galveston on the Nicaragua question, and collections had been made of money, and arms enough was raised to arm and equip eleven able bodied and resolute men who had volunteered to go. They left on the 13th inst., on the Chas. Morgan.

The Hunt-ville Item states that Gen. Houston has recovered from his late attack of catarrah, and was able to stir about and see his friends. He intended returning to Washington at an early date.

We learn from the Nacogdoches Chronicle that Gen. Rusk was still at home. He had been very ill since his return, which, coupled with the sad bereavement he has experienced, will prevent his returning to Washington soon.

